THE CONSTITUTION AND SOCIAL WELFARE

Recommendations Presented to Convention by the State Charities Aid Association

Twenty-one years ago, when the present Constitution was being drafted by the Constitutional Convention then in session, Hon. Edward Lauterbach, Chairman of the Charities Committee invited the State Charities Aid Association to submit to him any amendments which the Association might wish to see incorporated in the Constitution. The Association responded and submitted a draft of the "charities article," as it came to be called, which now, substantially as drafted by the Association, forms sections 11, 12 and 13 of Article VIII of the Constitution.

With twenty years additional experience in the work of aiding the State's charities and with greatly enlarged activities and interests, especially in the field of public health, the Association is again called upon to consider changes to the State's organic law.

The Board of Managers, early in the year, appointed the following committee on Constitutional Revision:

Hon. JOSEPH H. CHOATE, Chairman.
Mr. GEORGE F. CANFIELD.
Mr. CHARLES S. FAIRCILD.
Dr. SIMON FLEXNER.

Dr. LEE K. FRANKEI.
Mr. FRANCIS C. HUNTINGTON.
Hon. CHARLES P. NEIL.
Mr. EUGENE A. PHILBIN.
Hon. WILLIAM CARY SANGER.

This Committee, after several meetings, and as the result of many discussions and deliberations, and with the approval of the Board of Managers submits to the Constitutional Convention for its consideration the following suggestions:

1. Bond issues for State institutions:
   That some of the present restrictions on the incurring of debt by the State for the purpose of construction of State charitable and correctional institutions be removed, leaving the Legislature free to provide for such construction by bond issues if it deems it wise to do so, and with or without a vote of the people, as the Legislature may deem wise.

2. Inspection of charitable institutions:
   That the principle of State inspection of charitable and correctional institutions be carefully maintained and that the language relating thereto be made so plain that no doubt can be raised as to the fact that it includes institutions not in receipt of public funds.

3. State inspecting bodies:
   That the organization of the State inspecting bodies should not be prescribed in the Constitution.

4. State Commissions in Lunacy and the Feebleminded:
   That institutions for the feebleminded, epileptics, and idiots should be made subject to the inspection of the State Commission in Lunacy, and not subject to the inspection of the State Board of Charities.

5. Make reformatories subject to inspection by State Prison Commission:
   That adult reformatories (now subject to inspection both by the State Board of Charities and the State Prison Commission) be made subject to inspection by the State Prison Commission only.

6. Board of Control opposed:
   That no provision be inserted in the Constitution establishing a board of control to be in charge of all State institutions.
7. Separate control for State Hospitals:
That provision should be made in the Constitution requiring a separate control of the hospitals for the insane, but permitting the Legislature to include institutions for the feeble-minded, epileptic, and idiot with those for the insane.

8. Reorganization of County Government:
That such changes be made in the Constitution as may be needed, if any, to permit a reorganization of county government by the Legislature, having in view greater administrative efficiency.

9. Home rule and State control of Health Work:
That in conferring home rule upon municipalities or counties, care be taken not to impair potential control over health administration by State authorities.

CONSIDERATIONS IN SUPPORT OF THESE SUGGESTIONS

The State Charities Aid Association asks its 25,000 readers, most of whom are its members, to give the subject of constitutional changes with reference to the State's social welfare activities, their most careful consideration.

The convention is seeking opinions from everyone competent to discuss the various questions before it. Probably every reader of the News has information and opinions on one or more of the above suggestions which would be of value to the Convention. Members of the various Committees of the Convention who have under consideration the subjects herein discussed, especially desire such information. The name of the Committee and its Chairman are given under each suggestion. It is desirable that every one upon considering the following suggestions, with the reasons therefor, should make known to the members of the various Committees such definite conclusions as he may reach.

NO. 1.—BOND ISSUES FOR STATE INSTITUTIONS.

That some of the present restrictions on the incurring of debt by the State for the purpose of construction of State charitable and correctional institutions be removed, leaving the legislature free to provide for such construction by bond issues if it deems it wise to do so, and with or without a vote of the people, as the legislature may deem wise.

(Under consideration by the Committee on State Finances, Revenues, and Expenditures, Hon. Henry L. Stimson, Chairman.)

This proposal deals with Section 4 of Article 7, which places restrictions on the debt-incuring power of the legislature. Among other things the present section provides:
1. That all bond issues shall be for "some single work or object."
2. That not more than one bond issue shall be submitted to the people in any one year.

It has been asserted repeatedly by authorities on constitutional law that these restrictions make doubtful the validity of (a) bond issues for new buildings for State institutions of different classes, and (b) bond issues for different institutions of the same class.

To remove this doubt and to leave the question of bond issues within the discretion of the legislature it is tentatively proposed to add the following to Section 4 of Article 7:

The legislature may, from time to time, notwithstanding any provisions of this section, authorize the issue of bonds of the State to the amount not to exceed three million dollars in any year, to provide for the construction of State charitable or correctional institutions or State hospitals for the insane, with or without a vote of the people thereon, as the legislature may determine.

The effect of this proposal.

The adoption of this proposal would remove all doubt as to the legislature's power to meet the need for new buildings in State charitable institutions as the need arises, and would permit the legislature to relieve the present overcrowding in the hospitals for the insane without loading a large tax on any one administration.

Institutions are proper objects for bond issues.

It seems manifest that institutional buildings are permanent improvements lasting through several generations, and that future generations should bear their proper proportion of the expense. With the present constitutional restriction, however, this is apparently impossible.

State hospitals for the insane are overcrowded 22 per cent.; there are 6,000 more patients now being cared for in the present hospitals than they were intended to accommodate. To meet the need presented by the present overcrowding, to say nothing of increased demands upon the hospitals, would require an expenditure of $1,000 per bed, or approximately $6,000,000.

The situation with the feeble-minded is scarcely less serious, although not so generally recognized. There are approximately 32,000 feeble-minded now in this State. Of this number only about 5,000 are cared for in institutions designed for them; 4,500 are confined in institutions not intended for their care. This leaves more than 22,000 at large in the community, at liberty to reproduce their kind and to perpetuate the race menace of increasing feeble-mindedness.

Bond issue frequently proposed.

Although the bond issue has been proposed many times for new construction in State institutions, some other proposition such as roads and canals, of greater popular appeal or supported by strongly organized interests, has taken precedence. Administration after administration have been faced with the ever-growing problem of overcrowding in the State hospitals for the insane, with institutions planned and started and with little more than a site to show; with the problem of uncared for feeble-mindedness increasing, and with the evil conditions in the State's prisons going from bad to worse.

It requires a greater degree of political courage than we have a right to expect, perhaps, of any administration, to meet the situation and clean up the job in any one year or even in a series of years.

Difficult to deal with in appropriation bills.

The difficulties of dealing with the situation in the current appropriation bills may be realized from the consideration of the problem now facing the State hospitals for the insane. A direct appropriation of a million dollars a year for six years would take care of the present 6,000 overcrowding in the State hospitals for the insane. But the State hospital population is increasing from 600 to 1,000 a year, so that the annual appropriation would either have to be a million and a half a year or, at the end of six years, we would still have a deficit of from 3,600 to 5,000 to meet.

The State has also started the following institutions, all of which are badly needed, and which should be completed for two reasons: First, to meet the serious needs for which they were started; second, so that the State may secure benefit from the funds already expended:

Letchworth Village for the Feeble-minded;
The new Hospital for the Insane at Mohansic;
New York State Training School for Boys, Yorktown Heights;
State Reformatory for Misdemeanants;
State Industrial Farm Colony.

The State is also faced with the necessity of preparing a new prison to replace Sing Sing.

$23,700,000 needed.

To deal effectively with the institutional needs of the State would require a total appropriation in the next ten years of nearly twenty-four millions of dollars. With ever increasing demands for maintenance of roads, canals and other State expenditures, it is extremely unlikely that any administration will feel like assuming this burden in its tax levies, if, indeed, it were desirable so to do.

Itemized, the State's institutional needs, present and safely predictable for the next ten years, include at least the following:

To provide for 6,000 overcrowding in present State hospitals for the insane, $1,000 per bed .......................................................... $6,000,000.00
To provide for increase of at least 600 per year for the next ten years (6,000), $1,000 per bed .......................................................... 6,000,000.00
New prison to replace Sing Sing ............................................. 2,000,000.00
To complete Letchworth Village .............................................. 2,500,000.00
To complete New York State Training School for Boys .......... 1,000,000.00
To complete Industrial Farm Colony ........................................ 1,000,000.00
To complete the State reformatory for Misdemeanants .............. 1,000,000.00
To provide for 7,000 of the 22,000 feeble-minded now at large at $600 per bed ...... 4,200,000.00

Total .................................................. $23,700,000.00

Bond issue of $3,500,000 a year.

A bond issue of approximately $3,500,000 each year for the next ten years for the various institutions of the various classes, would make the State solvent so far as its institutional provision is concerned. The tentative proposed amendment would permit, without question as to their validity, several relatively small bond issues for various institutions in any one year, without delay and expense of a referendum.

Present restrictions not economical.

It is very doubtful if the present restrictions in the Constitution have resulted in economy. Indeed, it seems that they have resulted in larger bond issues for various purposes than would have been the case if obtaining bond issues had been less difficult. Realizing that additional bond issues for canals and roads would be difficult to obtain and would necessarily be postponed for several years, advocates of these two propositions urged and secured larger sums than the needs of the State demanded at the time.

Several small issues better than one large one.

We are clearly and strongly of the opinion that a bond issue each year of $3,000,000 is far better than one bond issue of a large sum, say $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 at a time. To make available at any one time so large an amount would place upon the planning and constructing agencies of the State a burden far beyond their ability to handle effectively. It seems to us inevitable that the result of attempting to plan and carry through $25,000,000 of construction work at one time would be hastily, unwisely and extravagantly planned buildings, just as the expenditure of an enormous sum in a short period of time in the construction of roads has undoubtedly resulted both in poor planning and in poor construction. The problems of institutional planning and construction are involved and in many cases have few clearly demonstrated precedents. A vast amount of careful thought, of study of existing institutions elsewhere, and of careful developing of plans is essential if serious mistakes are to be avoided.

Plenty of precedent.

There is plenty of precedent for the issuance of bonds by legislative authority without referendum. Boards of supervisors, boards of aldermen, common councils and boards of estimate now have that authority and exercise it frequently.

To sum up, it seems to be true that the adoption of the proposal would open the way to an early solution of the State's institutional problem; would provide a policy for dealing with that problem that would be sound financially, and would relieve administrations in the near future from the responsibility of burdening the budget with expenditures which will benefit future generations; and would result, not in extravagance, but in economy.

NO. 2.—INSPECTION OF CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

That the principle of State inspection of charitable and correctional institutions be carefully maintained, and that the language relating thereto be made so plain that no doubt can be raised as to the fact that it includes institutions not in receipt of public funds.

(Under consideration by the Committee on Charities, the Hon. James W. Wadsworth, Chairman.)

This suggestion reaffirms the attitude of the State Charities Aid Association, announced twenty years ago. This policy was declared in the present constitution, Section 11, Article 8, which was drafted by the Association.

This section declares among other things that "The Legislature shall provide for a State Board of Charities, which shall visit and inspect all institutions, whether State, county, municipal, incorporated or not incorporated, which are of a charitable, eleemosynary, correctional or reformatory character . . ." except such institutions as are made subject to visitation and inspection by the State Commission in Lunacy or the State Commission of Prisons.

We believe that the language of this section clearly shows that it was intended to give the State Board of Charities authority to visit and inspect all charitable institutions, whether or not in receipt of public funds. The Court of Appeals held, however, that even under the language of this article the State Board of Charities could not inspect institutions not in receipt of public funds.

This seems to us to place the whole matter of inspection on a wrong basis. The primary object of such inspection, as we view it, is not the protection of public or private contributors from waste or extravagance; it is the protection of the inmates of institutions of all kinds from neglect, deprivation and abuse. The inmates of institutions are, to a considerable degree, isolated from the ordinary life of the community. The institutions are likely to develop traditionalism and routine which, if unchecked, often lead to more serious abuses. State inspections with a possibility of publicity following them seem to us, on the whole, the most valuable and important safeguard both for discovering and correcting abuses and for preventing their development. If the primary object of inspection is humanitarian, the same is true of the fiscal control of the Fiscal Supervisor. While feeblemindedness is more largely a custodial problem than is insanity, and therefore cannot be considered entirely from the same point of view as the latter, there are many points of contact and of similarity in the two fields. This is especially true as to the causes and prevention of feeblemindedness. Studies have been made as to the number of feebleminded, and it is fairly accurately estimated that there are 22,000 at large in the State. The State, however, has not formulated any definite policy for dealing with this problem.

It is logical that the State's work in the fields of mental diseases and mental defect should be subject to inspection by the same authority. Many causes of feeblemindedness are also causes of insanity.

Visitation and inspection should lead to aid in the establishment of standards and the framing of policies. An adequate system of inspection and the uses which should be made of the results of inspection and the recommendations which should flow from it, would result in the framing of an adequate State policy in reference to the feebleminded. The system of inspection which has obtained in this State for the last twenty years has not resulted in the framing of such a policy. With approximately 22,000 feebleminded in the State, there are only 5,000 of them under care in institutions designed for such care, and 4,500 are in institutions not intended for their care.

The problems which the State Board of Institutions must consider are varied and far-reaching. It does not seem to us that a board, charged with such a wide variety of duties, would be likely to be able to frame and carry to completion a comprehensive plan for providing custodial care for the feebleminded of the State. The history of the past twenty years, and in fact of the past forty years, confirms this doubt and hesitation. Institutions for the feebleminded have been planned and developed on lines which are now seen to have been mistaken. Nearly all of them have been placed in the western portion of the State, regardless of the fact that more than half of their population must be derived from the city of New York, and (except in the case of the Custodial Asylum for Feebleminded Women) little thought appears to have been given in the selection of inmates, to the importance of using the facilities provided by the State so as to accomplish to the maximum degree the diminution in the numbers of the feebleminded.

It is especially desirable that professional standards should be developed in the care of the feebleminded as they have been in the care of the insane. Such standards have been conspicuously absent in the State's dealing with the feebleminded.

NO. 5.—REFORMATORIES UNDER PRISON COMMISSION.

That adult reformatories (now subject to inspection both by the State Board of Charities and the State Prison Commission) be made subject to inspection by the State Prison Commission only.

(Under consideration by the Committee on Charities, Hon. James W. Wadsworth, Chairman.)

It seems clear that reformatories for adults are, in fact, penal institutions and that all prisons should, in fact, be reformatory institutions. The line between penal institutions which are called reformatories and those which are not, is fast disappearing. We know of no adequate reason why adult offenders committed to an institution called a reformatory should be subject to one inspection, and those committed to an institution called a prison, subject to a different inspection.

NO. 6.—BOARD OF CONTROL OPPOSED.

That no provision be inserted in the Constitution establishing a board of control to be in charge of all State institutions.

(Under consideration by the Charities Committee, Hon. James W. Wadsworth, Chairman, and also by Governor and other State Officers’ Committee, Frederick C. Tanner, Chairman.)

All proposals to establish a board of control for State institutions, including prisons, charitable institutions and hospitals for the insane, are based upon two assumptions which the facts do not support, i. e.: (1) That with many institutions in the different groups, hospitals, prisons and charitable institutions, there must be confusion, mismanagement and extravagance and that (2) economy of construction and operation would be secured by combining all of these institutions into one group under one management.

The present work and needs of the largest group of the State’s institution would naturally be considered of first importance in any proposal to make far-reaching changes in the management of all of the State institutions. This means that the needs of the State’s hospitals for the insane must be a controlling factor. These institutions care for approximately two-thirds of all the inmates of all the State’s institutions, prisons and charitable institutions included.

It is necessary for the proponents of the board of control plan to show that it would bring about (a) considerable saving in the expenses of the State hospitals, and (b) higher standards of care.

Low maintenance cost in State Hospitals.

Let us consider first the cost of maintaining the State hospitals. There are 33,000 patients in these institutions. They are maintained at an average cost of 57 cents per day, including the expenses for food, light, heat, nursing, medical treatment and other current expenditures. It is a matter of common knowledge that in these particulars the patients are well cared for. The hospitals have been conspicuously free from scandals and are generally regarded as the most humane and successful institutions of the kind in the United States.

That this result has been accomplished at a cost of 57 cents per day is the best refutation of any suggestion of extravagance or mismanagement.

It is therefore true that so far as the present conditions in the State hospitals for the insane are concerned—and these constitute 66% per cent. of the problem—no such drastic reorganization is needed as would be brought about by the adoption of the board of control plan.

Legislature can deal with charitable institutions.

Considering the State charitable institutions, it is undoubtedly true that there are too many supervisory boards, such as the Sites, Buildings, and Grounds Commission, the Salary Classification Commission, the Buildings Improvement Commission, and the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities. The remedy for this, however, is clear and simple, and need not involve the danger of crippling the present admirable system of State hospitals. Indeed, it is not even a matter that need be dealt with in the State’s organic law. The legislature created the unnecessary boards and commissions; the legislature may and should abolish them and concentrate such authority as should be exercised by a central board in one official, having to do only with the State charitable institutions.

There is little common ground in the management of the State hospitals for the insane, the State charitable institutions and the State’s prisons, except that they all require buildings for the housing of inmates, that these buildings are constructed of substantially the same materials, and that all the inmates require certain food supplies of the same kind. Those who propose putting all State institutions under one central board, the board of control, seem to overlook entirely the fact that different types of institutions differ very materially in purpose and therefore should differ in methods. The following three facts should be considered most earnestly before action is taken to unite the three utterly dissimilar types of State institutions:

What the State institutions are for.

1. State hospitals for the insane are primarily CURATIVE institutions and their management and control require special training and experience that are not required in the management of either of the other two types of State institutions.

2. Prisons and other institutions for offenders are utterly dissimilar from hospitals, and should be REFORMATORY institutions. They differ utterly from purely custodial institutions and from other institutions in the so-called “charities group.”

3. State charitable institutions are a miscellaneous group having varying objects—establishments for the feeble-minded, having for their primary object segregation and custodial care; reformatories having for their primary object the reform of offenders; hospitals for the tuberculous and for crippled children, having in mind cure and the enforcement of bodily vigor and effectiveness, etc., etc. The State established these various institutions for certain definite objects and purposes. The larger the number and variety of institutions under one authority, the more likely it is that the particular objects to be accomplished will be more or less lost sight of in the problems of administrative control and economy.

Would jeopardize State Hospitals.

A board of control, therefore, would jeopardize the present high standards of care of the insane in this State by placing the State hospitals under control of a board which, in the nature of the case, could not be expert in knowledge as to the needs of the insane, the needs of the feeble-minded and the other charitable institutions, and the needs of the State’s prisons. With such a diversity of problems to deal with, the board of control could not give sufficient attention to any one to become expert in it. As a result, the work in one or more and possibly all will suffer. With so many institutions of so many different kinds, the actual work of the board of control falls to subordinates, resulting in a diffusion of responsibility and chaos.

Not a success elsewhere.

That this is actually the result and has constituted a serious menace, is shown by the fact that in eighteen States in which boards of control have been established and have been in operation for a substantial period, the standards of care for the insane have actually deteriorated. In four States active movements are under way to re-establish separate management for the different types of institutions.

There has been a great deal of talk recently about the twenty-six boards, commissions and officials that have something to do with the management of State charitable institutions. When introduced in connection with the board of control proposition it has never been clearly brought out that the twenty-six bodies, boards, commissions or officials are grouped with relation to State charitable institutions only, and only that few have any connection with State hospitals for the insane.

As a matter of fact, properly grouped and reclassified, it appears that the situation is not so serious as it seems to be at first sight even with the State charitable institutions.
The facts as to the "26 boards."

In the first place, three of the boards have been abolished, so that there are only twenty-three of the twenty-six left. Two others alleged to have control have no relations whatever to State charitable institutions. Seven of them have the same, or substantially the same, relations to State institutions as to all other departments of the government, and these relations will probably always of necessity continue. Four of them are expert bodies with powers of inspection and recommendation as to certain particular features, but have no powers of control. Five of them have powers of inspection and recommendation only, and no powers of control.

Simmered down, then, there are actually four officials, or commissions, that have any actual powers of control of State charitable institutions.

This is undoubtedly three too many, but it is a simple matter for the legislature that created them to consolidate them.

Rearranged and reclassified, the situation with the much-talked-of 26 boards, bodies, commissions and officials appears as follows:

I. Purchasing Committee.
   1. This Committee consists of representatives of the institutions themselves, and is, in fact, the institutions brought together as a committee to purchase the supplies which can be purchased jointly to advantage. This could scarcely be objected to.

II. Departments already abolished.
   2. Department of Efficiency and Economy.
   4. Board of Estimate.

III. Boards alleged to have control, but having no relation whatever to State charitable institutions.
   5. State Hospital Commission.

IV. Officials and boards having the same or substantially the same relations to State Institutions as to all other departments of government.
   7. Governor.
   8. Legislature.
   10. State Treasurer.
   13. Board of Classification.

V. Expert bodies with powers of inspection and recommendation as to certain particular features, but with no powers of control.
   17. Department of Weights and Measures.

VI. Bodies having powers of inspection and recommendation only, but having no powers of control.
   18. State Board of Charities.
   20. Commissioner of Education (as to one institution).
   21. Prison Commission (as to two institutions).
   22. Prison Association (as to two institutions).

VII. Bodies having some actual powers of control.
   23. Fiscal Supervisor.

No economies would result.

Those who urge the board of control plan argue that substantial economies would result. As a matter of fact, however, retailed investigation extending over a period of two years, by Mr. Henry C. Wright, now Deputy Commissioner of Public Charities, New York City, shows no economy would be effected by the establishment of such a board. His investigation as to the actual purchasing of food for public institutions shows that the State Charitable institutions or the State hospitals for the insane or the State's prisons form a sufficiently large group to secure the lowest prices, and that in fact it is more economical, more satisfactory, more businesslike in many cases, in buying food supplies for the various institutions of even one group, to buy separately rather than jointly.

In buying for such an enormous number of institutions the number of possible competitors is greatly reduced, and competition, instead of being enlarged, is diminished. An extremely thorough and careful inquiry into the actual results of joint purchasing versus institution purchasing, and of central purchasing versus local purchasing, in the States of New York, Indiana and Iowa, has proved beyond all possibility of doubt that separate, local and separate purchasing of food supplies secured better results and better prices than centralized joint purchasing. In all these States the work was done by officials of character and ability.

In practice the board of control has tended to reduce all the institutions under it to one dead level of institutionalism, and has tended to confuse and conceal their diverse and important social purposes and has confused and divided responsibility, instead of clarifying and accentuating it.

What is "efficiency and economy"?

In every discussion of the board of control plan there is a great deal of talk about "efficiency and economy." Let it be understood exactly what efficiency in an institution means. An efficient institution is one which accomplishes to the very highest degree the purposes for which the institution is established—that is, humane care and treatment of its patients.

With this definition in mind, those favoring the board of control, in order to establish their case, must show:

1. That the present plan does not operate efficiently
2. That it does not operate economically
3. That further economies could be obtained without sacrificing the real efficiency of the institution.
4. That the plan proposed has been successful where it has been tried.

Drastic change shown to be undesirable.

Judged by these four tests, such a drastic change as is proposed is shown to be undesirable for the following reasons:

1. The present State hospitals for the insane are operating at an extremely low rate per capita cost, lower than any other institutions of the same type on record.

2. They are operating with such extraordinary efficiency that they have established standards for practically the whole country.

3. The study of Mr. Henry C. Wright, above quoted, proves that the central purchasing for all institutions not only does not obtain lower prices for food, but that the prices under the plan are higher than where the central purchasing does not prevail.

4. In many of the eighteen States where the board of control has been established, it has been proved to be a device for injecting politics into the management of the institutions. The standards of care in most of them have actually deteriorated and movements are under way in many of them for a change in the system.
NO. 7.—SEPARATE CONTROL FOR STATE HOSPITALS.

That provision should be made in the Constitution requiring a separate control of the hospitals for the insane, but permitting the Legislature to include institutions for the feebleminded, epileptic, and idiot with those for the insane.

(Under consideration by Committee on Charities, the Hon. James W. Wadsworth, Chairman, and the Committee on Governor and Other State Officers, Mr. Fred C. Tanner, Chairman.)

Favorable action on Proposal No. 7 logically follows favorable consideration of the arguments against the board of control idea advanced under Proposal No. 6. When the undesirability of the board of control is admitted, it seems logical and indeed is highly desirable that the officers and employees of the State's institutions should be relieved of the annual legislative threat of reorganization. Practically every year the board of control suggestion is advanced. These suggestions usually take the form of bills introduced in the Legislature. These cause uneasiness on the part of the officers and employees of the institutions, and result in a certain amount of demoralization. Writing into the organic law a definite statement of the State's institutional policy would do away with the annual threat of upheaval. Let us reemphasize here, however, the points made under Proposal No. 3, that it is policies and not details that should be written into the Constitution.

NO. 8.—REORGANIZATION OF COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

That such changes be made in the Constitution as may be needed, if any, to permit a reorganization of county government by the Legislature, having in view greater administrative efficiency.

(Under consideration by the Counties, Towns and Villages Committee, the Hon. John Lord O'Brien, Chairman.)

County administration is a loosely organized zone of government. At present it is a confused group of officers with overlapping authority and with no very definite line of demarcation between the county, on the one hand, and the towns, villages and cities on the other. Although the counties conduct business that ranges from a few thousand dollars, in the smaller counties, up to millions in the counties like Erie, Monroe, Albany and Westchester, there is no responsible executive and administrative authority. Administrative power is vested to a considerable degree in a board of supervisors, varying according to the size of the county from three to fifty persons. Most of these supervisors are elected by towns, but some of them are elected by villages and others by wards of cities. Small district representation has resulted in party politics and log-rolling playing a large part in the consideration of many questions dealt with by these boards.

In counties where there are fairly large cities and a large rural representation, there is an almost continuous political feud between the rural and the urban members of the board. A county tuberculosis hospital is not established because the rural members of the board believe that the chief city will be more largely benefited than will the country districts. In not one, but many cases, has this question been decided on that basis.

There is no suitable appointing authority for county officials to be placed in charge of any new county work. Recourse is had, in violation of sound principles of government, to appointment of executive officers by county judges, thus mingling executive and judicial functions, or needed county activities are not undertaken because of the absence of any suitable appointing authority.

The State Charities Aid Association lends its hearty support to the movements which are now well under way for the application of the short ballot principle to county government and for other changes which will establish a responsible administrative authority, comparable to the office of mayor in the cities. With a responsible appointing authority, an appointive superintendent of the poor and a county health officer would be possible. Every suggestion for these very desirable changes in the administration of the poor and health laws has been met with the argument that almost certainly politics would play a very large part in their appointment if the appointing authority were to be the board of supervisors as at present organized.

No more constructive and important step could be taken in the new Constitution than to permit the Legislature to make such changes in the organization of county government as a thorough investigation would indicate.

NO. 9.—HOME RULE AND STATE CONTROL OF HEALTH WORK.

That in conferring home rule upon municipalities or counties care be taken not to impair potential control over health administration by State authorities.

(Under consideration by Cities Committee, Hon. Seth Low, Chairman, and Counties, Towns and Villages Committee, Hon. John Lord O'Brien, Chairman.)

Disease germs do not recognize city, town or county boundary lines. Just so long as it is possible for an epidemic in one community to jeopardize the health of neighboring communities, just so long will the ultimate control of health work continue to be a State function.

For many years a certain city in this State distributed typhoid and smallpox not only to other localities in this State, but to other States. Only when the State of New York stepped in and required reorganization and efficiency was this menace to the State as a whole corrected.

CAMP COLONY FOR INEBRIATES.

New York City Provides Temporary Quarters at Its Farm Institution.

The Board of Inebriety of New York City requested the Board of Aldermen to authorize the issue of $9,000 of special revenue bonds for the purpose of caring for 100 men at the Hospital and Inebriety Colony at Warwick, N. Y., in a camp colony during the summer. This request has been favorably acted upon both by the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and the construction of the camp is already under way.

The men will be housed in nine tents on an elevation near the lake, from which there is a beautiful outlook.

This appropriation will enable the Board of Inebriety to use the admirable facilities at its disposal to the greatest advantage during the summer months. A somewhat similar, though much smaller camp, was operated last year with marked success.

The board has asked $200,000 for new buildings at the Farm Colony. The present buildings, all of which were originally on the farm, supplemented by a temporary dormitory, accommodate about 100 men.

COUNTY AGENTS CONFERENCE.

The County Agency Department has held a series of conferences at which there was opportunity for the Children's Agents to discuss particularly difficult problems and to exchange ideas in regard to methods worked out during the past year.

JOHNSTOWN HAS DISPENSARY.

The local Tuberculosis Committee in Johnstown has opened a tuberculosis dispensary and has employed Miss Hedwig Brockmann to take charge of the dispensary and do visiting work in the homes.
The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company sent a letter to each of its 50,000 policyholders in Rensselaer County, urging them to present their views on the question to the Board of Supervisors. The State Department of Health detailed two investigating nurses to discover cases in the rural districts of the county and Dr. Otto R. Eichel, the District Sanitary Supervisor for that county, examined a number of families in which a death has occurred, or in which there is at present a case, for other instances of infection.

The result of this demonstration of public interest was that the Board of Supervisors voted to build a new hospital. A site has been selected, and plans are now being drawn.

MISS SCHUYLER HONORED

Columbia Confer Degree of LLD. on Founder of State Charities Aid Association

The friends of Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, who read in a recent issue of the S. C. A. A. News the account of the luncheon in her honor and her admirable paper on the founding and early history of the State Charities Aid Association, will be deeply gratified at the honor conferred upon her recently by Columbia University. In recognition of her services in the field of social reform, the Trustees of the University conferred upon Miss Schuyler the degree of LLD.

HOSPITALS OVERCROWDED.

Fourteen State Institutions Intended to House 27,462 People Now Hold 33,358.

A vigorous campaign in Rensselaer County to show the Board of Supervisors the need for a new tuberculosis hospital has succeeded. The present institution is, unfortunately, located on the almshouse grounds and is too small. It lacks altogether provision for incipient cases and for tuberculous children.

A series of meetings of educational organizations, granges and labor unions led up to a mass meeting in Troy, on January 20th, addressed by Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, and Mr. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association.

Every one of the New York State hospitals for the insane is overcrowded. They contain in all 33,358 patients, although they are built to house only 27,462. The total overcrowding is 5,895, an average of 21.4 per cent. One hospital—Manhattan, on Ward's Island—has 1,408 more inmates than it has certified accommodations for, an excess of 39 per cent.

These facts are disclosed in the Twenty-second Annual Report of the State Charities Aid Association to the State Hospital Commission, copies of which will be sent to any one applying.

"These patients in excess of capacity are sufficient to fill immediately three large hospitals for the insane, the three sites belonging to the State," the report states: "How much longer will the Legislature continue to temporize with the problem rather than meet it with a consistent policy looking toward final relief?"

The overcrowding (and conditions have grown worse since), according to the census of September 30, 1914, was as follows:

WHAT IS TUBERCULOSIS WORK?

Definition Under Red Cross Seal Conducts the Same as That in 1914

At a conference of the Red Cross Seal agents held in Washington the definition of the term "anti-tuberculosis work" was considered and it was voted to retain it as last year, as follows:

1. The construction of hospitals or sanatoria for the care of the tuberculous.
2. The maintenance of the tuberculous.
3. The provision of day or night camps for the tuberculous; for the provision and maintenance of dispensaries, visiting nurses, open air schools, fresh air classes, or preventoria for the care or treatment of tuberculous cases or for the prevention of the spread of tuberculosis.
4. The maintenance of educational or legislative activities which have for their object the prevention of infection with tuberculosis.

The design of the seal for 1916 has already been made up and approved by the National Association and the American Red Cross.
WORK OF HEALTH DEPARTMENT Endorsed by Governor Whitman.

American Public Health Association Hears Chief Executive of This State Deliver Speech That Means Much to Life-Saving Campaign.

As usual, the S. C. A. A. News suspended publication during the summer months. July and August numbers were not published. Therefore, Vol. III, No. 2, the June number being No. 1.

The address of Governor Charles S. Whitman, before the American Public Health Association at its recent meeting in Rochester, was one of the most important and significant utterances on public health in recent years. Its importance carries beyond the boundaries of New York State. The fact that the Governor of the greatest State in the Union has given the strongest possible endorsement to a health department organized under his predecessor, of opposite political faith, has been interpreted by newspapers in the far West and in the South, as well as in this State, as an indication of a most favorable trend in health work.

We venture to predict that some of the passages of the Governor’s Rochester address will become as widely quoted as have been the utterances on tuberculosis made by Justice Charles E. Hughes, as Governor of this State.

The S. C. A. A. News regrets that limitations of space render it impossible to reproduce entirely the Governor’s address. We must content ourselves with giving herewith a few of the most important portions. In part the Governor said:

“I have said that I hoped we could show you some few things of interest, in part return for the manifold benefits we shall receive from your deliberations. In particular, I would commend to your consideration our plan of State sanitary administration, of which we are particularly proud and which a number of other States—Massachusetts and New Jersey being the latest examples—have more or less closely followed in reframing their own public health laws.

Health Council Important Principle

“The first important principle embodied in the New York Health Law is the delegation to a Public Health Council, composed of the Commissioner of Health and six appointees members, of the power to establish qualifications for Directors of Divisions, Sanitary Supervisors, local Health Officers and Public Health Nurses, and to establish sanitary regulations dealing with any matters affecting the security of life and health, or the preservation and improvement of public health in the State of New York” outside of the city of New York.

“This delegation to a small expert body of the power to formulate a sanitary code is essential to sound sanitary progress. The requirements of modern sanitary health regulations are so complex and must be subject to such constant modification that a code enacted by a legislative body must necessarily be either unduly repressive or so vague as to be of little practical value.

“While the Council is thus given what amounts practically to a delegated legislative authority within its special field, it has wisely been given no executive functions. Concentration of responsibility is essential to administrative success, and the State Commissioner of Health is solely responsible for all the executive policies of his department.

Valuable Service by Sanitary Supervisors

“Sanitary Supervisors, appointed under the provisions of the Civil Service law, have rendered invaluable service during the past year, and I regard them as forming one of the most essential elements of an efficient State health organization.

hospitals for the insane, State prisons and other State correctional institutions."

(2) The State Hospital Commission remains a constitutional body with its powers and duties, as conferred upon it by law, continued. The proposed Constitution provides that the Legislature shall provide for "a State Commission in Lunacy in which shall remain the management and fiscal control of the State hospitals for the insane, not including institutions for criminals or convicts except in so far as such management may now or hereafter be delegated by the Legislature to local boards of managers, and which shall visit and inspect all institutions either public or private, used for the care and treatment of the insane (not including institutions for epileptics or idiots). The matter in italics is new.

This does away absolutely with the danger of a board of control which would place the management and control of the State hospitals for the insane under the management and fiscal authority of a board having the management and fiscal control of all other State institutions. Delegate Meier Steinbrink, who fathered this proposal, is to be congratulated on his successful campaign for its adoption. While the State Commission in Lunacy will become a part of the Department of Charities and Corrections, the powers of the secretary of charities and corrections are limited to "inspection and supervision."

In the last few days of the convention when the Steinbrink amendment was under consideration an effort was made to substitute the proposal which would have established a board of control. The Steinbrink proposal was the direct antithesis of this, establishing separate control for the state hospitals and reposing it in the Commission in Lunacy. The board of control proposal was defeated by a rising vote, only a half dozen or more delegates voting in favor of it.

(3) The office of superintendent of prisons is taken out of the Constitution, but the Prison Commission is continued with all of its present powers and duties.

(4) The powers and duties of the State Board of Charities remain unchanged.

Several general provisions in the new Constitution may operate to benefit the institutional situation to a considerable degree. Among them are the following:

1. A new kind of bonds known as serial bonds, which does away with the heaping up of a mountain of debt to be paid off at the end of a considerable period, and provides in its stead for a gradual reduction year by year of debt incurred for any State work.

2. A budget system providing that the Governor shall prepare a budget after public hearings, and providing further that the Legislature may not change this except to reduce, and providing further that the Governor may alter the budget at any time before its final passage. The budget becomes law upon its passage by the Legislature without further consideration by the Governor. The Legislature may call before it heads of departments to explain features of the budgets.

3. Simplification of government by a regrouping of departments, commissions and boards in seventeen main departments.

Among the other features of the new Constitution which have some bearing on the work of the Association or which may interest readers of the News are the following:

1. Making the State Commissioner of Health a constitutional officer appointed by the Governor without the consent of the Senate, and removable by him at his discretion.

2. An admirable children's court provision in the Judiciary Article removing all previous doubt as to the constitutionality of conferring equity powers and jurisdiction upon children's courts, in all cases whether civil or criminal. This valuable principle is also extended to courts of domestic relation. If the Constitution is adopted this will enact into the State's fundamental law a most progressive principle of children's court practice. It will permit the handling of all children's cases on the basis of guardianship rather than punishment for offenses.

3. Occupational diseases are made subject to compensation, if the Legislature directs, under the powers granted in the workmen's compensation section.

4. The Legislature is also granted the power to regulate or prohibit manufacture in the state.

5. Considerable reform in county government is permitted under Section 25 of Article 3 of the new Constitution, which provides "That the Legislature by general laws may establish different forms of government in any county not wholly included in a city, any such form of government to become effective in any county only when approved by the electors thereof;".

County government is further dealt with in Section 26 of this article, which provides among other things that the Legislature "May confer upon any elective or appointive county officer or officers any of the powers and duties now exercised by the towns of any county or officers thereof relating to highways, public safety, and the care of the poor."

Among the other phases of the Constitution which may be of interest to members of the Association are the following:

1. Salary of legislators increased from $1,500 to $2,500.

2. Each house of the Legislature must publish a daily journal of its proceedings.

TUBERCULOSIS CONFERENCE.

Annual State Conference to Be Held at Albany, November 4 and 5

The annual New York State conference of tuberculosis workers will be held in Albany on November 4th and 5th under the auspices of the State Department of Health and the State Charities Aid Association. In conjunction with it the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis will hold its annual sectional conference for the tuberculosis workers of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Meetings of the State Association of Hospital Superintendents, State Tuberculosis Nurses' Association and the Open Air School Association will also be held, and the State Department of Health will cooperate with the Association in conducting at least one of the sessions.

Among the topics to be discussed are the following: "Industry and Tuberculosis," "Diagnosis of Incipient Cases of Pulmonary Tuberculosis," "Tuberculosis Visiting Nurses," "Selling Red Cross Seals," "The Duties and Opportunities of Tuberculosis Associations," "Dispensaries," "Open Air Schools," and "Sanitary Supervision of Cases in the Homes."

The meetings will be held in the State Education Building. Every one interested in tuberculosis work is invited to attend. Informal discussion will be open to all.

HEALTH CONGRESS A SUCCESS

American Public Health Association and State Sanitary Officers Entertained by Rochester

The American Public Health Association held one of the most successful meetings in its history in Rochester, September 7 to 10. The most significant feature of the meeting was Governor Whitman's address of welcome. The State Department of Health held its annual conference of health officers in connection with the meetings of the Association. The Rochester Public Health Association, the host of the congress and the citizens of Rochester generally are to be congratulated on the smoothness with which the affair was conducted.

Dr. Montgomery E. Leary, chairman of the local committee, is especially to be congratulated on the success of the meetings.
GOVERNOR'S SPEECH

"There were over 140,000 deaths in New York State during the year 1914, and if the estimates of the Committee of One Hundred on the Conservation of Human Vitality are to be relied upon, 40 per cent. of this mortality might have been prevented. Think of it—over 50,000 lives needlessly lost in one State during a single year.

"Over 23,000 of these 140,000 deaths occurred among infants under one year of age; and this fraction of the death rate is that which appeals most strongly to our sympathies, while it offers the most brilliant opportunities of service to the public health worker.

Infant Deaths Decline

"New York has devoted special attention to this problem and with most gratifying results. In 1913 the infant mortality rate for the State was 109 deaths under one year for every 1,000 births. The State Department of Health in 1914 and during the present year has bent every effort toward reducing this figure. The acute communicable diseases, such as typhoid fever, diphtheria, scarlet fever and the like, are passing year by year more completely within our control. Typhoid fever killed 1,368 persons in New York State in 1908 against only 867 in 1914; while the number of deaths from scarlet fever has fallen in the same period from 1,667 to 632. Diphtheria remains by far the most important of this group of the acute contagious diseases; and if, as I am assured, the 2,000 annual deaths from this disease in New York State are due largely to delay or neglect in applying a simple and efficient remedy in the form of diphtheria antitoxin—there is surely a grave responsibility resting upon the practising physician to remedy this deplorable condition of affairs.

Favors County Hospitals

"Tuberculosis remains the most difficult and important single problem which confronts you in your work. The death rate from this disease has fallen greatly during the past twenty years, but the rate of reduction has been very slow of late, and even last year this one disease cost New York State 16,000 lives. We have, as I believe, very wisely adopted the plan of providing for the care of this disease by counties, and 31 out of 57 counties in the State now have county hospitals either in operation or definitely provided for. One of the greatest needs of the moment, as I am informed, is for public health nurses to work in the various communities, to discover cases of the disease in their earlier and more easily curable stages, and to assist patients who must remain at home to maintain so far as possible conditions which ensure their own recovery and protect their families from infection.

Regrets Cut in Appropriations

"I greatly regret that the Legislature at its last session did not make appropriations adequate to fully maintain the work of certain divisions of the State Department of Health, especially the Division of Sanitary Supervisors, whose work has proved most important and beneficial to the local communities, and by means of whom the knowledge and skill of the expert Sanitarians of the Department of Health are placed at the disposal of the health officers of even the most remote rural districts. I sincerely hope that some means may be found by which the services of these physicians may be retained and feel confident that next year, when the members of the Legislature are made fully acquainted with the facts as to the value of these services that funds will be provided for their continuance. I shall use my influence to attain this end.

"The promise of the Commissioner of Health made at the beginning of this year to save 25,000 lives in the State in five years seems almost certain of realization, if only the necessary support is accorded to the department in its work.

"We are confident that this pledge will be more than redeemed. To the attainment of this splendid goal I pledge my cordial and hearty support so long as I am Governor.

WHITMAN ON HEALTH WORK.
Notable Extracts from Address Before the American Public Health Association.

"... While rigid economy in the administration of the finances of the State is essential, savings in expenditures attained through decreased efficiency in health work are not only unwise, but resolve themselves in the end into irreparable waste of the most valuable resources of the Commonwealth."

"The higher ethical standards and the broad humanitarianism which have developed among large masses of the people in these recent years imperatively demand that the health and social service activities of the government shall be absolutely divorced from politics."

"What does four-tenths of a point in the death rate mean to the average citizen? It meant all the difference between life and death for 4,000 men, women and children in New York State last year; for this reduction in the death rate corresponds to a saving of 4,000 lives."

"We must recognize that there are things that are good to do for humanity's sake—things which would bring in large return through the saving of economic waste—and yet that we cannot undertake to do these things because we cannot afford it. When that time comes, however, public health is one of the social activities of the State whose development should be curtailed only in the very last necessity."

"This reduction in the infant mortality rate from 109 to 101 corresponds to an saving of 2,000 infant lives, which in itself is a splendid return on the total cost of maintaining our State and local departments of health."

"The crowning glory of this twentieth century is to be found not in the great industrial progress and commercial development—not in the marvelous scientific discoveries—not in the incredible expansion and efficiency of its military organization, but in the improvement in the social condition of the masses, and in the higher standards of living, rendered possible to a large extent because the losses from sickness and death have been so enormously reduced by the extraordinary developments in preventive medicine, and sanitary science."

Newspaper editorial comment on Governor's Rochester address will be found on page 4.
EDITORIAL COMMENT ON GOVERNOR WHITMAN'S PUBLIC HEALTH ADDRESS.

"Grant All Needed Appropriations" (New York Sun.)

We have from the beginning of Dr. Biggs' administration endeavored to stimulate the legislation to grant all needed appropriations to the end that the health and lives of its people, the State's most precious asset, be conserved to the utmost. It appears, however, that the Legislature is emulating the action of a certain western Legislature which refused an appropriation for an antitoxin laboratory to save the lives of its children suffering from diphtheria, but gladly granted an appropriation to protect its hogs against cholera. May Governor Whitman's prediction change this fatal and unprofitable attitude of our legislators.

"Misguided 'Economy'"
(New York Tribune.)

Assuredly next year ample funds should be provided to permit the Health Department to continue unhampered its valuable work. It is the meanest, most stingest notion of economy—not economy itself—which stint expenditures for the saving and protection of human lives, the State's greatest wealth.

"Clear-cut and Convincing"
(Reno, Nev., Journal.)

Clear-cut and convincing was the address delivered by Governor Whitman yesterday before the American Public Health Association, at Rochester, and equally deserved the words of commendation spoken in behalf of work accomplished in this State.

"No Money to Save Lives"
(Albany Knickerbocker Press.)

Governor Whitman took a strong position in his address before the International Health Conference, on Tuesday, at Rochester, in favor of State financial support for the State Health Department in the work of eradicating preventable disease and saving lives.

The people of the State will support any effort which will make the Legislature, when it convenes, provide means for continuing the efficiency of health work in the State.

"Concerns Everyone" (Savannah, Ga., News.)

Everywhere there is evidence that disease is fighting a losing battle, but it is taking a terrible toll of the lives of the people. In his address Governor Whitman said that 60,000 persons died in that State in 1914 alone from preventable diseases. Public health concerns everyone. Every person is either helping or hindering the fight on disease, and not until everyone realizes the importance of fighting disease and enlists for the war upon it, will the lamentably large number of needless deaths every year be reduced to the point it should have reached long ago.

"Health and the State"
(Watertown Times.)

Governor Charles S. Whitman does well to urge the passage of an appropriation sufficient to carry out the work of the State Department of Health as it should be carried on.

"Commendable Attitude"
(Buffalo Courier.)

Governor Whitman deplored the failure of the Legislature last winter to make adequate provision for the work of the Health Department, and expressed the hope that members of the next Legislature will do better. The Governor is to be commended for his attitude toward this subject.

Higher Social Standards
(Hagerstown, Md., Globe.)

We see the reflex of higher social standards in our governmental circles. Governor Whitman pointed out that the same evidence of this in his address before the American Public Health Association, his utterances will have a far-reaching influence.

"Should Back Up the Governor"
(Elmira Advertiser.)

The people of the State should back the Governor up in his efforts to secure the necessary appropriations to continue the work of the sanitary inspectors and for such other matters as the Health Department feels pressing need.

"A Great Speech"
(Gowersville Leader.)

It was a great speech, one of great importance and the reading public of the Empire State must be in hearty sympathy with the Governor's conclusion, that while rigid economy in the administration of the finances of the State is essential, savings in expenditure attained through decreased efficiency in health work are not only unwise, but resolve themselves in the end into irreparable waste of the most valuable resources of the Commonwealth.

"With the Governor" (Utica Journal.)

Governor Whitman put himself strongly on record in Rochester in favor of liberal appropriations by the State for the maintenance of the State Health Department and especially for the Division of Sanitary Supervisors. The public is with him in such a policy.

"True to His Office" (Utica Dispatch.)

Governor Charles S. Whitman took advanced ground in advocating the value of the work of the State Department of Health. In listing his latter-day support for the prosecution and maintenance of that work he is true to himself and the principles of the high office he so worthily fills.

Opinion of Louisiana
(New Orleans Picayune.)

In his address to the State Department of Health meeting in Rochester, Governor Whitman of that State did not indulge in the usual congratulations and optimism, dwelling upon the great advances that we have made in sanitation in the last two decades, but devoted himself to an analysis of the weaknesses in our health campaign—what we can do and what we ought to do, but have not done. We understand the situation thoroughly now, what precautions should be taken, but we neglect to take them, not voting enough money or nullify them by placing unfit men in charge.

"A Real Service"
(Binghamton Press.)

Governor Whitman did a real service to the public in his address before the American Public Health Association in Rochester.
ter. For he emphasized those phases of the Association’s work which the layman can readily understand, but which many of us fall to appreciate when they are rehearsed in the technical language of the profession.

We can all think in terms of the dollar, and the Governor translated some figures into dollar terms with considerable effect. For example, he pointed out that New York State spends $5,000 on each one saved, whereas Mr. Whitman spent $20,000,000 on health work in a single year.

“A Ringing Speech” (Syracuse Journal)

In a ringing address before the American Public Health Association at Rochester last night Governor Whitman pledged anew his earnest devotion to the mighty humanitarian cause and urged his fellow members of that great organization to stand by him. He declared that as long as he was at the head of the State government he would continue to maintain the personal supervision of health and social activities from politics he sounded a chord that will echo harmoniously in the minds of thousands that there is a large class of people who are working for the preservation of life and the elimination of unsanitary conditions.

Public Will Command Governor (Elmira Gazette)

Governor Whitman has struck a popular chord in advocating money for health work. The public will commend him for helping to make the Health Department the most efficient and most important in the whole country.

Governor’s Position Gratifying (Middletown Times-Press)

While it is gratifying to have an Executive who is willing to publicly acknowledge the success attending the efforts of the heads of departments, and who takes a keen interest in all of the questions entering the administration of their particular department, the public does not need to be told that Commissioner Biggs and his assistants are establishing a remarkable record for the Department of Health.

Menacing legislation for a time threatened to further curtail the work of this department and it will be remembered that Commissioner Biggs, had he not received the strongest of support and encouragement from the Governor, would have resigned his post and given up the fight to carry out the program of reform he had instituted in the department. The Governor was largely responsible for the early defeat of this legislation and his stand has been more than justified in the results already shown.

“Governor Right” (Buffalo Times)

The Governor is right in insisting that matters of public health be kept out of politics, and his party would do well to heed his advice in this respect.

Governor Will Find People With Him (Jamestown Post)

The Governor will find that the people of this State, especially those outside the cities, will stand by him in the efforts he promises to make when the Legislature again convenes to have means provided to retain these physicians to look after the sanitary conditions and health work in the villages and hamlets of the State and the surrounding counties. It is not wise to practice economy at the expense of the health work, for it is bound to result in the loss of the most valuable resources of the community.

“Convincing” (Cortland Standard)

Some portions of his remarks are printed in other columns of this newspaper, but neither Mr. Whitman nor Mr. Biggs have told the truth about the financial condition of the State, nor have they offered a model for those of several other states recently, while her sanitary code is also having extensive copying.

Voices Sentiment of State (Mohawk Valley Register)

The address of Governor Whitman at the Rochester Conference revealed in an unmistakable way his intense and farseeing interest in the health and welfare of the people of the State. Governor Whitman’s reference to this will undoubtedly meet with popular concurrence. . . . He surely voices the sentiment of this and every other community in the State.

Praise for Biggs (Niagara Falls Journal)

Governor Whitman accorded unstinted praise to the work of the State Health Department under the able and earnest leadership of Dr. Hermann M. Biggs.

“Cut in Health Work Short-Sighted” (Newburgh News)

The work of the State Department in the various cities and towns has been of inestimable benefit and there has been an astonishing reduction in infant mortality. It is a short-sighted policy at best which cuts down appropriations for health work.

“Keynote of Health Work” (Jamestown Journal)

The address of Governor Whitman sets the keynote for the state’s interest and devotion to the cause of health and the welfare of its citizens.

Governor Supports “Life-Saving” Department (Syracuse Post-Standard)

Governor Whitman is a hearty and enthusiastic supporter of the Life Saving Department of the State of New York. This institution of our state government, commonly known as the State Department of Health, was reorganized under the revised public health law, and the Governor believes that the health activities of the government should get a divorce from politics, “and such,” said Governor Whitman in his address at Rochester last evening, “will have its full share of credit as a successful fighter of disease.”

“Most Laudable Ambition” (Watertown Standard)

The most laudable ambition and public effort in this State is that of Health Officer Biggs, outlined by Governor Whitman to Rochester last evening, to save 25,000 lives in the next five years. Achievement in no other line is so important, even from the dollars and cents point of view. Governor Biggs pleads for the support of the voters for the main reason in making Dr. Biggs’ prediction come true.

“Health Progress” (Albany Argus)

“The crowning glory of the twentieth century,” said Governor Whitman well said in his address to the American Health Association at Rochester yesterday, “is that the health officer in our industrial and commercial progress than in the works of social service among which sanitary science, war against disease and searching out of the elementary truths that underlie these subjects. New York has faults enough of government, but they are not to be charged against her health department, which has offered a model for those of several other states recently, while her sanitary code is also having extensive copying.”

Governor’s Stand Approved (Nassau Post)

Governor Whitman has taken a firm stand for efficiency in the Department of Health regardless of politics, and his views are unanimously approved by all the health officers and boards of health of Long Island.
TO VOTE ON HOSPITALS.

Five Counties Hold Referendum Elections on Question of Establishing Tuberculosis Institutions.

The voters of five counties on election day, November 2, will decide whether or not their counties will establish tuberculosis hospitals under the County Hospital law. Definite amounts are named in the proposition to be submitted to the voters in accordance with the referendum provision of the County Hospital law. If the majority of the voters vote yes it is mandatory upon the Board of Supervisors to select a site and establish the institution.

The five counties, with their population, average annual number of deaths from tuberculosis and the amounts to be voted on, are as follows:

Special campaign committees are being organized in Herkimer, Jefferson, Niagara, Rockland and Steuben for the conduct of an intensive educational campaign on the need for these hospitals. This need is so apparent and is so easily demonstrable that it is thought a considerable majority of the voters in all the counties will vote “Yes.”

NEW MENTAL HYGIENE PAMPHLET

The Mental Hygiene Committee of the Association has published a new pamphlet entitled “Social Service to the Rescue—What It Does for the Mentally Sick and How It Does It.” This pamphlet answers in a practical way the question “What is social service?” and gives interesting histories of patients with whom it was effective in preventing a mental breakdown or in improving their condition if mental disease had actually developed. Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained by writing to the State Charities Aid Association.

WEBSTER TO HAVE NURSE.

Work of Rural Public Health Nurse Furnished by S. C. A. A. Bears Fruit.

The Webster Grange has led the movement for raising funds for the employment of a public health nurse for this summer and fall. The nurse will be employed until the appropriation can be submitted to the taxpayers at the town meeting in November. The appropriation will continue the work of the nurse during 1916.

Under the leadership of the Grange $600 has already been collected, of which the Grange contributed $100.

This is the result of the demonstration of the work of a public health nurse made last year by a nurse approved by the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, two months’ work was given to the two Granges that sold the most Christmas Seals during the holiday season of 1913.

VASSAR GIRLS IN HEALTH WORK.

College Christian Association Finance Public Health Nurse.

The Vassar College Christian Association is financing the salary and expenses of a public health nurse for the town of Poughkeepsie outside of the City of Poughkeepsie. This includes the villages of Arlington and Wappingers Falls and the territory immediately surrounding the college grounds.

A special committee on health has been appointed by the Dutchess County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, members of the Christian Association being appointed to membership on this committee. This committee has charge of the work.

Miss Carolyn H. Childs, Smith ’02, a graduate of the Newton College Hospital, Newton, Massachusetts, is the nurse. Dr. Paul V. Winslow, the State Sanitary Supervisor for the district, is an official member of the committee as appointed, and is cooperating with the nurse, as are also the school and local health authorities.

The work is proving most satisfactory. One feature of the educational work is a public health exhibit at the county fair.

MUST NOT EMPLOY TUBERCULOUS TEACHERS.

The Board of Health of New York City has enacted a section of the Sanitary Code forbidding the employment of tuberculous school teachers or instructors in private, public or parochial schools except with a written permission from the Department of Health.

HOSPITAL FOR CHEMUNG.

Supervisors Vote to Have County Tuberculosis Institution to Take Place of City Hospital Destroyed by Fire.

Events in Chemung County seem to indicate that it will soon be among the list of counties having tuberculosis institutions established under the county hospital law.

The Elmira City tuberculosis hospital, which was given to the City of Elmira by Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Rapelyea, burned down on June 10th. The hospital was maintained by the city under a special act of the Legislature, and drew its patients almost entirely from the city.

The need for making the benefits of the hospital available to the entire county had long been apparent, and almost before the ruins were cool a movement was on foot to extend the influence and opportunity of the new institution. One of the most important features of the situation is the fact that no one even hinted that the institution be abandoned. Everyone who expressed an opinion urged that the hospital be rebuilt as soon as possible.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers and the donors, Mr. Rapelyea stated that he was willing that the property and the insurance be turned over to the county, and very generously announced that if a plan could be worked out that would promise a larger sphere of activity and influence for a new hospital, the donors would increase their benefactions, which have already reached a considerable figure.

Accordingly, a committee waited upon the Board of Supervisors and urged that the county take over the institution. A committee was appointed by the Board which immediately began an investigation of the proposal. Soon after the appointment of this committee, the Board of Supervisors passed a resolution committing the county to the county hospital plan. The Supervisors have not taken final action in the matter of appropriations, but there is a favorable trend of opinion in the Board, and those familiar with the situation believe that it will deal liberally with the institution.

FOLLOW LEAD OF NEW YORK IN HEALTH WORK.

It is interesting to note that the Health Departments of Massachusetts, West Virginia, and New Jersey have been recently organized under new health statutes similar to the health law of this State. The law was enacted two years ago, and important features of it have been incorporated in health statutes of many States.
A COMMITTEE THAT DOES THINGS.

How Willing Workers at Willard Provide After-care for Patients Discharged from State Hospital.

The Willard State Hospital Mental Hygiene Committee is composed of workers. They do things all the year 'round, and the way they do them is an inspiration.

This committee was formed to do after-care work with patients discharged from the Willard State Hospital, at Willard, Seneca County—that is, to keep a watchful eye on the ex-patients who are trying to re-establish themselves in the environment of a normal life and to extend a helping hand to them when they need it. It works in cooperation with Dr. R. M. Elliott, superintendent of the hospital, and the staff.

Neighbory Neighbors

The members of the committee live in the various communities of the Willard district. The names of the patients discharged or paroled to their homes in these various communities are sent to the secretary of the committee, and he notifies the committee members in the proper community.

So when the patients return home to again take up life outside of institutional walls, they have in their home town a friend—a sort of good neighbor—who understands their situation and is ready and anxious to help them. While the patients have recovered their mental poise sufficiently to leave the hospital, they still need after-care if they are to get along satisfactorily, take their proper place in the community and live healthy mental lives. The committee members supply this necessary after-care in the nature of friendly personal service, of counsel, encouragement, help in obtaining employment or making friends, aid in getting proper home surroundings and recreation, and in correcting all conditions of unfavorable environment as far as possible.

Here's Interest—Committee Meets All Day

The committee held its semi-annual meeting at the hospital on May 7. So interested are the committee members in their work that they hold an all-day meeting to discuss and plan it. The whole morning session was given up to reports by members on the cases in their charge. During the past six months a total of thirty-seven cases had been referred to the committee, and the variety and extent of the personal aid—social service—rendered them was remarkable. Practically all of these ex-patients had been personally visited or communicated with, and in most instances were getting along well. Especial success had been achieved in finding work for them with understanding, sympathetic employers. Often the committee members traveled long distances to see their charges and help encourage them.

Every Member a Social Worker

A visitor to the meeting pointed out that no committee need fail to do effective service with such cases for want of a paid social worker. If each member of the committee will become a volunteer social worker, as the Willard members do, their effectiveness will be assured. The Willard committee may well serve as a model for similar committees throughout the State—and there should be such a one in every State hospital district.

Who's On This Committee

The members of the Willard committee are as follows: Mrs. Milo M. Acker, of Hornell, chairman, who is a member of the National Mental Hygiene Committee and was formerly a member of the hospital's Board of Managers; Rev. E. B. Van Arsdale, of Interlaken, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. H. K. Armstrong, of Pen Yan, who is a member of the Board of Managers of the Newark Custodial Institution for Feeble-Minded Women; Mrs. John Davenport, of Bath, a member of the State Prison Commission; Rev. James Dougherty, of Canandaigua; Mrs. W. W. Hopkins, of Geneva; Rev. J. W. Jacks, D.D., of Geneva; Mrs. George Magee, of Watkins; Mrs. C. H. P. Vary, of Newark; Rev. Joseph H. France, of Naples, and ex-officio members, Dr. R. M. Elliott, superintendent of the hospital; Miss Leora Field, of Waterloo, the Association's Seneca County Agent for Dependent Children; and Mr. Fred J. Manro, of Auburn; Mrs. Edwin C. Stewart, of Ithaca, and Mr. John M. Quirk, of Montour Falls, who are also members of the Board of Managers.

IMPROVEMENTS AT TOMPKINS

County Hospital Increases Facilities and Makes Several Desirable Changes

The Edward Meany Sanitorium, the Tompkins County tuberculosis hospital, has recently completed an addition. The institution now is equipped for 29 patients—12 women and 17 men. This addition so greatly increases the facilities of the hospital that it may now easily classify its patients.

Among the other recent improvements are an enlarged dining-room opening on a large screened porch. This permits the serving of meals on the porch during the summer. The entire building has also been screened and a new pantry and storeroom constructed.

The hospital is situated on one of the most attractive sites in the state, being located near a wild and magnificent ravine, within sight of Taughannock Falls in a beautiful pine grove. The superintendent is Dr. W. K. Quackenbush and the matron is Miss Anna M. Suter.

LOS ANGELES VOTES TO EMPLOY TWENTY NURSES

It is becoming decided the fashion to carry referendums on public health questions, such as appropriations for nurses and hospitals. The most recent encouraging example was the vote in Los Angeles on the question of employing one municipal tuberculosis nurse for every 100 cases of the disease reported in the city.

The ordinance was adopted by 47,359 affirmative votes as against 25,681—a majority of 30 per cent in favor of the proposal.

This will mean the employment of about 20 nurses for tuberculosis work when the plan is fully carried out.

CHILDREN OF NYACK HELP

Give Minstrel Show and Donate Proceeds to Aid Unfortunates

Thirteen children of Nyack, between the ages of ten and fourteen, have done their part toward helping the S. C. A. A.'s work for dependent children. They arranged a minstrel show entitled "The Dentist's Den," and, with the Rev. Sarrett Prentice as interlocutor, gave a very successful performance. Three of the children composed the orchestra; tickets were printed gratis and were sold at 10 cents or 15 cents each.

When it came to decide what should be done with the money, the children, without suggestion from any one, voted to give it to three children who had recently been taken by a court action from extremely bad home surroundings. According to the delegation visited the county agent and turned over to her the $8 proceeds in pennies, nickels and dimes, accompanied by pieces of string, nails and bits of stone from the pockets of one of the members of the delegation.

SIDNEY CENTER AMONG LEADERS

Through an error in the preparation of the tables showing the results of the Red Cross Seal Sale, Sidney Center, N. Y., was not given among the places that had achieved the "Standard of Three." Sidney Center not only sold three seals per capita, but has the honor of having sold 8.15 seals per capita. Mr. C. B. Dibble, under whose able and energetic management the sale was conducted, is to be congratulated upon its success.

POPULARIZING A HOSPITAL

Saratoga County Arranges Special Trips for Citizens to See Their Tuberculosis Institution

Under the energetic leadership of Dr. Charles S. Prest, a successful campaign has been conducted to bring to the attention of the people of Saratoga County the fact that it has a hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis. Dr. Prest is a member of the Board of Managers and a District Sanitary Supervisor.

A series of special "days" was arranged. On these occasions people from various towns gathered at the institution, were shown over the plant by Dr. P. J. Hirst, the superintendent, and were told the work that the hospital is doing and plans to do in the future.

Days were set aside for each of the chief towns of the county. Automobiles, busses and trolley cars were taxed to their capacity on these occasions to carry citizens of the county to the institution that they were taxing themselves to maintain, but that they had heard about only through vague reports in the newspapers. The campaign succeeded in arousing a very hearty interest in the hospital among the citizens of the county.

NEW LIFE IN OSWEGO TUBERCULOSIS WORK

The Tuberculosis Committee in Oswego, which for three years has been comparatively inactive, has been reorganized. The new officers are: President, Mr. Harry J. Cooper; vice-president, Professor William A. Maddox; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. D. Calkin; recording secretary, Dr. H. S. Albertson; treasurer, F. E. Sweetland. Since June 1st the committee has employed Miss Fannie Brandt as visiting nurse.
"VOTE FOR THE COUNTY HOSPITAL," SAYS GORGAS.

"Vote for the county tuberculosis hospital and help save lives."
This in substance is the advice given the voters of Jefferson, Herkimer, Steuben, Niagara and Rockland Counties by Dr. William C. Gorgas, Surgeon General of the United States Army.
General Gorgas is probably the foremost sanitarian in the world. His opinion on health questions is respected by all health workers.
His leadership was earned in two hard fought battles against disease. First he cleaned up Havana and stamped out yellow fever. Then he was placed in charge of the sanitary work in the Panama Canal Zone. Disease had driven the French from the Isthmus and had as much to do with their failure as the slides and other disasters that visited their undertaking. When the United States undertook the building of the Canal it found the Isthmus a pest hole. General Gorgas, utilizing his hard-earned experience in Havana, made the Zone sanitary, and thus made possible probably the greatest engineering feat the world has ever known.

VOTERS OF ROCKLAND, HERKIMER, JEFFERSON, STEUBEN AND NIAGARA.

Is Your County on the List of Those Providing Humane Care for the Sufferers from Tuberculosis?

It is safe to say that few voters will fail to follow the advice of so eminent a health worker. He knows how to prevent needless loss of life.

In an interview given in connection with the recent meeting of the American Public Health Association, General Gorgas said that the prevention of tuberculosis is the most important public health problem today.

Remember that he was talking through the newspapers not only to two thousand leaders in health work gathered from all parts of the country, but also to the people of the country. "In spite of all the work that has been done for the prevention of tuberculosis, that problem remains the largest and most important public health problem today," said General Gorgas. "Tuberculosis is like our yellow fever campaigns in Havana and the Isthmus of Panama. In Havana and Panama we employed many measures, any one of which, probably, if it had been completely carried out, would have succeeded in controlling yellow fever. We know that no one of them, however, could be carried out with complete efficiency. We therefore employed all measures that promised success as extensively as we could.

"Many measures are being employed with varying success in the tuberculosis campaign. Until we are sure that some of these can be made absolutely and completely effective we should abandon none of them.

"Hospital care for the sufferer from tuberculosis, if every patient could be placed in a hospital, would undoubtedly stamp out the disease in a few years.

"There was probably as large a percentage of the population of England afflicted by leprosy in the fifteenth century as are afflicted today by tuberculosis. County hospitals for leprosy stamped out that disease in England. Your plan of county hospitals in New York State will do the same for tuberculosis in this commonwealth—and when—they are established in sufficient numbers and are sufficiently effective to segregate all cases in the infective stages.

"Knowing as we do that if we could care for the sputum of all cases of tuberculosis we would control the disease in a very few years, does not the terrible economic waste of this disease seem all the more needless and inexusable?"

"It seems to me that with the question of saving lives so squarely put up to the voters there can be no doubt of the results.

"With the tuberculosis campaign in its present stage of development, with the cause of the disease thoroughly understood by the medical profession and by an increasing proportion of the laity, with the means for preventing it and curing the improvable cases well known, there is no possible avenue for us, as a public, to escape our responsibility in providing adequate facilities for dealing with the problem."

A SIMPLE QUESTION.

Voters, Considering Hospital Proposition, Must Arrive at Same Decision as General Gorgas Reached.

After all, can you find a simpler question for a voter to answer than this one that is being asked of the voters in Jefferson, Herkimer, Niagara, Rockland and Steuben Counties: "Will you vote yes or no to save lives?"

This year the situation facing the voters in the five counties that are having a referendum is indicated by the following table:

*In addition to $1,000 already appropriated by the Board of Supervisors.

Mr. Voter, remember that General Gorgas, when he turned his mind to this question, and advised you to vote yes, was considering all the facts. He was considering the same facts that you are considering. He based his advice on an experience in public health work that made him a fair judge and a competent adviser.

TUBERCULOSIS IN ALL COUNTIES.

One of the Chief Questions Facing Voters Is Very Easily Answered.

Everyone will very readily admit that there is a great deal of tuberculosis. Voters of Jefferson County will find that 304 persons have died there in the last five years; 273 have died in Rockland County in the same period; Herkimer has lost 203 of its citizens from this dis-

Cost: Site, $5,400; construction, $59,000. 272 beds. Maintenance cost, $1.30 per day per patient.

It is safe to say that everyone, once convinced that a vote of "Yes" will save lives, will make his cross mark on the ballot in the "Yes" square, or pull the lever on the voting machine in the "Yes" direction.

All the voters, not merely taxpayers, will decide whether those counties shall have a county tuberculosis hospital.

The importance of this question can scarcely be overestimated. It is safe to say that every citizen of the five counties will examine the proposition from all sides and will decide the following questions:
1. Are there enough cases in our county to warrant the establishment of a hospital.
2. Do patients go to county hospitals.
3. Does the experience of twenty-six other counties that have these institutions prove that the county hospital does save lives.

The voters of four counties last year answered all these questions with a most decisive "Yes." The results were as follows:

Investigation has proven that there are at least five times as many living cases of tuberculosis as there are deaths from the disease each year. The probable number of cases in each county, therefore, is shown by the following table:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>County</th>
<th>Average annual number of deaths of cases</th>
<th>Probable number living cases</th>

This effectively answers the first question that voters must consider in casting an intelligent ballot on this proposition. There are enough cases in each county to warrant the establishment of a hospital.

Practically everyone will admit that a sufferer from tuberculosis deserves the best treatment that the public can give him. Nearly everyone will admit that the families of the sufferers, and the public generally, deserve the best possible protection from the danger of infection.

FORM OF REQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the State "Charities Aid Association" incorporated in the year 1893 under the laws of the State of New York, the sum of $_________ dollars to be used for the purpose of said Association.

The only questions then are: Will the county hospital do these things; will the patients go to these institutions; what has been the experience of the nineteen counties that operate institutions and what facts influenced the voters of seven other counties to decide to establish them. In other words, what has been the experience of twenty-six other counties in dealing with this situation.

A supervisor in a certain county answered these questions for himself after a most thorough and painstaking investigation.

He was appointed on a committee to determine the need for a county tuberculosis hospital and to learn whether the experience of other counties had been satisfactory. When he started out he was prejudiced against the proposition. He believed that county hospitals were not doing the work that they were expected to do and that their accomplishments did not justify the expense.

At the close of his investigation, however, he expressed himself about as follows: "There can be no doubt that there is a terrible loss of life from tuberculosis in this county. My investigation convinces me that county hospitals are succeeding to a remarkable degree in curing early cases; that they are caring for the advanced cases more humanely than they could be cared for in their own homes, and that thus they attract patients in large numbers, whose families are thereby protected from the danger of infection.

"In short, the experience of the counties we have investigated is very encouraging. My only doubt, however, is whether the county hospital plan is the best one for solving the problem of tuberculosis in our community.

There is no alternative plan that I know of that has been tried. I am merely not sure that the proposed plan is the best."

This official, therefore, in the best of faith, counseled delay.

General Gorgas would have had some inter-

"No official can excuse his inactivity in this matter by advocating one particular measure to the exclusion of the others. Visiting nurses are necessary; local hospitals are necessary; there is no alternative that I know of, but a better plan may turn up. I must not be hasty. I must not risk paying a needless dentist’s fee, if, later, a better plan appears."

Cost of site, $1,000; construction, $3,100. 25 beds. Maintenance, $1.33 per day per patient.

WHAT DELAY MEANS.

Those Who Still Counsel Delay Should Apply That Reasoning to Themselves.

A voter who feels as the supervisor did about it might apply his reasoning to himself, with the following results:

"Yes, I am sick. It is true that doctors are said to be necessary in such cases as mine, and I know that in the past they have usually succeeded in relieving suffering such as I am now enduring and in curing diseases such as mine. There is no alternative that I know of, but something may turn up some day. So I will not have a doctor."

Or again:

"I have a toothache. It is true that dentists have done great good in most cases of toothache."

WHAT THE CAMPAIGN INVOLVES.

Other Phases of Tuberculosis Work and How They Are Being Carried Out.

This plan of campaign as it involves the local officials requires the following steps:

1. Employment by city, town and village health boards of visiting nurses to work under the direction of the health officer.
2. Establishment of dispensaries by health authorities of the larger cities and villages for the examination of suspected cases.
3. Establishment of open air schools for anemic and sickly school children predisposed to the disease.
4. The efficient medical examination of school children for the discovery of early cases of the disease, and for the removal of adenoids and enlarged tonsils, and for the discovery of other physical defects.
5. Most important of all, the establishment of tuberculosis hospitals by county boards of supervisors for the care of early cases and the segregation of advanced cases.

This plan of campaign is now being successfully carried into effect throughout the State. Nurses are at work, caring for the sick and instructing both the sick and well in nearly a hundred communities that before never dreamed of the necessity and importance of such work. Dispensaries are offering free medical examination and advice to patients who cannot afford to pay, in thirty cities and villages. Open air schools are becoming the

HOSPITALS THE CHIEF OBJECT.

International Congress on Tuberculosis Advised Institutional Care.

Like a well-planned military campaign the tuberculosis movement in New York State has a chief objective, determined by the well-recognized needs of the tuberculosis sufferer, viz., enough local hospitals to provide a bed for every advanced case and enough sanatorium beds to provide curative treatment for every early case. These two features of the tuberculosis movement, forming its main objective, were emphasized and re-emphasized at the International Tuberculosis Congress held in Washington, D.C., in 1908. The congress drew together experts from all over the world. After all the facts had been presented, and after all the arguments had been heard, the congress placed itself on record in favor of this proposition: That the most important feature of the movement to control tuberculosis must be hospital care for the advanced cases and sanatorium care for the early ones. It was further emphasized that these two requisites could be effectively provided only by locating institutions near enough to the homes of the patients so that they would readily avail themselves of their benefits.

Why not State hospitals?

Governor and Legislative Leaders Decide That County Should Deal With the Problem.

Governor Hughes, the leaders of the legislature and public men generally were consulted. Naturally, State hospitals first suggested themselves. But the State even then was far behind in its provision for the insane. It is even further behind now. The State's prisons were even then deplorably overcrowded. They are worse now. Even then the problem of the feebly-minded was recognized in its many sinister phases, and the State was beginning to realize that it must make large expenditures to segregate that class of unfortunates. No, the State was already committed to more work than it could handle, with its large canal and good roads making ever increasing demands on the public treasury.

The most important reason against a system of State hospitals, which must necessarily be "few and far between," is the difficulty of persuading patients to leave their friends and families and enter an institution remote from all they hold dear. With hospitals accessible to the world they know and that has known them this objection is largely overcome. This has been proven true in the experience with local hospitals not only in this country but also in Europe.
from any suggestion of alms and without any connection with the poor law machinery.

A law was passed, therefore, known as the County Hospital Law. It permitted boards of supervisors to establish hospitals for the care and treatment of all classes of cases of tuberculosis and provided for a board of managers, appointed for five years, who should have entire charge of the institution, subject to the appropriations made therefor by the supervisors. It has been found that this plan supplies more continuous oversight than could be given by boards of supervisors, and secures a more permanent policy of administration than could be guaranteed by a board whose personnel changes every two years.

Acting under this law, boards of supervisors of the following counties have established hospitals:

- Broome, Fulton, Monroe, Montgomery, Oneida, Orange, Oswego, Ontario, Rensselaer, Schenectady, Tompkins, Ulster, Cattaraugus, Onondaga and Saratoga, while Warren and Westchester have voted to establish institutions under the County Hospital Law, and either have their institutions under way or are looking for sites. Voters of Chenango, Suffolk, Lewis and Nassau voted appropriations for hospitals last year. Besides these, there are local institutions in several counties which either wholly or partly answer the purpose of county hospitals, these contribute to the mass of experience, is daily convincing the people of New York State that hospitals are the chief effective agents in the successful warfare against this disease. Such hospitals are located in the following counties: Albany (two hospitals), Cayuga, Chemung (destroyed

COUNTY HOSPITALS LOGICAL SOLUTION.

Something About the Law Under Which These Institutions Are Established.

The only logical solution of the problem, then, was county hospitals, entirely removed recently by fire), Dutchess, Erie (three hospitals), and Westchester (three hospitals).

Altogether there are twenty-six counties provided with hospitals or that have decided to establish them.

At one place he could hear of or that his physician knew, but all were full and most of them had long waiting lists. He could find no institution within his slender means that could take him in. He could not get the care he needed.

Endorsement of the wisdom of New York State's tuberculosis policy, more striking even than the number of counties that have acted under the County Hospital Law, is found in the number of States that have enacted similar legislation. Massachusetts originally adopted the policy of State hospitals, but the impracticability of that scheme soon became apparent. Noting the success of the local hospitals in New York, the Bay State enacted a law similar to the County Hospital Law, the chief difference being that the Massachusetts law, owing to peculiar local conditions, provides for municipal hospitals. Among the States having county hospital laws similar to the New York State statute are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, Ohio, Texas and Wisconsin. Many of these States have enacted the New York State law almost verbatim, while others have adopted its most important features.

WHAT NEGLECT MEANS.

Here is a true story which shows what the lack of a county hospital may mean. A painter in a certain New York State town, the breadwinner for a family consisting of his wife and three children, acquired tuberculosis, and made up his mind to follow his physician's advice to go to a hospital. He tried every...

Knowing all these things can any voter fail to vote 'yes' on this question: 'Shall this county appropriate $3,000 to establish a county tuberculosis hospital?'
REFERENDUMS ON COUNTY HOSPITAL ROLL UP SIGNIFICANT MAJORTIES

Five Counties Appropriate Total of $230,000 by Total Majority of 20,825—Voters Show Ability to Select Humanitarian Side of Question Even Among Confusing Number of Propositions Presented

The five counties which voted at the recent election on the question of appropriating money for the establishment of tuberculosis hospitals registered a decisive affirmative vote in each case. Niagara County voted on the largest sum—$100,000—and polled the largest majority—7,712. The other majorities were as follows: Jefferson, 5,240; Rockland, 8,499; Steuben, 2,434, and Herkimer, 1,940.

These five counties and Chautauqua County (the Board of Supervisors of which have since election accepted a gift of $150,000 for the establishment of a county hospital) bring the total of counties in which there are hospitals in operation or definitely assured to thirty-two. The county hospital situation in the state is strikingly shown in the accompanying map.

The referendum in the five counties assures a total of approximately 245 additional beds for the treatment of tuberculosis, for which a total of $230,000 was voted. Probably the most significant feature of the referendum, however, is the fact that 68,735 of the 74,996 electors who voted at all in the five counties voted on the hospital question. The 68,735 votes on the hospital question compares very favorably with the total of 65,426 on the revised Constitution and 65,506 on the woman suffrage question.

With six, and in some counties seven, different lists of candidates and propositions requiring the attention of the voters, ranging all the way from appropriations for town bridges to the license question, the constitution and granting of equal suffrage to women, the voter went down through the ballots and, with a discrimination that many have thought impossible, selected the human welfare side of the county hospital proposition and voted to tax himself to save lives.

The table at the bottom of this page is extremely interesting and will well reward the time spent on a most careful analysis. It will be noted that in three counties—Rockland, Steuben and Jefferson—the total vote on the hospital questotal vote and its comparison with the vote cast on the Constitution and the chief officials.

Combining the results of the referendum in the five counties this year with the results in the four counties which voted on the question last year—Chenango, Lewis, Nassau and Suffolk—the following interesting facts are brought out:

1. That $410,000 have been appropriated in this state in two years by direct vote of the people for county tuberculosis hospitals.

2. That approximately 395 beds have been provided in this way.

3. That in every one of the nine counties where the referendum has been tried it has been carried.

4. That 111,753 voters have voted on this question, and that 68,825 have said "yes," while only 42,928 have said "no," a most encouraging majority of 25,897.

It is interesting to note that the two years combined give a majority of 25,897, while the total majority for this year was 20,825.

The educational campaign that preceded the election for a period of about six weeks was a vigorous attempt to focus public attention on this question—"Will you vote yes or no to save lives?" The question was the topical line in a six-column, eleven-inch display advertisement which was published at least twice in every newspaper in each of the counties. The question was asked and emphasized over and over in the news stories which the newspapers very willingly published, in the few pamphlets circulated by the committees, and was asked from practically every pulpit in the five counties. It also appeared in the store windows on window cards, on fence posts and telegraph poles. On election day each voter, just before entering the polls, received a slip telling him to "Vote yes for the tuberculosis hospital." They acted on this suggestion in overwhelming numbers—the desirability of doing so had been thoroughly established by the educational campaign.

The State Charities Aid Association assisted local leaders in organizing county campaign committees and on the basis of the experience of the previous year suggested programs for the publicity campaigns. The State Department of Health assisted in the educational movement with lectures and other work by four of its sanitary supervisors. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, through its local agents, rendered most effective service in the distribution of pamphlets and other literature among its policy holders. Labor unions, fraternal organizations, women's clubs, granges, church societies, chambers of commerce and other organizations endorsed the propositions and co-operated to an unusual degree.

It is with great pleasure that we record here the names of the committees that did such effective work in their several counties:

RED CROSS SEAL SALE IS ON

Every Indication Points to Increase Over Last Year and Possibly the Attainment of 10,000,000 Mark in State Outside of New York City

The importance of mass play in the Red Cross Seal campaign cannot be over-emphasized. Just as the football team that wins must "hit the line" as one man, so must the Tuberculosis Committee that succeeds in the seal campaign use its full strength and all of its influence in the sale. While it has been found that the paid sales manager is almost a necessity for working out details and organizing the sale successfully in the larger cities and counties, nevertheless the most important factor is the active interest and support of the leading citizens of each community who have identified themselves with the tubercularis movement.

"The demand is so great that I think you had better send me 10,000 more seals."

The above from one of the Red Cross Seal agents in a small town arrived at the State headquarters before this year's Christmas sale had officially begun. It is one of hundreds of similar indications that the sale of seals this year will be larger by several hundred thousand than any previous sale. Over 24,000,000 seals have already been sent out.

The State Charities Aid Association, manager of the seal sale for the past six years in the State outside of New York City, is acting again this year in that capacity. Each year the sale has approached nearer and nearer the 10,000,-000 mark, an increase over the previous year's sale being recorded by each sale. The sale last year was 8,666,386. This brings the record up to within striking distance of the 10,000,000 mark.

The sale this year is under the management of Mr. Harvey Dee Brown, who has had considerable experience in Wisconsin in the sale of Christmas Seals. While the methods used do not differ in any great degree from those which have been developed during the six years in which the State Charities Aid Association has sold the seals, there is a greater intensifying of effort and a greater emphasis on the educational side of the sale.

The pennant contest, which originated in New York State, will be a feature this year of the national sale. The states, cities, towns and villages selling the largest number of Red Cross Seals per capita will be given pennants in their respective classes by the American Red Cross and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Last year's competition was limited to cities, towns and villages, but for the 1916 seals campaign pennants will be awarded to States as well.

To avoid pitting villages against large cities, communities have been divided into ten classes, as follows: Population less than 300; from 300 to 1,200; from 1,200 to 2,000; thence to 8,000; thence to 25,000; thence to 50,000; thence to 150,-

York City won out over Wisconsin, with 1,930 seals per capita.

In the 1914 competition states banded themselves in rivalry to be published as the most generous supporters of public health work through purchase of the Red Cross Seals. In other places the anti-tuberculosis workers started the selling campaign up again between Christmas and New Year in order to get their town in the honor roll for the sale of three seals per capita.

New York communities were extremely successful last year in the national sale, winning a large proportion of the pennants. The state winners of the national sale were as follows:

Children's Health Crusade Day as a feature of the Red Cross Seal Sale, also originated in New York State, is being made a national movement.

A specially prepared talk for school children is being circulated throughout the country. This will be read to hundreds of thousands of school children.

The interest of the children in the tuberculosis movement, and in the Red Cross Seal particularly, is stimulated by the reading of the story, and simple prizes, consisting of badges and pins, will be awarded upon the attainment of certain ranks in the sale of the seals.

The story to be used in New York State is called "The Story of the Double Red Cross," and draws an interesting comparison between the crusades of the Middle Ages and the modern movement for the prevention of tuberculosis.
A CLEAR CUT PROGRAM.

"I am glad that we have in this state a well defined policy and a clear cut program for the control of tuberculosis. Eight years ago the anti-tuberculosis movement in this state was planned on definite lines and since then has been very effectively organized. We are not groping in the dark as to facts; we are not arousing the interest and sympathy of the people without pointing out what to do about it, and we are seeing to it that the necessary steps are actually being taken."

GOV. CHARLES S. WHITMAN.

NEW HOSPITAL IN RENSESLAER.

Board of Supervisors Appropriates $150,000 for a 120 Bed Tuberculosis Institution to Replace One on Almshouse Farm.

The Board of Supervisors of Rensselaer County has appropriated, by a vote of 19 to 5, $150,000 for the erection of a new 120 bed county tuberculosis hospital. The present institution is too small to meet adequately the needs of the county and is located on the almshouse farm. Its location has always been against its complete success, but, nevertheless, the institution has nearly always been filled to its capacity, and in recent years has usually had a waiting list. A site has been selected and approved by the State Commissioner of Health and plans for the new institution are well along toward completion. Bids will be advertised and construction will begin probably early in the spring.

CHENANGO BOARD ACTS.

Selects Site and Authorizes Bond Issue for $20,000 to Establish County Hospital.

The Board of Supervisors of Chenango County has voted to purchase a site at Sherburne for a county tuberculosis hospital, voted by the people at a referendum in 1914. The board has spent nearly a year in selecting a site, but now that a bond issue of $20,000 has been voted, it seems likely that construction of the hospital will soon begin.

FIELD AGENT FOR INEBRIETY.

The New York City Board of Inebriety has secured an appropriation of $42,000 for its work during the coming year, including the operation of the Farm Colony at Warwick, N. Y. Included in this sum also is provision for a field agent, which will enable the Board to keep in touch with discharged cases and to do other work similar to that of the outpatient worker in general hospitals.

at Your Toy Shop.

In doing your Christmas shopping—of course you do it early—be sure to ask for a Daddy Long-legs Doll; this doll of an unusual name is an even more unusual doll. There are dolls that can talk and even dolls that can walk, but this is better than either—it makes you think. The Daddy Long-legs Doll is a reminder, during these merry holiday times, that there are thousands of homeless children and thousands of childless homes. But it also reminds you of the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association, the purpose of which is to bring together these homeless children and these childless homes, and for the benefit of which these dolls are sold.

The idea of the doll was suggested by Jean Webster's play, "Daddy Long-legs." The heroine, Judy Abbott, is taken from an orphan asylum by a wealthy member of the Board of Trustees and given an education. Last year about 2,000 of these dolls were disposed of in various parts of the State and at the little shop that was opened on Fifth Avenue in New York City, two weeks before Christmas, while another 1,000 went to California to be sold in connection with the play, which was being given on the Pacific Coast.

Every reader of the S. C. A. A. News can help in the sale of these dolls by inquiring for them at the department and toy stores. If you are unable to get them in your town, send 50 cents in stamps, and the names of one or more toy dealers in your town, and the doll will be sent you.

HOSPITAL STAFF ORGANIZATION

The Hospital Committee of the State Charities Aid Association hopes in the near future to publish a pamphlet on the organization of the medical staff of New York City's Greenpoint Hospital. This institution, which has recently opened, is one of the largest and most complete in the city. It has a continuous medical service similar to that which has made the Massachusetts General Hospital and Johns Hopkins so well known.

SIXTEEN HUNDRED CASES OF SICKNESS AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT.

Report on the Extent, Care and Prevention of Sickness in Dutchess County Made by the Hospital Committee of the State Charities Aid Association Will Have Permanent Results—Steps Already Being Taken by Prominent Citizens to Organize a County Health Association.

A County Health Association is being launched by a group of prominent citizens in Dutchess County that is significant in many of its aspects. Probably the most important feature of the new organization is that it enters the public health field not merely because public-spirited citizens happened to feel that the prevention of disease was an interesting bit of work, but chiefly because an air schools, is essentially a public health problem. The proposed Health Association, which at this writing seems to be assured, was the only logical result of the investigation.

The inquiry covered five districts, selected for their representative character, with an aggregate population of nearly 12,000. One of these was the Fourth Ward of Poughkeepsie, which gave a typical urban community. The other four were the towns of Rhinebeck, Milan, Clinton and Stanford, which presented typical rural, large village and small village populations. The investigation, except for Stanford, covered a period of sixteen months. In that town data was collected for twelve months only.

This investigation covered a territory and dealt with groups that are typical of not merely the whole of Dutchess County but of the whole of New York State, and, in fact, probably of the northern portion of the United States. It is safe to say that investigations conducted along similar lines will give similar results in almost any portion of the country where there are no special population factors to be taken into consideration.

The facts connected with 1,600 cases of illness were examined in the course of the investigation. The importance of the findings is clearly indicated in the following statement of results in totals:

1. 786 were communicable.
2. 673 were general medical and surgical.
3. 141 were obstetrical.

Of the 1,600 cases, 987, or 68.5 per cent, were acutely ill, while 452, or 31.5 per cent, were chronically ill.

The charts on this and the following pages are reproduced for the purpose of showing the effect of reducing dry facts in a report to graphic form.

The investigation did not content itself, however, with discovering these important facts in regard to sickness, but sought to discover just what such an amount of sickness meant to the individual and to the community.

The 987 cases that were acutely ill lost 41,244 days because of their illness. Children from one to five lost 13,256 days; children of school age lost 13,716 days; men in the productive period of life, fifteen to fifty-four years, lost 4,983 days, while women during the same period lost 4,838 days. It was impossible to determine how much time had been lost by the chronic cases.

The report established conclusively that it is not merely poverty, but lack of hospital, nursing and other facilities that is responsible for unsecured-for sickness, not only in rural communities but also in cities. Seventy-six per cent of the patients (1,217) had medical care—1,058 secured this in their own home, 101 in hospitals, and 58 both at home and in hospitals. Three hundred and eighty-three patients who remained at home were without any medical care whatever.

Of the 1,441 patients who remained at home during their entire sickness, 31 secured resident trained nursing service; 53, visiting trained nursing service; 77, resident untrained nursing service; and 12, visiting untrained nursing service. In 852 instances, however, all the nursing that was done was done by a member of the patient's family.

It was found that 506 patients could have paid for any necessary service. Of these, however, only 81 per cent were cared for adequately, while 19 per cent were cared for inadequately. Eight hundred and eighty-two patients could have met any ordinary expenses; they were moderately well-to-do. They could have thirty-seven of those inadequately cared for could have paid for the ordinary charges, but were unable to stand a prolonged illness and its drain on their incomes. In other words, poverty was not a controlling factor in the failure to secure care in 79 per cent of the cases that were not properly cared for.

Absolute lack of facilities accounts for this failure in most cases. In other cases, however, lack of proper knowledge as to the services needed and lack of knowledge as to where to seek it, were the controlling factors.

It is interesting to note that, according to the investigators, 72 per cent of the 1,600 patients could have been cared for adequately in their own homes had medical and nursing service been available. Twenty-eight per cent, or 442, however, could not have been cared for adequately in their own homes under any circumstances. Of these, 236 suffered from non-contagious diseases and needed hospital care because of the nature of their cases from a medical standpoint. Seventy-three patients suffered from contagious diseases and needed hospital care. With 133 cases the impossibility of treating them adequately in their own homes was due to crowded and unsanitary housing conditions, low grade mentality, ignorance, shiftlessness or poverty.

The importance of these findings and their significance as applied to practically every other section of the country with similar population classes, is thus commented on in the report: "The importance of the findings of the house-to-house canvass of selected districts of Dutchess County lies in the fact that there is every reason to believe that the amount of inadequately cared for sickness discovered is typical of what one may expect to find in very many other communities throughout the State and nation. Here is a group made up of a small city and several country communities in normal times—no unusual epidemics, no extraordinary social or industrial conditions—during a period shown by reported deaths, reported cases of contagious disease, and the unanimous testimony of physicians to have been a 'light year' for sickness. If Dutchess County varies from the normal, it varies in having had a better chance to improve itself than many other communities, for it has favorable conditions that other communities usually lack, as, for example, Vassar College, large charitable and benevolent endowments, wealthy and public-spirited citizens, nearness to a large city, and trunk line railroad service. If, under these circumstances, conditions are not what they ought to be, it is reasonable to suppose that in less favored communities they are at least equally bad.

"Reference to the section of the report treating of individual cases of sickness discovered will show the existence of many striking instances of neglect, of unnecessary and indefensible suffering and misery. As elsewhere in the State, the health work throughout Dutchess County is not sufficiently organized to be really efficient. Under present circumstances the general medical and surgical hospital facilities appear, on the face of things, to be inadequate. Just how far they could be made to meet the need, were disease producing conditions not so widely tolerated and were there an appreciable amount of organized home care of the sick and preventive work, is a subject that needs to be carefully studied."

"At the present time, except for Poughkeepsie contagious disease hospital, there is no provision made for the isolation or care of contagious and communicable cases other than tuberculosis. In the rural districts, especially, little effort has been made to check infection. There are, moreover, no facilities for the treatment of early psychopathic and alcoholic cases, nor are there adequate provisions for the care of the feeble-minded and epileptic. Until the opening of the St. Francis Hospital in Poughkeepsie there had been no separate provision for the care of children. Whether the present facilities for maternity cases are sufficient, is also a matter which calls for careful consideration.

"The medical inspection of school children is most inefficient, and the after care which such inspection should necessarily involve is practically never given—at least in the rural sections. Rhinebeck Town is exceptional in this respect and, although the school nursing was intermittent until the winter of 1913-14, the importance of the work is recognized and continuous effort is being made to meet the problem presented.

"Efficient medical attendance, such as is necessarily involved in any plan for providing adequate care for the sick, is not always available. Trained nurses are secured from the various centers in which they are registered—Albany, Brooklyn, Kingston, New York and Poughkeepsie—but no attempt is made in the county, by organization, to make sure that those who most need the services of a trained nurse secure them, or to insure a sufficient supply of untrained nursing and household service, though this kind of service makes up over 60 per cent of the service necessary in homes where there is sickness.

"Closely involved in the service to the sick are the still more important questions of preventing sickness and disease by the education of the community in health matters and by doing away with disease-breeding conditions. Any thoroughgoing attempt to deal properly with sickness in a community must find the proper balance between institutional and home work. It must also find the balance between the palliative work, whether in home or hospital, which relieves suffering due to sickness, and the preventive work which teaches people how to escape and remove the insanitary conditions that give rise to disease."

The report is divided into two parts, "The Findings" and "The Recommendations." The most important feature of the recommendations is that for the organization of a county health association: Of this the report says:

"Vastly more can in the end be accomplished by preventive than by remedial work. The present exigencies and the acute suffering of the present should not blind us to the necessity of measures whereby a very large portion of existing disease and suffering can be done away with. Not only must personal habits and hygiene often be reformed, but the deep underlying causes of sickness which have their roots in the ignorance of the public and to the causes of disease, and in social and industrial conditions, must be removed. It is only in this way that we may hope ultimately to reduce the great economic loss and personal suffering occasioned by sickness, including the expenditures for remedial work."

"Program of Work"

"This naturally divides itself into two parts:"

"1. Educating the individual: (a) as to personal hygiene and the observation of its laws; (b) as to the nature of communicable diseases and the means of avoiding them, as well as the necessity of collective action to safeguard health and avert danger from these sources; and (c) as to bad housing and unfit social and industrial conditions in which he lives and the means that can be employed to improve those conditions.

"2. Securing the adoption and strict enforcement of public health measures, i.e., public hygiene."

"1. Private Hygiene"

"While public hygiene," in the words of Professor Fisher, "seeks to destroy the germs before they reach our bodily defenses, personal hygiene means the strengthening of our defenses against disease. . . . Both are of transcendent importance, but the defensive warfare is more within our reach. . . . Personal hygiene comprises hygiene of environment (air, soil, dwelling, clothing), hygiene of nutrition, hygiene of activity."

"Knowledge and observance of personal hygiene"

"The health association, therefore, would wish to disseminate information concerning, and stimulate the observance of, the laws of personal hygiene by the following means:"

"a. Secure the universal use of the school nurse throughout the county.

"b. Secure the incorporation of matter on personal hygiene in the school curriculum.

c. Organize classes of mothers for the study of personal hygiene, especially as it applies to their children.

d. Make it a part of the duty of its visiting nurses to take every opportunity consistent with the care of sickness to instruct, in personal hygiene, those among whom they move.

e. Maintain a lecture bureau to furnish churches, granges, lodges, etc., either volunteer or paid lecturers, on health subjects.

"f. Distribute leaflets and pamphlets on health matters, including not only its own publications, but also reprints of helpful articles published by other agencies.

"g. Supply the local newspapers constantly with authoritative copy relating to the health of the community."

"2. Public Hygiene"

"Through the education of the public, through legislation, and through administrative action, the health association, should endeavor to see that every community in the county has an adequate supply of pure water and pure milk; that sewage, drainage and garbage disposal is so planned as not to contaminate the water supply; that breeding places for flies and mosquitoes (such as uncovered manure piles and swamps) are eliminated; that overcrowded and unsanitary housing conditions are remedied; that adequate protection is had from accidents; that proper facilities are provided for the quick detection, accurate diagnosis and isolation of cases of contagious
"a. Improved child hygiene, which should include prenatal care.

"b. Better housing.

c. The prevention of feeble-mindedness, epilepsy, alcoholism, and tuberculosis.

"In furthering these movements, embodying large elements of social and economic reform, the question of which lines of work the association should conduct, as well as initiate, and which, having been initiated, it may wisely leave to other agencies, will depend for its answer partly on how much of this work can be done by state and national agencies, and partly on the personnel, service and financial resources which the association is able to command. But whatever be the agencies that carry on the various enterprises, there can be no question as to their desirability.

"4. IMPROVED CHILD HYGIENE.

"The findings in Part I., among other aspects of child hygiene, show:

CONSTRUCTIVE MEASURES
Program of Preventive Work to be carried out by County Health Association

INDIVIDUAL HEALTH
Promotion of health of individual through education.

a. Personal Hygiene
b. Regarding nature of Communicable Diseases

PUBLIC HEALTH
Adequate and direct enforcement of public health measures through a. Cooperation with the State Dept. of Health.
b. Cooperation with local health officers.
c. Reform movements, as for example,
   1. Improved child hygiene
   2. Better housing
   3. The treatment of tuberculosis and infantile diseases

That 26,972 days, or 65 per cent of the total days lost because of acute illness, were among children up to 15 years of age;

That there is no adequate medical inspection in the schools;

That the work of prenatal care was not on an efficient basis in Poughkeepsie and was unheard of in the rural sections.

This reveals urgent need for activities looking to the conservation of the health of the child.

In furthering such a movement the association would naturally seek the cooperation, among other agencies, of the Federal Children's Bureau, the State Department of Health, and the National Child Labor Committee.

There should result a deeper realization of the value of the health of the child and the establishment of a comprehensive system of medical school in-tion with adequate follow-up work by school nurses, the establishment of school dental and eye clinics, and open-air schools for tubercular and anemic children.

“b. BETTER HOUSING.

“In its housing movement the association would seek the advice and co-operation of the National Housing Association, whose officers will gladly place their services at the command of the association and do all they can to further this important phase of preventive work. The movement for better housing has already taken root in Poughkeepsie and will probably result in a local housing society. But the subject of healthful housing outside of the city of Poughkeepsie has not as yet been touched. There might result the establishment of a county housing association whose object would be to improve existing conditions and prevent bad housing conditions in the future.

Suggested Organization of Health Association.

C. PREVENTION OF FEEBLE-MINDEDNESS.

“The association should establish helpful connections with State and other institutions whose function it is to solve the problems presented by the feeble-minded, the defective, the epileptic, the alcoholic and the tubercular. It should collect information as to conditions actually existing in the county and bring them before the people in such a way as to arouse interest and bring about effective remedies for remedy.”

The Dutchess County Medical Society is co-operating in the organization of the association. Following the meeting at which the report was discussed, a committee of five was appointed to assist the organization committee.

The scope of the program of this association is strikingly displayed in the accompanying reproduction of one of the charts in the exhibit which has been prepared as a result of this survey.

CHRISTMAS CHEER IN STATE INSTITUTIONS.

During the two weeks before Christmas, Miss Mary Vida Clark, assistant secretary of the Association, visited seven state institutions for the feeble-minded, the epileptic, and delinquent boys and girls. Everywhere the preparations for Christmas were very much in evidence and very significant of the thought given by the officers to the pleasure of the inmates and patients.

The walls were being decorated in red and green and great preparations were being made for Christmas presents and Christmas festivities. The relatives and friends of the patients are asked at this time of the year to send gifts to those with whom they are connected or to contribute toward a general fund for the benefit of all. In this way sufficient contributions are received to provide for a large portion of the needs of the State, and to supply those gifts the charity of the general public is appealed to. Thus there is practically no demand made upon the resources of the State for the Christmas entertainment of its wards.

TRIBUTE TO DR. TRUDEAU.

Founder of Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium and Pioneer in Open Air Treatment of Tuberculosis

It would be well nigh impossible to give a fairer estimate of Dr. Edward L. Trudeau’s character and the value of his work than that contained in the following paragraph from a “Personal Tribute,” written by Dr. James Alexander Miller in the December number of the Journal of the Outdoor Life:

The early struggle with tuberculosis in a severe form at the very outset of his medical career, contracted from nursing his infected patient who had died of the disease in a room kept purposely overheated with windows tightly closed, and with no precautions taken against the then unknown dangers of infection; the pioneer bravery with which he faced the winter rigors of the Adirondack forests, as an experimental test of a theory which strangely foreshadowed the five years of mental and physical inaction in which he calmly matched his spirit and endurance against tuberculosis; the gradual return toward health, accomplished by an awakening of that intense love of the woods and those instincts of the true sportsman which ran in his blood direct from his nomadic father, resulting in many months of life in the open, hunting and fishing with no thought of profession or of other more serious purposes in life; the imagination, so evidenced in the later days, grasping the possibilities of helping others as he had been helped, and thus in 1884 resulting in the feeble beginning of his now famous Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium; his latent scientific sense quickening by the Koch discovery of the tubercle bacilli as the cause of tuberculosis leading to laboratory investigation and the later work in the erection of the first laboratory exclusively devoted to the study of tuberculosis; then the gradual development of Saranac Lake as a great health resort equipped through his efforts with a splendid institution built and maintained by funds amounting to twenty million dollars, raised almost exclusively through his personal appeal and innumerable friendships; the rounding of himself with a corps of physicians by his devotedness to a devotion to the ideals which he cherished, and which have made the Saranac spirit what it is today; his contribution to scientific knowledge looking toward the prevention and cure of tuberculosis, and then in the natural and inevitable course of events, the gradual reaction of his work throughout the country and the world, until finally he was universally acclaimed the leader and guiding spirit of the whole anti-tuberculosis movement in this country; and all of this accomplished, in spite of well-nigh constant struggle with his own disease, represents a life story well fitted to fire the imagination and to kindle the wonder and admiration with which it has already been received. One who has not the opportunity to receive it in its best form from his own hands in the autobiography which is soon to be published. But this story and struggle of bravery and of achievement by no means represents all of the “Dear Doctor.” To many of us a nearer insight to his wonderful personality has been afforded. It is Dr. Trudeau, the man, who griped hard those privileged to be near him.
STATE TUBERCULOSIS BUREAU

Governor Whitman Surprised at Lack of State Aid in Movement—Points Out Need for Co-operation With Private Agencies

"The greatest asset of a State is its people. Nothing more intimately and directly concerns the State's welfare than the conservation of the health, vitality and efficiency of its people."

Thus Governor Charles S. Whitman summed up, in his address before the tuberculosis mass meeting in Albany, the reason for the public's interest in the tuberculosis campaign and the reason why, according to the Governor, there should be even greater activity in the future by State and local agencies than there has been in the past.

The meeting at which the Governor spoke was the chief session of the annual State Conference of Tuberculosis Workers, held under the auspices of the State Charities Aid Association. Meeting at the same time was the North Atlantic States' Tuberculosis Conference, held under the the auspices of the National Tuberculosis Association.

PUBLIC AND PRIVATE CO-OPERATION.

Co-operating with the two private organizations was the State Department of health. The meetings were held in the State Education Building. These facts lent particular interest to the Governor's comments on one of the distinguishing characteristics of the tuberculosis movement, the co-operation between public authorities and private organizations.

"The skill and success with which a co-operative understanding was secured and has been maintained between public authority and private initiative in the tuberculosis campaign," said Governor Whitman, "should long serve as an example and an inspiration for similar co-operative effort in many other lines of social betterment and human welfare. This is true not only of the State as a whole, but also of the various cities, counties and towns.

MUST HAVE PRIVATE AID.

"We cannot depend upon the State alone, for it is already straining its resources of money and of administration. We cannot depend upon private initiative alone, for its authority is limited and its resources also inadequate. Only by wide and large minded co-operative action of both the State and local authorities and of all private organizations willing to lend a hand can any large result in public health or in any other field be achieved."

The Governor expressed considerable surprise that the State had taken so small a part, relatively, in this "wide and sweeping movement." While it had de-

MISS TUCKER GOES TO PHILADELPHIA.

Miss Katharine Tucker, who organized the Social Service Department of the Mental Hygiene Committee and has been its efficient director during the past three and a half years, resigned her position on December 15 to become superintendent of the Philadelphia Visiting Nursing Society.

Miss Jessie Taft, Ph.D., formerly assistant superintendent of the New York State Reformatory for Women, at Bedford Hills, Westchester County, and more recently an assistant secretary in the New York City Visiting Committee of this association, has been selected to succeed Miss Tucker.

Miss Taft is a graduate of the University of Chicago and received from that institution. She has had considerable teaching experience as well as training in social work, and brings to her new position the technical qualifications and broad sympathies necessary for social service with mental cases.

CHENANGO APPROPRIATES $20,000

Selects Site for County Hospital and Appoints Committee to Prepare Plans

The Board of Supervisors of Chenango County has appropriated $20,000 for a county tuberculosis hospital. A site near Sherbourne has been selected and a committee has been appointed to arrange for a hearing before the State Commissioner of Health and the health officer of the town. The hearing will be held on January 5.

The committee is further empowered to have plans prepared and to proceed with the building of the hospital as soon as the plans are approved by the State Commissioner of Health. The institution will be paid for by bond issue.

This action is taken by the board in response to the adoption of the tuberculosis hospital proposition by the voters at a referendum held in 1914. The delay has been due to inability to agree on a site.

ADDITIONS IN SCHENECTADY

Board of Supervisors Appropriate $10,000 for Improvements to Administration Building of County Hospital

The Board of Supervisors has appropriated $10,000 for an addition to the administration building of the county tuberculosis hospital. Additional dining room and kitchen facilities will be provided and the institution's employees will have more room.
CONFUSION IN STATE CHARITIES

Delays and Overlapping Responsibility
Already Revealed by Commission Strong

The State Charities Aid Association has for more than thirty years, through local committees and visitors, watched the development of the State's system of charitable institutions. It has been much concerned over the haphazard loading up of the State's institutional system with a board here, a commission there, a supervisor in another place, and inspections, balances and counterbalances that greatly hampered the efficiency of institutions and that failed to accomplish any good purpose.

In the investigation being made by Governor Whitman through Commissioner Charles H. Strong, appointed under the Moreland act, there have already been revealed delays of a paralyzing kind and insufficiencies that accomplish nothing but confusion in the State's charitable institutions; inefficiency due to cumbrous machinery; commissions made up of ex-officio members, placing additional responsibility on State officials already loaded down with duties which they cannot neglect and general overlapping of authority and responsibility.

No unprejudiced observer could fail to note from the trend of Commissioner Strong's questioning that he and Mr. Clark, his assistant, intend to make the investigation as constructive as possible. It may well be hoped that construction will take place only after a thorough and well-considered destruction of certain of the commissions and offices that now encumber the State's institutional system.

Enlightening examples of the facts already brought out by Commissioner Strong are found in his inquiry into the workings of the Building Improvement Commission and the Sites, Grounds and Buildings Commission.

The latter was created at the urging of Governor Sulzer to accommodate a former deputy fiscal supervisor who wished to select a site for a reformatory for male misdemeanants. This institution had been urged for fifteen years and the Legislature, in 1913, appropriated to the newly created commission, $80,000 for the site and the expenses of the commission. Senator James J. Frawley, who was a member of the commission ex-officio, declared at one of its few meetings that the commission was a silly piece of legislation. For several months all the commission did was to locate several minor buildings for institutions, including horse barns, dairies and hen-houses. To this kind of work the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the Fiscal Supervisor, a representative of the State Board of Charities, the State Commissioner of Agriculture and the State Architect, we are supposed to devote much of their valuable time. After inspecting thirty-three sites for the much-needed reformatory, the commission solemnly reported to the Legislature:

"After due deliberation it was therefore agreed to locate north or south of the line between Albany and Syracuse."

The so-called Building Improvement Commission consists of the Governor, the president of the State Board of Charities and the Fiscal Supervisor, a majority of whom are required to approve every plan for improvement, alteration or repair of structures in the twenty-one State charitable institutions. These important State officers have been forced to consider plans, specifications and contracts for the building of hen houses, pigsties and trampy repairs to institutions, such as plastering a toilet room, and an $8 job for resetting register frames. Among the other questions considered by this commission were whether an extra drop light should be installed, whether provision should be made for slop sinks, the position of chimneys, repairs to windows, whether partitions should be omitted from a vegetable cellar and what was the proper design for a piggery. The commission also had to approve plans for electric light poles, and the proper location of a new veranda on the house of a superintendent.

When Governor Whitman took office he convened the commission for the first time for over six months and found an accumulation of contracts, plans and specifications—more than a score in number—for all sorts of details of construction, which had never been formally approved.

A quorum was once obtained with only one member of the commission present, by noting the presence of another "on the telephone." At the next meeting one member transacted all the business, another member later on "supporting any action taken at the meeting."

We believe it is the earnest hope of every one of the 14,000 members of the State Charities Aid Association that such facts as those which have already been brought out by Commissioner Strong will result in the Legislature passing a thorough and well-considered plan of reorganization of the State's system of charitable institutions.

CHEMUNG TO HAVE HOSPITAL

Board of Supervisors Makes Appropriation—County to Replace City Institution, Burned Last Summer

With the appropriation of $12,000 by the Board of Supervisors of Chemung County, the prospects become bright for the early erection of a tuberculosis hospital to take the place of one destroyed by fire early last summer. The insurance on the old building was nearly $8,000, making nearly $20,000 available now.

There is some probability, however, that the amount finally available will be $10,000 more. Mr. Charles E. Rapleyea, who gave the original institution to the city of Elmira, has given the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors a draft for $5,000, which will become the property of the county if the board appropriates $5,000 more. This will give $30,000 for construction, as the purchase of a site is unnecessary.

The new institution will be a county hospital under the county hospital law. The Board of Managers of the former city hospital has voted to turn over the property to the county.

BIG SALE OF DADDY LONG-LEGS DOLLS

Other Organizations Adopt Similar Plan

There has been a most gratifying sale of Daddy Long-legs Dolls this season. Orders have been received from over 200 firms in 150 cities in 39 states, for over 8,500 dolls. There are three companies on the road playing "Daddy Long-legs," one of which goes to Boston the first week in January. The Massachusetts S. P. C. C. is considering a plan for undertaking the sale of Daddy Long-legs Dolls in connection with the sale and publicity for their work for dependent and delinquent children. The New York Association brought this matter to the attention of the Massachusetts Society in the hope that the business would be handled by an authorized agency.

In one or two other cities where no such plan of cooperation has been developed, local institutions or organizations have manufactured and sold such dolls for the benefit of their work, though the name of "Daddy Long-legs" Doll is the Association's trade mark registered in the United States Patent Office. While the New York S. C. A. A. is very glad to cooperate with local societies in the sale of such dolls and in their publicity work connected with this play, it deprecates having the work undertaken locally without any such cooperation.
because of the loss of effort through ignorance of the experience that the Association has had in working for more than a year along this line. We hope that our sister society in Massachusetts will be very successful in this work.

GENEROUS RESPONSE TO APPEAL FOR THE NEEDY

Times Campaign Produces Splendid Results

 Doubtless many of our readers followed the series of appeals made by the New York Times for the "100 Neediest Cases" under the care of four charitable societies, including the State Charities Aid Association. From these appeals our thirty cases received $6,425.83.

This response was most gratifying. The financial help is extremely important, but the spirit back of the giving is even more significant. People are coming to realize more and more, not only their privilege and responsibility in helping to care for those less fortunate than themselves, but also that such help can best be given through those well-established organizations which, from long and varied experience, can deal most effectively and constructively with the individual problems presented. The public is proving itself more and more ready to respond generously when real and definite need is known. When the work of relief organizations is supplemented by the hearty support of one of the other great social forces—the newspaper—the public's response, both in financial help and in interest and encouragement, is proportionately increased. With the growing consciousness on the part of the public of its responsibility and with the increasing co-operation between these great social forces at work in the various communities, the possibilities for the future are most encouraging and hopeful.

The following quotation from a letter received from a friend in Rochester is most interesting in this connection:

"It has been very gratifying to me to see a great metropolitan newspaper giving space to the publication of cases in dire need at this Christmas season.

"As a student of Social Ethics, may I be permitted to express the opinion that this assistance from the newspaper cannot but very greatly help in the alleviation of pathetic distress.

"As an expression of my sympathy in your most excellent work and as an expression of my hearty cooperation and the admiration of the humble reader you will find enclosed a check.

NEW MENTAL HYGIENE EXHIBIT

Alcohol and syphilis are attacked as the two greatest preventable causes of insanity in a striking new exhibit of the Association's Mental Hygiene Committee. Cartoons and photographs bristling with human interest; statistics with a punch in them; live, scientific facts and cryptic warnings have been popularly combined into an effective indictment of these twin foes of the mind.

The new exhibit cabinets have been shown thus far at the State Conference of Charities and Corrections in Albany and at the Municipal Lodging House in New York City. They will be shown at a number of places during the winter.

CHAUTAUQUA BOARD ACCEPTS

Trustees of Newton Memorial Agree With Supervisors on Terms of Contract in Turning Over Tuberculosis Hospital to County

With the acceptance by the Chautauqua County Board of Supervisors of the terms of contract between the county and the trustees of the Elizabeth Newton Memorial, that county is well on the road to the day when its tuberculous sufferers will have a place where they may secure care. The acceptance of the gift was announced in the last number of the S. C. A. A. NEWS. Certain clauses in the contract and deed of gift required adjustment, but the very minor points of difference have been adjusted so that the way is now clear for the trustees to proceed with the erection of the hospital.

WELL ADVERTISED MASS MEETING

Oswego Committee Fills Armory By Use of Paid For Advertising

The Oswego Tuberculosis Committee held a well attended mass meeting in the State Armory as one feature of Tuberculosis Week. Local and out-of-town speakers made addresses. A chorus of 100 persons, a band, and a well considered advertising campaign filled the Armory.

Paid-for display advertising again succeeded in drawing a crowd.

SEAL SALE PROBABLY A RECORD BREAKER

Newspaper reports and reports from agents indicate that the Red Cross Seal sale for 1915 has been by far the most successful of all those conducted in this State (outside of New York City) by the State Charities Aid Association. This will be the seventh sale under the auspices of this Association. Both in point of number of seals sold and number of persons interested in the tuberculosi movement, the sale of 1915 promises to be a record breaker.
STATE HOSPITALS BECOMING CENTERS OF MENTAL HEALTH

Reaching Out Into the Communities and Organizing Preventive and After-Care Work—New Dispensaries at Malone and Watertown

Under the direction of the State Hospital Commission, and with the active support and interest of Governor Whitman, the State hospitals for the insane are rapidly extending their out-patient activities.

Taking advantage of the law which authorizes the superintendent of each State Hospital to appoint a social worker or field agent and to open a dispensary for the free treatment of mental and nervous troubles and assign a physician to it, the various hospitals are undertaking this important work with enthusiasm and the promise of excellent results. Nine of the thirteen institutions have selected their field agents and the agents are now at work or in training for their duties. The establishment of more dispensaries, with field agents, is part of a State-wide plan to prevent certain forms of insanity by discovering the symptoms sooner and treating the incipient mental trouble in an early stage.

Of the up-State institutions, the St. Lawrence State Hospital at Ogdensburg recently has made excellent progress in opening new dispensaries, and its successful activities along this line are attracting widespread attention and interest.

This hospital receives patients from eight counties—St. Lawrence, Clinton, Franklin, Jefferson, Essex, Lewis, Onondaga and Oswego. When the system is in full working order, Dr. Richard H. Hutchings, the superintendent, plans to have a dispensary in the largest city or village of each county in the district. For a long time the St. Lawrence Hospital has maintained a dispensary at the institution. The results have convinced Dr. Hutchings of the importance of establishing such dispensaries throughout the hospital district and having members of his staff visit them regularly every few weeks.

Clinics in Northern New York.

The first of the new dispensaries in northern New York was opened at Malone, Franklin County, on December 18th, in the Alice Hyde Memorial Hospital. The second one was opened in Watertown, Jefferson County, on January 20th.

Exhibits like this were used in Malone and Watertown to arouse interest in mental hygiene clinic.

At the opening session of the Malone clinic no patients appeared. It was evident that the newspaper publicity had not been sufficient to acquaint the public with the existence of such a clinic and to make its purposes understood. Accordingly, it was decided to conduct a more extensive campaign of education concerning the clinic and its objects before the second session was held.

In the meantime arrangements were made to open the Watertown dispensary, and it was decided to hold the second session of the Malone clinic a few days after the opening of the Watertown clinic. George A. Hastings, executive secretary of the Mental Hygiene Committee and Miss Julia F. Wells, social service assistant, conducted an extensive campaign of publicity and education in order to pave the way for these two clinics.

For the Watertown dispensary, circular letters were sent to a list of some 700 people, including physicians, clergymen, and social workers throughout Jefferson County. Two stories were furnished to all the papers in the county. In this publicity the purposes of the clinics were fully explained and information as to the hours, place, name of physician, etc., given. In addition, a public meeting on mental hygiene and the prevention of insanity was held in the Y. M. C. A. at Watertown on the evening preceding the clinic. This meeting was attended by about fifty people. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Paul G. Taddiken, first assistant physician of the State Hospital, and by Mr. Hastings. The Watertown newspapers gave extensive reports of the meeting.

48 Patients at Watertown.

The following day a clinic session was held in the Watertown City Hospital and eleven patients attended. Miss Wells made brief records of the names, addresses and ages of each patient, and ascertained whether they came to inquire about themselves or about some friend or relative. Each patient was seen privately in the consultation room by Dr. Taddiken.

The next day a clinic session was held in the Sisters' Hospital, and the attendance here reached thirty-one. There were more patients than Dr. Taddiken could examine during the morning hours scheduled for the session, and he was compelled to devote all the afternoon to examinations.

From Watertown Mr. Hastings and Miss Wells went to Malone, where a public meeting also was held. This meeting took place in the high school. The same method had been used in advertising this meeting and the clinic session the following day. Two hundred circular letters had been sent out and articles published in the various Franklin County papers. The public meeting attracted an attendance of two hundred people. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Hutchings and by Mr. Hastings. The committee's exhibit on alcohol and syphilis, the two greatest preventable causes of insanity, was shown at both the Malone and Watertown meetings.

30 Patients at Malone.

The session of the Malone clinic, held in the Alice Hyde Hospital the day following the public meeting, was attended by thirty patients. The majority of them came from the village of Malone, but several came from the surrounding towns in the county.

On every hand members of the Mental Hygiene Committee staff are now meeting with interested inquiries about the purposes and methods of the clinics.

"What are these mental dispensaries? Who is establishing them? What are they for? What people come to them? How do they happen to come? What is done for them after they come?" These are samples of the questions.

The replies are that a mental dispensary is a regularly appointed place where people may go at a specified date and hour for consultation with a mental specialist. Free diagnosis, advice and treatment are given. The specialist from the State hospital examines all who come and advises them with their relatives, and often with the family physician.

Some of the patients at Malone and Watertown came unaccompanied and without suggestion from a physician; not a few had the newspaper clippings through which they had learned of the existence of the clinic; some were brought by friends and relatives; some were reported by physicians and others were sent by charitable institutions and social workers.

To such dispensaries come cases of this kind: A child brought by a mother whose intuition has told her that he is "different" from the others; a man who has found his customary work growing difficult, and is conscious of a loss of memory; a youth who fears he is hopelessly entangled in some sexual difficulty but thinks there is a possibility that some good "mind doctor" might help him find a way out of it.

An anxious wife will come to inquire about a man who "has always been a good husband, although he drinks a bit," but has lately become irritable and suspicious and has lost four jobs because "people are against him." The brother of a patient in a State hospital will come to inquire if it is "absolutely sure" that he will become insane because his brother did, and who has worried so much about it that he can think of nothing else.

A patient on parole from the hospital visiting the clinic gives an opportunity to the physician to see how he is getting along and to make suggestions for his welfare.

In the newspaper articles and in the circular letters distributed, an invitation to attend the clinic is extended to all persons who feel depressed, nervous or fretful, or who have lost some of their interest and zest in life and its daily duties. Individuals who feel that life is becoming too hard for them; who find themselves without the normal desire to associate with other people; who think that they are misunderstood, slighted or shunned by their friends—these find help in a frank talk with a mental specialist. Persons who think that the world is against them, who sleep poorly and have numerous nervous symptoms, undoubtedly find benefit by seeing a specialist who understands the mental factors of their case.

Mentally Ill People Misjudged.

Persons suffering from mental disease in its early forms are often misjudged by members of their family and their friends because the real source of their trouble is not recognized. Without treatment their condition becomes worse, and many have become patients in State hospitals who might have avoided it by early attention to their difficulties. The dispensaries provide means to detect the early symptoms, understand the causes and see that medical or social steps are taken—and taken in time—to remedy conditions.

It is a rather pathetic procession of persons that members of the staff see making their way to the dispensaries. It is encouraging to see them coming to the dispensaries for consultation and treatment of mental illness nearly as frankly and naturally as they would in cases of ordinary illness. The attendance at the clinics indicates that the public attitude in regard to insanity is slowly but surely changing for the better. It is no longer looked upon as a curse or a crime. It is no longer considered a disgrace, but a disease—and a disease for which to seek treatment the same as would be done in any physical ailment. The result of the early discovery and treating of so many persons on the verge of a mental breakdown is certain to prevent some complete collapses and to result in benefit to a great number of the patients.

Hospitals in Closer Touch With Public.

Furthermore, the educational features of the dispensaries are important. In fact, the whole dispensary system means that the State hospitals, long the centers of high class care and treatment of the mentally sick, are now becoming centers of mental health as well. The hospitals are reaching out into the communities adjacent to them and becoming responsible for the mental health of those communities. They are bringing to the very doors of the people the expert knowledge and services of the highly trained staffs of the institutions, and are disseminating knowledge of the nature, causes and prevention of mental diseases that is expected to result in the prevention of many serious mental breakdowns, and also to help establish an intelligent and proper public attitude toward mental diseases in the community.

In addition to preventive work with new cases, the hospitals, through the new out-patient departments, will be enabled to keep in closer touch with patients out on parole. The field agents will visit them at intervals in their homes; see how they are getting along; observe whether their work, surroundings, recreations, etc., are suitable, and help them to avoid the kind of a life that might bring about a recurrence of their trouble. What this will mean in human happiness cannot be measured. What it will mean to the State in lessened maintenance charges of patients who might otherwise have to remain in the institutions because of lack of competent supervision outside, runs into thousands of dollars annually.

In addition to these practical and very tangible results, physicians of the State hospitals are finding that the out-patient work brings the institutions and their staffs much closer to the people, and gives the clinic physicians an experience such as they never could have within institution walls. The tendency of the out-patient departments will be to bring the State hospitals into a closer relationship with the communities which they serve, and to minimize any possible tendency to routine and traditionalism.

The educational campaign which is carried on in order to direct the attention of the communities to the dispensaries, and to enlist the interest and co-operation of various organizations in the dispensary work, also contributes very largely to the campaign which the Committee on Mental Hygiene has been conducting for the past five years to help obtain an intelligent public sentiment regarding mental diseases.

Bureau of Prevention Needed.

The experience of the Mental Hygiene Committee thus far in assisting at outpatient department work furnishes additional evidence of the need of a special department of prevention and after-care as a division of the State Hospital Commission, to administer and supervise the work. This is far too large and important a task to be done without adequate and permanent official direction. The expenses of advertising the public meetings and clinics, distributing literature and holding the exhibits—all necessary to arouse interest and interpret to the public the purposes of the dispensaries—would soon become burdensome upon such an organization as the Mental Hygiene Committee.

This work has been considered important enough by the State to make it a part of the State hospital system. The results thus far indicate that its extension will be a most important preventive measure. Surely the work is important enough from every standpoint to warrant a bureau to take charge of it.

STEUBEN APPROPRIATES FOR HOSPITAL

The new Board of Supervisors in Steuben County, which took office at the opening of the year, voted at its first meeting to make immediately available the sum of $30,000, approved by the voters at the general election last November, for the establishment of a county tuberculosis hospital, and has appointed a committee to select the site and to build the institution.

TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL FOR BUFFALO

City Appropriates $600,000 for 300 Bed Pavilions in Connection With General Hospital

The Common Council and the Board of Aldermen of Buffalo have appropriated $600,000 for tuberculosis pavilions for advanced cases in connection with the new Municipal General Hospital. The Mayor has approved the appropriation. Plans and specifications have been prepared, bids have been advertised, and in December contracts were awarded by the Common Council and approved by the Mayor. About 300 beds will be provided. The project has been hanging fire since May, 1912.

ROCKLAND PROCEEDS WITH HOSPITAL

In Rockland County, where the electors last November approved an appropriation of $50,000 for a tuberculosis hospital, the Board of Supervisors has appointed a committee of physicians from the County Medical Society to advise in the selection of a site. It has also appointed a committee of citizens to become associated with the Board of Supervisors in the construction of the institution.

TUBERCULOSIS NURSE FOR CO- LUMBIA COUNTY

The Columbia County Board of Supervisors recently appropriated $1,000 for the employment of a tuberculosis visiting nurse for the county. The County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association has pledged $200 additional for her salary, and will also pay her traveling expenses. Miss Josephine Pierce, who has had extended experience in a similar line of work in Buffalo and Olean, has been engaged and is already at work.

OUT-PATIENT WORK FOR COUNTY HOSPITAL

The Board of Supervisors of Montgomery County at its recent annual meeting granted the request of the County Hospital for an appropriation of $1,500 for the employment of a visiting nurse. She will visit reported cases in the county outside of Amsterdam, urging such as can go to the hospital to do so, and instructing the others and their families in the care and precautions necessary to be taken at home. She will also maintain friendly oversight of patients discharged from the hospital, encouraging them to observe the principles of hygiene and sanitation taught them while in the institution.
200 CHILDREN NEED HOMES

Mr. Choate, at Annual Meeting of S. C. A. A., Calls Attention to Association’s Waiting List

“The spirit of adopting children seems to be abroad of late,” said the Hon. Joseph H. Choate, president of the State Charities Aid Association, at the annual meeting of the association held in its offices on January 22. “I believe that if we could appeal to the public a little more strenuously we might be able to find good homes for the 200 children who are on our waiting list. This work of placing out children and finding homes for children is, I think, one of the most important that we do, and if I should live forever I should not be satisfied until homes were found for all dependent children.

In speaking of the work of the association last year Mr. Choate said:

“I believe that it has done better work this last year than in any previous year, and will so continue, only public support must be found. We want a little more money every year—every good association does; its needs increase as the value of its work increases.

People Learning to Give.

“People are learning to give. This is the best year for raising money that I have ever known. I don’t know why, but it is. One would suppose that the existence of the horrible war would frighten people and prevent their giving to the domestic charities and benevolent works that they have been in the habit of sustaining; but I believe that is not so. And once people learn to give, their knowledge increases every year.”

Mr. Choate greeted warmly the thirty county agents for dependent children who were present at the meeting, and expressed his appreciation of the splendid work which they have been doing in the various parts of the State.

4,600 Children Under Supervision.

Homer Folks, secretary of the association, spoke of the large amount of work now carried on for dependent children. At the end of the fiscal year there were about 4,600 children under supervision by various departments of the association; 1,111 in free and boarding homes under the placing-out agency; 1,006 with their mothers in situations at domestic service; 215 in boarding homes under supervision of county committees; 2,258 in institutions, under the supervision of these committees. The thirty county agents were an interesting exhibit of this branch of the association’s work. These thirty young women represent the counties of Chautauqua, Chemung, Cattaraugus, Utica, Ilion, Oneida, Orange, Rockland, Seneca, Tioga, Steuben, Washington, Westchester, and Yates.

These agents are well trained young women who are working in those various localities, assisting the superintendent and overseers of the poor in disposing of all cases coming to their attention where needy children are involved. During the past year they have investigated the cases of 6,298 children; have found public support for 572; have transferred 199 children from their own homes or from private institutions to State institutions; have collected $5,133.83 from families in part payment of the board of children, and in doing this work have written 15,317 letters and made 36,317 visits. Through the efforts of these agents 623 children were removed from the list of public dependents last year and the needs of 1,175 additional children were met without their becoming county dependents.

The Child-Placing Agency placed 191 children in free family homes during the year and had at the end of the year 1,111 under supervision in families.

Since this work was begun in 1898, 2,187 children have been taken from institutions or public officials and placed in carefully selected and supervised family homes.

During the year, 649 situations were provided for women with babies or little children, most of them widows or deserted wives, so that these young mothers could work with, and for, their children, instead of being separated from them.

Mr. Folks referred to the recently enacted widows’ pension law and expressed the opinion that, while relief of worthy mothers in their own homes could have been legally and adequately provided under existing statutes, the impetus given to the study and care of these cases through new legislation would probably greatly improve the situation, and result in more attention being paid to this very needy and worthy class of cases.

The local child welfare boards that are being appointed in various parts of the State are for the most part well selected and well equipped to do this work with real efficiency and economy.

Child Care Laws Chaucic.

He referred to the chaotic condition of the laws affecting children and said that this is a matter of a proper public system of care for children, which is of the utmost importance, had been very much overlooked and neglected in this State, and that the time had come when something should be done about it. The State Charities Aid Association, through its local branches in the various counties, is in touch with the needs of all sections and has gained in recent years a large amount of experience in practical methods of caring for children, and is in a position to point out the way that the State should take to improve its system of child care and child supervision.

Miss Mary Vida Clark, assistant secretary, spoke of the work of the association in connection with State reformatories and State charitable institutions. She said that while private charity cared more or less adequately for the physically diseased and defective, the mentally diseased and defective were almost exclusively objects of State care, so far as they are cared for at all. In connection with the insane, the fifteen great State hospitals, with their 35,000 patients, are doing admirable work for those classes. The most significant departure of the past year is the adoption of a plan to establish dispensaries and out-patient departments to deal with incipient cases and treat them in the locality where they are found to occur, before they become incurable and permanent State wards.

Colonies for Feebleminded.

"The capacity of the State institutions for the feeble-minded and epileptic, and the city institution at Randall's Island approaches a total number of about 6,000 of the 30,000 feeble-minded persons estimated as New York's share of this national burden," said Miss Clark. "The difficulty of furnishing institutional care for all these cases is so great that experiments being carried on by some institutions in colonizing the more able-minded and having groups of such defectives employed in various sections of the State, on public or other works, under careful supervision, seems to be a step in the right direction. The other largest group of State institutions is the reformatory, of which there are two for young men, two for young women, two for boys and one for girls, with a farm colony for older women, and a not yet established reformatory for young male indigent persons.

"The greatest need of these institutions is to be relieved of the care of their mentally defective cases which now constitutes from 15 to 45 per cent. of their wards." Miss Clark thinks that while theoretically these defectives belong in custodial institutions for the feeble-minded, practically their unreasonableness makes them so difficult to handle in such institutions that it would be better to establish separate departments for them on the grounds of reformatory institutions, thus facilitating the transfer from the main reformatory department to the colonies of the cases incapable of benefiting by reformatory treatment.

Better Cooperation Needed.

"The greatest need of State charitable institutions," she said, "is the promotion of better methods of cooperation among them. In some of them, such as the New York State Custodial Asylum, with nearly 1,000 able-bodied feeble-minded women, there is an excess of labor; while at others, such as the reformatories for children, which are educational in their purpose, there is not sufficient unpaid labor to do the work economically. The result is that while the women at New York have to resort to fine embroidery to fill up their time; the boys at Industry have to wear stockings with big holes in the heels.

"The institutions themselves are cooperative in spirit, and would welcome an opportunity to do more for one another, but the red tape in the Fiscal Supervisor's office has heretofore kept the institutions too much apart, with the result that thousands of dollars are wasted annually which might be saved if a more far-sighted policy were adopted. Practically all the work of grading and making roads and even some parts of the construction at State institutions, could be done by groups of feeble-minded youths from Rome State Custodial Asylum, if there were proper leeway in the appropriations for maintenance and working materials."

Miss Clark recommended that larger responsibility be given to the superintendents of these State institutions as a group, and as the group most intelligent and efficient in connection with working out the policies of the State for the care of its wards.

The following managers were elected to succeed themselves: Theodore L. Frothingham, Eugene A. Philbin, Miss Florence Rhett, Miss Louise Lee Schuyler, Edward W. Sheldon, Simon Flexner, M. D.; Mrs. Willard Straight, Oren Root and Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard.

MONEY FOR INEBRIETY FARM

Board of Estimate of New York Provides $100,000 for Construction of New Buildings

On January 14th, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York City appropriated $100,000 corporate stock for the construction and equipment of buildings, including sewage and water systems, for the Hospital and Industrial Colony for Inebriates at Warwick, New York. Before these funds are finally made available, however, the Board of Inebriety must submit the general scheme and plan of development of the hospital, as well as the name of any architect, engineer or expert employed in the work and his fees, for the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

In support of the Board of Inebriety's request for this appropriation, the Committee on Hospitals prepared and submitted to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment an extended memorandum setting forth the imperative need of increasing the facilities at the Hospital and Industrial Colony before the purpose for which the hospital was established could be fully realized.

NEW MENTAL CLINIC STARTED IN BROOKLYN

Long Island and Kings Park State Hospitals Open New Dispensary in Williamsburg General Hospital

A new mental hygiene clinic has been opened in Williamsburg General Hospital, Brooklyn, by the Long Island State Hospital and the Kings Park State Hospital jointly. This is part of the system of dispensaries being started by the various State hospitals throughout the State, for the free treatment of nervous and mental diseases in the early stages, and for after-care work with patients paroled or discharged from the State hospitals.

The Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association was asked some months ago by the Governor and the State Hospital Commission to assist in organizing and supervising these dispensaries. Members of the committee and its staff did so in connection with the Williamsburg clinic.

The committee sent 3,400 circular letters to clergymen, physicians and social agencies in Brooklyn, announcing the establishment of the clinic and explaining its purposes and methods. Articles were furnished to seventy newspapers in Nassau, Suffolk and Kings counties. Dr. Elbert M. Somers and Dr. William Austin Macy, superintendents of the Long Island and Kings Park Hospitals, respectively, mailed many personal letters to physicians and friends in Brooklyn.

80 PATIENTS AT FIRST SESSION

The result of the publicity was a remarkable attendance of eighty persons at the opening session of the clinic. Dr. Somers and his assistant worked continuously for five hours. They examined fifty patients and arranged for the remainder to return the following week. Among the fifty were many helpful cases, some of whom were not committable.

Eighty patients scarcely could be expected at subsequent sessions of the clinic, but there has been an average attendance of fifty on succeeding Saturday mornings. Each time some patients had to be turned away with the request to come at a later session.

Both the Long Island and Kings Park Hospitals have recently appointed social workers who will devote some time to the dispensary work of the institutions.

Where necessary they will visit the homes of the patients seen at the dispensary; will investigate the circumstances under which the patients live and work; will see that the doctor’s directions are carried out and, in general, help to treat the environment while the doctor treats the patient.

MORE PATIENTS AT OTHER CLINICS

The new clinic was the third to be established in Brooklyn. For some time the Long Island State Hospital had been maintaining a weekly clinic at its own institution and also a clinic at the Long Island College Hospital. In the circular letters and newspaper stories regarding the Williamsburg clinic, mention was made of the other two clinics, and information about the hours, etc., given.
This resulted in an increase in the attendance at both the older clinics. Each clinic had a different section of Brooklyn, and the three of them are doing excellent work for the mental health of the large and rapidly growing borough in which they are located.

COUNTY AGENTS CONFERENCE

Fruitful Two Days Devoted to Discuss-sion of Problems Presented in Their Various Fields

The Sixth Annual Conference of County Agents for Dependent Children, who are working under the direction of or in cooperation with County Committees of the State Charities Aid Association, was held at the Caroline Country Club, Hartsdaile, New York, on January 24th and 25th, 1916.

Thirty representatives coming from seventeen counties in the State attended, as did also the executive staff of the County Agency Department and the executive staff and the traveling agents of the Placing Out Department of the association.

Following the custom of other years, no formal papers were read, but under the leadership of Miss H. Ida Curry, superintendent of County Agencies, the assembled workers considered in detail problems coming to them in their various fields.

In a three-hour session on Monday morning, the use of visiting homes, boarding homes and free homes was discussed. Nearly all county agents have used boarding homes to some degree. A few have been enabled by special appropriation from the Board of Supervisors to use them extensively.
The agents who have had the most experience in boarding children with private families rather than with institutions believe that the boarding homes should not be used extensively unless the agents are able to give up a great deal of time to close supervision. The more normal life and the more intimate individual care given to the boarding homes are without question, in the minds of these agents, well worth all of the time it takes. But unless it is possible to give that time for supervision and fre-frequent consultation with boarding mothers, the use of boarding homes might better be limited.

Reports from a number of the countries show that the use of visiting homes for children available for placement, awaiting the finding of the right permanent home, was increasing. Many benevolent people have welcomed the op-opportunity to give a child temporary care who do not feel that they could pledge themselves to take a child permanently.
The responsibility of the agency for the child visiting in such a home is, of course, exactly the same as if the child were in a boarding home or in a free home awaiting adoption.

It was agreed that more care should be exercised in looking into the home and in keeping in touch with it while in use. In many instances the very natural result comes about that the family meaning to take a child only on a visit becomes sufficiently attached to the little one to keep him indefinitely, and perhaps even in the end take out adoption papers.

This first session closed with a discussion of “Standards of Placing Out, Supervision and After-Care,” as embodying in a report given by Mr. Polka at the last annual State Conference of Charities and Corrections, as chairman of a special committee of that conference.

At the request of a number of the agents, the afternoon was given over entirely to the discussion of the laws relating to the protection of neglected children and ungovernable children, and provision for their care, and to the laws relating to the prosecution of adult offenders on charges of desertion, non-support, bastardy and rape. The agents are more and more being called upon to cooperate with the courts and other social agencies in the collection of evidence in cases of neglect and in aiding in the solution of problems presented by children with no proper guardianship.

So many of the children’s workers are acting as members, secretaries, investigators, or all three for the local Boards of Child Welfare that it seemed quite fitting that one session of the conference should give opportunity for the discussion of the operation of the law establishing these boards. Reports from these agents gave an exceedingly interesting and fruitful morning.

A question box gave opportunity for the discussion of any topics not appearing on the program, to which the remainder of this third session was given.

On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o’clock, the agents attended the annual meeting of the State Charities Aid Association, held in New York City.

The conference has proved invaluable to the County Agency staff. The members are scattered and in some instances somewhat isolated, yet they meet daily with intricate situations and baffling problems. The yearly meeting with its opportunity for discussion of experience, for exchange of ideas and for consideration of special phases of work de-developed in different localities, is a source not only of practical aid, but of great inspiration.

MISS QUINN IN NEW PLACE

Goes to Westchester County as Assistant Director of Children’s Agencies

The work for dependent children in Westchester County has developed so rapidly under the direction of Mr. V.
Evert Macy, superintendent of the poor, that it has become necessary to appoint an assistant to Miss Ruth Taylor, director of agents. Miss Lillian A.
Quinn, who has been assistant superintendent of the County Agency Department of the association for the past three and a half years, has been selected to fill the newly created office.

Miss Marion Bosworth, of Chicago, has been appointed assistant superintendent to fill the vacancy in the County Agency Department of the association. Miss Bosworth was graduated from Wellesley in 1907 and did graduate work in Radcliffe and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and had a fellowship in Social Research with the Boston Woman's Educational and Industrial Union. Miss Bosworth had had an interesting experience in various lines of social work, and was for one year county agent for dependent children in Ulster County, having organized the work there in 1912.

PROVIDE CARE FOR PATIENTS

Elmira Authorities Will Send Tuberculosis Sufferers to Other Counties Pending Completion of County Hospital

The Anti-Tuberculosis Committee of the Elmira Federation for Social Service has decided to send tuberculosis patients to hospitals in other counties, pending the building of the new Chemung County Hospital.

The Elmira Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium was destroyed by fire last June, and efforts have been made to provide temporary care for some of the cases in the city in the isolation hospital and in houses, but without success. Realizing the importance of hospital care to safeguard the families of the cases from further infection, the authorities have determined to send the cases away to nearby tuberculosis institutions that may have vacant beds.

EFFECT OF HOSPITAL ON TUBERCULOSIS DEATH RATE

In view of frequent opposition to the location of a tuberculosis sanatorium on the ground that it will increase the prevalence of tuberculosis in a community, the experience of Westfield, Mass., is interesting. One of the State sanatoriums is located in Westfield and its superintendent, Dr. H. D. Chadwick, reports a decrease in the tuberculosis death rate for the town as follows: From 1905 to 1910, the average annual rate per 100,000 population was 108; from 1910 to 1915, since the State sanatorium has been in existence, the average annual rate was eighty-four per 100,000 population. These figures are based on an average population of 14,009 for the first five-year period, during which the number of deaths averaged 16.2, and an average population of 17,287 with an average annual number of deaths of 14.8 for the second period. This means a decrease of 22 per cent. in the tuberculosis death rate for the town, although no less than 1,700 patients have been treated in the sanatorium.—Public Health News, New Jersey State Department of Health.

TRAINING YOUNG MOTHERS

Nassau County Association Conducts Interesting Experiment for the Benefit of Unfortunate Young Women

An interesting experiment in the training of young unmarried mothers is being worked out by the Nassau County Association. The funds for the experiment were provided by the Cathedral Guild, connected with the Garden City Cathedral.

A pleasant house with considerable grounds has been rented in the village of West Hempstead. It is called "Nassau Cottage." It is to be used as a refuge and training station for young unmarried mothers coming to the attention of the social workers of the association in Nassau County.

The interest of the Cathedral Guild in this work was aroused by an address given by Miss Mary Malcolm, agent for dependent children in Nassau County, in which she referred to several young unmarried mothers who were totally untrained to care for themselves. She pointed out that the girls meeting with this serious experience should have special care and guidance both before the baby was born and afterward. Her auditors were sufficiently interested to undertake at once the raising of the money to make it possible to establish such a refuge.

The house was recently opened under the direction of a house mother.

HOW HEALTH GETS TO THE PEOPLE

One of the supervising nurses of the State Department of Health working in a rural area was asked by one of the residents of the section to call on a certain woman who, she said, was feeble-minded and had a young baby. The husband of the woman was also said to be feeble-minded.

The nurse called and inquired about the baby.

"Oh, she's doin' fine," said the mother.

"I'm bringing her up by a book. Mrs. Brown says it's no way to bring up a baby by a book. She says she's had eight babies and she never brought 'em up by no book. I axed her how many of her babies was dead, She said 'four.' So I said, 'Look er there! What did I tell yer'? Half of 'em died.'"

Then she inquired, "Did you ever hear of that Herman Biggs?"

The nurse assured her that she had.

"Well," said the mother, "he's wrote a book all about bringing up babies, and he sent it to me and wrote me a nice letter, too, and I'm goin' to bring up my baby by that book."

Circus Brings Happiness to Eager Throng of Orphans

April 25 was a happy day for orphans in and around New York City.

Barnum & Bailey gave them a special performance of the circus in Madison Square Garden. Fifty children who are being cared for in boarding homes, under the supervision of the Placing-Out Department of the Association, were among the happy throng of children who clapped their hands in glee at the antics of clowns, watched the ponderous elephants and Oh'ed and Ah'ed at the marvelous feats of acrobats and horsemen.

The picture above was taken after the performance. All of these children and about twenty others are now being cared for in boarding homes in and around New York City. They are children who have to be boarded for a longer or shorter period of time, either because they are awaiting placement for the first time or are being transferred from one home to another, or require physical, mental or moral treatment before they become suitable for placement in homes where they will be accepted as members of the family. This specialized care of children involves very intensive work with each individual child. It takes patience, discrimination and a great deal of time.

During the last six months the doctors have made 206 physical examinations, 66 children have been tested mentally; the visitors in charge of the boarded out children have made 553 visits to the children in their homes. In this way we have kept closely in touch with everything that concerns the child's welfare.

Between October 1st and April 1st, 164 children were placed in homes. Ninety-nine of these were placed for the first time. During this time supervision has been maintained over more than 1,100 children who had been previously placed in homes and who have not been adopted or otherwise passed from care.

WESTCHESTER TO HAVE THREE NEW COUNTY BUILDINGS

These are busy days in Westchester County. Good progress is being made in the project of erecting new county buildings which have long been sorely needed. Addressing the spring meeting of the Westchester Committee of the State Charities Aid Association at the home of Mr. Adolph Lewisohn, in Ardsley, on April 29, Mr. V. Everit Macy, Superintendent of the Poor, announced that plans and specifications for the model almshouse to be erected on the Cochran farm at Eastview, are nearly ready. The Board of Supervisors has appropriated $700,000 for this group of buildings.

The construction of the new county penitentiary, which is to cost about $500,000, has been contracted for and work begun.

The plans for the county hospital will not be ready for some time. The Board of Supervisors has just appropriated $300,000 for this purpose. The County Building Commission has been urged a much larger appropriation for adequate hospital facilities. Doubt has been expressed as to whether adequate hospital provision for the county's needs can be made for $300,000.

Superintendent Macy also announced that the Legislature had passed the bill creating a commissioner of charities and corrections for Westchester County in place of the superintendent of the poor. Governor Whitman's approval of the bill is earnestly hoped for. The bill provides for separate superintendents for the new almshouse the hospital, and the penitentiary, and also for the work with dependent children in the county—all under the jurisdiction of the commissioner of charities and correction.

Following the meeting at Mr. Lewisoohn's, the forty members of the committee present were taken in automobiles to the site of the new buildings, and had an admirable opportunity to inspect them. The visitors agreed that the sites seemed in every way adapted to institutional purposes.

All the activities of the sub-committees of the county committee were covered in reports submitted at the meeting. Mr. William Forster, of Yonkers, reported for the Committee on City and County Charitable Institutions; Mrs. George F. Chamberlin, of Harrison, for the Committee on Children; Professor John Calvin Bucher, of Peekskill, for the Committee on Tuberculosis; Miss Florence J. Parsons, of Yonkers, for the Committee on Organization of Charity, and Dr. Isham G. Harris, of Yorktown, for the Committee on Eugenics and Mental Hygiene.

Proceeding the meeting Mr. Lewisoohn entertained about twenty guests at luncheon.

UNCLE SAM AS AN ALIENIST

A bill to create a Division of Mental Hygiene in the United States Public Health Service is pending in Congress and the outlook for its passage is bright. Such a bill was passed by the House of Representatives at the last session and failed in the Senate.

The Association's Mental Hygiene Committee, as well as the National Committee for Mental Hygiene and various state societies, have been urging for some time the creation of such a Division. It is felt that it would give a great impetus to the mental hygiene movement throughout the country. Such a Division would deal with difficult problems in the mental examination of immigrants, the mental aspects of some of the investigations conducted by the Hygienic Laboratory, and the care of the insane and mentally defective in new possessions of the United States and in Alaska.

CAMP—HASTINGS

Miss Mary E. Hastings, who has been the successful agent for dependent children in Washington County for the past five years, resigned January 15, and returned to her home in Troy. On April 24 she was married to Mr. Frank Dicker- man Camp, of Springfield, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Camp will be at home after June 1st, at 76 Mill street, Springfield, Mass.

Miss Elizabeth E. Nye, a graduate of Smith College of 1915, who was a substitute agent in Oneida County during part of last year, is the new Washington County agent.

1915 SEAL SALE BEAT RECORDS

Ten Million Total in This State Exceeded 1914 by 22 Per Cent.

The holiday season of 1915 witnessed the attainment of the goal established a number of years ago for the total sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals in New York State, exclusive of New York City. Not only was the goal reached, but it was passed by a substantial figure. A total of 10,605,261 seals were sold under the direction of the State Charities Aid Association, as compared with 8,566,238 seals sold during the holiday season of 1914. The percentage of increase of 1915 over 1914 is 22.7.

In the contest for the highest per capita sale of Red Cross Seals in the eight classes of localities in the state, grouped according to population, are Rochester, Troy, Elmira, Ithaca, Bronxville, White Plains, Garden City and Curtis. Pennants will be awarded to these localities by the Association. The pennant competition originated by the Association during the holiday season of 1914, was also a feature of the nation-wide sale of seals last December.

DUTCHESS COUNTY CHILDREN'S BILL

At the request of the Board of Supervisors of Dutchess County, County Judge C. W. H. Arnold drafted a bill creating a County Board of Children's Guardians, to which board was to be given full responsibility for the care of destitute, neglected, delinquent and defective children within Dutchess County.

The bill followed closely a plan of community care for needy children, recently published by the S. C. A. A. This plan, in turn, was based upon a paper on "A Community Plan in Children's Work," which was given by Mr. C. C. Carstens, of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children at the National Conference of Charities and Correction, in Baltimore in 1915. Although the bill passed the Senate on April 18th it was not reported out by the Assembly committee. Public officials of Dutchess County and the S. C. A. A. urged its passage as probably the most progressive legislation dealing with child care which has been proposed in the United States.

The only opposition which developed was from some of the Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the president of one of which issued a circular in opposition.

The purpose and scope of the bill, which failed of passage, is shown by the following outline of the duties it conferred upon the public Board of Guardians:

- To institute children—-Administrative to mothers with younger children, receive children homes or institutions, place in free family homes.
- To neglected children —Investigate complaints as to neglect, advise when action into court is required. Institute proceedings, receive children as wards of county on court order, place in boarding institutions or free family homes.
- To delinquent children —Receive as wards of county, order care and custody in boarding homes.
- To defective children —Give permission to suit against institutions for defective, provide treatment and care in their own homes when necessary, maintain supervision over those not in state institutions.
- To all classes of children —Provide for investigation, special hospital, mental and physical examinations, preliminary examination for medical care, collect money from parents and other parties, appoint such suit as necessary, order them to be paid by court, administer relief in homes when necessary, place in free family or institutions of religious faith of parents.

Public Boards of Children's Guardians have existed in various parts of the United States for many years, notably in the State of New Jersey, in the District of Columbia, and in Marion County (Indianapolis), Indiana. In order to cover the entire field and put into operation the entire plan of child care which has been carefully worked out, it will be necessary to organize not only the Board of Children's Guardians, but a County Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, to handle all the legal phases of family problems involving the welfare of children. Presumably, the bill will be introduced at the next session of the Legislature.

Late Only 5 Times on 20,000 Calls

New Rule Speeds Up New York City Ambulance Service

Here is an interesting example not only of the value of co-operation, but also of efficient service:

At the request of the Board of Ambulance Service, Police Commissioner Arthur Woods, of New York, issued an order instructing the police throughout the entire city to send in a second ambulance call in instances where the ambulance does not appear at the scene of an accident within twenty minutes of the first call. This second call is looked upon as a complaint against the hospital whose ambulance is slow, and notice of delay is forwarded to the Board of Ambulance Service for action.

In a period of two months after the order went into effect, only five second calls were sent in by the police of the entire city out of an approximate total of 20,000 calls.
BROOKLYN HELPS CITIZENS TO AVOID MENTAL PITFALLS

Important Preventive Work at State Clinic in Williamsburgh Hospital

The following interesting report on the mental clinic recently established at the Williamsburgh General Hospital in Brooklyn has been submitted by Dr. Albert M. Somers, Superintendent of the Long Island State Hospital, and Dr. William Austin Macy, Superintendent of the Kings Park State Hospital, who are in charge of the work:

Through the courtesy of the Board of Directors of the Williamsburgh Hospital, Brooklyn, and in cooperation of its Dispensary Committee, there was established January 8, 1918, a mental clinic in the outpatient department of the institution. The clinic has been under the joint supervision of the Superintendent of the Long Island State Hospital, Brooklyn, and the Superintendent of the Kings Park State Hospital, Kings Park, N. Y.

This clinic is the seventh one which has been established during the last few years within Greater New York, and is in line with the State-wide policy of the State Hospital Commission, which has to do with the care and prevention of insanity, in establishing in various centers throughout the State mental clinics as may be needed. In so doing, the State Hospital Commission has had the active cooperation and support of the State Charities Aid Association and private philanthropic organizations.

Whenever a clinic was established, the information concerning such was thoroughly publicized in the newspapers and by sending comprehensive information to clergy, physicians and charitable organizations. This practice was carried out with especial emphasis in the Williamsburgh district.

The object of all mental clinics is to prevent certain forms of insanity by discovering the symptoms sooner and treating the disorder in its earlier state. The mental clinic is a place where patients or their friends can come and receive free advice and treatment relative to mental problems or allied nervous conditions, and where physicians may refer worthy cases for the same purpose.

Preventing Breakdowns Saves Money

Practical experience in dealing with mental conditions shows that the problem of prevention of complete mental breakdown is of very great and far reaching economic importance. Therefore the State and its friends feel that it is the duty of specialists connected with these conditions, to offer their advice and skill in places outside of State Hospitals, in the hope that their efforts will in some measure be successful in preventing mental breakdown among those who otherwise might from lack of opportunity or knowledge, become affected mentally.

Early treatment and advice may therefore in many instances be of great benefit to those who are suffering from early symptoms of mental breakdown, and if advice can be properly carried out, the necessity of going to a hospital for treatment of mental cases may be entirely avoided by taking advantage of mental clinics.

We believe that the results as shown by the attendance and interest for the brief period during which the establishment of the mental clinic of the Williamsburgh Hospital quite bears out the wisdom of the authorities of the hospital in cooperating with the State. During two months there have been treated considerably over two hundred patients and there have been many inquiries by mail and telephone.

Complex Problems Presented

If space would permit, much might profitably be said relative to the complex social, moral, financial, domestic and physical problems in relation to bad or unhealthy mental conditions. However, the subject of mental hygiene generally, and particularly as to why and how persons develop bad mental health, is not the question in this report as the fact that the knowledge of such is available to those who desire to seek it.

The Williamsburgh Hospital is on record as affording a dispensary for those who are in need of advice, since the hospital believes that not every bad mental case needs to be a factor within its rapidly growing district.

The regular hour for the clinic is at 10 o’clock on Saturday of each week and continues as long as necessary until all who apply have been given full attention and consultation by competent specialists in mental or nervous conditions.

It should be understood that all communications and all consultations are recorded as confidential, and that this form of illness occurs under the same rules and regulations as other forms of illness at the Williamsburgh Hospital.

The physicians in attendance during the brief period desire to record the hearty and loyal cooperation of the authorities of the hospital and particularly the valuable detailed assistance rendered by Mrs. Helen O’Connor, Social Service Nurse, and Mrs. A. K. Fahlberg, R. N., Superintendent of the hospital.

$6,250 for County Health Association

The group of prominent people of Dutchess County who form the Citizens’ Committee of the proposed Dutchess County Health Association have now received pledges of $6,250 for the work of such an association. This is sufficient to run one health center for a year, and the work will be started as soon as possible.

Three temporary committees—on organization and nominations, on staff, and on headquarters—have just been appointed by Dr. J. C. Otis, chairman of the Citizens’ Committee. As soon as they have prepared their reports, a meeting of the Citizens’ Committee will be called to consider them and to take definite steps to organize the association and begin work.

NEW YORK WINS SEAL SALE HONORS

New York State won first place among the larger states in the Union for selling the largest number of Red Cross Christmas Seals per capita last December. New York competed in the class of states having a population exceeding 2,400,000, and won first place with a sale of 1.8 per capita. Wisconsin stood second in that class with a sale of 1.46.

The total number of seals sold in New York State was 18,243,125. This was an increase of 26.8 per cent. over 1914. Under the sales management of the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, 10,505,261 seals were sold in New York State, exclusive of New York City. In the city itself, 7,737,864 seals were disposed of.

Several New York cities were pennant winners in the seal sale competition between cities and towns of the whole country. Ithaca was first among the municipalities with population from 8,000 to 25,000, and Corning second. Elmira led all places in the United States of between 25,000 and 50,000; Rochester was first among those of 150,000 to 500,000, and Buffalo second. Brooklyn took the lead among places having a population exceeding one million.

Garden City, Long Island, was second among all places in the United States with a population between 600 and 1,200; Lawrence was second in those whose population ranges from 1,200 to 2,000; Bronxville was second for all places with population of 2,000 to 8,000.

Formal presentation of pennants to each of the first place winners will take place at the annual meeting of the National Association, to be held in Washington May 11 and 12.

STUDYING WASHINGTON COUNTY HOSPITAL NEEDS

Joseph J. Weber, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Hospitals, recently made a trip through Washington County, where he interviewed a number of physicians and public officials in preparation for a report on the hospital needs of the county. The report is to be submitted to Mr. Edwin McClellan, of Cambridge, that county, who is planning to construct a general hospital designed to meet, as far as possible, the hospital needs disclosed.

SEEK HERKIMER HOSPITAL SITE

The Herkimer County Board of Supervisors has appointed a committee to secure a site for the tuberculosis hospital authorized by the referendum vote of the electors last November.
Mr. Moree Joins Red Cross Forces

Appointed Director of Atlantic Division—His Valuable Services to S. C. A. A. During Six Years

Mr. Edward A. Moree, an assistant secretary of the Association, has resigned to become Director of the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross, with headquarters in New York City. He has entered upon his new duties and is now in the thick of a campaign to secure 100,000 members in the metropolitan district—part of an effort to secure 1,000,000 in the whole country.

MISS CURRY ATTENDING NATIONAL CONFERENCE

The 43d session of the National Conference of Charities and Correction will meet in Indianapolis May 10-17. The National Conference on the Education of Dependent, Truant, Backward and Delinquent Children, the American Association of Officials of Charities and Correction, the National Probation Association and several other allied associations will hold sessions immediately preceding or immediately following the National Conference. Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of Agencies and Children of the Association, has been appointed a delegate to and will attend the National Conference and the special children's conference.

PLAN A NEW HOSPITAL IN BROOME COUNTY

A representative committee of ten citizens has been organized in Broome County to promote a campaign for a new and larger county tuberculosis hospital to take the place of the present inadequate and unsuitably located institution. This committee has engaged a former newspaper man to act as its executive secretary.

The board of supervisors will consider the subject at its meeting in May and will give a hearing on May 17, at which the local committees and representatives from the State Department of Health and the State Charities Aid Association will participate.
Thirteen Free Mental Dispensaries Now Open

State HospitalsForging Ahead in Preventive and After-Care Work—Increasing Interest in Clinic and Social Service Activities—
Twelve Hospital Field Agents Are Busy

Encouraging progress in the establishment of out-patient departments connected with State hospitals was reported at the quarterly conference of hospital managers and superintendents, held at Binghamton on May 2.

Gradually the State is being fairly well covered by a system of dispensaries where free diagnosis, advice and treatment are given to persons threatened with or suffering from the milder forms of mental disease. As the purposes of these dispensaries become better understood, they are attracting more patients, and superintendents of the State hospitals are pleased with the results. Field agents of the various hospitals are doing interesting work and have accomplished good results in the past few months.

Nine of the State hospitals now have one or more mental dispensaries. In all, there are now 13 such dispensaries maintained by State hospitals. Twelve of the hospitals have field agents at work.

Where the Dispensaries Are

Here is a list of the hospitals and out-patient dispensaries established to date:

Hudson River: In the Board of Health rooms at Poughkeepsie.

St. Lawrence:
1. At the State hospital at Ogdensburg.
2. At the Alice Hyde Memorial Hospital at Malone.
3. In the City and Sisters' Hospitals in Watertown.

Gowanda:
1. Women's Christian Association Hospital in Jamestown.
2. In Welcome Hall, Buffalo.

Buffalo: At the State hospital.

Kings Park: Jointly with the Long Island State Hospital at the Williamsburgh General Hospital in Brooklyn.

Rochester: At the State Hospital.

Long Island:
1. At the Long Island State Hospital, Brooklyn.
2. At the Long Island College Hospital.

Manhattan:
1. At the Cornell University Medical College, New York City, in cooperation with Central Islip.
2. At St. Joseph's Hospital in Yonkers.

164 Patients at Five Clinics

Dr. Richard H. Hutchings, superintendent of the St. Lawrence State Hospital at Ogdensburg, reported at the conference on the clinics held at Malone and Watertown this winter. Two sessions have been held at Malone and three at Watertown. They were about six weeks apart. At these five clinics a total of 164 persons were seen. Of these, ninety-six came to inquire about themselves; thirty-seven to inquire regarding relatives who are patients in the hospitals; nine on behalf of relatives about whose mental health they felt concerned. Seventeen were patients on parole from the hospital and five were discharged patients.

Dr. Hutchings said that practically half of the patients who came for advice concerning themselves could be treated by their own family physician. In each instance the family physician was notified, and helpful suggestions made to him by the mental specialist. Dr. Hutchings reported that general practitioners in his district are co-operating well in the work.

The St. Lawrence Hospital appointed a social worker on March 1. She attends the clinics to assist the physician. She also goes to the towns a week ahead of the clinic session and sees former patients and discovers new ones to take to the clinic. In two months she called on thirty-five families. In every community she endeavors to get acquainted with the social agencies and local betterment organizations which are able to help her from time to time in dealing with patients in need of relief and help.

Public meetings have been held in connection with the clinic work in the St. Lawrence district, and newspaper publicity has been used before every clinic session to arouse interest and attract patients. Dr. Hutchings reported that the project is arousing great interest.

Poughkeepsie Work Growing

Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, superintendent of the Hudson River State Hospital, reported that as the result of judicious newspaper publicity and circular letters to physicians, clergymen and social workers, the attendance at the weekly dispensary in the Board of Health rooms at Poughkeepsie has been more in the past four months than in the whole previous year. From two to six patients are seen at each session. The hospital plans to establish a clinic in Hudson in the near future.

Buffalo Field Agent Busy

Dr. Arthur W. Hurd, superintendent of the Buffalo State Hospital, said that he was especially well pleased with the results secured by the hospital's field agent. He declared that her efforts had undoubtedly resulted in a saving to the State in dollars and cents. The agent makes from forty to fifty visits a month, and almost as many persons come to the hospital to see her. She interests the organized charities of the city in many of the patients. By straightening out domestic tangles and improving home surroundings and conditions of employment and recreation, she undoubtedly prevents a considerable number of people having to come into the hospital as patients.

Incidentally, Dr. Hurd announced that all patients awaiting commitment to the Buffalo State Hospital from Buffalo are now cared for temporarily in the psychopathic ward of the new municipal hospital. Dr. Hurd emphasized the psychiatric importance of dealing with the problem of chronic inebriety.

Gowanda Swamped With Work

Dr. Carl A. von Schneide, reporting for the Gowanda State Hospital, said of the clinic held once a month at Jamestown: “We are swamped with work.” As many as thirty patients have attended in a day. The hospital has another clinic in Welcome Hall, Buffalo, and intends to open one at Olean, Salamanca and possibly Dunkirk.

488 Patients in Brooklyn

Stimulating reports were made by Dr. William Austin Macy, superintendent of the Kings Park State Hospital, and Dr. Elbert M. Somers, superintendent of Long Island State Hospital in Flatbush, regarding the clinic maintained jointly by these two State hospitals in the Williamsburgh General Hospital in Brooklyn. The Kings Park and State Hospital also maintains a clinic at the institution itself, and one at the Long Island College Hospital. Since October 1 a total of 488 cases have been seen at these three dispensaries. An increasing interest on the part of the public and physicians is reported. In fact, the interest in Brooklyn is so great that preliminary steps have been taken to organize a mental hygiene committee for a program of clinical cooperation and public education.

The attendance at the opening session of the Williamsburgh clinic was eighty patients. The average attendance has ranged from fifteen to twenty-five. Of all the patients seen, only four or five required commitment. A large majority of them were “helpable” cases. Dr. Somers emphasized the social problem in connection with cases seen at the clinic. The social problem is as important as the medical problem, in his opinion. Oftentimes the patient needs intelligent attention to his surroundings, a helping hand when he is in a tight place because of sickness or lack of work, and a friend who can give sympathetic and helpful counsel—needs these things more than he does medicine.

Woman Broken Down by Monotony

Dr. Somers told of a woman whose breakdown was largely due to the monotony of her occupation. She came to this country and became a seamstress. She worked in a factory at making collars—just collars, collars, collars. She became very nervous and finally gave up her work. She was living with relatives who did not understand her condition and who really forced her back to work when she was not able to go. The terrible monotony soon "got" her and she broke down under the strain. Undoubtedly more diversified work and suitable recreation to brighten her life would have avoided a complete breakdown in this case.

Attendance Doubles at Cornell Clinic

Manhattan State Hospital co-operates with Central Islip in maintaining a clinic at the Cornell University Medical College, New York City, and also has a dispensary at St. Joseph's Hospital in Yonkers. The attendance at the Cornell clinic in March was sixty-two—an increase of about 60 per cent, over the previous month. This was largely due to the increased number of cases referred by physicians of Manhattan and the Bronx in response to a circular letter sent out to 5,000 practitioners.

Miss Elizabeth H. Horton, who has acted as after-care agent for both Manhattan and Central Islip Hospitals, recently resigned because of ill health. Each hospital will have a field agent henceforth.

The attendance at the clinic in Yonkers during the past five months was forty-nine. This clinic has a volunteer social worker, Miss Young, a school of philanthropy student, who is working under the direction of the Mental Hygiene Committee of this Association.

Interesting work is also being done in other institutions. Those mentioned are typical and represent some of the larger activities along this line.

Central Committee Helps Work Along

Members of the staff of the Association's Mental Hygiene Committee continue to co-operate, as opportunity offers, in the work of organizing and supervising the dispensaries. The Committee offers suggestions to field agents, prepares newspaper publicity and circular letters, arranges public meetings, distributes literature and in every way possible endeavors to keep the dispensaries before the public and to make their purposes and methods understood.

Bureau of Prevention Needed

Unfortunately, the Legislature this year again failed to create a Division of Prevention and After-Care in the State Hospital Commission, to aid in the development of the out-patient system. Close official direction and responsibility for the work of the dispensaries is needed in order that uniform, high standards of medical work shall be maintained, the activities of the several dispensaries coordinated into an effective system, uniform records kept at the various institutions and regular reports made to the State Hospital Commission.

It is felt if the work goes forward energetically and effectively during the next few months, that when the Legislature convenes next year there will be a record of results with which to successfully urge the establishment of a Division of Prevention and After-Care. Even in the short time since October 1, when the Governor and State Hospital Commission indicated that they desired greater emphasis placed upon preventive and after-care work, it has been demonstrated that the out-patient departments constitute a promising preventive measure. The system of field agents has already justified itself and undoubtedly resulted in a considerable saving to the State by looking more closely after the welfare of convalescing patients on parole, thus preventing, in many instances, a recurrence of mental trouble.

State Should Bear Expense

The cost of establishing the clinics, thoroughly advertising them and arousing interest in their work, is an expense which should properly be borne by the State. There is no doubt but that the expenditure of $10,000 on a Division of Prevention would be one of the wisest and most fruitful expenditures which the State could make. By preventing cases of serious mental illness through early treatment and by increasing the number of patients on parole by providing the right kind of after-care, the dispensaries will soon more than pay for themselves in lessened maintenance charges in State hospitals. With the institutions overcrowded to the extent of 22 per cent, the State should not need urging to push vigorously and support adequately all warranted preventive measures.

NEW SANATORIUM IN CHEMUNG COUNTY

Governor Whitman has approved the act authorizing the city of Elmira to transfer to Chemung County the city's interest in the property of the Elmira Tuberculosis Sanatorium, which was destroyed by fire last year. The new institution, when completed, will be a county hospital, instead of receiving patients from Elmira alone.

Hats Off to Hornell

Doubles Capacity of Open-Air School— Gets Another Teacher—Now for School Nurse!

The open-air school, which was started last October in Hornell, under the joint auspices of the Tuberculosis Committee and the Board of Education, has proved so valuable that the Board has doubled the capacity of the school and has provided a second teacher. The school now provides for 36 children.

The local committee also employs a visiting nurse and maintains a tuberculosis dispensary, a child welfare station and an open-air camp during the summer for pre-tuberculous children. The visiting nurse has been asked to give exclusive attention to school work, with the result that the Board of Education has agreed to employ such a nurse beginning with the new school year next September.

MENTAL HYGIENE,

NEW MAGAZINE SOON

Rapid growth in the mental hygiene movement throughout the country was indicated at the second annual convention of state societies for mental hygiene held at New Orleans, April 3 and 4. Although an organized movement to conserve mental health got under way less than a decade ago, there are now mental hygiene societies in thirteen states, all affiliated with the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. Five new societies were established last year—Alabama, California, District of Columbia, Louisiana and Rhode Island. The states which already had societies were New York, Connecticut, Illinois, North Carolina, Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The National Committee has raised approximately $200,000 to carry on its work and about $250,000 more has been raised by the various state societies for their activities.

The National Committee is soon to begin the publication of "Mental Hygiene," a magazine designed to be the official organ of the movement.

Dr. Thomas W. Salmon and Dr. William L. Russell, who are members of the State Charities Aid Association's Committee on Mental Hygiene, and George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary, delivered addresses at the convention.
“Well Done” for Oneida Agency

Supervisors, Changing System, Praise S. C. A. A. Committee and Agents

"Your committee believes that too much credit cannot be given to those in charge of the State Charities Aid Association for the great work they have accomplished among dependent children throughout the State, and in educating the public to a realization of the importance to the community and the welfare of its future citizens in the proper care and bringing up of its dependent children. Special credit is due to the Oneida County Committee and its agents for the faithful and efficient manner in which they have performed their duties in relation to these children during the past seven years."

In the above words the Committee on Salaries of the Oneida County Board of Supervisors endorsed the Oneida County Agency for Dependent Children, when recommending a reorganization of the work in Oneida County. Heretofore the county has appropriated money to the Humane Society and to the County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association and to the Board of Child Welfare for pensions to mothers, and to the institutions for the support of children. Upon the recommendation of the Salaries Committee the appropriations to the Humane Society and to the County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association were discontinued. The work, however, which had been so well organized and demonstrated by the County Committee is to be continued under the direction of a committee of the Board of Supervisors. The former duties of the agents and the Humane Society have been divided between the agents and the institutions themselves. Although the local committee of the Association felt that the Board of Supervisors were exceeding their legal right in assuming responsibility for dependent children which the statutes of the State place with the Superintendent and Overseers of the Poor, the committee stands ready to cooperate in any way possible to make the present program a success.

The Oneida County Board of Supervisors have also appointed a Committee on the Consolidation and Amendment of the Poor Laws of Oneida County. In a preliminary report it was indicated that when the final report was made next November a recommendation to create a county commissioner of charities and corrections would be made.

MENTAL TESTS FOR LODGING HOUSE INMATES

Committee to Devise Plan for Sifting the Insane from the Down and Out

REPAIR SHOP FOR BROKEN LIVES

Acting upon the recommendation of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, Chari- ties Commissioner John A. Kingsbury of New York City has appointed a committee of three experts to formulate a plan for the mental examination of inmates of the Municipal Lodging House in New York and to recommend an examiner.

The committee consists of Dr. August Hoch, Director of the Psychiatric Institute of the State hospitals; Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, and Dr. Minas S. Gregory, Superintendent of the Alcoholic and Psychopathic Services in Bellevue Hospital. They have accepted appointment and begun their study.

The Mental Hygiene Committee and Commissioner Kingsbury are impressed with the possibility of discovering cases of mental illness, both in the early and advanced stages, among the thousands of men who present themselves at the Municipal Lodging House in a year. It has been Commissioner Kingsbury's aim ever since he assumed charge of the Department of Charities to make the Municipal Lodging House a "human repair shop" as well as a place to sleep. Men have been examined for physical ailments and directed to treatment. In many instances employment has been found for lodgers. But, of course, such a "human repair shop" is not fully equipped to mend broken lives unless some attention is given to the mental aspects of "down-and-outness."

May Prevent Tragedies

There is no doubt but that in the course of a year many persons in more or less advanced stages of paresis, an incurable mental disease often leading to violent acts, are sheltered in the Lodging House. It will be recalled that Gallagher, the derelict who shot Mayor Geynor, was suffering from paresis. All paretics among the down-and-out class are potential Gallaghers. Their prompt discovery and removal to a hospital may prevent shocking tragedies. If a mental examination weeded out one Gallagher a year from the throng at the Lodging House, it would justify the expense many times over.

But it will not be the aim of the new system of mental examination to discover only cases of serious mental illness. It is hoped that cases of mild mental trouble in the early stages can be detected. Their discovery before the disease has progressed far will greatly increase their chances for recovery when placed under proper treatment.

A Promising Field of Effort

Experts who are familiar with the subject state that there are few, if any, groups of society in which a higher proportion of psychopathic material can be found than in the applicants for shelter in municipal lodging houses.

Commissioner Kingsbury, although eager to have systematic examination of lodging house inmates undertaken in this city, has proceeded slowly because of the many problems which arise in connection with the establishment of a competent service adequate for examining such large numbers of men. He is to be recommended for availing himself of the services of such competent experts as Dr. Salmon, Dr. Gregory, and Dr. Hoch, to formulate a plan of procedure which will meet with the approval of authorities on mental disease and stand the acid test of workableness.

LIVINGSTON COUNTY TRIES COUNTY AGENT PLAN

At the request of the Superintendent of the Poor in Livingston County, the County Agency Department of the Association is cooperating in organization work for the dependent children. A $450 appropriation was secured from the Board of Supervisors to cover the salary and expenses of an investigating agent for a trial period of six months.

On the recommendation of the Superintendent of County Agents, Miss Cornelia Ougheltree, a former agent for dependent children in Ulster County, began work in Livingston County, March 9. The local committee of the Association and the central office will assist the Superintendent of the Poor and the agent, and it is believed that the value of the work will be recognized at the end of the trial period, so that the agency will be made permanent.

NEW PUBLIC HEALTH NURSES

Dansville and Geneseo have joined the list of New York State municipalities employing a public health nurse. Geneseo has appropriated $500 for the purpose. In Dansville, through the efforts of the Federation of Women for Public Service, $618 has been secured for the purpose.
PUBLICATIONS OF THE STATE CHARITIES AID ASSOCIATION

Attention of the readers of the S. C. A. A. News is called to the publications of the State Charities Aid Association which can be obtained from the office upon request. The publications cover the field of the Association's activities from its inception down to the present.

For convenience most of the pamphlets are numbered, but there is also an unnumbered list for which requests should be made by title. The numbered list is published below. The list of unnumbered publications will appear in the next issue. Requests should be addressed to the Association, at 105 East 32d Street, New York City.

Governor Approves an Appropriation for Adequate State Laboratory

Another Important Step in His Public Health Program—New Laboratory Is Urgently Needed

Governor Whitman has taken another important step in his public health program by signing the Appropriation Bill containing an item for a new State Laboratory of the State Department of Health in Albany.

The State is authorized to enter into contracts for a building to cost $100,000, and $25,000 of that amount is made available immediately. For the site, $40,000 is appropriated. The total cost of the new plant thus will be $140,000.

The new laboratory will take the place of a very inadequate and unsanitary one. In fact, the present laboratory is in an old stable which was remodeled for the purpose. Up to two years ago there were housed in this stable and the lean-to additions and sheds a dozen horses and numerous other laboratory animals, as well as the staff of seventeen laboratory workers. The horses have been removed to a farm, but the laboratory staff has increased to seventy-five and the work has increased threefold under State Health Commissioner Hermann M. Biggs. The workers are in cramped, unsuitable, unsanitary quarters. To continue work in the old building, Dr. Biggs says, would be a menace to the health of the workers and would greatly curtail needed work.

The cramped quarters have required employees to work Sundays and holidays, besides many hours overtime at night to keep up with the demands upon the laboratory.

Laboratory work is being recognized as an increasingly vital factor in health progress. The general public is not as familiar as it should be with the extent and importance of the work done in the laboratory. The diagnostic service includes the examination of specimens from the communicable diseases. Serum diagnosis of venereal diseases is developed. Vaccines, serums and antitoxins for distribution throughout the State are made. Analysis is made of samples of drinking water. In a word, the laboratory serves the people of the whole State and brings the advantages of a modern laboratory to physicians and health officers all over the State.

Some idea of the volume of work done even in the present ramshackle old building is indicated by the fact that 30,669 packages of diphtheria antitoxin and 9,490 packages of tetanus antitoxin were made in the laboratory last year. A total of 4,350 sputum tests for tuberculosis were made. The number of Wassermann tests to detect syphilis was 12,708.

The new laboratory is to be much more accessible and convenient than the old one. It will be located in the new Scotland avenue section of Albany, closely adjoining the Albany Hospital and the new site of the Albany Medical College. It is at ample distance from any residential section.

Some opposition to the plan for a new laboratory developed while the Governor was considering the Appropriation Bill, but it was shown to be based on lack of information and a misconception of the laboratory's functions. When reliable reports were made to the Governor about the condition of the present plant and the heavily increased demands upon it, he promptly approved the item. His action, in addition to providing needed facilities for public health work, relieves the State from the odium of disgraceful housing of its scientific workers.

"With the erection of the new building," said Dr. Biggs in a recent public statement, "we will be able to render the people of the State the service which they deserve and for which they make insistent demand. It is not too much to say that Governor Whitman has again demonstrated his keen interest in promoting the health and physical welfare of the people of the State."

WILLARD COMMITTEE PLANS PUBLIC MEETINGS

The Willard Committee on Mental Hygiene, which is one of the most active sub-committees of the central Mental Hygiene Committee, held its semi-annual meeting at the Willard State Hospital on May 5, with Mrs. Milo M. Acker, the president, presiding.

During the past six months the members of the committee assisted fifty-four persons discharged or paroled from the hospital. In some instances work was found for them or unfavorable home surroundings improved. In other cases a variety of friendly and helpful services were performed.

The committee is planning a series of mental hygiene meetings in various communities of the Willard hospital district next fall.

Spence School Girls to Be "Big Sisters"

Are Interested in Placing-Out Department's Work—Over 1,100 Children Now Under Supervision

The Spence School Society has organized a Social Service Committee made up of members who have expressed a willingness to interest themselves in individual children who are in boarding homes under the supervision of the Association's Placing-Out Department. These young women will act as "big sisters" to the children and will give some of their time toward making the children happier and more comfortable.

A generous friend of the association has offered the department a furnished cottage and maintenance for five children during June, July and August. Delicate children needing special care will be sent to the cottage.

During April, 23 children were added to the number under the department's supervision, and 14 passed from supervision. The number remaining under supervision on May 1 was 1,125. The total number of children placed out since the beginning of the work is 2,309.
1916 CHARITY LEGISLATION
ANALYZED BY MR. FOLKS

BY HOMER FOLKS

The "Presidential year" traditionally unfavorable for proposed legislation involving any substantial change in administrative methods or any considerable increase in appropriations. 1916 was no exception to this rule. An additional cause is doubtless to be found in the fact that the inquiry being made by Commissioner Strong into the work of the various departments having to do with State charitable institutions, was in progress and legislation relating thereto would naturally be postponed until the Commissioner's report. Few bills relating to charitable interests were introduced, and of these few a considerable number fell by the wayside.

Bills Passed

Among the few bills in this field which became laws are the following:

Dependent Children May Be County Charges
1. A bill amending the Poor Law, introduced by Senator Walters of Syracuse, permitting boards of supervisors to make all dependent children in any county, county charges, while leaving the adult poor, town and city charges. At present all the poor, juvenile and adult, must be either local or county charges. Dividing the responsibility for the care of poor children among the overseers of the poor, two in each town, is a certain method of securing uniformity, and therefore, wise, and often unfortunate, handling of the lives and fortunes of thousands of children who become public charges throughout the State. This is generally recognized. There is objection, however, in some counties to making the adult poor public charges on the theory that the cities with their saloons and undesirable conditions create a larger portion of the pauperism than the country and should support it, instead of having the charge distributed on the rural as well as the urban districts. This bill was prepared by the State Charities Aid Association.

Hospital Care of the Poor
2. A bill amending the Poor Law, also introduced by Senator Walters of Syracuse, permitting local authorities to pay incorporated hospitals a "reasonable sum" per diem for the support of indigent hospital patients, instead of a fixed sum of $1 per day, except that in certain counties a larger fixed sum might be paid. The sums fixed by statute were insufficient to provide for the care of tuberculous and other patients. The practice of fixing such allowances by statute is obviously undesirable. This bill was prepared by the State Charities Aid Association through its Committee on Hospitals.

County Commissioner of Charities
3. A bill creating the position of Commissioner of Charities and Correction in Westchester County. The new position succeeds to the powers and duties of the Superintendent of the Poor and also takes over a considerable part of the responsibility of the town overseers of the poor, especially those dealing with dependent children. The Commissioner is also to have charge of the recently established Westchester County Penitentiary.

Child Welfare Law Amended
4. A bill amending the Child Welfare Law of last year. This bill excludes the Commissioner of Charities from the Welfare Board of New York City, while leaving the superintendents of the poor throughout the State ex-officio members of all the other child welfare boards. It also provides that the investigations and supervision of those applying for or receiving allowances, shall be made by the child welfare boards rather than by the Poor Law officials. The declared purpose of the bill was to remove "the taint of charity" from the administration of the child welfare allowances. Why the "taint of charity" should be removed from the New York City Board (of which Commissioner Kingsbury has been one of the most active and effective members) and not removed from all of the other boards in the State, has not been explained. Removing the "taint of charity" from the allowances to widows is a popular cry and one with which everyone must feel a degree of sympathy. The fact is, nevertheless, that the entire Widows' Pension Law is based on the relief or charity principle. The "taint of charity" can only be taken out of it by basing such legislation on the insurance principle, applicable to rich and poor alike. While it is impossible to take the "taint of charity" out of a plan which is based frankly and absolutely upon relief principles, it may, nevertheless, be true that by creating a separate authority to deal with this subject and by giving it a new name, the assistance to this class of needy children may receive more careful and thoroughgoing consideration, and (Continued on page 4.)

New Mental Clinic Makes 14 in State

Dr. Clarence A. Potter, Superintendent of the Gowanda State Hospital, announces the establishment of a new mental clinic in the Salamanca Hospital at Salamanca, Cattaraugus County. Sessions will be held on the fourth Thursday afternoon of each month. The first session was on May 25.

Gowanda Hospital also maintains clinics in the Woman's Christian Association Hospital at Jamestown and in Welcome Hall, Buffalo.

The opening of the clinic at Salamanca brings the number of clinics maintained by State hospitals up to 14.
URGES DIVISION OF TUBERCULOSIS IN HEALTH SERVICE

Mr. Folks Says Control of the Disease Should Be a National as Well as a State and Local Problem

An urgent plea for the establishment of a strong Division of Tuberculosis in the United States Public Health Service was made by Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, in an address before the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in Washington on May 11.

Mr. Folks pointed out that in this country tuberculosis has been mainly a local problem, in small degree a State problem, and hardly at all, as yet, a national problem.

"The time has come," he said, "when the Federal authorities should assume that degree of efficent leadership which they are exercising in the problems of agriculture and other economic interests.

"Only through the United States Public Health Service can any degree of uniformity of method and efficiency in the tuberculosis campaign in forty-eight States be secured. The standardization of hospitals, sanatoria, dispensaries, nursing service and home supervision, and all the other elements in the tuberculosis movement, can only be secured through Federal action. Just as the state helps to coordinate the work of the localities within the state, so the Federal authorities should help to coordinate the work of the various states. Only in this way can the vital national interest in the supervision of tuberculosis be made effective."

George J. Neibach, Executive Secretary of the Association's Committee on Tuberculosis, also attended the convention.

The pennant won by New York State for selling the largest number of Red Cross seals per capita among the larger States was awarded to the Committee by General Murray, of the American Red Cross.

DRAW PLANS FOR HOSPITAL IN WASHINGTON COUNTY

Mr. Edwin McClellan, of Cambridge, Washington County, who recently announced his intention to construct a general hospital for the county, has employed an architect who is now working on the plans and has retained O. H. Bartine, superintendent of the New York Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled, as consulting expert, and D. D. Kimball, of New York, as consulting engineer.

PLACED 67 WOMEN IN POSITIONS DURING APRIL

Sixty-seven women were placed in situations during April, according to the monthly report of Miss Mary R. Mason, superintendent of the Mothers' and Babies' Committee. Of these, forty were mothers not previously placed. Seventy-one women applied during the month for work, advice, or convalescent care.

Dr. Rucker examined ninety-two adults and 129 children. The nurse made sixty visits. One of the department's visitors has been away ill. The other visitor made 114 visits, including forty-seven to mothers in care.

What a Hospital Field Agent Did in One Month

Middletown Social Worker Made 140 Outside Visits Regarding Patients

Here is the record of a busy month's work by Miss Mildred Hurley, the energetic field agent of the Middletown State Hospital. During April she made these visits:

- To patients on the ward............. 12
- To parole patients in hospital...... 21
- To discharged patients in hospital 32
- To prospective patients in home.. 1

Individual visits made about parole and discharged patients in Middletown, Liberty, Newburgh, Kingston, Walden, Port Jervis, Ellenville, Saugerties and New York City .................. 86

- Number of relatives and friends met at hospital.................. 11
- Patients seen on leaving hospital 5
- Paroled and discharged patients seen at hospital.................. 11

The agent also found a home for a woman needing treatment and supervision by a hospital physician but not requiring hospital care.

The field agent from Binghamton State Hospital visited Miss Hurley on April 4 for information about the work.

Twelve of the State hospitals now have field agents at work.

TUBERCULOSIS MANAGERS AND SUPERINTENDENTS TO MEET

The spring meeting of the Association of Managers and Superintendents of local tuberculosis hospitals in New York State will be held Friday, June 9, at the Schenectady County Hospital. The Association's Committee on Tuberculosis has accepted the invitation to prepare the program and to assist in making the arrangements.

CONTRACT LET FOR $30,000 HOSPITAL

Work in Jefferson County Can Now Proceed—Broome County After a $75,000 Institution

Contracts for the Jefferson County Tuberculosis Hospital, totaling $30,757.85, have been awarded by the Board of Supervisors.

Plans for the Chemung County Hospital have been filed with the State Commissioner of Health for approval.

The Broome County Board of Supervisors gave a hearing on May 17 on the proposition to appropriate $75,000 for a new and more adequate county tuberculosis hospital.

Delegates from 44 fraternal, business and civic organizations and labor unions representing a membership of 20,000 were organized into a Citizens' Anti-Tuberculosis Committee and sent representatives to participate in the hearing.

The interest of these organizations was enlisted through an educational campaign carried on by the local Tuberculosis Committee, by two representatives from the central office, and by one from the State Department of Health.

DENTAL FACILITIES FOR SEA VIEW HOSPITAL PATIENTS

Members of the Richmond County Committee of the New York City Visiting Committee have become interested in providing facilities for dental work for children and adults at Sea View Hospital, Staten Island.

Through the committee, arrangements have been made whereby a competent New York dentist treats children free at his office each week, and they are sent to him from Sea View in groups of ten. The committee has also arranged to have two dentists go to Sea View weekly and treat children at the institution. A report of the work has been sent to Charities Commissioner Kingsbury, and it is hoped that dentistry at the institution can be put on a permanent basis.

The Visiting Committee also has been agitating the matter of dental facilities at the New York Municipal Lodging House for a long time. Indications are that these facilities will soon be provided.

$7,000 GRANT FOR TUBERCULOSIS WORK

Legislature Makes Provision for State Health Department Activity

Provision for tuberculosis work in the State Health Department, including a tuberculosis expert at $3,000, two supervising nurses at $1,200 each, a stenographer at $900, and a clerk at $720—a total of $7,020—was made in the 1916 Appropriation Bill recently signed by Governor Whitman. These items appear in the appropriations made for the Division of Communicable Diseases.

The revised public health law enacted in 1913 created a Division of Tuberculosis in the State Health Department, but no definite provision has ever been made by the Legislature for that division as such. This is the first time since 1910 that any specific provision has been made by the Legislature for tuberculosis work in the Health Department. Prior to that, $10,000 was granted in 1908, $7,500 in 1909, and $10,000 in 1910. No appropriations were granted in 1911 or 1912.

The State Grange at its annual session in Jamestown last February gave its whole-hearted support to the Health Department's request for funds for tuberculosis work. The request was also supported by this Association's Committee on Tuberculosis and by a large number of local tuberculosis societies and kindred organizations.

BIG CELEBRATION OF BABY WEEK IN YONKERS

Child Welfare Week was observed in Yonkers with public meetings, free motion picture shows, illustrated lectures, exercises of Little Mothers' Leagues and demonstrations at clinics.

A large public meeting under the auspices of the Public Health Council was held in the City Hall the night of May 18. Addresses were delivered by Mayor James T. Lennon, Public Safety Commissioner James J. Fleming, Health Officer William S. Coons, Dr. Louis V. Waldron, director of the Division of Child Hygiene in the Yonkers Bureau of Health, and Dr. Alfred E. Shipley, chief of the Division of Research and Efficiency in the New York City Department of Health. George A. Hastings, of the association staff, presided.

The exhibit of the association's Westchester County Committee on Children was shown throughout the week at the City Hall. Miss Ruth Taylor, director of Children's Department of the office of the Superintendent of Poor in the county, gave popular talks in connection with the exhibit.

the legislation may lead in time to a real plan of social insurance dealing with widowed mothers and their children.

Department of Plant and Structure

6. A bill amending the New York City Charter, changing the Department of Bridges into a Department of Plant and Structure and authorizing the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to transfer to such department from other departments, the power and duty of making repairs to existing buildings and structures and of erecting new ones. Something is to be said for it, as to departments which have but little of repair and construction work to be done. Much is to be said against it as to departments, in the performance of whose duties, repair and construction is a large, essential feature. It would seem to us a great mistake, for instance, to place the Charities Department in a position of being unable to repair its own buildings or construct new ones, except through some other department. A department of necessity not familiar with the details, needs, and particular requirements of the Charities Department, and the relative urgency of its various tasks. In our opinion this bill is one further step in the wrong direction, still further breaking down the powers of departments in performing important public functions and in actually getting things done.

Bills Introduced But Not Passed

1. A bill making possible the submission to popular vote of the establishment of an institution for the mental defectives of New York. This bill created a board of managers and authorized it to establish such clearing houses. The objects of the bill were vague; apparently it was expected that persons seemingly feeble-minded were to be committed to or placed in such institutions for the purposes of mental diagnosis. The proposed clearing houses were to have no connection whatever with the existing State institutions for the mentally defective or State hospitals for the insane or with the numerous out-patient departments already established by State hospitals for the insane. A much more effective plan of procedure, in our judgment, would be to establish a series of out-patient departments by the State institutions for the mentally defective and to authorize all the State institutions for the mentally defective to receive suspected cases of mental deficiency for the purpose of observation and diagnosis, as the Rome State Custodial Asylum is now authorized.

The Mohanic Compromise

2. A bill introduced by Senator Brown, creating a commission to deal with the removal of the Mohanic State Hospital and the New York Training School for Boys from the Croton watershed. As often happens, a compromise measure failed to satisfy any of the parties of the controversy about the institutions on the watershed. There is the highest scientific authority for the view that nothing needs to be done except to provide for these institutions a modern system of sewage treatment. There is ample ground for believing that it is far less objectionable to have institutions whose sewage disposal is under direct State control on the watershed, rather than having individual owners, most of whom will have no system of sewage disposal. It seems utterly impossible, however, to get the facts set forth in the daily press or seriously considered by editorial writers.

Dutchess County Child Welfare Bill

2. A bill for a Board of Child Welfare in Dutchess County possessing practically all the powers and duties in relation to destitute, neglected, defective and delinquent children, which are now distributed among a large number of local officials, overseers of the poor, justices of the peace and others. This bill passed the Senate but was held in the Rules Committee of the Assembly.

Children's Courts

3. A proposed constitutional amendment authorizing the establishment of Children's Courts separate from all other courts and enabling the Legislature to confer equity jurisdiction upon them. This proposed amendment was identical with that adopted by the Constitutional Convention. It passed the Senate but remained in committee in the Assembly.

Health Insurance

4. A bill establishing a commission to investigate health insurance. This bill passed the Senate but was not voted upon in the Assembly. The subject of health insurance is one of the most important in the whole field of social work. It deserves the most careful study and pains-taking analysis of the results of such measures elsewhere. It is highly desirable that the State itself take the lead in making such a study.
THE STRONG INVESTIGATION AND CERTAIN OTHER MATTERS

In the following article on Commissioner Strong's investigation of the management of State charitable institutions and the inspection of child-caring institutions, Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, outlines the course of the inquiry from the beginning and clarifies the atmosphere of controversy which has arisen about it:

BY HOMER FOLKS

During the last few months a vast amount of controversial material has appeared in the press in regard to an investigation being made by Hon. Charles H. Strong, appointed for that purpose by Governor Whitman, as to the management of State charitable institutions and as to the inspection of child-caring institutions. The taking of testimony by the Commissioner has been completed, and the matters referred to him, together with the mass of testimony taken and the mass of exhibits filed with him, are now under consideration. It manifestly would be improper, at this time, to express any opinion as to the merits of the matters as to which the Commissioner is to express a quasi-judicial opinion. It is due, however, to the members of the State Charities Aid Association, and to the readers of The S. C. A. A. News, that they should have a clear statement of the origin, purpose and procedure of this investigation, and of the nature of the subjects which are under consideration in so far as the writer has knowledge thereof. The following article deals with these facts, most of which are of record and can readily be verified by any interested person.

Origin

On November 18, 1915, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 23 of the Laws of 1914, known as the Moreland Act, Governor Whitman appointed Charles H. Strong as a commissioner for the following purpose:

"To examine and investigate the management and affairs of the office of the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities; the State Board of Charities; the Sites, Buildings and Grounds Commission; the Building Improvement Commission and the Salary Classification Commission, the said Commissioner to report to me with recommendations as may seem fitting with regard to what changes, if any, are advisable in the laws of the State, relating to or affecting the several departments of the State under investigation."

The Governor's Instructions

In a letter accompanying the commission the Governor states that "it has become increasingly evident to me that the management of the State charitable institutions is unnecessarily and unfortunately complicated and that responsibility is divided between too many offices and departments, resulting in confusion and delay."

The Governor at the same time transmitted to the Commissioner a communication received by him several days after he had decided to investigate the management of the State institutions, from the Acting Mayor of the City of New York, enclosing the report of the Commissioner of Public Charities of New York City for the year 1914. The Acting Mayor called attention to the assertion of the Commissioner of Public Charities that various child-caring institutions which had been approved by the State Board of Charities had been found by the representatives of the city department to be actually in an unfit condition and suggested a special inquiry into the methods of the State Board of Charities in this matter. The City and State had exchanged inspection reports but no cooperation in harmonizing inspection methods had resulted. The Governor requested Mr. Strong, as a part of the inquiry which he was to make, to look into the matters brought up by the Acting Mayor.

The investigation has, therefore, two definite purposes, viz:

1. To inquire into the work of the various authorities having to do with the State charitable institutions.

2. To inquire into the inspections of child-caring institutions in the City of New York.

The suggestion that a commissioner be appointed to investigate the management of the State charitable institutions originated with the Governor himself and grew out of his own experience. In informal conversation with the writer several names were proposed without previous consideration. After considering them the Governor selected Mr. Strong, whom he had long personally known. The Governor has since stated that prior to this conversation with the writer he had been considering the appointment of a commissioner and the selection of Mr. Strong, and that the commissioner would have been determined upon and that Mr. Strong would have been selected, irrespective of the suggestions made in the course of the conversation with the writer. The Governor has repeatedly stated publicly his complete confidence that Commissioner Strong has conducted his inquiry with fairness and impartiality.

The suggestion that the discrepancies between the city and State reports on child-caring institutions be inquired into was made directly by the Acting Mayor to the Governor several days after the appointment of a commissioner to investigate the State Charitable institutions (Continued on page 4)
New Organization Is Formed
To Deal with Feeblemindedness

During the past few months there has been a strong revival of interest in procuring more accommodations for the feebleminded, a project which was the aim of an active public campaign two years ago.

It was in May, 1914, that the Feebleminded Number of the S. C. A. A. News made its appearance, and at that time members of the Association all over the State were working with the Legislature for larger appropriations for new buildings.

There is a strong feeling in New York City that the best place to spend the money for the feebleminded during the next few years is at Letchworth Village, in Rockland County. This institution was planned to care for the feebleminded from the southeastern part of the State who still have to be sent in such large numbers and at such great expense to institutions at Rome, Syracuse and Newark. After some ten years of arduous effort to get this institution going, it has as yet been able to care for only 330 inmates of the 3,000 for which it was planned. It seems a shortsighted and wasteful policy for the State to acquire this large acreage, employ an extremely competent superintendent, and then operate the place for such a very small number of beneficiaries.

During the past winter New York City has awakened to the fact that it was not getting its share of State appropriations. The discrepancy between what New York City pays for and what it gets is nowhere more obvious than in connection with provision for the feebleminded. In five State institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic there are about 2,000 patients from New York City in a total of about 6,000 patients.

Field Workers Form a Committee

A few months ago some forty active workers among the feebleminded in the courts and schools as teachers, probation officers, etc., formed themselves into a committee of field workers at a meeting held at Columbia University.

Subsequently, on March 8, the Women’s City Club of New York organized a Committee on the Feebleminded as a sub-committee of its Committee on Social Welfare. Numerous meetings were held by these committees, or organized by them, including a public meeting at the Church of the Messiah on April 16, and a public meeting at the Women’s City Club on May 24. A party of the social workers spent a Sunday at Letchworth Village, and saw what was being done there, and discussed on the spot their problems and what they could do.

In the meantime, the heads of the large national and State organizations chiefly interested in this subject were getting together and making plans for perfecting a plan of joint action in behalf of the feebleminded. As a result of these conferences, an executive committee was organized under the chairmanship of Mr. R. Bayard Cutting, of the National Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded, with the following members: Dr. Thomas L. Salmon, of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene; Mr. Homer Folks, of the State Charities Aid Association; Prof. Stephen P. Duggan, of the City College; Mr. Franklyn E. Kirmberly, of the Letchworth Village Board of Managers; Miss Eleanor Johnson, of the Public Education Association, and Miss Maude E. Miner, of the New York City Probation Association. This executive committee is organizing a committee of representative citizens of both the city and State. They are raising money to finance a campaign of information on this important subject, and hope to keep working for large increases in the State provision for the feebleminded until a large proportion of the 20,000 or more cases needing segregation for their own welfare and for the protection of society are given comfortable humane care in institutions or colonies where they can live happy and useful lives.

SUPERINTENDENTS FOR TWO NEW HOSPITALS

Dr. Edwin P. Kolbe has been appointed superintendent of the new Suffolk County Tuberculosis Hospital by the Board of Managers of that institution. He stood at the head of the civil service list established as a result of a competitive examination open to physicians in New York State. Dr. Kolbe has had extended experience in tuberculosis hospital administration, having been on the medical staff of the Iola Sanatorium, Monroe County’s tuberculosis hospital, and on the staff of the State Hospital for Incipient Tuberculosis at Ray Brook. Construction of the Suffolk County institution has been completed, the equipment has been purchased and the hospital will soon be ready for the admission of patients. Provision has been made for thirty beds. The hospital, which has cost approximately $50,000, was authorized by a Act of Legislature in November, 1914. Dr. Edward Torrey, of Olean, has been appointed medical superintendent by the Board of Managers of the Cattaragus County Tuberculosis Hospital. This institution has recently been completed at a cost of $30,000 and has provision for thirty beds. Dr. Torrey has appointed Mrs. Gertrude Talbot matron of the institution. Mrs. Talbot is a graduate of the Woman’s and Children’s Hospital of Syracuse and served for several years as matron and head nurse of the Sunnycrest Sanatorium, Auburn’s municipal tuberculosis hospital.

FULL PROGRAM FOR THE MENTAL HYGIENE COMMITTEE

The Association’s Mental Hygiene Committee held its final regular meeting of the season on June 1. The following lines of work were decided upon for the coming few months:

1. Efforts to extend and improve the outpatient department work of the State hospitals.
2. Effort at the next legislative session to secure a department of after-care and prevention in the State Hospital Commission.
3. Efforts to obtain better treatment of alcoholism and asylums in hospitals and dispensaries throughout the State.
4. Undertaking work with psychopathic children in schools, beginning with the high school of New York City.
5. Vigorous efforts to help secure from the State adequate funds for buildings to relieve the overcrowding in the State hospitals.
6. Effort to stimulate further interest in industrial occupations for patients in all the State hospitals.
7. Continuing emphasis on publicity, exhibits, lectures and distribution of literature on the prevention and early treatment of mental disorders.

THREE COUNTIES IMPROVE TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

The new addition to the Oswego County Sanitarium in Orwell, near Richland Junction, has recently been completed and the equipment is now installed. The addition will increase the capacity of the hospital from 22 to 48 beds. It is planned to open the new building with formal exercises early in July.

Extensive improvements to Oakmount Sanatorium, Ontario County’s tuberculosis hospital, have been authorized by the Board of Supervisors. These include a big increase in the porch space, the enlargement of the kitchen and dining room and the construction of a separate laundry building and cooler.

Contracts have been let for the construction of a new machinery building at the Montgomery County Tuberculosis Hospital. The new building will contain the boiler, pumps, etc., which are now located in the basement of the main hospital building.
This Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe Knew Exactly What to Do

Yates County Agent for Dependent Children Pictured in Modern Mother Goose Guise at Upstate Exhibit—New Rhyme for the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe

An exhibit on the Association’s work with dependent children in Yates County, designed by Miss Bertha Gooding, has attracted much favorable attention.

Among the charts was the cartoon shown above, depicting a tired and anxious county agent looking at a shoeful of children. But, unlike her picture-book prototype, she knew just what to do, as shown by the following revised version of Mother Goose, written by Miss Mollie W. Anderson:

The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe
(Revised Version)

It’s the agent for children who lives in this shoe;
But unlike the old woman, she knows what to do.
To some she gives homes, and to some she gives mothers.
While custodial care is needful for others.
Delinquent, dependent, defective, forlorn,
With a right to his chance every baby is born.
Now the County of Yates has provided the shoe,
And the service it renders depends upon you.

BROOME COUNTY TO HAVE A NEW TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

A site for a new and larger county tuberculosis hospital, to take the place of the present inadequate and unsuitably located institution in Broome County, has been selected near Chenango Bridge by the Board of Supervisors. This encouraging progress comes as a result of a campaign of education carried on by a representative committee of citizens headed by an ex-Mayor of Binghamton and former President of the State Conference of Mayors, Hon. John J. Irving. The campaign culminated in a hearing on May 17 before the Board of Supervisors, lasting three and a half hours, in which leading citizens from all parts of the county were unanimous in urging the Board to abandon the present property and build a new and larger hospital upon a more suitable location. The site selected has been informally approved by the State Department of Health.

TWELVE STATE HOSPITALS EMPLOY FIELD AGENTS

Twelve of the thirteen State hospitals now have social workers, or field agents, as members of their regular staff, to assist physicians at the clinics, to render needed personal service to clinic patients, visit homes of patients about to be paroled from the State hospitals and do other visitation work in the various counties of the hospital districts.

Following is a list of the field agents and the counties in their districts:

Utica State Hospital—Clara B. Johnson, working in the counties of Fulton, Hamilton, Herkimer, Montgomery, Oneida, Onondaga, Saratoga, Schenectady and Warren.

Buffalo State Hospital—Mrs. Anna Loughlin, in Erie and Niagara.

Binghamton State Hospital—Hilda P. Brodhead, in Broome, Chemung, Chenango, Cortland, Delaware, Madison, Otsego, Schoharie and Tioga.

St. Lawrence State Hospital—Zadee B. Maxiner, in Clinton, Essex, Franklin, Jefferson, Lewis, Onondaga, Oswego and St. Lawrence.

Rochester State Hospital—Anna L. McPherson, in Genesee, Monroe, Livingston and Orleans.

Gowanda State Hospital—Florence A. Armstrong, in Chautauqua, Cattaraugus and Erie.

Kings Park State Hospital—Helen E. Martin, in Nassau, Suffolk, and the Borough of Kings.

Brooklyn State Hospital—Augusta Hirsch, working in Kings County.

Central Islip State Hospital—Mary E. Dunn, in Nassau and Suffolk counties and the Borough of Queens.

Manhattan State Hospital—Mary E. Dunn (temporary), Manhattan, Richmond and Bronx boroughs.

Middletown State Hospital—Mildred H. Hurley, in Orange, Rockland, Sullivan and Ulster counties.

SITES FOR NEW HOSPITALS

The Niagara County Board of Supervisors has selected a site about a mile and a half from the city limits of Lockport for the new county tuberculosis hospital for which $100,000 was made available through a referendum vote of the electors in November, 1915. The site seems well suited for the purpose and is favored by the County Tuberculosis Committee. Supervisors’ committees in Herkimer, Rockland and Nassau Counties are looking for sites for their county tuberculosis hospitals, and in each county several suitable properties are under consideration.
The State Charities Aid Association is supported by voluntary contributions. Its present annual expenditure amounts to about $140,000. Contributions are solicited from persons interested in the objects of the Association. In order to give the Association an assured income, an Endowment Fund, now amounting to $140,000, has been started. Contributions to this Fund are also solicited. Checks should be made payable to the order of EDWARD W. SHELDON, Treasurer, 106 East 22nd St.

All persons contributing annually $100.00 or over are donors.
All persons contributing annually $50.00 to $100.00 are associate members.
All persons contributing annually $15.00 to $50.00 are sustaining members.
All persons contributing annually $2.00 to $10.00 are subscribing members.

FORM OF BEQUEST
I give and bequeath to the State Charities Aid Association, incorporated in the year 1880 under the Laws of the State of New York, the sum of __________________________ dollars to be used for the purpose of said Association.

had been decided upon and after Mr. Strong had been selected therefor.

The Commissioner
Hon. Charles H. Strong was graduated from Harvard Law School in 1890. He has been actively identified with civic and social work in New York City for many years. He was appointed a member of the Board of Managers of the New York State Training School for Girls at Hudson by Governor Odell in 1902, reappointed by Governors Higgins and Hughes and served as a member of that board for ten or twelve years, during the greater portion of which he was president of the board. He served as a member of the Board of Trustees of the City Club of New York for many years and was president from 1909 to 1914. He was appointed by Governor Hughes a member of the New York City Charter Revision Commission. He was appointed by Senator Phelan of California in 1914 as counsel to investigate certain charges in relation to the representative of the American Government in Santo Domingo. He is a member of the Bar Associations of the City and State of New York and was recently a member of the Executive Committee of the City Bar Association. It would seem, therefore, and it is, we believe, the judgment of all those who are acquainted with Commissioner Strong that he is exceptionally qualified by training, experience and temperament, for the making of such an inquiry, and that his impartiality, fairmindedness and freedom from prejudice are exceptional.

Mr. Strong appointed as his assistant Mr. John Kirkland Clark, who had made an admirable record as Assistant District Attorney of New York County and as counsel in 1914 for the Sullivan Assembly Committee to investigate highway contracts.

Procedure
On Thursday, December 9, 1915, Commissioner Strong began the first part of his investigation with a public hearing at Albany. At this hearing John M. Bowers, Esq., appeared as counsel for the State Board of Charities. None of the other State authorities referred to in the commission of Commissioner Strong engaged counsel. Mr. Bowers said at the opening session: "The State Board of Charities is fully in accord with the investigation directed by the Governor of the State, to be made by you. They deem it of great value to the people of the State and offer their assistance to the fullest extent for such an investigation."

Commissioner Strong inquired first into the work of what is known as the Buildings Improvement Commission (established in 1902 to pass upon plans and specifications for new buildings for State charitable institutions). He examined members of that Commission at length and examined the minutes of the Commission from its establishment.

Commissioner Strong next inquired into the work of the Salary Classification Commission, established under the laws of 1899 to classify into grades and to fix the salaries and wages paid to officers and employees of State charitable institutions. He examined the minutes of this Commission from its establishment and interrogated the Secretary of the Commission and others in regard to its work, at length. He also familiarized himself with the work of the Board of Examiners of Feebleminded, Criminals and Other Defectives, and also with that of the State Board of Classification which deals with the prices of prison-made goods.

Commissioner Strong next inquired at length into the work of the Commission on Sites, Grounds and Buildings, created in 1913 to pass on the precise location of all buildings for State charitable institutions, and also to acquire such additional sites, or additions to existing sites, as might be needed from time to time.

The work of the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities was also gone into at length by examination of the Fiscal Supervisor himself and of the second deputy.

The work of the State Board of Charities was inquired into at length by examination of each member of the Board and of the leading members of its executive staff.

Inquiry is Thorough
It is safe to say that no such thorough inquiry into the historical development and present actual work of each of the State bodies exercising powers in relation to State charitable institutions, has ever been made. Unless the data brought to light in this inquiry are sufficient to afford the basis for a comprehensive revision and simplification of the management of the State charitable institutions, it is difficult to see how it ever can be accomplished.

That such a simplification is urgently needed has been recognized by substantially all persons interested, for several years.

This portion of the inquiry, although dealing somewhat with matters which might become controversial, did not attract any unusual attention. If it should result, however, in the simplification of the management of the State charitable institutions it will have accomplished a most important step in enabling the numerous institutions more completely and efficiently to perform the duties and functions for which they were established.

On January 31, Commissioner Strong completed, for the time, his examination of witnesses in relation to the State charitable institutions, and began the second portion of his inquiry.

Child-Caring Institutions
To understand the origin and scope of this portion of the inquiry it is necessary to recall a few facts. The Department of Public Charities of the City of New York is the agency through which destitute children are committed as city charges to child-caring institutions. It has a considerable staff of investigators who inquire into the circumstances of the parents of the children proposed for commitment, and who annually thereafter inquire into the circumstances of the parents of children remaining public charges. There is no statute, however, expressly imposing upon the Charities Department the duty of inspecting child-caring institutions; it has no staff provided for this purpose; as a matter of fact, has never performed this duty (except casual and occasional official visits), having accepted the reports and certificates of the State Board of Charities as adequate information in regard to the internal affairs and management of the child-caring institutions.

In 1914, however, the Department of Public Charities desiring to inform itself more thoroughly, and at first hand, concerning the actual care received by children supported by the city in child-caring institutions, appointed a special committee to inspect these institutions in behalf of the department. In order that these inspections might be thoroughly authoritative, it selected for this purpose three of the best known experts in child-caring work in the United States—Dr. R. R. Reeder, Superintendent of the New York Orphan Asylum; Dr. Ludwig V. Bernstein, of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, and Rev. Brother Barnabas, in charge of the country branch of the New York Catholic Protecory in Westchester County. After the committee had made a few inspections, Brother Barnabas retired from it and his place was taken by H. M. B. Hargreaves, Secretary, Second Deputy Commissioner of Public Charities and formerly Secretary of the Catholic Home Bureau for Dependent Children.

Discrepancies in Reports

This special committee made to the Commissioner of Charities a detailed report on each of the child-caring institutions visited by them, describing its physical plant, its operation, its educational methods and many different phases of its work, in detail. A large part of the work of a number of the institutions was highly commended, but as to certain institutions there were criticisms of a wide variety of matters. The discrepancies between the reports of this special investigating staff and the reports formerly made by the State Board of Charities, led to the communication from the Acting Mayor to the Governor.

The City Department also secured counsel in the person of William H. Hotchkiss. The proceedings before Commissioner Strong in this part of the inquiry inevitably took on a considerably different character, by reason of the appearance of counsel for the city and counsel for the State. Instead of the examination being made almost wholly by the Commissioner or his assistant, examinations were largely made by counsel.

Nature of Criticism

The City Department placed in evidence the reports of its inspectors in regard to child-caring institutions, some phases of whose work were called in question. There were twenty-six institutions on this list, of which fourteen were Protestant or non-sectarian and twelve were Catholic institutions.

The matters criticised included in some instances the physical care of the children and the condition of the buildings, but more frequently the absence of proper facilities for recreation, for education, and for training for life outside the institutions. Some of the alleged conditions were serious.

Evidence was offered in behalf of the State Board of Charities, which called as witnesses the Sisters in charge and other representatives of the institutions. In some cases the existence of conditions complained of, for which it was claimed the State Board had not reported, was denied; in others it was claimed that the same conditions, admittedly undesirable, had been reported by the State Board of Charities in its reports, and that it had taken all the steps that were incumbent upon it to secure their correction.

What the actual facts were as to the conditions in the various institutions which were criticised, as well as the soundness of the inspection reports by the State Board of Charities and by the City Department of Charities, and to the efficacy of the steps taken by these bodies respectively to secure the correction of conditions needing correction—these were among the important matters which the Commissioner has under consideration in the second portion of his inquiry. Pending his conclusions thereon it manifestly would be improper for us to express any opinion.

SOME OTHER THINGS

During the course of the inquiry a number of events have occurred not forming a part of the inquiry itself, but growing out of it in one way or another, which have tended to obscure the inquiry and impede the progress of the inquiry itself. Some of these things are here recounted:

While the inquiry as to the inspection and conditions of child-caring institutions in New York City was under way there appeared an open letter to the Governor, signed by Rev. William B. Farrell, calling upon him to discontinue the inquiry, and charging that the inquiry was biased, prejudiced, unfair, directed particularly against the Catholic institutions and animated by a bias against such institutions. This letter was published on February 16 more or less widely throughout the State and efforts were made to enlist the interest of citizens in various parts of the State to secure the revocation by the Governor of the appointment of Commissioner Strong.

State Charities Aid Resolutions

Believing that the inquiry was serving a useful purpose; that it was being honestly and fairly made; that the management of the State institutions greatly needed simplification; that inspections should be expert and thorough and duplicate inspections unnecessary; and that it should be made certain that all children in child-caring institutions receive adequate care, the State Charities Aid Association, through its Board of Managers, on February 21, adopted preambles and resolutions urging that the inquiry be made comprehensive and complete as follows:

Whereas, Governor Charles S. Whitman, under the provisions of the Moreland Act, has appointed Charles H. Strong, a commissioner to "make a careful and thorough inquiry into all features of the administration of the Board of State Charities, the State Board of Charities, the Sites, Buildings and Grounds Commission, the Children's Improvement Commission and the Salary Classification Commission," and also, at the suggestion of the Acting Mayor of New York City, Hon. George McAney, confirmed the Mayor's request to the State Board of Charities and by the City Department of Public Charities, and

Whereas, The purpose of this investigation as stated by the Governor is to recommend "what changes, if any, should be made in the laws relating to the work of these several authorities;" and

Whereas, It has been the policy of the State Charities Aid Association during the forty-three years of its existence to support any effort to improve the condition of dependent children and other wards of the public, therefore

Be It Resolved, That the Board of Managers of the Association hereby expresses its hearty approval of the action of the Governor in instituting the present investigation, pursuant to the provisions of the Moreland Act, and

Be It Further Resolved, That we consider it highly desirable and greatly for the public interests that an impartial, thorough and complete investigation be made to the end that it may be determined upon the basis of full knowledge what changes may be necessary in legislation and administration.

First, in order to provide a simple, efficient and constructive management of the State Institutions, and Second, in order to secure an adequate supervision and control of the private charitable institutions caring for dependent children who are public charges.

Pamphlets

A short time after the publication of the letter of Rev. W. B. Farrell, certain pamphlets were issued, four of which were published under the name of the Rev. William B. Farrell of Brooklyn, entitled "How the Strong Investigation Has Discredited Itself," "A Public Scandal," "Charity for Revenue," and "Priest-Baiting in 1916." Some of these pamphlets were printed to the number of several hundreds of thousands and were distributed at the doors of Catholic churches in Greater New York and in some other parts of the State.

The general drift of these pamphlets is indicated by their titles. Taken together, they represented a concerted effort to discredit the investigation being made by Commissioner Strong, as to its origin, purpose and procedure. A large part of the pamphlets consisted merely of innuendo and vague suggestions. In so far as statements of alleged facts were made they were largely without basis.
On the 2nd or 3rd of March, a pamphlet was issued to some 6,000 persons, entitled "Newspaper Comment on Governor Whitman's Charities Investigation Conducted by Charles H. Strong, Commissioner Appointed under the Moreland Act." This pamphlet consisted entirely, aside from its title, of a reproduction of articles which appeared in the daily press in the course of the investigation, date and name of paper being given in each case. There was also a number of fac-simile headlines of articles which were not quoted in full, and also a verbatim extract from Mayor Mitchel's testimony. Mr. E. A. Moree, at that time Publication Director of this Association, testified that he, of his own volition and in his own behalf collected this material, and that it was printed and distributed by means of a contribution made by an individual which came to him through the Commissioner of Public Charities. Mr. Moree, shortly before this pamphlet was distributed, but while it was being printed, suggested to a committee of the State Charities Aid Association, that the material be issued in whole or in part in a forthcoming number of the S. C. A. A. News. The Committee decided that this should not be done. Although as a matter of fact, as testified to by Mr. Moree, and as declared later in a resolution adopted by the Board of Managers, the pamphlet was prepared by him without any cooperation or suggestion from any officer or member of this Association, it was nevertheless subsequently freely and widely charged that the State Charities Aid Association or its Acting President had been responsible for the publication and distribution of this pamphlet.

The statements made in the newspaper articles were not compared with the original record of the testimony. As was inevitable, the newspapers selected the more sensational features of the testimony for publication, and in some instances the text and in others the head lines were not wholly correct statements of the actual testimony. This was notably true of an alleged statement in regard to children and pigs having been fed from the same utensil. Such inaccuracies naturally aroused a keen sense of injustice on the part of the institutions.

Telephone Conversations

Shortly before the close of the hearings counsel for the City Department stated that at his suggestion the police authorities had listened in on the telephone wires of three witnesses, Dr. D. C. Potter, Mr. Dean Potter and Rev. William B. Farrell, and offered in evidence the transcript of such conversations. Commissioner Strong stated on the record that this had been done without his knowledge, and that he would examine the transcript of the conversations and consider their admission to the record. Subsequently he declined to admit these conversations as part of the record, stating that they purported to contain matters of serious import apparently involving efforts to secure the revocation of the designation of the Commissioner, to avoid the Commissioner's subpoena, to cause a witness or witnesses to absent themselves from the state and to instruct witnesses as to what they should say upon the stand.

The law forbids "wrongfully obtaining" any knowledge of a telephonic message, or "unlawfully and wilfully" making connection with any telephone line, but does not forbid listening in upon telephone wires when it is done in the belief that a crime or crimes have been, or are about to be, committed. Whether or not these laws have been violated is the question at issue in the trial of the indictments found on May 23d by the Kings County grand jury against Commissioner John A. Kingsbury and Counsel William H. Hotchkiss.

On May 24th and 25th before the Thompson Legislative Committee Mayor Mitchel appeared and made a full statement of the facts leading up to the supervision of the three telephone wires above mentioned. He recited the various investigations which his administration of the Charities Department had undergone: first, at the hands of the State Civil Service Commission; second, at the hands of the August, 1914, New York County Grand Jury; and third, at the hands of the State Board of Charities so far as the Randall's Island institutions are concerned. He stated that the attacks on the Strong investigation were another phase of the same effort to embarrass his administration. He said that the supervision of the telephone wires resulted from a conviction on the part of the city authorities that crimes were being committed in this connection and mentioned specifically the following crimes: perjury, criminal libel, conspiracy to utter a criminal libel, and conspiracy to obstruct the administration of the law. The Mayor introduced his reading of the telephone conversations by a statement beginning as follows: "For two years and a half, as the representative of all the people of this city, I have been endeavoring to secure humane treatment and proper care for the 22,000 homeless and dependent children committed as unhappy wards to private charitable institutions. I have been endeavoring to secure proper administration of the $5,000,000 of public funds annually disbursed to these institutions for the care of the city's wards. That is the cause I am fighting for and I shall continue to fight for it, no matter what damage it may bring to me, for it is a matter of public duty and personal conscience."

He then read to the Committee a full transcript of such portions of the telephone conversations recorded by the police as in his judgment, together with the attendant circumstances, indicated the commission of the crimes above mentioned.

Recently the Mayor transmitted a full transcript of these telephone conversations, together with other pertinent material, to the District Attorney of New York County.

SOME THINGS THAT ARE NOT SO

During the course of the investigation and subsequently, an unprecedented number of incorrect and misleading statements have been persistently circulated. Some of these have been accepted by well-meaning but uninformed people. To prevent further misunderstandings it may be here categorically put down that the following statements made from time to time, are wholly untrue and have no basis whatever in fact:

1. That the appointment by the Governor of Commissioner Strong is the result of a conspiracy to destroy private charitable institutions.
2. That the State Charities Aid Association favors the secularization of all child-caring institutions.
3. That paid social workers are opposed to unpaid public service and wish to abolish unpaid positions in public service.
4. That there is some "quarrel" between individuals or officials of which this investigation is a phase, or an outcome.
5. That the investigation was started for the purpose of abolishing institutions and placing all children in families.
6. That the investigation had or has a political origin or purpose.
7. That Commissioner Kingsbury had something to do with the selection of Commissioner Strong.
8. That there is in existence such a thing as a "charity trust."
9. That the investigation is directed against a particular church, or is animated by hostility toward a particular church, or toward churches in general, or toward religion in general.

Much misconception exists because of a failure, sometimes wilful, sometimes careless, to distinguish between Commissioner Strong's investigation and Commissioner Kingsbury's inspection reports. The former is quasi-judicial in character dealing with all available facts relating to the subject in hand; the latter necessarily endeavored to present and establish the validity of its own inspection reports.

Enthusiasm Marks Meeting of Tuberculosis Workers

Sixteen Hospitals Represented at Spring Meeting of Association of Managers and Superintendents

Thoughtful, timely addresses and exceedingly interesting and animated discussions marked the second Spring meeting of the Association of Managers and Superintendents of Tuberculosis Hospitals, held at Glenridge Sanatorium, Schenectady County's tuberculosis hospital, on Friday, June 9. It was the most interesting and substantial of a series of four semi-annual meetings thus far held by the association. The delegates were delightfully entertained by the board of managers and superintendent of the Schenectady County institution.

The program for the morning session included an address by Dr. W. L. Rathbun, Medical Superintendent of the New York City Tuberculosis Sanitarium, at Otisville, on "The Management of the Dietary," and a symposium on "The Most Pressing Problem of My Hospital." This consisted of a series of informal five-minute talks by representatives of each local tuberculosis hospital, also participated in by Dr. Linly R. Williams, Deputy State Commissioner of Health, and George J. Nelbach, Executive Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association's Committee on Tuberculosis. This symposium probably contained more practical information and experience than could be gleaned from a number of text-books.

The following sixteen hospitals sent delegates:

Iola Sanatorium, Monroe County
Oneida County Hospital for the Care of the Sick
Lakeview Sanatorium, Rensselaer County
Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital
Glenridge Sanatorium, Schenectady
County
Oswego County Sanitarium
Finger Lakes Sanitarium, Seneca County
Montgomery Sanitarium, Montgomery

Oakmount Sanitarium, Ontario County
Summit View Sanitarium, Fulton County
Meaney Memorial Sanitarium, Tompkins
County
Onondaga County Tuberculosis Hospital
Cattaraugus County Tuberculosis Hospital
Suffolk County Tuberculosis Hospital
Albany Federation of Labor Tuberculosis P avocado
Bowen Memorial Hospital, Poughkeepsie

At the afternoon session Dr. Harry J. Brayton, Superintendent of the Onondaga County Hospital, talked about "The Discharging of Patients," and Mr. Charles W. Merriam, Chairman of the Schenectady County Board of Supervisors, addressed the conference on "Cooperation Between the Board of Supervisors and the County Hospital." These two addresses evoked a spirited discussion of policies of management and administration.

An interesting point about the meeting was that of the sixteen institutions represented, fourteen were county institutions established under the county tuberculosis hospital law. Only two hospitals established under this law were not represented.

At the business session of the Association a constitution and by-laws were adopted, a standing committee on hospital standardization was appointed, and it was decided to continue the holding of semi-annual meetings. The following officers were elected:

President—Dr. W. L. Pearson, of the Board of Managers of the Schenectady County institution.
Vice-President—Dr. A. Clifford Mercer, President of the Board of Managers of the Onondaga County Tuberculosis Hospital.
Secretary—Dr. Montgomery E. Leary, Superintendent of the Iola Sanatorium of Monroe County.
Treasurer—Dr. H. St. John Williams, Superintendent of the Bowen Memorial Hospital of Poughkeepsie.

63 Patients at 3 Mental Clinics

The opening session of the new mental clinic recently established at Salamanca by the Gowanda State Hospital was attended by 37 persons. Of these, 15 wished consultation concerning their own condition. Others came for advice about friends or relatives, or to inquire about patients in the State hospital.

Regular sessions of the St. Lawrence State Hospital clinic at the two general hospitals in Watertown, on June 5 and 6, were attended by 26 persons, of whom 11 applied for advice about themselves; 7 were patients on parole from the hospital and 2 discharged patients; 3 sought advice about relatives, and 3 made inquiries about patients in the hospital.

So far as the State Charities Aid Association is concerned, it has never concealed the fact that, as a matter of high principle, if the history of the State from the beginning were to be rewritten and if the slate could be wiped clean, it would be of the opinion that public funds should be expended only through public agencies and that private charities should depend upon voluntary contributions. It has always recognized, however, that a situation has developed in this State which could be changed only with very great difficulty, and it has never set out to secure a reversal of the policy of the State in this respect. Had it desired to secure a discontinuance of public appropriations to private charities, it would have presented this recommendation to the constitutional convention, for it would require a constitutional amendment. As a matter of fact, the Association considered the whole matter of public and private child-care agencies with great care previous to the meeting of the constitutional convention last summer and decided to recommend no change in relation thereto.

So far from desiring to abolish all institutions, it has long been recognized that for certain classes of children institutions will always be necessary, that for other classes of children there is little choice between institutions and families, and that for still others family care is far more desirable. Speaking generally, family life is all important for infants, and its importance diminishes as the child grows older.

So far from desiring to "take religion out of the hearts of the children," it is the settled policy of the State Charities Aid Association, which has placed over 2,300 children in family homes, to select homes of the same religious faith as the parents of the children, and in the case of Catholic children to require in each case the approval of the home by a priest acquainted with the family. Furthermore, each family agrees to receive attendance by the child at church and Sunday School.

Notwithstanding all the efforts to obscure the situation above enumerated, and many others of which time and space forbid mention, it is our conviction that this investigation will prove to be a sincere and serious contribution to the constructive development of the charitable work of the State, and of the child-caring institutions in and about New York City, and that these wholly extraneous disturbances will not succeed in distracting attention from the merits of the subjects under inquiry, or diminishing public confidence in the fairness of the report of the Commissioner when it shall appear.
“LIGHT READING” FOR THE SUMMER

BY HOMER FOLKS

About this season we are apt to receive voluminous lists of books recommended as “light reading” for the summer. We wish to suggest to readers of the S. C. A. A. News three books which I have found exceptionally helpful during the past year. They throw light on many dark places, but are not “light” reading. To every one interested in social betterment, they will bring encouragement, information, and inspiration.

Autobiography of Dr. Trudeau

The first volume is the Autobiography of the late Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau. Many reviews of this book have contained tributes of great respect and feeling, but none of them has quite expressed the unique and absolutely unlimited optimism of the book. Readers of THE NEWS are familiar with the results of Dr. Trudeau’s work; but they may not know that through his adult life he labored under the handicap of an illness which threatened to cut short his work in a very brief period, nor of his personal afflictions, in the loss of two of his three children, a daughter at the age of sixteen and a son just entering upon a professional career of great promise. That under these circumstances he not only could accomplish a Herculean task, but could retain to the end a spirit of unbounded enthusiasm and impart it to all with whom he came in contact, is one of the most encouraging facts of human experience which has come to my knowledge. The book is so entertaining and humanly written that it holds one from beginning to end with a fascination exercised by no piece of fiction.

“The Abolition of Poverty”

Second in the list is “The Abolition of Poverty,” by Jacob H. Hollander, Professor of Political Economy at Johns Hopkins University.

Unlike Dr. Trudeau’s book, this is not easy reading. For sheer force of logic, inexorably compressed into the briefest possible space; with every unnecessary word omitted and with never a turning aside by so much as a hair’s breadth from the line of thought, this tiny volume is unexcelled. The poverty it deals with is not the abject pauperism which reaches public institutions, but is that insufficiency of income as compared with need, which is a prolific source of pauperism. Perhaps no reader of THE NEWS would accept all of Dr. Hollander’s constructive suggestions. Nor can one read the volume, however, without feeling that it is easily possible at the present stage of human development and by means at hand, whose efficiency has been demonstrated, greatly to reduce the volume of poverty in America. Those who read the book once will be quite certain to read it again, and to turn to it afterward from time to time.

Dr. Rubinow on “Social Insurance”

Third on the list is “Social Insurance,” by I. M. Rubinow. Dr. Rubinow, although Secretary of the Committee on Social Insurance of the American Medical Association, is not a medical doctor but a doctor of philosophy. Social insurance in its various phases has been his special subject of study, and he has brought together in this volume a very illuminating account of the development of social insurance in each of the countries in which it has been tried in one form or another. Dr. Rubinow is a pronounced advocate of social insurance, but it is possible to accept his book for facts without necessarily accepting his conclusions and recommendations. Social insurance, more especially health insurance, is a subject of importance demanding early and serious attention. It is frequently thought of as being financially prohibitive. Speaking, however, of the sums paid by the working people of this country on the ten cents per week basis for what in practice amounts only to funeral insurance, Dr. Rubinow says: “Thus the American working class pays for funeral insurance as much as is contributed in Germany by all three parties concerned, the wage-workers, the employers, and the State, for (1) accident insurance, (2) sickness insurance, (3) funeral insurance, (4) maternity insurance, (5) invalidity insurance and (6) old age insurance combined.” (P. 428.)

Professor Commons on Industrial Relations

One other suggestion to those who are looking for enlightenment reading during the summer: The three articles in The Survey of January 1, 1916, analyzing and interpreting one of the several reports of the Commission on Industrial Relations—that written by Prof. John R. Commons of the University of Wisconsin and signed by himself and four other members, including the representatives of employers—embodies the matured thought of a keen thinker on the subject of labor legislation and administration. Dr. Commons’ report, written under great difficulties, is not at all easy reading and, even the summary and comments in The Survey require close and careful attention but are worth it. His central suggestion, of a public administration which will represent the matured conference of both parties having divergent interests, is applicable to many other governmental matters besides labor laws and labor departments.

MENTAL HYGIENE EXHIBIT

The exhibit of the Mental Hygiene Committee, on alcohol and syphilis, the two greatest preventable causes of mental disease, was shown last month at the New Jersey Conference of Charities and Correction in Hoboken, and the alcohol section was exhibited at the National Conference of Charities and Correction in Indianapolis, Ind.

Free Clinics
For Mental Disorders

Following is a list of the State Hospitals which have out-patient departments with stated hours for the free treatment of incipient nervous and mental disorders, together with the time and place of the dispensary sessions:

Hudson River State Hospital—In the Department of Health rooms, Poughkeepsie, every Monday evening at 7 o’clock.

St. Lawrence State Hospital—At the State Hotel every Saturday; at the Alice Hyde Memorial Hotel in Malone, one day, once a month; City Hospital and Sisters’ Hospital in Watertown, two days, about once a month.

Gowanda State Hospital—In Welcome Hall Dispensary, Buffalo, on the first and third Tuesdays of each month, from 3 to 6 p.m.; at the W. C. A. Hospital, in Jamestown, on the third Wednesday of each month, from 1 to 5 p.m.; at the Salamanca Hospital, in Salamanca, on the fourth Thursday of each month, from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

Kings Park State Hospital, jointly with the Brooklyn State Hospital at the Williamsburgh general hospital, Bedford avenue and South Third street, Brooklyn, every Saturday morning from 10 to 12.

Brooklyn State Hospital—At the State hospital on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Polhemus Memorial Clinic, Henry and Amity streets, Brooklyn, on Fridays at 2 p.m.; Williamsburgh Hospital, Bedford avenue and South Third street, Brooklyn, on Saturdays at 10 a.m.

Central Islip State Hospital—Cornell University Medical College, Twenty-seventh street and First avenue, Manhattan, Thursday from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m.

Manhattan State Hospital—Cornell University Medical College, Twenty-seventh and First avenue, Manhattan, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

In addition to these establishments, the Willard, Middlesex, Utica, Buffalo, Binghamton, and Rochester State Hospitals provide for consultations with patients whenever they appear at the institution.
BRINGING THE CHILDLESS HOME AND THE HOMELESS CHILD TOGETHER

State Charities Aid Association's Placing-Out Agency Has Found Family Homes for Over 2300 Children

HOW IT COULD PLACE MANY MORE EVERY YEAR.

He who helps a child helps humanity with a distinctness, with an immedialtiness, which no other help given to human creatures in any other stage of their human life can possibly give again. — Phillips Brooks.

Helping children has been a part of the State Charities Aid Association's work almost from its inception. The Association was organized in 1872. Within two years the visiting committees of the Association had pledged themselves "to make it a distinct and definite part of their work to secure suitable homes in private families for all children of sound mind and body now in poorhouses, almshouses and other public institutions of this State, or that hereafter may come into them—homes where children shall be carefully trained and fitted to become respectable and self-supporting citizens."

The work has grown steadily. Today the Association is facing its greatest opportunities in child placing.

Child Placing Agency Organized

Eighteen years ago a separate department—the Placing Out Department—was formed to devote itself entirely to child placing work. That department now has the largest budget of any department in the Association, and the work of placing orphans, foundlings and deserted children in permanent free homes—both a real home with real parents instead of a Home with a capital H—if the homeless child and childless home could be brought together.

Bringing the two together is the function of the Placing-Out Department. The Department is manned by trained workers and employs methods approved by the highest authorities on child caring and shown to be practical and effective by the acid test of workability. It believes, as promulgated at the White House Conference on Dependent Children (January 1909) that "the carefully selected foster home is for the normal child the best substitute for a natural home."

How the department goes about the job, how much work it has done so far, and how the plan works out is an absorbing story.

GETTING THE RIGHT CHILD FOR THE RIGHT HOME

In the first place the problem of getting the right child in the right place is a hard one. It requires time, patience, careful work, good judgment and common sense. The placing of a child in a family involves its whole future welfare. It is such an important undertaking that it should be—and is—done only after the most careful investigation of the circumstances and the most sympathetic consideration of the needs of both family and child. The particular condition and needs of each destitute child are carefully studied so that it receives that care and treatment which his individual needs require and which should be as nearly as possible like the life of the other children of the community.

To begin with, a careful study of the "Motherless baby and babyless mother, Bring them together to love one another."

—Christina Rossetti.
Family history of the child is made to find out whether there are any relatives who could and should care for it, and to learn of its physical condition and possible hereditary tendencies. Then there is secured for it a careful medical examination and, when necessary, treatment for adenoids, tonsils, bad teeth and other physical defects. For some children a mental test is desirable.

Why It Costs Money to Place Children

The child must be supplied with new clothing and made to look attractive in order to make a good impression on the would-be foster parents. While all this is being done for the child there must be a careful investigation of the character and circumstances of the family offering the home. One of the department's agents must visit the home and see what kind of a place it is. She talks confidentially with neighbors and friends who know the home in order to learn all the facts needed to judge whether it is the right sort of a place for the particular child in mind. She must meet the members of the family, see what the home influences are, and make sure that the opportunities for attendance at school, church and Sunday school are satisfactory. It is the settled policy of the Association to select homes of the same religious faith as the parents of the children.

When the home finally is selected and the child placed, it must be visited two or three times a year to make sure that the circumstances have not changed, that the child is doing well, that it is attached to the family and the family to it.

These details are given to show why it costs money and takes time to place children. The job must be done well or not at all. To do it in a haphazard way would mean tremendous possibilities of evil for the little ones whose lives we are undertaking to direct.

2386 CHILDREN PLACED;
839 OF THEM ADOPTED

Figures give some idea of the volume of work done by the Department. Since 1898, in spite of the fact that during the first few years the work was carried on in only two or three counties, 2,366 children have been placed in family homes. Of this number, 839 have been legally adopted.

On July 1st the Department had 1,135 under supervision, as follows:

- In foster homes: 992
- In boarding homes: 50
- In institutions under supervision: 49
- Working: 38
- Total: 1,135

On July 1st, 1,231 children had been passed from the Department's care, as follows:

- Adopted: 839
- Returned to relatives: 67
- Returned to institutions or county: 86
- Died: 68
- Became of age and self-supporting: 79
- Referred to other societies: 22
- Placed in special institutions: 64
- Married: 22
- Ran away: 4
- Total: 1,231

Not All Homes Found Suitable

In order to find suitable homes for so many children and suitable children for so many homes, a very large number of homes have to be studied. In the course of finding homes for the 2,366 children placed so far, applications from 6,811 families have been investigated. Only about two-thirds of the families who applied for a child were considered upon investigation to be able to provide suitable homes for children.

How successfully the Department has fitted the children to the homes and the homes to the children is seen in the fact that 76 per cent of the children placed in free family homes are now in the one's first selected for them. The number of "misfits" on first placement, for whom new arrangements had to be made, is seen to be surprisingly small. It is a significant commentary on the care used in studying the children and the families.

All these explanatory facts have now brought us up to the object of this Children's Number of the S. C. A. A. NEWS.

HUNDREDS OF CHILDREN ARE IN NEED OF HOMES

Here is the situation: The Association is placing only between 200 and 300 children a year. We ought to be placing a good many more. There are hundreds more children who ought to be placed. The Association could place more if it had funds enough for its Placing-Out Department. Whether it shall have the extra money needed depends on readers of this number and on the friends of children and the Association everywhere. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few."

There are some 85,000 children in institutions in this State, and while many of them may be claimed later by respectable relatives and so cannot be placed out in permanent homes, there are still thousands who have no such relatives and for whom homes in real families are desired. The number of such children that we can provide for is limited only by the means at our disposal. Over against the number of

"Home life is the highest and finest product of civilization. Children should not be deprived of it except for urgent and compelling reasons."—President Theodore Roosevelt in message to Congress, Feb. 15, 1909.
These Children Once Homeless, Now Have a Real Home Like This

The situation then resolves itself into this: Shall these great opportunities be lost for lack of funds? For this child placing work not a single dollar is received from the State of New York or any city. It is sustained by the voluntary contributions of those who realize the great good it is accomplishing.

Here's how you may help: We have worked out a scheme by which people interested in children can become financially responsible for the placing of friendless children in good homes selected by us and can hear from us about the children before they are placed, and afterward. Any one who contributes $50 for this purpose to the State Charities Aid Association can have a child selected by us and assigned to her or him and can subsequently receive the story of the child, a full account of the home in which it is placed, and later two reports of the child's progress in the home during the first year. We want for each of our little wards a patron or a patroness to assume the financial responsibility for the care of one child, so that we may do an enormously increased amount of work.

If you cannot send $50 will you not send $25? Perhaps you can spare only $10. That amount will be accepted. Five dollars or even $1 will help to place a child in a good home and will be welcomed and appreciated.

Investing in a Human Being

What peace it should bring into any one's life to feel that through their efforts "one of these little ones" has been given a real father and a real mother and a real home with all that these words imply. It can be done, perhaps easily, perhaps at sacrifice, for only $50. If you will send us that amount (at the rate of $5 per month, if you wish) we will agree to select a child and furnish it with a home and with a father's and mother's love. This home will be your own special gift. We will send you the child's picture and a full account of the home in which it is placed, and within the first year two reports as to his health, progress and development. By making a gift of this small sum you virtually guarantee the expenditure by the new parents of many times your contribution toward the child's support and education, multiplying your $50 many fold. Will you not consider the possibilities of investing $50 in a human being?

The Association now has on its lists over 100 children in up-State localities whose family histories have been investigated and who have no one to claim them.

Must they remain homeless?

ENJOYED SPENDING $100

Here is the way people feel who have contributed money to this work. One contributor writes:

While it costs $50 to place a child in an investigator home, $25 or $5 or even $1 would help.

Now, I want to tell you that I never before enjoyed so much the spending of $100 as I have this one upon those little girls. I often get our pictures and look them over and it does my heart good. I owe much to you for getting me interested in these homeless children.

Another has this to say:

I was so very much pleased with your goodness in my behalf in finding a good home for a little waif last month that I wish to repeat my small share in the good work and help you place another child in a Christian home. If convenient, I should like the story and a picture. The little one need not be as beautiful as the last one was, as they all need good homes. God bless them! I enclose my check for $50 for this purpose and hope to do again before very long. You are certainly doing good practical work.

FOSTER CHILD IS A TREASURE

Read this letter from a foster mother:

How for nine years I have longed to clasp my own darling babe! In coming to you we have received your ideal, some one else's child, but a gift and treasure to us. I owe this thanks to you. If we had our own child we could not have done better.

"I LIKE IT VERY MUCH HERE"

And here is a letter from one of the older girls placed out:

I like it very much here. I was much pleased to hear from you. They are very good to me. Mama and Papa has got a lot of things for me. These are the things: A new pair of shoes, a new dress, two aprons, five school books, rubbers. I have been go-
FATHER SOLD HIS BABIES

The children who are placed out come not only from institutions but from private homes where they have known only squalor, neglect and cruelty. Take the case of Hilda and Stephen:

Hilda and Stephen were deserted by their mother. Their father sold them to a brewery wagon driver for beer, and disappeared. The driver abused and neglected the children. The State Charities Aid Association took them when they were miserable, starved, untrained little youngsters. After giving them good care for a few months they were placed together in a Christian home of comfort and refinement, where they are happy and are having the chance to become good citizens.

THE CASE OF KATHERINE

Katherine was a foundling 17 years ago. Now she is the daughter of a physician and his wife, who are living in a suburb near New York. Katherine is clever in school; she is a cheerful, happy, affectionate daughter, and beloved by all her friends and relatives.

It is interesting to note the character of homes in which children are placed. A careful study of the occupations of the families with whom the agency has placed the last 100 children shows that many occupations are represented. About one-third, or 30, were in business, 16 in professions, 15 in skilled labor, 13 farmers, 7 clerks, 5 in unskilled labor, and 4 were living on their incomes.

Children placed in good families not only have love and sunshine in their lives, but are in a way to have the educational advantages and other opportunities which the means of their foster parents make possible.

FAMILYadopts 4 CHILDREN

Some time ago a family wrote to the Association of its intention to have an adopted family of at least four. The letter said:

We intend to have a family of four at least, believing it not only to be our duty, as citizens, to bring up some children, but knowing also the happiness we are creating for ourselves. We know what a fullness children give us.

This is how the family felt five months after it adopted the first child:

The normal family owes it not only to itself, but to society to read and educate children. After five months we felt toward "Billy" as if he were of our own blood. I cannot imagine we could have more regard for one born to us. The success of our experiment in adopting little "Billy" made us hungry for more.

The family now has its four adopted children.

Candidly, can you think of anything that would give you more satisfaction now and in the future than to fill in the blank at the bottom of this page?

COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS ARE SUCCESSFUL

Good Work Done in Existing Institutions and Endorsements of Eminent Health Workers Should Stimulate Large Favorable Majorities in Three More Counties on November 7

TO HAVE REFERENDUM IN RENSSLEAER, WARREN AND LIVINGSTON COUNTIES

Another year of successful operation of existing county tuberculosis hospitals, the endorsement of the county hospital idea by eminent public health workers in various parts of the country, and the influence of the example of nine New York counties which by popular vote during the last two years have made appropriations for such hospitals aggregating $48,000, give every reason for confidence that the question of establishing county hospitals, which is to be submitted before the voters of three counties at the general election on November 7, will be carried by a large affirmative vote.

In combating the epidemic of infantile paralysis which has been raging this summer, the segregation of active cases in hospitals, as already proved effective in tuberculosis, has been one of the main factors. After the paralysis epidemic broke out, several temporary hospitals were promptly established in various localities in cooperation with the State Department of Health. It is being demonstrated that segregation is the best method of dealing with some other diseases besides tuberculosis. The soundness of segregation as an effective measure of combating tuberculosis is becoming more firmly established all the while.

RENSSLEAER Needs New Sanatorium

The counties in which tuberculosis county hospital referendums are to be taken this fall are Livingston, Warren and Rensselaer. In Rensselaer County the vote is upon an appropriation for a new sanatorium to take the place of the present institution, which has been doing excellent work for six years, but which is entirely inadequate to meet the needs of the county and unfortunately is located on the grounds of the poorhouse. A widespread demand for a new sanatorium in a better location has existed in this county for nearly two years. A citizens' New Sanatorium Committee has strongly advocated the project, and the question will be settled at the polls.

Warren Wants $30,000.

In Warren County the question is upon the establishment of an entirely new institution for which an appropriation of $30,000 is to be voted upon. This county has been committed, by vote of its Board of Supervisors, to the establishment of a hospital for several years. Definite action has, however, been delayed for various reasons, and meanwhile the need of such an institution

"It is everywhere felt that the whole campaign must of necessity fail unless adequate provision is made for the institutional care of tuberculous cases. This includes county hospitals."—Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, New York State Commissioner of Health.
to serve both the city and rural districts has been disclosed by the work of visiting nurses to be imperative.

$35,000 for Livingston.

In Livingston County the need for hospital provision for tuberculous patients has been great for several years. Although the county is entirely rural, the death rate from this disease has been much too high, and more recently the conditions found by visiting nurses at work in Dansville, Mt. Morris and Geneseo give added emphasis to this need. The amount to be voted upon in this county is $35,000.

PROMINENT HEALTH WORKERS ENDORSE COUNTY HOSPITALS

Seldom has a movement for social well-being gone forward from the beginning with less necessity for change in its fundamental efforts than has the movement for county hospitals. Every year strengthens the arguments for the establishment of these institutions and gives added confidence in the accepted methods of combating this disease of which the county hospital is the central factor.

Dr. Biggs' Endorsement.

This was shown last fall when the question as to whether the plan being followed in New York State (which involves the establishment of county hospitals) was in full accord with the discoveries and conclusions reached during the last eight years, was considered by State Commissioner of Health Hermann M. Biggs at the Albany Conference of the New York State tuberculosis workers. Dr. Biggs gave as his definite opinion that recent discoveries did not in any way indicate that there was any lessening of the imperative need for the provision of county institutions for more advanced cases of tuberculosis. In this judgment he was supported by the opinion of prominent health workers throughout the country to whom he had written asking for their opinion. In nearly every case these eminent scientists laid great emphasis upon the necessity for county tuberculosis hospitals in the campaign. Dr. Biggs' own words on this subject deserve to be carefully pondered by every voter in the counties of the State which have not yet made provision for their sufferers from tuberculosis.

"It is everywhere felt in this country that the institutional care of the advanced case is perhaps the most fundamentally important phase of the whole problem," said Dr. Biggs. "Anyone who has been actively interested in tuberculosis must have had his sympathies strongly aroused on many occasions by the pathetic appeals from advanced cases of tuberculosis for care, when no place for them was available. In many counties of the State this situation still exists . . . Where there is no county hospital these advanced cases must live and die in their homes often under the most unfavorable possible hygienic conditions, distributing infection among the members of their families and their associates. The suffering, loss of life and the economic waste which this condition involves remain a serious blot on our boasted civilization."

THE AIMS OF COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

There are three things which county hospitals aim to do:
Give those who have the disease the best possible chance to get well.
Protect those who do not have it, including children, from contracting it.
Teach those patients who go back to their homes how to avoid spreading the disease in the community.

These three things together comprise the most effective check which can be placed upon the spread of tuberculosis. County hospitals are preventive measures of the utmost importance.

"No changes except further development are desirable . . . Hospitals and sanatoria should be provided for every case that cannot be taken care of at home."—Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, Director Henry Phipps Institute, Philadelphia, and Executive Secretary of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.
STRIKING ILLUSTRATIONS OF SUCCESSFUL WORK DONE IN COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

ACTUAL CASES FROM RECORDS OF EXISTING INSTITUTIONS

Put yourself or someone dear to you in place of one of these patients, whose life story is outlined here and you will realize perhaps as never before the human side of the county tuberculosis hospital movement.

That the three aims of county hospitals are actually being fulfilled is shown by actual cases from the records of these institutions.

Cuts of various county institutions are printed in this issue of The News, and by means of them and the subjoined cases the reader is able to enter the doors of many of the institutions and look upon the work being done. Only the barest outlines can be given here because of space limitations, but the outlines tell an appealing story.

A STIRRING STORY OF FARM LIFE

A farm hand, aged 32 years, has one sister who is tubercular and a brother who is a farm hand. He obtained his livelihood by day's work on farms, living at the place of employment and making frequent changes. He was taken sick in August, 1914, while working for a farmer in whose family was one 17-year-old child. After two months he left this place and hired out to another man who had five children, working for him for a period of two months. Leaving this place, he accepted still another position with a farmer who had a child of 11 years. Here he remained for three months, when he fell ill in order to work on another farm. He stayed at this last place for about 90 days, until he had a hemorrhage and became too ill to work longer. He then came to the hospital on his own initiative. During these ten months of active open tuberculosis and while he was wholly ignorant of the nature of his disease and the danger of spreading it, he went about spitting freely where he worked, milking cows and assisting in other farm duties which brought him in daily contact with farm products which were sent out for use by healthy people. It was not until he saw for himself that he consulted a physician, who told him to get into a hospital as soon as possible. Although the institution was filled and had a long waiting list when this young man walked in, unannounced, emaciated, suffering severe paroxysms of coughing, a typical picture of tuberculosis, they could not but take him in. Concerning this case the superintendent of the hospital writes: "To my mind, this case is typical of the average knowledge of this disease and lack of precaution against it among country people. No one associated with this man knew of the danger of his condition to others. He exposed four different families including seven children, directly, and the farm products from four different farms, thus exposing an unknown number, indirectly; and all the time no one knew that there was any danger at all. He is an advanced case, has been here 14 months, and will remain here until he dies; this may be several more months. During all of this time he has been segregated and properly kept from spreading the disease."—Case from records of the Saratoga County Hospital, Middle Grove.

A SALESWOMAN'S STORY

A young American woman had worked as saleswoman in a department store. Her health was good until the spring of 1915, when she had typhoid fever; she was nursed by her mother, who died shortly afterwards of tuberculosis. The young woman did not make a good recovery, from typhoid, and returning tubercular bacilli and blood. Under complete rest she began to gain. Her cough disappeared and she increased in weight and strength. After five months she was put on light work and two months later was discharged, having gained fifteen pounds and all vital signs normal. She has now gone back to work and continues well.—From records of Bowne Memorial Sanatorium, Poughkeepsie, Dutchess County.

A FAMILY SAVED

A young girl having advanced tuberculosis was working at the same time as a domestic for a prominent Johnstown family comprising a husband, wife and two small children. She was found by the visiting tuberculosis nurse and placed in the county sanatorium, where she now is. Had she not been discovered when she was, there is every reason to believe she would have infected the children and perhaps the entire family where she was employed.—From records of the Fulton County Hospital, Gloversville.

"Beginning in 1908, the importance of segregation for advanced cases in order to prevent the spread of infection was appreciated more deeply than ever before. New York State has led the way in prompt action and its splendid system of County Tuberculosis Hospitals is the result."—Dr. James Alexander Miller, Chairman, Committee for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in New York City; President, New York Association of Tuberculosis Clinics.

WHAT TWO MONTHS DID

A hardworking blacksmith, 34 years old, was admitted to the sanatorium September 11, 1915. The signs of tuberculosis were very marked, and he was confined to his bed for three weeks after admission. On November 15, however, he had gained 20 pounds in weight and all physical signs had become normal. His general condition was so much improved that he was discharged and has resumed his former occupation and is still in very good condition.—From records of the Monroe County Sanatorium, Rochester.

A SCHOOL GIRL SAVED

A 15-year-old girl, a student, who had been ill for more than two years and had been losing weight, was admitted to the

ESTELLE AND WALTER ODELL MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, NEWBURGH, ORANGE COUNTY HOSPITAL.

A REUNITED FAMILY

An American housewife, aged 35, with husband and six children, was discovered by the County Agent shortly after having had a hemorrhage. She was careless in her habits, sharing her room and bed with several of her young children; she was coughing and spitting carelessly and was waited upon by the older children. She was brought to the hospital in April, 1915, and the children were all examined. Two were found to be infected and were also kept at the hospital where arrangements were made for the care of the other four children in good homes. The two infected children recovered and were provided with homes. The mother became an arrested case and was discharged after six months. The family has now been united in cleaned up surroundings and has continued to do well under the direction of the County Agent without any signs of returning disease or fresh infections for nearly a year.—From records of the Monroe County Sanatorium, Rochester.

PATHOS AND INSPIRATION

A 16-year-old girl and her young brother following in the footsteps of an older sister and her husband, came to this country from Austria. The father and one brother had previously died from tuberculosis. Arriving in this country the girl and her brother were put to work in a mill where they had long working hours. The living conditions of their home were typical of those of many foreigners obliged to live in cramped quarters and upon frugal diet. Within a few months both developed symptoms of tuberculosis and were admitted to the sanatorium. The boy was found to be a very advanced case and died within a few weeks. The girl, on the other hand, showed remarkable gains and after a stay of 340 days was discharged apparently cured. The change at this time was very inspiring. From a timid, undernourished, pale child she had become a strong, well developed, rosy-cheeked girl showing a gain of 234 pounds in weight. More than this, by the training and education which she received in the sanatorium she was able to take up domestic work. This she has continued from May, 1915, to the present time in perfect health.—From records of the Montgomery County Sanatorium, Cranesville.

NO LONGER A MENACE

A working man of 36, a dyer in a woolen mill, whose first wife died from tuberculosis, was received into the county hospital in an advanced stage of tuberculosis and greatly reduced in weight. He was then in that stage of the disease which is most dangerous. Before coming to the sanatorium he was confined to the house in which nine other people were living and continually exposed to infection. He had very little knowledge of the way the disease spreads. After three months’ stay at the sanatorium he had gained more than 25 pounds in weight and had much improved. Nearly all symptoms had disappeared and the knowledge which he had gained in reference to precautionary measures made it safe for him to return to his family.—From records of the Oswego County Hospital, Orwell.

A GLOVEMAKER AND CHILDREN

A housewife, an American, with four small children, the oldest of whom was five years old, had consulted a physician for a sore throat. She was found to have advanced pulmonary tuberculosis and was at once placed in the county sanatorium. The children were cared for in an orphanage, and as yet none of them has shown signs of tuberculosis. The youngest child was only three months old. By taking care of the mother the county is preventing the spread of the disease to these children. She had been an industrious woman, a glovemaker, had good habits and has a good chance for recovery.—From records of the Fulton County Hospital, Gloversville.

THE EXPERIENCE OF THE PAST FEW YEARS HAS TAUGHT US . . . THAT THERE IS NECESSITY OF AN INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF HOSPITALS FOR ADVANCED CASES SITUATED NOT FAR FROM THE HOME OF THOSE THUS AFFLICTED.

—Dr. Vincent Y. Bowditch, former President, National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.
Here is a case of a woman of 35, a moderately advanced case, having two children. One child was found tuberculous and admitted to the sanatorium with the mother. The other was sent to an open-air school. The husband, who had tuberculosis, deserted the family some years before. The mother and child were discharged from the hospital 14 months later with the disease apparently arrested. The mother had gained 18 pounds and the child 4½. They are now living in the country under good conditions with the other child, who has made wonderful improvement in the open-air school.—From records of the Monroe County Hospital, Rochester.

A LIVINGSTON COUNTY CASE HAS COST NEARLY $2,000

A suggestive report has recently come from Livingston County. Within the last two years one patient was deprived of hospital care until it became too late to save his life. An effort to prevent giving the disease to his wife and child has now cost the county nearly $2,000—and yet his wife now has tuberculosis in a moderately advanced stage. The little child 11 years old has slept with her mother and shows signs of the disease. It would have been much more economical for the county to have provided suitable care for the father in the first place and thus have saved the accumulating expenses of his dependent family and those who may in turn contract the disease from them.

PROMINENT MEN ORGANIZE TO PUSH COUNTY HOSPITALS

On September 7 a county tuberculosis hospital campaign committee, consisting of 44 prominent citizens in Warren County, representing nearly every town in the county, was organized at Glens Falls. Officers were elected as follows: Frank Hooper, of North River, chairman, and Thomas J. Smith, of Warrensburg, secretary. Executive committee—George F. Bayle, of Glens Falls, chairman; Rev. E. M. Parrot, of Lake George, secretary; Dr. Fred G. Fielding, of Glens Falls; Frank Hooper, of North River, J. E. Singleton, of Glens Falls, E. J. West, of Glens Falls, and Thomas J. Smith, of Warrensburg.

OsWEGO COUNTY HOSPITAL, ORWELL, N. Y.

The committee has opened headquarters at the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Glens Falls. They will carry on educational work to lay before the voters of the county the need for an affirmative vote on the hospital question.

Under the leadership of the Citizens' New Sanatorium Committee, a Rensselaer County campaign committee was organized at Troy on September 14. This committee consists of 50 influential citizens from all parts of the county. The officers of this committee are: W. Leland Thompson, president; P. J. Griffin, vice-president; P. H. Wetmore, secretary, and Tracey D. Taylor, of Berlin, treasurer. Executive committee—Palmer C. Ricketts, chairman; Mrs. Joseph McQuide, John M. O'Hanlon, Mrs. Rhee Stewart, of Rensselaer, and E. B. Doen, of Schaghticoke.

In Livingston County at a conference held on September 20, a strong campaign committee was organized with the following officers: Honorary president, Hon. J. W. Wadsworth, Jr., of Mount Morris; president, Dr. W. E. Lauderdale, of Genesee; vice-president, Rev. A. E. Breen, of Mount Morris; secretary, Dr. A. E. Leach, of Mount Morris; treasurer, James M. Edwards, of Dansville. Executive committee: Chairman, Dr. Charles V. Patchin, of Dansville; Rev. Dr. A. A. Kieble, of Livonia; Murray Gamble, of Gloveland; Foster W. Walker, of Caledonia; William E. Dana, of Avon; Dr. C. M. Fiorio, of Moscow; William A. Brodie, of Genesee, and Dr. G. W. Squires, of Avon.

HOSPITALS ARE GREATLY NEEDED IN RURAL DISTRICTS

Wherever a thorough investigation has been made to locate all cases of the disease, it has been found that there is nearly as much tuberculosis in proportion to the inhabitants in the rural districts as in the centers of population. Frequently there is more.

In Warren County, taking the death records for the five-year period from 1910 to 1915, it was found that six out of eleven rural towns had more tuberculosis deaths in proportion to the population than Glens Falls, the only city in the county. In five towns the tuberculosis death rate was higher than that in the State at large.

Spread by Family Infection

Rural tuberculosis spreads with surprising frequency by means of family infection. This is shown by scientific investigation made recently in four rural counties. Ap-

AFTER-CARE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS IN NEW YORK STATE. OUTSIDE OF NEW YORK CITY
By HOMER FOLKS

The extension of the epidemic of infantile paralysis from New York City to points throughout the State created the most pressing problem for the State health authorities within the last decade. The development of the situation, and the measures taken by the State Health Department, are detailed in the August and September numbers of "Health News," the department's publication, both of which are devoted practically entirely to this subject.

The prompt and effective measures taken by the State health authorities to secure authoritative diagnoses of suspicious cases, efficient sanitary supervision of diagnosed cases, the establishment and efficient operation in an astonishingly short period of a number of well-organized infirmaries, the building of over 100 beds, and, in general, furnishing leadership and support to local health authorities, to which legislation enacted in 1913, and the reorganization of the Department ensuing thereon. The prompt, cordial and thoroughgoing support of the Governor and the Comptroller enabled the State Department to meet the situation very much more effectively than would otherwise have been possible.

The after-care of the surviving patients offers a unique problem. The successful handling of these cases must be extended over a period of two years or more. The number of cases of infantile paralysis occurring in New York State outside of New York City from June 1st to September 23rd inclusive, arranged by counties, is as follows:

The total number of cases outside of Greater New York was 57.

It will be noted that one or more cases have occurred in 51 of the 57 counties outside of Greater New York.

The epidemic followed the usual route of travel, developing along the Hudson River, in the suburban counties adjacent to, or near, New York City. The number of possible infections, however, was far greater than the number of cases notified.

Among the 2,904 cases that have occurred to September 23rd inclusive, there were, to that date, 579 deaths. Of the remaining 2,325 cases, 1,415 have recovered, not a large one, will make a complete recovery, without any form of paralysis or crippling. The remaining will suffer varying degrees of paralysis. The extent to which this will disappear will depend in considerable degree upon expert, sustained treatment, and in suitable cases, proper appliances.

Plans for After-Care:

The State Health Department has formulated a very complete program for the treatment and after-care of patients suffering from infantile paralysis outside of New York State outside of New York City. This will include, close supervision by expert authorities on practically full time for this purpose; the holding of clinics in localities, where a number of cases have occurred to be attended, as far as possible, by all the physicians of the localities, at which examinations and complete muscle tests of the patients will be made; the provision of experts in massage and muscle training, especially where there are large numbers of cases; the provision of arrangements, adequate numbers; and the provision of appliances, when necessary with full or partial payment therefor by the parents in suitable cases.

At the request of the State Department of Health the State Charities Aid Association has requested the committee to cooperate with the State Department of Health and local authorities in the formation of a care program thoroughly comprehensive and adequate. If the plans in full were considered and approved by the Public Health Council of the State at a meeting held on September 23rd.

The work to be done is indicated in part in the following extracts from papers by Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research and Dr. Robert W. Lovett, Professor of Orthopedic Surgery, Harvard University, reprinted from the August number of "Health News":

"Dr. Flexner on Control of the Disease:

A "percentage of persons, children particularly," said Dr. Flexner, "die during the acute attack of the disease. Only 16 to 18 die in certain severe epidemics to twenty in others. The average yearly mortality is from 1 to 2 per cent. The most important thing in the care of these cases is to see that they survive, a fact made complete coverage, in which no cripples whatever.

This number is quite large, but only a few children out of a hundred will be left severely and unnecessarily crippled.

Dr. Lovett on Treatment:

"For purposes of treatment the disease may be divided into three stages: (a) the acute stage; (b) the convalescent stage from the disappearance of the paralytic symptoms to the third month; (b) the convalescent stage from the disappearance of the paralytic symptoms to the third month; (c) the convalescent stage from the disappearance of the paralytic symptoms to the third month; (c) the chronic stage which begins about two years from the beginning of convalescence. The acute stage should be treated by the administration of vitamin B, in order to prevent or to correct deformity. In cases treated by muscle training the expectation of improvement is small, but the patient can be made an expert 6 to 12; home under muscle training under supervision 3.5 to 6; home training without supervision.

Deformities in this stage are to be removed if it occurs. It is impossible to prevent or to correct deformity. When fixed deformities occur, it is in the stage of the disease when the patient may be made an expert 6 to 12; home under muscle training.

In Vermont in a period of three months a quanti- tative examination of the patients showed that in cases treated by muscle training the expectation of improvement was small, but the patient can be made an expert 6 to 12; home muscle training under supervision 3.5 to 6; home training without supervision.

In order to prevent or to correct deformity. When fixed deformities occur, it is in the stage of the disease when the patient may be made an expert 6 to 12; home under muscle training.
proximately 100 families were carefully studied. It was found that 79 per cent of the individuals who were exposed continuously for a considerable period of time had the disease in some stage. Of those who were exposed for a short time but not continuously, 28 per cent were found with tuberculosis. Where the patient was cared for away from home or where some members of the family were away during the sickness the number showing signs of the disease was much less.

It can thus be seen that in the rural districts the main factor in the spread of the disease is the infection of one person by another, which frequently takes place in the home. Family infection is a condition which may be greatly diminished by provision of sufficient hospital care for those who are stricken with the disease.

Hospital Care Always Necessary

In cities, congestion, bad housing, factory conditions and other factors, as well as the strain upon life as a whole, frequently tend to complicate the tuberculosis situation and render it more difficult to meet. Hospital care is always necessary, but in the cities it must be supplemented by other measures.

HOSPITALS EFFECT ECONOMIC SAVING

A Story of a Case of Tuberculosis That Cost Lives and Public Money

Here is a true story which shows what the lack of a county hospital may mean. A painter in a certain New York State town, the breadwinner for a family consisting of his wife and three children, acquired tuberculosis, and made up his mind to follow his physician's advice to go to a hospital. He tried every place he could hear of or that his physician knew, but all were full and most of them had long waiting lists. He could find no institution within his slender means that could take him in. He could not get the care he needed at home and gradually grew worse. His wife, overburdened by the care of her now dying husband, ran down in health and began to show tuberculous symptoms. Shortly after her husband's death, she was told by her physician that she, too, had the disease.

If the county had had a hospital, that father would have had a chance for life. At least he could have saved his wife the burden of his care, and his infection might have been avoided. In either event, if he had lived, or if his wife had lived, the family probably would not have become town charges.

But there is a practical taxpayer's interest in this story. If the county had had a hospital the effect of this man's illness on the tax levy would have been as follows:

One year's care in the county hospital, at $70 per week. $3920 Less patient's contribution to his own support... 200

Balance paid by county... $320

Care of four-year-old child in orphan asylum for ten years... $1,500

Care of five-year-old child in orphan asylum for nine years... $1,350

In other words, that county by saving $320, the theoretical cost of caring for the father, will be the ultimate loser by $4,355, the cost of caring for the mother and her offspring, minus the theoretical cost to the county if the father had received care. Yet even this financial aspect of the problem will surely be a less compelling argument with the voters than the suffering and sorrow of uncared for tuberculosis.

"I shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it nor neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."—Gilpin.
1916 SALE OF RED CROSS SEALS EXPECTED TO BREAK ALL RECORDS

25,000,000 Crimson-Clad Santa Clauses Start on Their Annual Mission of Mercy on November 15

Bang!

That noise which you will hear on November 15 will not be a belated celebration of the election results, but will signify the opening of the 1916 sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals in New York State, to raise money for anti-tuberculosis work.

Before that date 25,000,000 little crimson-clad Santa Clauses will leave the shipping office of the State Charities Aid Association to carry their annual message of health and hope to the remotest corners of the State. It is confidently predicted by the organizers of the 1916 campaign that they will bring back to the tuberculosis committee 1,500,000 more pennies than last year.

It is expected that $125,000 worth of nursing, dispensary and hospital care for suffering tuberculosis patients will be provided by the sale of seals in New York State outside of Greater New York during the holiday season of 1916. This is the goal that has been set by the State Charities Aid Association, the sales agency in this State. To attain this goal it will be necessary for the local committees and kindred organizations of the Association to increase the total sale from 10,505,261, the high mark reached last year, to 12,500,000 for 1916.

Standard Selling Methods:

Prior to the opening of the actual selling campaign on November 15th, the State Charities Aid Association will instruct its local agents in the use of the standard methods of sale. Special emphasis will be placed upon the sale by mail. Without exception, wherever this plan was tried last year it was markedly successful. Letters costing from 3.5 cents to 7 cents to prepare brought back from 40 cents to $1.25 per letter. In Rochester, letter-sales brought in over $6,000, out of the $10,800 realized from the total seal sale. Brooklyn won a national pennant with a sale of over 4,500,000 seals, practically all from mail sale letters.

At the North Atlantic Tuberculosis Conference held in Newark, N. J., October 20 and 21, representatives from half a dozen Eastern states endorsed the mail sale as the most effective selling method of the 1915 campaign, and unanimously agreed that it would bring increasing returns during the 1916 season. ARE SMALL BOYS UNPOPULAR?

Have Homeless Boys Less Friends in the World Than Homeless Girls, or Babies of Either Sex?

WHAT DO YOUR HEAD AND HEART SAY ABOUT IT?

Have little boys between the ages of 6 and 10 less friends in the world than little girls or than babies of either sex?

This seems to be the case, judging from the experience of the Association’s Child Placing Department. But we don’t believe it really is the case. We are telling you about it because there may be, and very likely are, readers of this magazine who don’t believe it is true and who can give very convincing and substantial proof of their belief to the contrary.

But anyhow, just at present, the Child Placing Department is having hard work to find suitable family homes for many of the little boys between the ages of 6 and 10 who come to its attention.

“It may surprise many fathers and mothers of small boys to learn that prospective foster fathers and mothers apparently have little interest in boys of this age,” said a member of the Placing-Out Department, “and that fewer applications are received for them than for any other type of child. There are many requests for babies and for little girls, but it looks as though the small boy is not popular.

Boys Feel Neglected.

“Some of the little fellows are very conscious of this neglect, and when they are visited in the institution by an agent they beg her to try to find them homes of their own where they can have fathers and mothers.”

The Child Placing Department has a great variety of little boys available for placement in family homes: Dark haired boys, fair haired boys, and even an occasional red haired youngster; boys for Protestant homes, Catholic homes or Jewish homes; boys who are clever at mechanics, boys who like farm life, boys who would profit by high school and college training but have no one to pay for a business career. Some of them are mischievous and active and occasionally “play hooky”; others are quiet and docile, but all of them need homes of their own.

Marrying or Making a Boy’s Future.

The years between 6 and 10 are important years in a boy’s life. In those years he especially needs sympathy, affection and careful guidance. His home and school training at that time may make or mar his whole future.

Following the publication of the special Children’s Number of the S. C. A. News two months ago many friends of children have rallied to the support of the work of this department. Fifty dollars will place a child in a carefully selected free home. This brief article is not intended for an appeal, but it is entirely probable that there are readers of THE NEWS who have no children in their own homes and who would like to give one of these little chaps a chance, or who know of friends who would like to do so. If you would like to befriend a little boy or can give us the name and address of a family who would like to do so, we will gladly send one of our workers to see them and tell them more about our needy little fellows. For example, here are a few of the boys now actually in need of homes:

These Boys Want Real Homes.

Henry, ten years old, a Catholic, and left an orphan several years ago. He is a good boy. He was a little fellow, with gray eyes and brown hair. One of his two brothers has found a home, and Henry, the seven-year-old brother he had hoped to have a family home of their own. He is a bright, promising boy.

Walter, ten years old, a bright faced, slightly built boy, nervous and sensitive. He has light brown hair and brown eyes. Walter is in need of country air and good food. He is a pathetic little fellow now, but will be a different boy when he is stronger, for he is observant, interested in everything around him.

Paul, five and a half years old, a Catholic, has big blue eyes, golden hairs, regular features and a nicely shaped head. He is a very handsome boy, lovable and affectionate. Ever since he lost father and mother within six months of each other, Paul has had to live in an institution. He was a baby then; now he is a sturdy boy who will do any one credit, and he wants the love and care and the chance that other little boys have in their own homes.

Robert, nine years old, is a boy who will probably grow to be six foot four, a country air and good food. He is a shy fellow, active, full of energy, but he is affectionate, too, and responds readily to kindness. He has been rather run down in his recent air. Robert has gray-blue eyes and black hair, and is a slender, wiry boy.

David is a little Hebrew boy of six who has not a relative in the world to befriend him. He is a quiet little fellow, undernourished and sick now, but needs good food and affection and family life. Few little boys need a home as much as David.

Billy, ten years old, is red haired, with a small mustache and a twitch in his eye. Billy is the kind of a boy who plays hooky to go to a ball game and spends the night behind the back yard fence. He is a “licking,” and “borrows” a quart from his mother to treat the “fellows” to peanuts. He is active, quick witted and a thorough go-getter.

“No Better Use for $50.”

People who have contributed to this work become as interested in it as we are. For instance one recent contributor wrote as follows:

“The reports in regard to Dorcas have given me much satisfaction. If her case is a fair sample of what is accomplished by the Child Placing Agency, I can think of no better use for the fifty dollars I am enclosing. With all good wishes,” etc.

DUTCHESS COUNTY HEALTH ASSOC’N HARD AT WORK

President of Vassar Heads New Organization for Prevention of Disease and Better Care of Sick

What will undoubtedly prove to be one of the most significant and far-reaching events in the health field is the recent organization of the Dutchess County Health Association, administered by and for the citizens of Dutchess County. It represents the transmuting into fact of a recommendation which the State Charities Aid Association made in its report on “Sickness in Dutchess County; Its Extent, Care and Prevention,” which was reviewed in the December, 1915, issue of the S. C. A. A. News under the title “Sixteen Hundred Cases of Sickness and What to Do About It.” The new organization is now busy on a promising program.

The Health Association is organized for two purposes:

To coordinate and develop existing facilities for the care of the sick and the prevention of disease in order to make them thoroughly efficient and readily available to all.

To develop such additional facilities for the care of the sick and the prevention of disease as study and experience may indicate are needed.

In order to carry out these objects the Association plans to cooperate with all the public and private medical and social service agencies at work in the county, as well as with the physicians, who, with others responsible for the care of the sick, are invited to make use of the facilities and services which it has to offer.

Vassar’s President Heads Association.

Both from the standpoint of his administrative ability and of his interest in the public affairs of Dutchess County, the Health Association is fortunate in having secured as its first president, Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, President of Vassar College, Poughkeepsie. It also is to be congratulated in having as its Superintendent of Field Work, in immediate charge of its field activities, Miss Edith M. Ambrose, a graduate of the Presbyterian Hospital, New York City, who has had long experience in medical social service work. For the past six years she has held the position of Secretary of the Social Service Committee of Emmanuel Church, Boston.

The headquarters of the Association are located at 23 Washington street, Poughkeepsie, opposite the new headquarters of the Poughkeepsie Board of Health. They comprise an office for the administrative work of the Association, a reading room, with books and pamphlets on various health topics; also the living rooms of the Superintendent of Field Work.

The Plan of Work.

One of the main features of the Association’s work will be the organization of the nursing service throughout the county with a view to providing a maximum amount of adequate nursing at a minimum cost. To this end it will endeavor to provide three classes of helpers:

Supervising nurses who will on request give counsel and aid as to the kind of help needed and the probable time and cost. They will also visit the homes of the patients as often as necessary, and supervise the services of the non-graduate household attendants. No work, however, will be undertaken without the cooperation of the physician in charge.

Skilled graduate nurses who will have personal charge of all important cases for such time as may be needed. In supplying this grade of service the Association will, so far as possible, cooperate with existing registries.

Non-graduate household attendants who will care for such cases as do not need or no longer require the skill of a graduate nurse. These household attendants will also assist in the care of the home.

The Association has already entered into an arrangement with the Montefiore Home in New York for the training of household attendants. Here they will be given a six months’ course, which will be supplemented by another six months of work in the homes of the sick in Dutchess County. After completing this term of training they will receive, while in the employ of the Association, from $60 to $125 a week for their services. By the adoption of this plan it will be possible to standardize the services of the trained attendants in the county and raise them to a high level, thereby often insuring the sick better nursing care than they are now receiving at the hands of untrained attendants.

Already several towns in the county have asked to be affiliated with the larger County Health Association, and plans for carrying this out are now being considered by one of the committees of the Association. The local Dutchess County Committee for the Care of Dependent Children has shown a splendid spirit of cooperation by voting the sum of $602, raised by the sale of Red Cross seals, to the Health Association, with the understanding that the Health Association will add another sum sufficient to pay the salary of a nurse to devote her time to tuberculosis work throughout the county.

Offers Aid to the State

The Health Association has offered its services so far as feasible to the New York State Military Training Commission, and the Regents of the University of the State of New York, in carrying out their program for the physical training of school children in the elementary and secondary schools of Dutchess County.

The Health Association will avail itself of every opportunity to cooperate with other health agencies, both State and national. A committee has been appointed to consider this question and report to the Executive Board in what ways this may be done.

The Association will cooperate with the Poughkeepsie Young Woman’s Christian Association in health work among the Italians in Poughkeepsie. It is planned first of all to get up a health exhibit for use in that section of the city.

A class in first aid to the injured has been organized in one of the towns and other classes will be organized as interest is manifested.

The Central Council.

A Central Council has full power to direct and control the affairs and funds of the Association and is responsible for its government. The following persons make up the present membership of the Central Council: Judge C. W. H. Arnold, of Poughkeepsie; Mrs. Barnes Compton, of Millbrook; Mr. William B. Dinsmore, of Staatsburgh; Mr. B. M. Fowler, of Poughkeepsie; Mr. Irving Grinnell, of Waupungoose; Dr. Grace M. Kimball, of Poughkeepsie; Mrs. J. E. Lyall, of South Millbrook; Dr. George N. Miller, of Rhinebeck; Miss Ruth Morgan, of Staatsburgh; Mr. Thomas Newbold, of Hyde Park; Dr. J. C. Otis, of Poughkeepsie; Dr. C. W. Pilgrim, of Poughkeepsie; Mrs. James Roosevelt, of Hyde Park; Dr. J. E. Sadlier, of Poughkeepsie; Mrs. Weldon F. Weston, of Beacon, and ex-officio, Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, Albany; Miss Clara E. Drum, Superintendent of School District No. 3, Clinton Corners; Dr. J. E. McCormack, President Poughkeepsie Academy of Medicine; Dr. Alva L. Peckham, President Medical Society of the County of Dutchess, Poughkeepsie; Hon. D. W. Willbur, Mayor of Poughkeepsie; Dr. John S. Wilson, Health Officer, Poughkeepsie; Mr. H. Fremont Vandewater, President County Board of Supervisors, Hyde Park.

The Central Council meets twice a year and in the interim of its sessions the Executive Committee carries on the work of the Association. Besides the President, the members of the Executive Committee are Dr. Alexander M. Williams, of Poughkeepsie; Mrs. J. E. Lyall, of Hyde Park; Dr. George N. Miller, Miss Ruth Morgan, of J. C. Otis, and ex-officio, Dr. H. N. MacCracken, Chairman, and Dr. George H. Sherman.
After-Care of Paralysis Cases Now Under Way

State Health Department Opens First of a Series of Free Clinics for Poliomyelitis Patients Outside of New York City—153 Patients Examined in Six Westchester County Clinics

As announced in the last number of THE S. C. A. A. NEWS, a State-wide plan for the after-care of cases of infantile paralysis in New York State, outside of New York City, has been put into effect by the State Department of Health. A series of clinics has been held in Westchester County and is now in progress in Nassau and Suffolk Counties. The entire plan is under the general direction of Dr. John A. Smith, of the State Health Department, and each District Sanitary Supervisor is charged with the general arrangements for the clinics to be held in his district.

The official staff of the clinic consists of Dr. Robert W. Lovett, Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery at the Harvard Medical School; his assistants, Dr. John T. Hodgen and Dr. Armitage Whitman; four women who have had special direction in the training of paralyzed and partially paralyzed muscles; five nurses, who visit the physicians and parents of the children in advance to secure their attendance at the clinic, assist in holding the clinic and who will remain in various localities to instruct the parents in muscle training and to see that it is carried out; also the necessary clerical staff.

A representative of the State Charities Aid Association and of local philanthropic interest have attended each clinic to give special attention to any cases in which some form of relief or assistance other than medical or nursing seems necessary.

Clinic Work Exceptionally Efficient.

It would be difficult to overstate the expert character, the completeness, adequacy and efficiency of this clinic organization. It brings to all the infantile paralysis cases attending the clinic, no matter where located and regardless of economic status, trained service of the highest order, which, at ordinary professional rates, would be absolutely prohibitive except to the very well-to-do. The work is done in the most complete cooperation with the attending physicians and operates to strengthen their relations to their patients and to prevent uninformed parents of these unfortunate children from seeking treatment from quacks or relying upon widely advertised nostrums.

No serious difficulty has been met with in securing the attendance at the clinics of the maximum number of patients who can be given careful examination, this number being some 30 per day. An interesting development has been the appearance at the clinics of a considerable number of children and a few parents who have suffered some degree of crippling from infantile paralysis in earlier years and for whom it has been possible to hold out promise of improvement.

The patients represented every variety of economic status. Some were brought by private nurses or maids in automobiles. Most of them were brought by their parents without special difficulty, and in a few cases transportation was provided. A relatively small proportion seemed to come from homes in which serious poverty exists.

Local Physicians Much Interested.

Each of the clinics has been attended by a considerable number of physicians—28 at one clinic—many of whom have expressed very great interest and have not only observed the examination of their own patients but have observed the operation of the clinic for a considerable part of the day. The clinics have been held in the following places:

Oct. 18—Mt. Vernon, dispensary of the Mt. Vernon Hospital.
Oct. 19—Port Chester, Fire Department house.
Oct. 20—North Tarrytown, St. Mary’s Episcopal Church.
Oct. 21—Yonkers, City Hall.
Oct. 23—White Plains, half day, Federation of Women’s Clubs.
Oct. 25—Glen Cove, Glen Cove Hospital.
Oct. 28—Huntington, Trade School.
Oct. 30—Mamaroneck, Roosevelt.
Oct. 31—Oyster Bay, Fair Harbors, Episcopal Church.

The total number of cases examined in Westchester County is 153.

What the Children Need.

In general, the proportion of quite young children has been larger than had been anticipated. Of the 153 children examined in Westchester County, 85 were under four years of age. Of the total 153, only 7 needed braces or other appliances at present. Eleven needed hospital care for operation or some special condition. Of the 158 patients, about ten per cent have made a complete recovery. After November 1, the clinic will divide into two units under the general direction of Dr. Hodgen and Dr. Whitman, each of whom will be assisted from time to time by Dr. Lovett in person.

Clinics Full of “Human Interest.”

The clinics are places of great “human interest.” At one clinic a baby a year old was temporarily up two long flights of stairs on a very rainy day by his ten-year-old sister. When asked whose baby it was, she promptly replied, “Mine,” and it was very evident that she was the baby’s “little mother.” So competent

EXHIBIT ON CHILDREN'S WORK IN WESTCHESTER

How 800 Dependent Children Are Wisely and Humanely Cared For

The Children's Committee of the Association's Westchester County Committee has procured an effective exhibit of its work in the interest of the 800 dependent children of the county, and the exhibit is being shown in public meetings at various places throughout Westchester. Already it has been seen at Mount Vernon, Irvington, Tarrytown, Ossining, Mount Kisco, Yonkers and elsewhere.

The exhibit shows graphically the rights of every child, who the dependent children of the county are, where they come from, what the duty of the Poor Law is toward them, what kind of care they receive, what their needs are, how much their care costs the public, and how the Children's Committee is aiding the Poor Law officials in their work.

Last year Westchester County paid out $125,598 for the board and care of its dependent children. This money was administered by the Superintendent of the Poor, V. Everit Macy, through the staff of the Children's Department.

The Children's Committee, of which Mrs. George F. Chamberlin, of Harrison, is chairman, is endeavoring to give a personal guardianship to each of the dependent children. This committee was organized to assist officials in providing proper care and training for the children. Its five investigators help by discovering the whereabouts of deserting fathers, securing work for the abedodied and medical attention for the sick, situations for mothers with babies so that they need not be separated, and preventing the return of children to unsuitable homes. The agents secure commitment of wayward boys and girls to reformatories and fellembined to proper institutions.

The exhibit consists of charts with text, watercolors and photographs and is attractive in appearance. In addition to being shown at various public meetings, it is exhibited in clubs, school buildings, public libraries, and other public places. Literature explaining the work of the Superintendent of the Poor and of the committee is distributed wherever the exhibit is shown. The Children's Committee considers educational work one of the most important of its duties, and is finding the exhibit a useful means to this end.

(Continued from Page 4) was this “little mother” that Dr. Lovett said he would like to take her back to Boston, that she was by far the most efficient person he had seen around the clinic and would doubtless make an excellent office attendant. This ten-year-old “little mother” was of the greatest service in getting the cooperation of the baby in testing his little muscles, and it was a great pleasure to have Dr. Lovett declare the case to be a complete recovery.

“All Dressed Up and No Place to Go.”

One charming three-year-old girl, who had been completely undressed and was rolled in a blanket waiting for the doctor, sung out in a loud and cheerful tone; “All dressed up and no place to go.” The blanket evidently appealed to her as real dress-up play clothes. She had completely recovered except one or two of the facial muscles, which were slightly affected and which gave her a very charming one-sided smile. Her baby brother was affected to a slightly greater extent.

Heard of Clinic Accidentally.

One young girl of 12 or 13 who had the disease some years ago and who was badly crippled heard of the clinic purely by accident. Some one who was passing in an automobile saw her, stopped, and told her that a clinic would be held at North Tarrytown. In spite of the rain, her mother got her to the train and to the clinic, and both were pathetically happy when the Boston physician changed the brace, ordered certain exercises, and encouraged them to believe that there would be improvement.

Too much credit cannot be given to the Sanitary Supervisor, Dr. Leroy W. Hubbard, in arranging for the Westchester clinics and for the comfort of the staff of workers attending them.

S. C. A. A. NAMES SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON AFTER-CARE

At the request of the State Department of Health, the State Charities Aid Association, through its President, Joseph H. Choate, has appointed a Special Committee on After-Care of Poliomyelitis in New York State outside of New York City. Mr. Oren Root is the Chairman and Miss H. Ida Curry the Secretary. The other persons asked to serve as members, by counties, are as follows:

Dutchess
- Mr. John E. Mack . Poughkeepsie
- Mr. B. H. Plager . Wappingers Falls
- Mrs. Ogden L. Mills . Staatsburg

 Allegany
- Mr. Frank Sullivan Smith . Angelica

Monroe
- Mr. George Eastman . 900 East Ave., Rochester

Help From Local Committees

The Committee has been selected with special reference to the number of cases of poliomyelitis occurring in the different counties, both absolutely and in proportion to their population. Each county in which a substantial number of cases has occurred is represented by several members. It is expected that these local members will assist in securing the cooperation of relief, health and other organizations in their respective counties. Members of the central staff will also be detailed to assist in securing harmonious action through the State.
AFTER-CARE OF PARALYSIS CASES

By ROBERT W. LOVETT, M. D.
Professor of Orthopedic Surgery in Harvard University, Surgeon to the Children's Hospital, Boston, and Now in Charge of the New York State Health Department's Program of After-care of Children Paralyzed in the Recent Epidemic of Poliomyelitis.

Dr. Lovett was asked by a representative of The S. C. A. A. News to state any impressions which he had gained in the course of the clinics held during the first week and kindly dictated the statement which is published herewith:

The epidemic in New York seems to have been characterized by high mortality, as epidemics go, but, curiously enough, the amount of damage done seems not to have been in proportion to the severity of the disease as indicated by the high death rate. It has been pre-eminently an epidemic affecting young children, an unusually large proportion of cases in children under two having been seen. A good many of the cases appear to have escaped paralysis, even when the initial symptoms were such as to warrant an expectation of a more or less extensive paralysis.

As a rule it has been thought that the severer the original attack, the more extensive would be the subsequent paralysis. The New York epidemic has shown that this is not necessarily the case, and that many cases starting in with a severe attack have had little or no paralysis.

Good Results in Westchester.

There has been no evidence in 138 cases already seen in Westchester County that any child has suffered from lack of treatment. On the contrary, with only one or two exceptions, there has not been the slightest deformity in any case, a fact which reflects the greatest credit upon the profession of Westchester County, who have taken care of these cases in a way unprecedented in its efciency and thoroughness.

It was realized at the beginning of the attempt on the part of the State Department of Health to provide for the after-care of these cases that it was rather early to begin any treatment at this time because the acute paralysis must be assumed as lasting perhaps two months on the average. However, it appeared the least of two evils to begin the inspection of the cases now, because, if nothing were done, the parents of the children would begin to be uneasy and feel that they were being neglected.

A moderate proportion of the cases soon are not ready for other treatment than remicency. This is one of the obstacles of the enterprise, because some of the patients are brought to the clinics only to be told that nothing needs to be done for one or two months more.
In such cases it has been explained to the doctor, or to the parents if the doctor was not present, that the process is still in a fairly acute stage in the cord, and that attempts at massage and muscle training would only result in detriment to the child.

Treatment Often Must Wait.

Another difficulty in the situation lies in the fact that in young children, under two years of age, there is very little to be done at present. They are too young to cooperate in doing exercises and they are too young to wear braces. The experience in Vermont shows that the wisest plan in these cases was to let them alone until they had reached an age suitable for treatment, when treatment should be begun, and that they had suff ered no detriment by being let alone.
Treatment of children of this age is always ineffectual, and, so far as possible, it has been explained to the parents that they would have to wait and be patient until the children were old enough for really effective treatment. Treatment in these young cases should be begun when the children are old enough to walk or to be able to help the nurse in doing exercises. Unfortunately there is very little to be done until these years of age.

The parents of the patients seen have been on the whole a class of people whom one would expect to be able to give proper care to their children. There has been a fair proportion of foreigners, where there will be difficulty in securing cooperation, as many of the children have been badly disciplined and are young, most of the foreign cases apparently having occurred in young children.

It would seem as if the bulk of the cases as seen would be able to be given adequate care by their parents under the direction of specially trained assistants.

There has been the most hearty cooperation on the part of the profession in all parts of Westchester County in bringing children to the clinics, in cooperating with the State Department of Health, and in expressed willingness to cooperate in the after-care of the cases. There have been many public-spirited citizens connected with charities, and others who have attended the clinics, and everywhere has been expressed the greatest desire to cooperate and help.

State Health Department Plan.

The undertaking of the State Department of Health is more or less novel in character, but where so large a number of cases exist, it is obviously necessary that some scheme should be devised for their relief. On a careful consideration of the whole problem, it seemed best to put into effect the Vermont plan, which was employed successfully there on a smaller scale, the essential of which is to enlist the parents in the after-care of the children. Much of the modern after-care consists in the performance of simple muscular exercises which most parents are competent to do under skilled supervision, and the serious problem of effectively treating so large a number of cases can apparently only be carried out in this way.

It is the desire of the department to furnish free consultation to the doctors, and, if the doctors desire, to supply them afterward with the assistance of trained women to supervise the exercises and to see that they are carried out according to instructions. It is thought in this way several things would be accomplished.
The parents would feel that they were being looked after; it will be possible to prevent most of the children from overdoing and suffering detriment from fati-tigue; most children will be encouraged to wear the prescribed apparatus; and, what is one of the most important matters of all, it will be possible to keep many of the patients of the regular physicians from seeking the advice of incompetent irregulars and quacks, and from relying upon nostrums.

The department does not intend to deal with the patients directly, but through physicians, and it is in the interest of the physicians and the public that the dealing should be confined to the physicians for instructions before visiting the cases and will not attempt to assist in the treatment unless it is desired by the doctor. It is very desirable that local nursing organizations should cooperate with the State Department of Health in carrying out this aim.
The undertaking is a serious one. It is on a large scale, and the endeavor of the Department is to make it as practical and as little elaborate as it can be made and still be efficient.

CLINICS IN NOVEMBER

Clinics so far scheduled for November are:
Nov. 1—Smithtown, Assembly Hall.
Nov. 2—Babylon, Presbyterian Parochial House.
Nov. 3—Rockville Center, Parochial School.
Nov. 4—Freeport, place to be selected.
Nov. 5—Hastings or Dobbs Ferry.
Nov. 7—Riverhead.
Nov. 8—Wecklull or Ossining.
Nov. 9—Southampton.
Nov. 10—Hudson.
Nov. 11—Nathan.
Nov. 11—Oughton.
Nov. 11—to be selected.

The force divides into two units from Nov. 8, making two clinics the same day possible.
N. Y. CITY VISITING COMMITTEE GOT 3850 TOYS FOR TINY PATIENTS

And It Cooperated in Other Helpful Ways During Paralysis Epidemic in New York City

Helpful services of various kinds were performed by the New York City Visiting Committee in connection with the infantile paralysis epidemic in New York City. The Committee's corps of visitors made special efforts to see that the institutions receiving children were adequately visited while the epidemic was in progress, and out of these visits grew several suggestions for practical assistance.

One visitor suggested that the Committee make the City Health Department by distributing literature bearing on various aspects of the epidemic, including advice to the mothers. As a result, the Committee received and distributed 10,000 such leaflets published by the Health Department. These were printed in English, Yiddish and Italian, and later, on the Committee’s recommendation, a Polish translation was made and distributed.

Another suggestion from a visitor was that the Committee cooperate by urging the Street Cleaning Department to pay particular attention to the streets in the neighborhood of institutions caring for paralysis cases. Acting upon this suggestion, the Committee had a conference with the Commissioner of the Street Cleaning Department, and secured the cleaning, by the best methods obtainable, of the streets in the vicinity of the Kings County and the Kingston Avenue Hospital, Brooklyn, twice as often as they are cleaned during normal times. The Street Cleaning Department cooperated in every way, and the hospital recognized and appreciated the Committee’s help.

3,850 Toys for Little Patients.

But the Committee's greatest activity was in response to a suggestion that toys be furnished to the children in the hospitals, to serve the double purpose of keeping the children amused and relieving the burden of the rushed and overworked nurses.

An appeal was made through the press to the public for funds to purchase toys and other comforts for the children. A total of $1,229.44 was received in amounts ranging from 25 cents to $150. With the aid of generous reductions given by dealers and donations of new toys by dealers and others, the Committee was able to purchase and distribute about 3,850 toys. Numerous other articles suggested by the hospital authorities were furnished. These included eleven new Victrolas with records; 570 yards of hair ribbon; twenty crates of oranges, and ice cream for the little patients in two hospitals.

And the Committee was helpful in other ways. Through its efforts, improvements were made in the methods of notifying parents of the condition of their children. Also, in response to a request from Miss Wadley, head of the Social Service Department of Bellevue, the Committee was able to secure a play leader for the children at that hospital during the convalescent stage. Again, in a few instances, the Committee handled special sums donated to buy surgical appliances for needy cases.

"The joy of the children and the gratitude of doctors and others is sufficient amply to repay the press, the public and ourselves for the effort," says J. F. Thomas, the secretary of the Committee.

"We have the satisfaction of knowing that we have made several thousand children happy, that we have lightened the burden of overworked nurses, and that we have probably had a part, real though indirect, in the treatment of many a little sufferer in one of the most trying situations that ever confronted this community."

PUBLIC LECTURES ON MENTAL HEALTH

Numerous public addresses and lectures on mental hygiene are being given this autumn under the auspices of the Association's Mental Hygiene Committee.

In cooperation with the Willard State Hospital Mental Hygiene Committee, five addresses were delivered up State this month. Mr. Hastings addressed the Child Welfare League at Newark, N. Y., on October 5, and the semi-annual meeting of the Willard Committee at the Willard State Hospital on October 6. Miss Taft addressed public meetings in Canandaigua on October 9; Penn Yan, October 10; and Hornell October 11.

The New York City Department of Education, in cooperation with the Association's Mental Hygiene Committee, arranged a series of six mental hygiene lectures in its public lecture course at the Y. M. C. A. Hall in Harlem for this season. Mr. Folks lectured October 11 on "Why Should So Many Go Insane?"; Mr. Hastings, October 13, on "The Social Cost of Mental Disease"; Dr. Stewart Paton of Princeton University, October 25, on "Preventable Mental Diseases and How to Prevent Them," and Dr. Ira S. Wire, a member of the New York City Board of Education, November 1, on "Social Hygiene an Aid to Mental Health." The attendance has averaged 265.

Dr. William Mabon, superintendent of the Manhattan State Hospital, will lecture in this course on November 8 on "How the Empire State Cares for 35,000 Insane." The concluding lecture of the series will be delivered November 15 by Dr. Henry Smith Williams, whose subject will be "Importing Insanity." Three of the lectures thus far have been illustrated.

Courses in Bronx and Brooklyn.

Similar Courses are to be arranged in Bronx and Brooklyn Boroughs during the second term.
17 FREE CLINICS
FOR NERVOUS AND MENTAL DISORDERS

List of Dispensaries Where Persons
Who Fear a Mental Breakdown
Can Get Help

The State hospitals for mental diseases continue to extend and improve their outpatient departments. Most of the State hospitals and several of the general hospitals in New York City now maintain dispensaries or clinics where free diagnosis, advice and treatment are given in cases of nervous and mental disorders, especially in their earlier and milder stages.

These institutions invite any person who desires a frank talk with a mental specialist about his own mental condition or about the mental health of a relative or friend to call at the nearest dispensary or clinic.

The Mental Hygiene Committee of this Association, which has cooperated with the State Hospital Commission in establishing, supervising and advertising these clinics, has just published a leaflet containing a list of the dispensaries throughout the State, with their locations and hours. The list follows:

State Hospital Clinics.

ST. LAWRENCE STATE HOSPITAL
Clinics at
1. Ogdensburg, State Hospital, Saturday, all day.
2. Malone, Alice Hyde Memorial Hospital, one day each month.
3. Watertown, Sisters' Hospital, once a month.
4. City Hospital, once a month.

MANHATTAN STATE HOSPITAL
Clinics at
1. New York City, Cornell Clinic, 27th Street and First Avenue, 10:00 to 11:30 Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. 7:00 to 8:00 P.M. Tuesday.
2. Yonkers, St. Joseph's Hospital, 8:30 P.M. Thursday.

HUDSON STATE HOSPITAL
Clinic at
1. Poughkeepsie, Department of Health Rooms, 7:00 P.M., Monday.

GOWANDA STATE HOSPITAL
Clinics at
1. Buffalo, Welcome Hall Dispensary, First and third Tuesdays of each month, 8:00 to 9:00 P.M.
2. Jamestown, Women's Christian Association Hospital, Third Wednesday of each month, 1:00 to 5:00 P.M.
3. Salamanca, Salamanca Hospital, Fourth Thursday in May, 1:00 to 4:00 P.M.

KING'S PARK STATE HOSPITAL
Clinic at
1. Brooklyn, Williamsburgh General Hospital, Bed- ford Avenue and South Third Street, 10:00 to 12:00 Saturday.

BROOKLYN STATE HOSPITAL
Clinics at
1. Flushing, State Hospital, 10:00 A.M. to 3:00 P.M. Saturday.
2. Flushing, Pulmonary Memorial Clinic of the Long Island College Hospital, Henry and Amity Streets, 8:30 P.M. Tuesday.
3. Brooklyn, Williamsburgh General Hospital, Bed- ford Avenue and South Third Street, 10:00 to 12:00 Saturday.

CENTRAL ISLIP STATE HOSPITAL
Clinic at
1. New York City, Cornell Clinic, 27th Street and First Avenue, 7:00 to 8:00 P.M. Thursday.

MIDDLETOWN STATE HOSPITAL
Clinic at
1. Middletown, State Hospital, 2:00 to 4:00 P.M. Tuesday.

BUFFALO STATE HOSPITAL
Clinic at
1. Buffalo, State Hospital, 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. daily.

BINGHAMTON STATE HOSPITAL
Clinic at
1. Binghamton, State Hospital, 9:00 to 10:00 daily and by appointment.

ROCHESTER STATE HOSPITAL
Clinic at
1. Rochester, State Hospital, 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. daily.

In addition to these institutions, the Willard and Utica State Hospitals provide for consultations with patients coming from these parts.

CLINICS IN NEW YORK CITY

Among the general hospitals and dispensaries in Manhattan which conduct clinics are Cornell University Medical College Dispensary, First Avenue and 27th Street; Post Graduate Hospital, 20th Street and Second Avenue; Vanderbilt Clinic, 69th Street and Amsterdam Avenue; Neurological Institute, 149 East 67th Street, and Mt. Sinai Hospital, 100th Street and Fifth Avenue.

In Brooklyn, in addition to the clinic at the State Hospital, there are clinics at the Williamsburgh General Hospital, Bedford Avenue and South Third Street, and the Long Island College Hospital, Henry and Amity Streets.

SOCIAL SERVICE AID

When desired, the hold agents of the State Hospitals will visit home and advise as to what steps should be taken to secure treatment or competent medical advice for mentally sick persons.

The Committee on Mental Hygiene of the State Charities Aid Commission furnishes information about the examination and treatment of the mentally ill, and about hospitals and dispensaries for mental disorders.

Upon request, the social workers of the committee will make home visits to locate, if possible, preventive social service to persons in danger of mental breakdowns.

The committee will supply speakers for public addresses on mental health. Literature on all phases of mental hygiene may be obtained on request. Address the correspondence to George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary, 106 East 22nd Street, New York City.

TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL IS NOT A MENACE

Court Rules That Health Is Not Endangered by Presence of Tuberculosis Institution

That a tuberculosis hospital or sanatorium is not a menace from a health point of view is the decision of the New Jersey Supreme Court brought against Atlantic County by the city of Northfield to prevent the county from erecting a tuberculosis hospital near that city. The State Board of Health had approved the site, but the city alleged that it would be a menace to health and that it would depreciate the value of property in the vicinity of the hospital. But the New Jersey court decided that the "evidence submitted does not justify the conclusion that any danger to health exists or can be reasonably apprehended through the operation of this institution, provided it is properly operated."

The court decided further that the claim that the establishment of the hospital near the city would materially reduce the market value of the adjacent real estate "cannot justify the relief sought." A case similar to this New Jersey case recently arose in New York City, and Health Commissioner Emerson ruled that the location of the Tuberculosis Clinic did not endanger public health.

Following is a list of the numerous publications of the State Charities Aid Association, which can be obtained from the office, 105 East Twenty-second street, New York City, upon request. The list of the association's numbered publications was published in a previous issue.

SALIENT FEATURES OF COM'R STRONG'S REPORT

STUDY OF STATE CHARITIES IS FAIR AND THOROUGH

Hon. Charles H. Strong, appointed by Governor Whitman on November 18, 1915, to inquire into the operation of the various State authorities having to do with the State charitable institutions, and also into the inspection of child-caring institutions in New York City, submitted his report to the Governor on October 25, 1916.

During the eleven months of his work the Commissioner, besides visiting numerous institutions and taking testimony from December 9, 1915, to April 24, 1916 (a typewritten record of which covers nearly 9,000 pages) analyzed and studied 900 exhibits. Commissioner Strong's report of 168 printed pages summarized in the closing four pages his recommendations.

Pending further study of the report itself, the State Charities Aid Association expresses no opinion as to the proposed recommendations, but it thinks that it can render no better service to the State charitable institutions than to reproduce in this number of THE S. C. A. A. NEWS Mr. Strong's recommendations in full and a review of some of the salient points in the report.

For Reorganization of State Board

The chief recommendation at which Commissioner Strong arrives, that of the reorganization of the State Board of Charities with six unpaid and three paid members, appointed without restriction as to residence, offers an entirely different solution of the admitted existing chaos than has yet been proposed. He suggests that of the three paid members of the Board, one, the President of the Board, should have administrative charge of the duties of the Board relating to State institutions, another should be the executive head of a proposed Bureau of Mental Deficiency, and a third, the executive head of a proposed Bureau of Dependent Children.

The conclusion which the State Charities Aid Association had reached as to the management of State charitable institutions, embodied in the two bills introduced by Senator Brown in the legislature of 1915, was that a State Commissioner of Charities should be created and given all the powers of the present Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities and of all the other miscellaneous minor boards having to do with sites, building, salaries, etc. In reaching this recommendation the Association was not considering the problem of the inspection and supervision of private charitable institutions by the State Board of Charities. Commissioner Strong was directed to include both subjects in his inquiry and reached the conclusion that the two broad fields, the supervision of State institutions and the supervision of private institutions, should be included in one comprehensive reorganization.

Report Goes Deeply into Subject

Several things are clear from even a hasty reading of Commissioner Strong's report: Although virile, clear-cut and stated with force, it is nevertheless thoroughly judicial both in form and in substance. No one can read the report without being impressed by its fairness, its comprehensive character, its disregard of personalities and its thoroughness.

It is also obvious that Mr. Strong has gone far more deeply into this whole subject than any other of the numerous special commissions which have covered this subject, incidentally to larger inquiries, in recent years. If the information which he has collected is not sufficient for the framing of a constructive (Continued on page 2.)

A STRANGE RECORD!

Is Some Evil Genius Dogging the State's Footsteps When It Starts New Institutions?

ASTONISHINGLY SMALL RESULTS FROM PROMISING BEGINNINGS

It seems as though some Evil Genius had dogged the steps of the State of New York for the last fifteen years, looking for opportunities to interpose some obstacle to the accomplishment of its humane purposes in providing new State institutions.

One sometimes hears the opinion expressed in the Capitol at Albany that the "uplifters" have run away with the State government and that the State is approaching financial disability through its new charitable and correctional enterprises. As a matter of fact, it is getting further and further behind. Notwithstanding many promising beginnings, it has steadily lost ground in the last fifteen years. It has steadily fallen behind as compared with other States. This was especially true, it must be said, during the years 1913 and 1914.

Many a Slip 'Twixt "Establishing" and Opening

Many promising beginnings were made by enacting statutes "establishing" institutions, but as "there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," there's many a slip between "establishing" an institution and actually opening it on any adequate scale.

Sometimes the site is never even secured. Sometimes the site is bought, but nothing further done. Sometimes preliminary steps are taken to make the site usable, and no later steps; and not infrequently, when the work has been well under way, the whole project has been abandoned.

the Fiscal Supervisor said that neither the Governor nor he should be members of it.

COMMISSION ON SITES, GROUNDS AND BUILDINGS USELESS

"During the first year of the life of the commission its report shows that the only real result was the approval of a request of one institution to buy additional land, and the location of several buildings at existing institutions, but there was no question of land and a dairy, and a change in the location of some other buildings. In the second and third years, nothing was accomplished. Genuine but unavailing efforts were made to select a site for the new institution for misdemeanants, and the appropriation of $50,000 for that greatly needed institution has lapsed.

A YEAR WITHOUT A MEETING

"Periods of six months and a year went by without a meeting of the commission. There has been no meeting since January 26, 1916. On one occasion, the commission considered a matter of some difficulty at considerable length, and then referred much of it to the board. One institution desired the commission to acquire a certain valuable tract of land. The council had requested 'on the table.' Later the institution felt compelled to ignore the commission. It went ahead and bought the tract, and the State Board of Charities has sanctioned the institution for the purchase. As an example of definiteness of expression, a declaration in the first report deserves attention: 'After due deliberation, it was agreed to locate north or south of the line between Albany and Syracuse. . . .'

"Now that the local boards of managers have gone on selecting sites for new buildings, the work could not stop; the commission had a met; the commission has been ignored."

WHAT COM'RS STRONG FOUND ABOUT N.Y. CITY CHILD-CARING INSTITUTIONS

The portion of Commissioner Strong's report which we have sketched above constitutes three-fourths of the report and is probably the portion in which the readers of The S. C. A. A. NEWS will be chiefly interested. The primary purpose of the inquiry was to straighten out, if possible, the tangle in relation to the State charitable institutions. Commissioner Strong was, however, requested by the Governor to also consider the question of the alleged failure on the part of the State Board of Charities to correct certain alleged conditions in child-caring institutions in New York City which the Department of Public Charities of New York City asserted it had discovered through a Special Inspection Committee of experts appointed by it. This was the portion of the inquiry which became highly controversial.

Commissioner Strong examines very carefully the constitutional and statutory provisions relating to the powers of the State Board of Charities and of the city authorities in relation to children cared for in private institutions. He sketches the development of the work of the State Board of Charities in the inspection of child-caring institutions, in the adoption of rules and regulations governing the inspection of institutions for the care of children and the retention of inmates in such institutions, and as to the enforcement of the recommendations growing out of its inspection. He then describes the work undertaken by the present city administration in New York in the appointment of an expert committee on child-caring work, the subsequent investigation of child-caring institutions, and the steps taken by the city to secure the adoption of such changes as it found necessary or desirable in various institutions.

FOUND SEVEN INSTITUTIONS VERY BAD

Commissioner Strong does not support Commissioner Kingsbury in his statement that certain of the institutions were "unfit for human habitation," but he does say in his statement that the condition of some of the institutions was "little less than public scandal and disgrace,"

"In this I feel compelled to say he was right. Seven, at least, of the twenty-four institutions must be thus described. In not all of these seven was this true in the same degree or for the same reasons. In some or all of these seven institutions there was no indulgence or indulgence worthy the name, and such as there was, was limited to a fraction of the children over the condition of the children. There were no toilets for the children, and no toilet facilities for the children. In another, it was impossible to tell from the records how many children had died during the year, whether it was one number or another, or still another. State Board Had Inspected for Twenty Years

"If this were the first or second year of official supervision, under rules that were in the making, this verdict might be harsh. But in view of the fact that most of these institutions have been receiving grants from the city for care and education, under regular inspection from the state board for twenty years, subject to rules calling in being of the children, for whatever may be necessary for their safety and health, and in the receipt of constant admonishment from the State Board, and, again, have some peculiarly solemn obligation to give the city the utmost possible satisfaction. That special training which would tend to offset the handicap with which they entered the race in life, it is certainly unjust to say that the condition was 'little less than public scandal and disgrace.'"
"Commissioner Kingsbury said, in his report to the Mayor:

"Naturally when we found on the cerement and sepulchres in which the beds were alive with vermin, in which the heads of boys and girls were itching, and in which there was evidence of the antecedents of methods of punishment prevailed, and which the children were disgracefully overworked and underfed, it made it unnecessary to be fully to commit children to these institutions and to decline to accept as reliable the official reports of the State Board of Charities."

"With some qualifications, this statement was correct. There was no institution of which all these things might have been truthfully said, nor do I understand the declaration to mean that there was. There was one institution in which the beds were alive with vermin; in another they existed to some extent. There were twelve institutions, or one-half of those on the list, in which nits or vermin or both were found in the heads of some or many of the children. While it is not easy to keep an institution free from vermin, the constant and intelligent attention will.

Antiquated Methods of Punishment

"There were four institutions in which antiquated methods of punishment prevailed, not inhuman or even necessarily cruel, but methods of punishment antecedent to the kind of discipline that will genuinely improve even an exceptionally unruly child; such punishments, for example, as starving a child on the head with a key, making him spend a part of his fifteen minutes at dinner standing with his face to the wall, making him sleep on the floor barefooted in bed, making him wear bi-colored trousers, whipping large girls with a strap on the handcuffs."

"There were six institutions out of the twenty-four in which the older girls were overcrowded at hard labor institution, with little or no compensation, and were thereby cut off opportunity for scholastic and real industrial or vocational training, but in one only or two cases would it be fair to say that they were 'disgracefully overworked."

Children of Three Institutions Underfed

"There were three institutions in which the children were inadequately fed, and seven in which they were impoverished, on the basis of minimum dietaries approved by the State Board of Charities and circulated among the institutions by that board.

State Board Failed to Exercise Its Powers

"I find that the State Board of Charities was censorious for failure to issue certificates of non-compliance with its rules, or for failure to withhold certificates of compliance therewith, which is at least as often as they should have been issued or withheld, as to every one of the twenty-four institutions on the city's controverted list."

"I find that this is true on the basis of the reports of the State Board's own inspection. They were too meager to the testimony of the institution representatives. Serious faults, frequently criticized in these reports, most of which could have been remedied, were permitted to remain unattended to for years, and, as a result, proper care and training were not provided.

"I find it is beyond question that such vigorous, yet reasonable and just action as the State Board might have taken from time to time prior to 1914 relative to these institutions, would have resulted in such improved conditions as would have made it unnecessary to undertake the city's investigation in 1914 and 1915.

"I find that the reports of the city's inspectors also indicated the Board's indifference for negligence as to certificates concerning every one of the twenty-four institutions, except in such cases, if any, as those in which the State Board may have recently withheld a certificate on the suggested case of the city department.

Case Against Board Proved on Own Authorities

"The City has proved its case against the State Board out of the pages of the State Board's own inspection reports. The City's investigation and its inspection reports have served to bring into the light what was already wrapped up in the records of the State Board and lying, for the most part, unheeded in institution desks."

"The Board's inspection reports were not 'widely at variance with the findings of the city's inspectors.' There were many additions, of course, in some cases on the whole edition is indicated. It is evident that the inspectors found defects and faults which the State Board inspectors did not, and sometimes the fault was the same, but in the main there were not wide variations in the ultimate conclusions of the two sets of inspectors, however widely the ratings differed.

Failed to Enforce Rules

"What have been the methods of rule enforcement actually employed by the State Board? From 1895 to date, the board has once, and only once, issued a certificate of non-compliance with its rules, and this was in July, 1910, one day after the date of a report of inspectors of the Department of Finance in New York City reflecting most seriously upon an institution in Brooklyn."

"Apparently the State Board has never once withheld the certificate of compliance, and has stopped payments, for the reason alone that a State law required the board to comply with the rule and the statute as to industrial and educational training, although this failure may have been persistent for four or more years."

SUMMARY OF COMMISSIONER STRONG'S RECOMMENDATIONS

"For the sake of convenience, I shall restate here in summary form the principal recommendations contained in this report. I recommend that a reorganization of the State Board of Charities, instead of an unpaid board of twelve, appointed by the Governor from districts, with eight year terms of the board selecting its own president and without qualifications specified in the law, the board should be divided into a board of nine, of whom at least one should be a woman, and of whom three should be paid and six should not be paid, appointed by the governor from the state at large, to serve during good behavior and removable by the Governor on notice for cause; special qualifications for membership to be described in the law, to the end that all the functional activities of the board should be discharged by persons with special training therefor, the three paid members to be president of the board and the chairman of the board and the new bureau of each of the board, namely, the Bureau for Mental Deficiency, and the Board for Dependent Children, who may be designated as president and bureau chairman, respectively, at time of appointment, by the governor, and the duties to be imposed upon these three members will require that they give all their time to the service. The recommendation in the statute of specific qualifications for certain members of the State Board of Charities, with special reference to the several classes of state institutions supervised by the board, such as a penologist or one skilled in the relief of the delinquent; an educationalist; a physician with special knowledge of tubercular diseases; a physician who is a general practitioner, with special training and experience; a lawyer; a physician with special training in psychiatry, to serve as chairman of the new Board for Mental and Deficiency Delinquent Children, and one who is generally conversant with dependency and the several forms of poor relief.

Board Should Meet Bi-Monthly

"I recommend that the board should be required to meet bi-monthly at least twice a month, as in Massachusetts. Under the present law, there is no requirement as to the frequency of meetings.

"I recommend that new administrative and executive functions should be conferred, in order to convert an advisory board into an independent authoritative supervisory board. This should include the duties of the Fiscal Superintendent, surrendering to the comptroller of said duties as relate solely to audit. Provision should be made for such institutional records as will exhibit financial costs, so as to give the board of central control by the board over expenditures, provision should be made for modifications or elimination of any special allotment so that the institutions may work more smoothly and with greater initiative. Other new administrative and executive functions should be the provision of insurance under joint contract and the review of building plans for the State institutions. These and other duties of an administrative or executive character should be imposed upon the president of the board in the belief that efficiency in matters of finance can assist with the service. Upon him also would fall the responsibility for executing the plans of the board with respect to institutional development; for promoting new institutions after legislative authorization by the acquisition of sites and buildings within the approved sites as is provided; for developing institutional industries on the farm and in the shop, to the end that the Institution of the board may be more economically administered; and to obtain adequate appropriations for extending and improving the inspection service over public and private institutions as contemplated in the constitution and the laws.

Bureau for Mental Deficiency

"Pending the adoption of such new constitutional provision as will permit the establishment of an independent State department for the supervision of the mentally defective, known generally as the feeble-minded, I recommend the establishment of a new bureau in the State Board of Charities, to be known as the Bureau for Mental Deficiency, the chairman of which is to be one of the paid members of the board, and who must be a physician with special training in psychiatry, and associated with whom is to be a new unpaid advisory council, named by the chairman and approved by the State Board.

"In the State Hospital Commission, the State has made independent provision for the supervision of the insane, who furnish no graver problem than do the mentally defective.

"I recommend the restoration to the State Board of Charities of the power to re-view building plans for almshouses in New York City, this power having been taken away by the legislature in the last session, and I say, if the power is restored, in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, I perceive no adequate reason for the exception of New York City from the procedure obtaining over the remainder of the State.

"I recommend an express grant of power to the State Board of Charities to adopt rules and regulations for the reception and retention of inmates in State charitable institutions, for the promotion of public health and for the protection of the public. This power the board now possesses with respect to private institutions.

"I recommend continued executive approval of contracts, if any, the Senate Committee on Civil Service and writing into the law standards of compensation for institutional service.

"I recommend prompt provision for a new institution for defective delinquents.

"I recommend for adult female delinquents care in public institutions exclusively.

For Periodic Conferences

"I recommend periodic conferences under statutory regulation among the heads of the three great institutional groups, the charities, the insane, and the insane, for the purpose of securing uniformity in salary schedules, as far as may be practicable, in the several institutions, and to determine what, if anything, could advantageously be bought by joint purchase for all institutions.

"I recommend careful revision of the State Charities Law and the Poor Law, and have indicated herein certain definite rules that should be accomplished thereby; but this revision should await the determination by the executive and the legislature as to whether or not the State administration shall be adopted.

"I recommend such extension as there may be under the existing constitution of the visitational power of the State Board of Charities over private charitable institutions.

Bureau for Dependent Children

"I recommend the establishment of a new bureau in the State Board of Charities, to be known as the Bureau for Dependent Children, the chairman of which is to be one of the paid members of the board, and who should be capable of spending time in the care of children in private institutions and in foster homes. This bureau will, among other things, be able to develop new and reasonable standards of child care in the institutions; promote the placing out of certain classes of children in the family home; make uniform the institution methods of placing out; adopt measures to lessen the mortality rate in founding asylums, such as to reduce the number of surrenders of infants to the asylums by mothers who could be aided to care for their children in the home and advance new measures of outdoor relief, in order to preserve for children their natural home; persistently stimulate, by publicity and speech, an increase in financial support for the institutions, both from the public treasury and the private benefactors, to enable the institutions to conform to reasonable standards of child care; and the chairman of this bureau will aid the president of the board in obtaining appropriations needed to meet the imperative demand for enlargement of the inspector staff of the board.

"I recommend that the State Board of Charities be compelled by statute to issue, when warranted, its own affirmative certificates of compliance by private institutions with the rules and regulations, said certificates to be a prerequisite to payments to the institutions by the local disbursing officers.

For Change of Charter

"I recommend repeal of the charter provision requiring, as a condition of payment to the private institutions, a certificate by the Department of Public Charities in the City of New York that the institutions have complied with the rules and regulations of the State Board of Charities; to the end that inspection by this department shall be permissible and not impliedly compulsory as it now is, and that compulsory inspection shall continue to be imposed upon the State Board and upon that board alone.

"I recommend the abolition of the office of the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, established under an article in the State Charities Law entitled "Regulation of State Charitable Institutions."

"I recommend the abolition of the Salary Classification Commission.

"I recommend the abolition of the Commission on Sites, Grounds and Buildings.

"I recommend the abolition of the Board of Examiners of Feeble Minded, Criminals and Other Defectives."

RED CROSS SEALS ARE SELLING WELL

Although the 1916 Red Cross Seal Sale campaign to raise funds to finance the warfare against tuberculosis has been in progress only two weeks, early returns from some localities show an increase of from 25 to 100 per cent. over last year's rate of sale.

One agent writes: "I have sold all the seals you have sent me and have orders for as many more. Rush shipment."

Nearly 30,000,000 seals have already been distributed among local agents by the State Charities Aid Association, which is in charge of the seal campaign in New York State outside of Greater New York. Although the distribution has been made in the ratio of ten seals per inhabitant, there is a persistent call from a number of cities for "more seals."

The sale of seals by mail is being strongly emphasized again this year. Already the association has under way the distribution of more than 50,000 mail-sale letters, and large additional orders for these are coming in daily. With the probability of 100,000 letters being prepared by local agents, there is every indication that the total number of seal-carrying letters sent to prospective purchasers in this State during the 1916 campaign will eventually reach the mark of 1,000,000.

MOHANSIC STATE HOSPITAL

1907: State Hospital Commission authorized to select a site in the southeastern part of the State to relieve the crowded conditions in the insane hospitals of the metropolitan district.

1909: A site of 600 acres costing about $100,000 was selected at Yorktown, Westchester County.

1910: Expenditure of $2,000,000 for erection of a hospital for 2,000 patients authorized. A railroad spur to the property was built later at a cost of $100,000, and various improvements made on the premises.

1916: Project abandoned before a building for patients had been erected. The sixty patients who had been housed in the old farm buildings were crowded into other hospitals.

NEW YORK TRAINING SCHOOL FOR BOYS

1904: After years of agitation begun by the late Jacob A. Riis, after a visit to the House of Refuge, a law was passed creating a site commission for a reformatory for the modern cottage type, to take the place of the old, overcrowded, unsanitary and insanitary institutions in the State.

1907: The commission having failed to agree on a site, it was abolished and a new one appointed.

1909: A site of 600 acres near Poughkeepsie, at $156,000, was selected.

1910: After a large part of appropriations exceeding $800,000 had been expended, the institution was abandoned without ever being opened to receive inmates. This institution and the Mohansic State Hospital were abandoned on account of New York watershed considerations.

LEITCHWORTH VILLAGE

1907: After years of agitation for an institution of modern type to care for feebleminded persons from New York City and vicinity, a commission was appointed to secure a site.

1908: A site of over 2,000 acres, sufficient for an institution of 3,000 inmates and costing $188,576, was purchased at Thiells, Rockland County.

1910: Still another site purchased at Wingdale, which, after large sums had been spent, was declared unsuitable, and building operations were suspended. Claims for damages by contractors and sub-contractors were met at large expense to the State.

1916: Following a suggestion that the land purchased at Beekman for the State Industrial Farm Colony should be turned over to Leitchworth, the whole matter was referred to the reorganized commission of new persons, authorized to decide between the situations plan for letting contracts. An appropriation of $200,000 was made. This is the situation at present and the State decided to have a new Sing Sing.

868 PARALYSIS CASES EXAMINED AT 33 CLINICS

The clinics of the State Department of Health for the after-care of cases of infantile paralysis in New York State, outside of New York City, have been continued during the past month under the direction of Dr. Robert W. Lovett, Professor of Orthopedic Surgery in the Harvard Medical School, and his assistants, Dr. John T. Hodgson and Dr. Armitage Whitley.

A total of thirty-three clinics have been held in the counties of Westchester, Nassau, Suffolk, Columbia, Dutchess, Orange and Sullivan. Up to December 1st, 868 cases had been examined.

Four supervising nurses have been assigned to territory with headquarters in White Plains, in Poughkeepsie, in Middletown and in Mineola.

The After-Care Committee of the State Charities Aid Association has had a representative at each clinic to advise in regard to the investigation and relief of families of patients examined at the clinics, to arrange for the purchase of the braces and other appliances ordered (collecting such part of the cost as the families were found able to pay) to supplement the orthopedic work of the clinical staff with needed social service, and to assist in other ways suggested by the State Board of Health.

As the first clinics and their administration were more or less experimental, details big and little came up for adjustment. Perhaps the most important service the Committee has rendered, through its Secretaries, has been in advising, in aiding and in many ways supplementing the efforts of the State Department of Health and the clinic staff.

The committee's representatives have been able to do numerous things promptly when the technical limitations of a State Department promised delay.

In Westchester County, the social service was turned over to a special committee which had been organized for the after-care of poliomyelitis cases. In Nassau County the Nassau County Association was asked to assume this responsibility. In Columbia, Dutchess, Orange, and Rockland Counties the Agencies for Dependent Children will assume responsibility for the social service work needed. In Suffolk County, the relief... problem has not been so easily handled, as there is no county agency doing relief work. There is a Suffolk County Committee of the Association which visits the almshouse, but which does not engage in relief work. A social service worker from the Central Office has been sent to Suffolk County to administer needed relief in urgent cases and to see what can be done in effecting a more permanent organization.

What Was Done For One Baby

As typical of the problems which will be met throughout the State, one of the Suffolk County cases can be cited. A family put their small savings in land. The venture was an unfortunate one and a year ago the mother committed suicide, leaving five children. The older boys have turned out badly. A girl of seven is at present the housekeeper in the home. The baby, two and a half years old, was paralyzed but was not reported to the Health Department. A nurse in a temporary hospital in the county heard of the case, went to the house and took the baby to the hospital. The child was in a filthy condition. After passing the acute stage of the disease, it was taken into the home of a neighbor equally poor, but clean as well as charitable. This woman had a paralyzed child of her own and had taken into her home four normal children of a sister. The social worker found that the father had taken the child from the home of this charitable neighbor into his own very unkempt abode. The two children were alone in the house without fire, eating their noon-day meal, which consisted of bread only.

After great difficulty, the social worker found a woman willing to board the baby, and it was taken to her home. It was found that many people in the community were afraid to take the baby into their homes, fearing the danger of contagion had not passed. In counties where there is no organized social work, as in this one, it is probable that follow-up work by a social worker from the Central Committee will be necessary.

"States Have Souls"

Local physicians are cooperating with the State Department of Health in a most gratifying way in bringing their patients to the clinics for examination. The press throughout the State is rendering good service in reporting the clinics, so that the community is more and more realizing the opportunities offered by the Department of Health through the traveling clinics. The Newburgh News comments editorially as follows:

"If there has been a question whether states have souls, surely it is answered in the affirmative in the solicitude which health departments are showing little victims of infantile paralysis. In this State, the State department with the cooperation of local health officers, is doing everything that possibly could be done to help the patients."

More Clinics To Be Held

The State Department of Health has already decided to hold clinics for the examination of cases recovering from poliomyelitis in Saugerties, Kingston, Athens, Windham, Canajoharie, Florida, Herkimer, Glen Falls, Saratoga Springs, Schenectady, Oneida, Syracuse, Oneonta, Canastota, Norwich, Hancock, Clayville, Binghamton, Cortland, Oswego, and Fulton.

Although a definite schedule has not been adopted, other clinics will be held in other parts of the State until the entire State is covered. The following additional names have been added during the past month to the special committee which was appointed by the State Charities Aid Association, at the request of the State Department of Health, to co-operate in the State-wide work: Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, New York City; Mr. Charles C. Wickwire, Cortland, Mrs. A. A. Jewell, Cortland, and Dr. F. W. Betts, Syracuse.

There have also been a few declinations among persons asked to serve as members of the committee, as published in the last issue of The News.

THREE COUNTIES VOTE FAVORABLY ON TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL QUESTION

Warren and Livingston Counties to Establish New Institutions—Rensselaer to Replace Its Outgrown Hospital with a New One on a Different Site—Victory After a Hard-Fought Campaign

The voters of Rensselaer, Livingston, and Warren Counties, at the general election on November 7th, gave substantial majorities to propositions making appropriations for new tuberculosis hospitals.

The table below gives the population of the three counties, the sums of money voted on, the vote for the hospital, the vote against, and the majority for the hospital in each case:

In Rensselaer the proposition submitted was to appropriate $150,000 for a new county hospital to replace the one established in 1908 before the enactment of the county hospital law. This institution is too small, having only fifty-one beds, no provision whatever for incipient cases or for children; and its unfortunate location on the grounds of the almshouse restricts its usefulness. The new institution will provide 200 beds and will be located on a suitable site a short distance outside the city of Troy.

A Taxpayers' League bitterly opposed the hospital proposition, in Rensselaer, and its weekly newspaper devoted its columns for the four issues preceding election to misstatements of facts, half-truths, innuendos, and attacks upon the men and women who led the campaign for the hospital proposition. But when the votes were counted it was found that a decisive victory for the cause of hospital care for the tubercular sick as a means of protection for the community and as a benefit to the sick, had been won.

In each county an energetic campaign of popular education was carried on by a committee organized by the State Charities Aid Association. Hon. J. W. Wadsworth, Jr., United States Senator; Dr. W. D. Lauderdale of Genesee, and Dr. Charles V. Patchin of Dansville, led the movement on behalf of the hospital in Livingston County. W. Leland Thompson, President of the Troy Board of Education, and Palmer C. Ricketts, President of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, were the President and Chairman respectively of the Executive Committee of the Rensselaer County New Sanatorium Campaign Organization. In Warren County, Hon. Frank Hooper of North River and George F. Bayle of Glen Falls were at the head of the Hospital Campaign Committee.
Again, the Feebleminded
By Homer Folks

The April and May, 1914, numbers of The S. C. A. A. News were devoted almost wholly to the subject of the feebleminded. An effort was made, in the May, 1914, number to present a sketch of existing conditions throughout the State.

Just as The New York Times presented the actual facts as to "The 100 neediest cases in New York City" before the recent holiday season, so The S. C. A. A. News of May, 1914, presented a picture of the condition of some scores of the most needy and menacing of the cases of uncared-for feeblemindedness throughout the State.

The high lights in the picture were hundreds of feebleminded persons, within the knowledge of poor law officials, children's agents, and others, remaining at large in the community, doing incalculable harm and multiplying the numbers of feebleminded to be cared for in the future; several thousand feebleminded persons in institutions not intended for their care (almshouses, reformatories, prisons and orphan asylums); and the various State institutions filled to overflowing and with long waiting lists.

State Falling Behind in Its Task

In the nearly three years that have since elapsed, the main outlines of the picture have in no wise changed. A few hundred additional beds have been provided at the various State institutions. Letchworth Village has grown from 100 to 342 and the increase in the number of feebleminded at large in the community has undoubtedly been far greater than the additional provision made by the State so that the number of feebleminded at large is steadily increasing instead of diminishing.

"Greatest Social Problem in State"

Since that date a special State Commission on the Mentally Defective has studied the subject and made its report in a bulky volume. Commissioner Charles H. Strong, appointed to look into the operation of the various State charitable institutions, after months of continuous study of the subject, says that "mental deficiency is today perhaps the greatest social problem that confronts the State" and urges, in addition to institutional provision, the establishment of a Bureau of Mental Deficiency in connection with the State Board of Charities, the head of the Bureau to be a paid, full-time expert and a member of that Board. He should be, according to Commissioner Strong, a physician with special distinction and training in psychiatry.

Recently a survey of mental deficiency in one county in the State has been made under the auspices of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene with the cooperation of the U. S. Public Health Service and many local organizations and authorities. The results of this survey are in the course of compilation and, when completed, should more accurately focus a picture which is already clear in its main outline.

Have More Knowledge Than We Apply

In fact, we already have a vast deal more of knowledge about the feebleminded than we apply. We know the mischief they are doing but we have not as yet achieved a definite constructive policy backed by unanimity of opinion and effort. The main outlines of such a constructive program have, however, become quite clear. Some of the outstanding facts which indicate this may be briefly recalled.

33,000 Feebleminded in State

The number of recognizable cases of feeblemindedness in the State is undoubtedly at least 33,000. The number now cared for in institutions designed for their care is 5,500. The number in other institutions not intended for the feebleminded and where they should not be is probably not far from 6,000. The number remaining at large in the community, therefore, is not less than 21,500.

Need Places for New York City Cases

Of the four State institutions for the feebleminded, three are located respectively 250, 290 and about 350 miles from New York City. One only, Letchworth Village, still largely undeveloped, is near New York City. To this fact is probably due the unfortunate result that, while New York City has half the population... of the State and provides approximately 70 per cent of the State's income, only 36 per cent of the inmates of the State institutions for the feebleminded come from the City of New York. It is clear, therefore, that the first step to be taken by the State, according to any reasonable standard of financial equity, is to complete Letchworth Village to its full capacity as planned.

Should Complete Letchworth Village
The essential facts as to Letchworth Village are as follows:

- Present capacity: 342
- New construction under way or definitely authorized: 290
- Total accommodations completed or under construction: 632
- Letchworth Village is planned to accommodate: 3,000
- Total number of beds still to be provided for: 2,368
- Total amount expended to June 30, 1916, for lands and buildings: $821,717.10
- Amount available from unexpended appropriations: 308,315.39
- Additional amount authorized by legislature of 1916: 191,000.00
- Total amount already expended, now available, or authorized: $1,321,032.49
- Amount required in addition to the above to complete Letchworth Village for a total of 3,000 inmates, if done under one contract: $2,186,403.62

The statesman-like thing would be to authorize the Board of Managers of the village to let one contract for its completion and to appropriate a million dollars this year and the other million a year hence. This would provide, in the very near future, 3,000 beds for the feebleminded in State institutions near New York City instead of 342.

For Districting the State
Meanwhile, the question of a better organization and more effective utilization of the State institutions for the feebleminded could be worked out. Instead of having several institutions devoted to one class of the feebleminded and receiving inmates from all over the State, many of them coming long distances at large expense and involving hardship to themselves and to their parents and relatives, a district plan could be worked out whereby each institution would receive all classes of the feebleminded and both sexes from its vicinity. The State could be districted for the institutions for the feebleminded as it is districted for the State hospitals for the insane. Each hospital for the insane receives all classes of the insane from its district.

All Classes in Same Institution
The per capita cost of caring for the feebleminded in institutions can undoubtedly be substantially diminished when it is possible to receive all classes of the feebleminded into one institution, with a site large enough to permit the necessary degree of separation of the sexes and of various types of feebleminded. It is difficult to provide sufficient employment for the inmates when women only are received in an institution. On the other hand their services can be utilized very effectively in an institution which receives young children needing care. They can do much of the laundry work and also of the making and repairing of clothing for a large institution. Male inmates can be made useful about the grounds and buildings of a large institution. In fact it is distinctly an unnecessarily expensive plan to maintain different classes of the feebleminded in separate institutions.

Clinics for Feebleminded Are Needed
Another respect in which the institutions for the feebleminded could well follow the example recently set by the State hospitals for the insane is the establishment of out-patient departments. A very much wiser selection of inmates for admission to the State institutions for the feebleminded could be made if these institutions were to establish out-patient departments in the larger cities in their respective communities or districts.

To these out-patient departments, at stated intervals, a specialist in mental deficiency from the State institution could go to examine and give advice regarding any persons brought for such examination from the ungraded classes in the public schools or brought by children's agents, relief societies, probation officers, poor law officers, or others.

Defective Delinquents
One of the most pressing matters is that of provision for the disorderly, turbulent or even criminally disposed types of the defective. The reformatory institutions, both juvenile and adult, are most anxious to rid themselves of this class of inmates. They interfere with the efficient operation of reformatory methods among others, and their own reformation is not to be expected. The reformatory institutions have made various efforts to secure the transfer of defective delinquents admitted to their care to institutions for the feebleminded. This is a difficult matter and in practice oftentimes impossible. Under such circumstances the reformatories have sometimes simply returned defective delinquents to the local authorities of the counties from which they came and left it to such authorities to make such other provision as they can. Institutions for the feebleminded, when they have received inmates of this character, either by transfer from reformatory institutions or by original commitment, have found such persons a disturbing factor in their population. Some proportion of the defectives who find their way into court, if committed to a reformatory institution, do not present special difficulties in their subsequent care; others, especially if no means of segregation exist, are the source of grave difficulties.

The facts stated in the last number of The News as to the number of State institutions which have been "established" but as to which little subsequent progress has been made, do not encourage one in proposing the establishment of additional institutions for defective delinquents. Undoubtedly that course should be followed as soon as it becomes a matter of possible accomplishment. Meanwhile, each reformatory institution will always need some provision, somewhat separated from the other inmates of the institution, in which it can place border-line cases and keep for a time the disturbing and unruly inmates pending final decision and disposition. And each institution for the feebleminded must expect to find among those admitted to its care a certain proportion who are turbulent and disorderly and do not fit readily into its population. A practical program for the immediate future would seem to be the building up on the part both of the reformatories and of the institutions for the defective, of a suitable provision for border-line cases, leaving to a few years later the establishment of intermediate institutions.

One of the first steps which should be taken is the provision of an additional cottage at Newark for defective-delinquent women. First among new institutions should be that for defective-delinquent women.
STATE HOSPITAL SOCIAL WORKERS HOLD CONFERENCE

Twelve Field Agents Hear Addresses, Discuss Problems and Report on Their Activities

The social service workers of the State hospitals, most of whom have been appointed during the past year, were together for the first time when they attended the quarterly conference of superintendents and managers of the State hospitals on Ward's Island on December 12.

In the morning they had a general conference with the superintendents and managers and listened to a helpful paper on "Practical Functions of a Psychiatric Dispensary," by Dr. John T. MacCurdy, Voluntary Assistant in Psychiatry at the Psychiatric Institute.

In the afternoon the social service workers had a separate session with Mr. Everett S. Elwood, Secretary of the State Hospital Commission, presiding. An address on "The Importance of Social Service in Connection with State Hospitals for the Insane" was read by Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

Dr. George H. Kirby, Director of Clinical Psychiatry at Manhattan State Hospital, led a discussion on "What Can Social Service in the New York State Hospitals Accomplish as an Aid to Medical Diagnoses and Treatment?" Dr. Horatio M. Pollock, statistician of the State Hospital Commission, discussed the topic, "What Statistics Should Be Kept Concerning the Work, and Why?"

Mr. Horace A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Mental Hygiene, discussed the topic, "What Social Resources Can Be Advantageously Utilized by Field Workers?"

Good Results Being Obtained

Each field worker—and there is now a field worker in all but one of the thirteen hospitals—reported on her work since July 1. A great variety of useful service has been performed to assist the doctors in obtaining information about patients and also in helping convalescing patients and in preventing mental breakdowns of persons who have never been patients in a State hospital.

It was indicated that already the social workers have gone far toward justifying the expectations of those who have long and perseveringly urged their employment. The only hospital which is still without a field agent has put in a requisition for money to employ one this year. One of the larger hospitals located in the metropolitan district already feels the need of two social workers. Following is a list of the workers and the State hospitals to which they are attached:

Utica........Mrs. Clara B. Johnson
Hudson River. Miss Nellie A. Doughty
Buffalo........Miss Lida P. Brodhead
St. Lawrence. Miss Zaida B. Maxiner.
Rochester......Miss Anna L. McPherson
Middletown......Miss Mildred H. Hurley
Gowanda.....Miss Florence A. Armstrong
Kings Park......Miss Helen E. Martin
Brooklyn......Mrs. Frances C. Tanner
Manhattan.......Miss Amelia. J. Massopust
Central Islip.....Miss Mary E. Dunn

The day following the conference the workers visited the office of the State Charities Aid Association and studied the methods and records of the Mental Hygiene Committee, after which they were entertained at luncheon by Miss Florence M. Rhet, Chairman of the Committee.

BETTER HOSPITAL TREATMENT FOR SYPHILIS NEEDED

Study Recently Made Emphasizes the Inadequacy and Ineffectiveness of the Present Facilities

At the request of the Committee on Mental Hygiene, Mr. J. J. Weber, Executive Secretary of the Association's Committee on Hospitals, made a study during the past summer of the facilities now provided in general hospitals in New York State outside of New York City for the diagnosis and treatment of venereal diseases, especially syphilis, which is the chief preventable cause of insanity.

Forty-two hospitals filled out and returned the questionnaire which was sent to them. The answers indicate that on the whole the facilities are inadequate and ineffective. Apparently not appreciating the significance of the problem, many of the hospitals provide no facilities for treatment. Even where treatment is provided, it is not thoroughgoing and as effective as it might be. Follow-up work is neglected, and records are inadequate.

What the Study Showed

Here are some of the facts brought out by the study:

Only 19 of the 42 hospitals take free syphilitic patients of both sexes.
Only 4 out of the 42 hospitals take any steps through their social service or other departments to see that the treatment is continued.
Only 8 hospitals are equipped for Wassermann tests.

Only 9 hospitals furnish salvarsan treatment free, though this is the generally recognized specific.

Only 1 hospital requires a negative Wassermann as a condition of discharging a patient.

Recommendations Made

1. That systematic effort be undertaken to secure a more extensive and more thorough treatment of these diseases by the general hospitals and dispensaries in the State.

2. That the Committee on Hospitals make a thorough study of the methods, records, follow-up work, and literature of the Brooklyn Dispensary as a pioneer piece of work of this character.

3. That the American Social Hygiene Association or the New York Social Hygiene Society be asked to send an exhibit on this subject, similar to that shown at Coney Island last summer, to the leading cities of the State, and in other ways to assist in a general educational effort.

4. That the State Department of Health be asked to call special attention from time to time, in its bulletins and other publications, to the fact that it makes Wassermann tests at the request of health officers or physicians free of charge and to cooperate in such other ways as the Department may find practicable.

5. That the Committee on Mental Hygiene and the Committee on Hospitals, in co-operation and concerted action with the Social Hygiene Association and the State health authorities, bring before the hospitals and dispensaries of the State, outside of New York City, facts in regard to the relation of these diseases to public health, and urge them to take definite steps to secure adequate diagnosis and treatment of these diseases in their respective localities.

A PHYSICIAN ADDED TO THE CHILD-PLACING STAFF

The Child-Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association has engaged Dr. Eleanor Bertine on part time, to make physical examination of children who are awaiting placement in free family homes and to furnish treatment for such as require it.

The agency has provided for a thorough mental as well as physical examination of these children. Through the generosity of the Public Education Association, the agency now has the service of Miss Elizabeth Irwin, a psychologist, two afternoons a week.

During November, twenty-one children were placed out through the Child Placing Agency—thirteen boys and eight girls. All of these children were placed in carefully selected homes, great pains being taken to choose the right child for the right home and to see that the child was satisfied with the home and the home with the child.
SIX WEEKS' REMARKABLE PROGRESS IN COUNTY T.B. HOSPITAL PROJECTS

The last six weeks of the old year witnessed a great deal of activity in the establishment of county tuberculosis hospitals. Forward steps were taken in nine counties: Nassau, Broome, Chautauqua, Chenango, Niagara, Steuben, Rensselaer, Warren and Livingston. It is remarkable that so much progress should have taken place in so brief a period.

In Nassau County the Board of Supervisors entered into a contract to purchase a 100-acre property near Farmingdale, and issued bonds in the sum of $100,000 to meet the cost of site and buildings. The property selected had been strongly recommended by the Nassau County Association.

In Broome and Chautauqua Counties the sites selected for the hospitals were formally approved by the duly constituted authorities. The sum of $150,000 is available for the hospital in Chautauqua County through a bequest made by the late Mrs. Elizabeth M. Newton, of Fredonia.

Site Approved on Appeal

In the case of the Broome County site it is interesting to note that the Lieutenant Governor, the Speaker of the Assembly and the State Commissioner of Health unanimously approved the site on appeal by the Board of Supervisors from the adverse decision of the health officer of the Town of Chenango where the site is located. Through the efforts of the tuberculosis committee, the Academy of Medicine and the Chamber of Commerce of Binghamton, and of the Citizens' Anti-Tuberculosis Committee of Broome County, considerable public sentiment in favor of the site was aroused and delegations from these societies made two trips to Albany to urge its approval by Lieutenant Governor Schooneck, Speaker Sweet and State Health Commissioner Biggs.

In Chenango County the board of managers for the new county hospital was appointed; the Board of Supervisors issued bonds in the sum of $20,000 for the establishment of the institution, and construction was started by the contractors.

Plans for the new Niagara County Tuberculosis Hospital have been filed with the State Commissioner of Health for approval. The sum of $100,000 was appropriated by referendum action of the voters at the general election in 1915. A new site near Bath was located for the tuberculosis hospital by the Steuben County Board of Supervisors, the site at Addison selected last August having been disapproved.

Seeking Sites in Three Counties

In Rensselaer, Warren and Livingston Counties—three counties in which appropriations for tuberculosis hospitals of $150,000, $50,000 and $35,000 respectively were carried at the polls last November—committees of the boards of supervisors are busily engaged in inspecting sites. The commercial value of a tuberculosis hospital to business interests has received striking recognition in the case of the Rensselaer County institution. The Albany Southern Railroad Company offered to devote $15,000 toward the purchase of a site along its right of way and accompanied this offer with options upon several properties. The company candidly stated that its offer contemplated a large financial return and that its proposal was a commercial one.

In addition to the progress made in these nine counties, the boards of supervisors in Genesee and Wayne Counties decided to submit the question of establishing tuberculosis hospitals to the voters at the general election of November, 1917. In each instance the board fixed $30,000 as the amount deemed necessary for a hospital adequate to the needs of the county. In Madison County a resolution was introduced in the Board of Supervisors to refer to the voters next November a proposition to appropriate $25,000 for a tuberculosis hospital. Action will be taken on the resolution at the January meeting of the board. The County Officers and the County medical Society have urged the passage of the resolution.

DUTCHESS COUNTY
ASSOCIATION ENGAGES TUBERCULOSIS EXPERT

Among the important activities of the Dutchess County Health Association will be its campaign against tuberculosis in Dutchess County. It has recently placed Miss Suzanne Haliburton in charge of this phase of its work.

Miss Haliburton is a graduate of the Presbyterian, Sloane, and the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat hospitals of New York City. In these hospitals she had nursing experience in head-nurse work, supervising and teaching. She has taken a course in social service work in the New York School of Philanthropy, and for a year and a half was at the head of the Social Service Bureau of the Metropolitan Hospital, New York. Her employment in Dutchess County was made possible by the action of the State Charities Aid Association's Dutchess County Committee on Dependent Children in voting to turn over to the Health Association about $600 which had accumulated in its treasury from the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals. This amount was supplemented by an appropriation from the Dutchess County Health Association sufficient to pay the salary of Miss Haliburton.
STATE HAS HELD
51 'POLIO' CLINICS
IN 23 COUNTIES

Number of Paralysis Patients Exami ned Is 1282—Many Cripples From Earlier Attacks Found

Up to Christmas Day the State Department of Health had held fifty-one clinics in twenty-three counties for examination of patients who had poliomyelitis during the recent epidemic. These clinics have been in the following counties: Westchester, Nassau, Suffolk, Columbia, Dutchess, Rockland, Orange, Sullivan, Ulster, Greene, Montgomery, Herkimer, Warren, Otsego, Saratoga, Onondaga, Schenectady, Madison, Oneida, Chenango, Broome, Delaware, and Cortland.

A total of 1,282 patients have been examined, making an average of twenty-five cases examined at each clinic. The smallest number, seven, was in the little mountain town of Windham in the Catskills; the largest number was sixty-three, in the city of Syracuse.

In the main centers of infection, the entire clinic staff has operated as a single unit under the personal direction of Dr. Robert W. Lovett, of Boston. At places where a smaller number of patients were to be examined, the staff was divided in two units—one under Dr. John T. Hodgson and the other under Dr. Armitage Whitman.

Clinics in All Sorts of Places

Clinics have been held in any sort of building offering enough room. In a few instances, hospitals have been used, but in the large number of cases, clinics have been held in fire houses, clubs, hotels, parish houses of churches of all denominations, and in one small town even an undertaking establishment was used. That it is possible to organize a clinic running smoothly and giving perfect service with such a variety of accommodations, is a constant surprise.

While the plan of the State Department of Health was based on the number of cases of poliomyelitis occurring during the summer of 1916, a considerable number of old cases have been brought to the clinics for examination. These cases, many in badly crippled condition, frequently illustrate very tragically what will occur if this year's cases are neglected. About 8 per cent. of the cases examined require operations involving hospital care. No operations are recommended on this year's cases, as it is not deemed expedient to operate on any case within two years of the onset of the disease. The clinics have demonstrated that large numbers of cripples are living in all parts of the State who could be greatly benefited by orthopaedic care. In one instance, an 18-year-old girl is in an almshouse. Her lower limbs are useless. The surgeons state that with proper operations she would be able to walk on crutches and possibly without crutches by the use of braces. The After-Care Committee of the State Charities Aid Association is arranging to have suitable operations performed on this girl.

Carried to School by His Brother

A 14-year-old boy attended school up to the present year, although he is unable to walk, an older brother carrying him to school. This year, however, it will be necessary to carry the boy up a long flight of steps, and as his brother is not strong enough to do this, this child, a bright, attractive looking boy, is out of school. Operative care must be given this case.

Several "quadruped" cases have been examined. In these cases the patient has been obliged to walk on all fours, weak muscles having been stretched and unused muscles having atrophied so that the patients are unable to maintain an upright position. Such cases as these must be provided for, and additional orthopedic hospital facilities in New York State are imperative.

Owing to the number of children under three years of age affected during the recent epidemic and who are too young to be fitted with braces, the number of cases ordered has been much smaller than was at first anticipated. Only 97 orders have been placed. Many of the old cases will be in need of braces after needed operations are performed.

Social Service Aid Needed

In thirteen of the twenty-three counties in which clinics have been held the social service work needed has been turned over to organized social agencies covering the counties. In the other ten counties, where no county organization exists, social service will be organized under the direction of the After-Care Committee of the State Charities Aid Association. Local neighborhood associations and nursing associations will care for the limited number of cases occurring in their immediate neighborhoods. A social worker from the Association has already made a survey in Suffolk County, where 123 cases have been examined. This worker has taken steps to relieve the most urgent needs in half a dozen of the families. Arrangements are being perfected to employ a special investigator, so that more intensive work may be given not only to Suffolk County but to the other unorganized counties.

Typical Cases Seen at Clinics

The following cases will indicate conditions found in various counties of the State:

A family consisting of a mother, father and six children, living in a country district, no physician in attendance; the mother is very ignorant, speaking no English. The head of the small patient was so infected that his ears became covered up before it could be put on the examination table at the clinic. The surgeon found almost complete paralysis of the left arm, the right shoulder. The surgeon recommended that the child sleep with its arms tied to the head of the bed, and carefully formulated exercises were given which were intended to strengthen the weakened muscles. The supervising nurse has visited the family, but it seems evident that closer supervision than that of the social service worker must be provided if this child is not to be permanently crippled.

Baby Boy Paralyzed

Another case is of an eleven months old boy who was burned on the muscles of the left leg weakened, as well as the abdomen. He was given muscle training and is to be kept recumbent with simultaneous baths and massage. Although this family are pretty well to do, the mother is ignorant, the home dirty, and it is improbable that the instructions will be properly carried out without closer supervision than will be possible for the State supervising nurse to give. It would seem that a social service worker should assist with this case.

Youth of Eighteen a Victim

Another case is of an 18-year-old boy who had almost complete paralysis of abdomen and back. Exercises were given and a corset ordered to support the weakened muscles. The boy himself is living as an oyster dredger. He and a 16-year-old brother live with their mother and father, who both drink, in a miserable hovel. Walker will probably not be able to continue to dredge oysters. Recently a married brother, whose young child had infantile paralysis and who has been affected by it, has moved into this home. Some social readjustment should be made with the home so that it would make better provision for the young child as well as saving the 16-year-old boy from the influence of the surrounding neighborhood. Whether if it is not already too late. The 18-year-old boy will also have to be assisted in finding an occupation more suited to his weakened condition.

THREE MORE VISITING NURSES

Three new positions in visiting nurse work have been created as follows: The tuberculosis committee in Norwich has recently engaged a visiting nurse to do tuberculosis and public health work. The Orange County Tuberculosis Hospital received an appropriation from the Board of Supervisors last month for the employment of a county visiting nurse. The tuberculosis committee in Medina and the local board of education have agreed to employ jointly a nurse to do tuberculosis and school nursing.
WHAT PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND THE PRESS THINK OF THE WORK OF S. C. A. COUNTY AGENTS

How favorably the public authorities and the newspapers in various sections of the State regard the work of the State Charities Aid Association’s County Agents is indicated in clippings from news stories and editorials received at this office from time to time. Here are excerpts from a few of those which have come in within the past few weeks:

“WORK DESERVES SUPPORT”

“The proper care of dependent children is one of the most serious problems confronting every community and one in which everyone should be vitally interested. The treatment a child receives, the environment in which he lives, generally determines whether he will become a public charge, either as a pauper or criminal. Entirely outside of the desire of right-minded people to injure anyone, as of the helpless children, it is something which directly affects the taxpayers of a county. No one should oppose this great work being done. The Ulster County, by the capable and enthusiastic county agent of the Ulster County Agency for Dependent Children, Mrs. Gertrude Brown, her work deserves the commendation and the best support of the County Supervisors, and no real citizen of Ulster County, and no taxpayer, should have any sympathy for the situation, will object to the extremely modest appropriation now absolutely required to properly supervise and carry on the work of this character. The Supervisors meet tonight; they should lose no time in taking the favorable action the people of Ulster County will so heartily approve.” — Editorial in the Kingston (Ulster County) Express.

“INSPIRATION TO COUNTY OFFICIALS”

“An appeal is made by the Chautauqua County Agency for Children in Aid of Dependent Children, in the appeal to the Supervisors to carry on the work in this county. It has been four years since the agency was established here, and in that time the funds of the agency have been sent to the taxpayers of the county by the results of the work accomplished. The county was especially fortunate in having from the outset the services of Miss Amy Pryor Tapping as county agent. She has been a genius in getting at the real root of affairs in connection with dependent children, and has been an inspiration to county officials and to others interested in the work. The reports she makes through the real root of affairs in connection with dependent children, and has been an inspiration to county officials and to others interested in the work. The reports she makes through the real root of affairs. The reports she makes through the real root of affairs to the Board of Supervisors annually have already enlisted the sympathy of many Chauntuacons.” — Editorial in the Jamestown (Chautauqua County) Journal.

SUPERVISORS VOTE $840

“The Supervisors have received the report of Miss Helen M. Kaib, county agent for dependent children, and were so well pleased with her work that they have voted to continue her services by appropriating $840 for her salary for the ensuing year. The other expenses of the office are paid by the local branch of the State Charities Aid Association.” — News item in the Waterloo (Seneca County) Observer.

AGENT HIGHLY COMMENDED

“The Committee on Orphans [of Board of Supervisors], of which Supervisor Bartholomew of Whitehall was chairman, reported out the same and went over under the rules. The committee highly commended the thorough work of Miss Elizabeth E. Nye, of Hudson Falls, County Agent for the State Charities Aid Association. They characterized her duties as arduous and the clerical work exacting.” — News item in the Granville (Washington County) Sentinel.

“The report of Miss Elizabeth E. Nye, Washington, county agent for the State Charities Aid Association, was filled with interest. In the course of the report it is pointed out that 113 children were cared for in the county from which 43 children were taken from their parents or relatives because of unsuitable care; that a decrease of 15 per cent was noted in the number of dependents cared for because of destitution, though an increase was evidenced through neglect or improper management; and that the growing number of mentally deficient children requires that the State take additional measures for their welfare.” — News item in Glen Falls (Warren County) Post.

THIS AGENT IS CAPABLE AND SYMPATHETIC

“The people of this city are all familiar with the work of Miss Brownell for the dependent children of Herkimer County, and she is bested by all. County capable and sympathetic manner in which she performs her duty. Any one in the county is at liberty to ask her help for any needy or helpless child. She is that type of person that has given her time and the results of the work accomplished. The county was especially fortunate in having from the outset the services of Miss Amy Pryor Tapping as county agent. She has been a genius in getting at the real root of affairs in connection with dependent children, and has been an inspiration to county officials and to others interested in the work. The reports she makes through the real root of affairs in connection with dependent children, and has been an inspiration to county officials and to others interested in the work. The reports she makes through the real root of affairs. The reports she makes through the real root of affairs to the Board of Supervisors annually have already enlisted the sympathy of many Chauntuacons.” — Editorial in the Jamestown (Chautauqua County) Journal.

AGENT’S THOROUGHNESS WINS OFFICIALS’ APPROVAL

“There is a growing sentiment among all those interested in work among children that home care is far preferable to maintenance in any institution, however good. This belief is responsible for the establishment of county agents for dependent children all over this and other States, whose duty it is to find homes for children who would otherwise remain in orphanages and other institutions at public expense. Though the economic system is important, the great benefit accomplished is the better training of the child in a carefully selected home.”

“This State took another forward step when it passed what is known as the Widows’ Pension Law, which created Child Welfare Boards in every county with power to make financial allowances to needy widows and their children, within the limits of an appropriation, by the Board of Supervisors. This matter came up yesterday after the Supervisors had listened to the annual report of Miss Amy Pryor Tapping, who as the children’s agent and secretary of the Child Welfare Board of the county, makes the investigations in all cases relating to children with a thoroughness that won commendation from the Superintendent of the Poor and several Supervisors.

“It was the opinion of the majority of the Supervisors that the appropriation allowed under the Widows’ Pension Law should be increased $2,000, making about $3,500 available during the coming year.” — Editorial in the Jamestown (Chautauqua County) Post.
Vigorous Sale of Red Cross Seals Promises Generous Fund For Anti-Tuberculosis Work

Preliminary Reports of Agents Indicate Larger Sale Than Last Year in Numerous Localities—Mail-Sale Method Proves Popular and Effective—Full Returns Not Yet In

Fifty preliminary reports were sent by local agents for the sale of Red Cross Seals to the State Charities Aid Association on December 15. Forty-seven of these registered large sales up to and including that date. Twenty-one reported an increase of from 25 to 100 per cent. One messenger and salesmen, in the correspond- ing stage of the campaign. Only three, all small localities, showed a decrease in seals sold. The campaign has been con- tinued right up to the first of the year. Final reports have not yet been sub- mitted, and it therefore is impossible to present a complete statement of results.

The sale-by-mail has been more ex- tensively used this year than in any pre- vious campaign. Approximately 200,000 personal letters, carrying over 20,000,000 little Santa Clauses, have been sent to prospective purchasers. Returns in money are high, and it is confidently pre- dicted that this year's results will add another endorsement to the effectiveness of the mail-sale method.

Public Likes Mail-Sale Method

The attitude of the public to this method is indicated by such replies as the following:

Enclosed find a dollar for the seals. I am indeed glad of the opportunity afforded by your letter and hope you will keep me on your mailing list.

I was very glad you gave me the chance to help in such a good cause.

Thanks for sending me the seals. Enclosed find one dollar. Wish I could make it a hundred.

I am sending a dollar for the seals. Please send me another hundred next year.

Some Santa Clauses Lost

Some of the little Santa Clauses sent to prospective purchasers have not come back, so all local agents are urged to send follow-up postals to discover their whereabouts. It is one of the regulations of the American Red Cross that a follow-up postcard be sent to those not replying or returning the seals. Money returns from the follow-ups are often high, and agents are urged not to let this oppor- tunity for increasing anti-tuberculosis funds pass unimproved.

The race for the national pennant among the cities of the second class has been spiritedly contested again this year. For two successive years the pennant was captured by Troy. This year Albany, Binghamton, Schenectady, Syracuse and Utica worked hard to effect a pennant winning sale. Among the smaller localities, with population ranging from 600 to 1,200, interest was added to the pen- nant competition by a challenge from Hershey, Pa., to all towns in her popula- tion group. Hershey won the pennant last year and defiantly declared her inten- tions of duplicating the trick. Wheth- er she makes good her boast will be de- cided by the eagerly-awaited final re- ports.

$11,464 from Appeal for “Neediest Cases”

Holiday appeals for the “100 Neediest Cases,” published in the New York Times for New York philanthropic and charitable organizations, elicited a gener- ous response. Of the 100 cases printed, 26 were un- der the supervision of the State Charities Aid Association, 20 being in the Placing-Out Department and 6 in the Mothers and Babies’ Department. For these a total of $11,464.72 has been re- ceived in money contributions, as com- pared with $6,584 last year. In addi- tion several pledges have been made to pay monthly allowances. Clothes and toys have been received.

The Harmon appeal also has brought better results than last year. The amount received this year from the appeal that has just gone out has been $3,815.70, which has been an increase of $655.70 over last year.

A Christmas party for the children under supervision of the Child-Placing Agency in boarding homes was given at the Association office on Christmas Day. About 75 children were present to re- ceive gifts from Santa Claus and enjoy an entertainment.
DR. PILGRIM SEES GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR THE STATE IN PREVENTING INSANITY

Head of State Hospital Commission Says the Free Clinics, Now Numbering 21, Are Enabling the State to Meet the Mentally Sick Half-Way

Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, believes the State of New York has entered upon a most promising line of work in establishing free clinics to prevent insanity by providing for earlier discovery and treatment of mental disorders. There are now twenty-one such clinics. Dr. Pilgrim delivered a strong address on "The State's Effort to Meet the Mentally Sick Half Way," at a mental hygiene meeting in Peekskill recently. Among other things, he said:

"We all know what has been accomplished in the crusade against the 'White Plague,' and I believe that the way is now open for the most effective kind of preventive work in connection with the insane.

"To point out 'the way that madness lies,' to show the path that leads to sanity and health, to recognize the backward child and to teach him how to make the most of his limited abilities, to discover latent criminal tendencies in the young and to suggest a method of treatment which will overcome them before they become fixed, to cheer and encourage the worried and depressed, to correct the habits of those who are burning life's candle at both ends, either by overwork or 'the pace that kills'—in fact, to 'minister to the mind diseased' in every way possible is the work that the mental clinic is supposed to do, and it is also the work that the State is willing and anxious to perform in its efforts to meet the mentally sick half way.

"I, therefore, ask your hearty cooperation in our efforts to perform this work, and I am firm in the belief that as time goes on you will find the clinic a most useful instrument in lessening one of the greatest afflictions that can befall mankind."

HOUSING SURVEY IN AMSTERDAM

The Amsterdam Tuberculosis Committee, noted from its inception seven years ago as an organization with a vision and a program and with the ability to go ahead under its own steam, has recently entered upon a campaign of housing reform. A survey of the housing facilities and needs of the city was recently completed for the committee by one of the technical experts of the National Housing Association.

Sends $100 for 100 Red Cross Seals

Ulster County Artist Pays $1 for Little Stickers to Help Anti-Tuberculosis Crusade

It is not often that a little Red Cross Santa Claus goes out in quest of a penny for the anti-tuberculosis crusade and comes back bringing a dollar in his bag. However, this is what happened not to one, but to 100 little Santa Clauses sent out by the Ulster County Committee on Prevention of Tuberculosis. Dr. Mary Gage-Day, secretary of that committee, realizing the effectiveness of the sale-by-mail, sent out nearly 5,000 personal appeal letters, each containing 100 Red Cross Seals, to prospective purchasers in Ulster County. One of these letters was addressed to Mr. George Inness, Jr., the artist, and was forwarded to Tarpon Springs, Florida, where Mr. Inness is spending the winter. The return envelope came back with a check for $100 and the following letter:

Dear Doctor Mary Gage-Day:

I have received the 100 Christmas Seals, and take pleasure in sending you my contribution of $100 to the good cause.

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) GEORGE INNESS, JR.

Only rarely does a mail-sale letter bring such a generous contribution as this. But the same spirit which prompted Mr. Inness, causes thousands of people throughout this State to send a dollar, two dollars, or five dollars annually to the coffers of the double Red Cross.

4 New Mental Clinics Bring Total Up to 21

Kingston, Dunkirk, Peekskill and Olean Open Stations for Early Diagnosis and Treatment

Four new mental clinics in connection with State hospitals have been opened during the past few weeks, bringing the total number of such dispensaries throughout the State up to twenty-one.

The most recently opened clinics are as follows: On November 7, Middletown State Hospital established one at Kings- ton, in the office of the County Agent of the State Charities Aid Association. On November 8, Gowanda State Hospital opened a clinic at Dunkirk in the Brooks Memorial Hospital. On December 1, the Hudson River State Hospital held the first session of a new dispensary established in the Child Welfare Station at Peekskill. Gowanda State Hospital opened a clinic in the Higgins Memorial Hospital at Olean on December 27.

During the past year thirteen such clinics have been put under a regular schedule of operation. Eleven of the thirteen State hospitals now have one or more mental dispensaries, making the total of twenty-one such out-patient stations extending into the various communities, in all parts of the State, facilities for care and treatment of incipient cases which were available hitherto only to persons actually residing within the State hospitals.

Twelve of the State hospitals now employ a field agent in connection with their preventive and after-care work, and the remaining institution has requested funds for one.

Renewed efforts will be made in the Legislature this winter to secure a director, paid by the State, to have general oversight and direction of the out-patient work of the State hospitals under the State Hospital Commission.

TWO OPEN-AIR SCHOOLS FOR TROY

The Troy Board of Education started last month two open-air schools for anemic children. The President of the Board of Education, Mr. W. Leand Thompson, is also President of the Troy Tuberculosis Relief Committee.
"THE STATE BOARD'S ANSWER"

State Board of Charities Files Rejoinder to Commissioner Strong's Report

By HOMER FOLKS

The S. C. A. A. News of December gave a summary of the Report of Commissioner Charles H. Strong, appointed by the Governor to inquire into the operations of the State charitable institutions and the inspection of child-caring institutions in New York City.

An Answer to this Report was filed by the State Board of Charities with the Governor on December 26, 1916, in the form of a pamphlet of 101 pages, signed by all the members of the Board.

We present to our readers herewith a statement as to the attitude of the State Board toward Commissioner Strong's recommendations, a summary of the substance of the State Board's Answer, and some comment thereon.

THE RECOMMENDATIONS

Commissioner Strong's report closes with 20 specific recommendations. The State Board of Charities concurs fully in 13 of these; it approves 1 in the main; it approves 2 in part; and it disapproves of 4. The recommendations in which the State Board concurs are those transferring to itself the powers of the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, the Salary Classification Commission, the Buildings Improvement Commission, the Commissioner on Sites, Grounds and Buildings, and the Board of Examiners of Feebleminded, Criminal and Other Defectives, and abolishing these various authorities. It disapproves of the reorganization of the State Board of Charities, the requirement that it shall meet twice a month, the suggestion that it shall be required to issue certificates of compliance with (Continued on page 3.)

PROPRIATION.
For Craig Colony:
Heating and power plant $22,950
Repairs ............................ 6,000
For Rome:
Employees' cottage  $40,000
with the following comment as to Rome:
There is doubt as to whether the appropriation for a cottage for employees should not be used rather for a new building for inmates than for the employees. In view of this and the necessity for additional appropriations which appear to be of more immediate importance I have concluded to withhold my approval.
Governor Higgins, on January 1, 1905,
said:
The most urgent need in connection with the State charitable institutions appears to be that of additional accommodations for the feeble minded at the institutions at Newark and Rome.
Governor Hughes, on January 1, 1908,
said:
The overcrowding of the State hospitals is largely in the southeastern part of the State and an additional hospital should be provided there at the earliest possible moment.
Governor Hughes, on January 1, 1910,
again said:
The need of a new hospital at an early date is apparent.
No More Funds "At This Time"
Nevertheless, Governor Hughes vetoed, in 1910, construction appropriations for hospitals for the insane amounting to $729,670, with the following comment:
No further appropriations can be allowed AT THIS TIME.
Governor Dix, in 1911, vetoed $230,000 for beginning building operations at the Mohansic State Hospital, the new State hospital in the southeastern portion of the State recommended by Governor Hughes in 1908, with the following memorandum:
This item is disallowed for the reason that I do not consider that the finances of the State, in view of the largely increased demands upon the treasury for institutional and educational purposes, as well as the purposes of government, will permit the commencement of building operations which will entail a great expenditure of money.
Governor Dix, the next year, 1912,
said:
The overcrowded conditions prevailing in the hospitals in the metropolitan district would seem to make it incumbent upon the State to assist the Lunacy Commission to complete as soon as possible the Mohansic State Hospital and to make additions to the existing hospitals.
Nevertheless, the same year Governor
Dix vetoed an appropriation of $55,000 for the lodging of 100 inmates at the Rooster State Hospital, with the following explanation:
A due regard for the condition of the State finances makes it necessary for me to disapprove these items.
Governor Sulzer, in 1913, vetoed a $300,000 appropriation to start opera-

Pavilion for Tuberculous Children Opened at Schenectady County Hospital
Glenridge Sanatorium (Schenectady County's tuberculosis hospital) has received approximately $9,000 for a children's pavilion. The Board of Supervisors recently appropriated $5,000 for this purpose. The building will cost $14,000, which includes a refrigerator, which will be used for the storage of food for the children.

its rules by private institutions, and the repeal of the charter provision requiring the Department of Public Charities in New York City to issue such certificates of compliance.

It approves in the main of conferring new administrative and executive functions upon the State Board of Charities, but objects to imposing these duties upon a salaried member of the Board. It approves of the creation of Bureaus of Medicine, of Dependent Children, but objects to having the chiefs of each of these bureaus made salaried members of the State Board of Charities.

Unfortunately, the degree of actual unanimity of opinion is less than might be suggested by the fact that the State Board approves in whole or part of 80 per cent of Commissioner's recommendations. The abolition of all the other Albany boards and officials dealing with State charitable institutions, and the transfer of their powers to the State Board of Charities, was conditioned by Commissioner Strong upon the establishment and equipment of a board adapted to the exercise of these powers. Public opinion very generally, we believe, would favor the abolition of all these bodies and the transfer of these powers to such a board organized and equipped to exercise these important powers promptly and effectively.

SUMMARY OF THE ANSWER

The Answer of the State Board of Charities repeats much of the historical material, statement of powers and duties of the State Board and of its membership and organization which appeared in Commissioner Strong's Report. It enlarges upon the impairment of the Board's powers beginning with 1902. It calls the attention to the number of its members who have held other positions of importance, either before or after their service in the State Board of Charities, and to the faithful attendance at meetings on the part of the Board's members. It points out that the Constitution imposed upon the Board the duty of visitation and inspection and holds that Commissioner Strong erroneously reads into these terms a large measure of actual control. It maintains that it has not followed a policy of aloofness, and as to Letchworth Village, for example, reproduces a letter addressed by it to Governor Glynn, in May, 1914, urging his interest and support of the institution. A number of questions of fact as to the statements made by Commissioner Strong as to the relations of the Board to the Bedford Reformatory, the New York State Training School for Boys, and other institutions. It deals at length with Commissioner Strong's criticisms of the Board as to the failure to transfer inmates from one State charitable institution to another, the failure to remove a sufficiently number of the State and alien poor, and to discover and correct evils in county poorhouses. It points with pride to the complimentary preambles and resolutions adopted by the County Superintendents of the Poor, and the Capitol District, and State Conferences of Charities and Correction, referring to the work of the State Board of Charities.

As to the supervision of private child-caring institutions, it maintains in general the position that the City authorities primarily responsible for State Board was familiar with their actual conditions, including such shortcomings as existed; that it had taken consistent steps looking toward the improvement of such institutions; that standards of child-care had improved from time to time; and that many of the shortcomings which existed were due to lack of funds. It defends its work in relation to dispensaries.

WHERE THE MATER RESTS

Reading the Answer by itself, some of its positions seem plausible. Reading its paragraphs and comments, however, each in connection with the portions of Commissioner Strong's Report to which it refers, it appears that the situation is very little, if any, changed from that in which it was left by Commissioner Strong. For instance, the State Board replies to Commissioner Strong's suggestion of aloofness from Letchworth Village, that it had not held aloof, that it had written a letter to Governor Glynn in behalf of the institution.

That misses wholly the point of Commissioner Strong's criticism, which was that the writing of an occasional letter or the adoption of a formal resolution, is only the beginning of the things which a properly equipped State Board of Charities should have done toward the development of a State institution which it had helped to establish and which was so sorely needed.

The point of view of the Answer is very accurately reflected in the following extract from the paragraph dealing with the membership of the State Board of Charities (the italics are ours):

"Every great change which has been made in the United States during recent years in the organization, management and administration of charitable institutions is in part at least traceable to suggestions made by members of the State Board of Charities of New York, either in public addresses, reports of committees or the annual reports to the Legislature.

In other words, nothing has happened in Massachusetts, Indiana, California, Texas, Michigan or anywhere else in the United States in recent years in this field which is not, in part at least, traceable to suggestions made by members of the New York State Board! "Traceable to" implies a relation of some degree of cause and effect. It does not simply mean sequence in point of time. It may be that in the resolutions and reports adopted by the State Board of Charities very much which has been done in the United States for the betterment of charitable institutions has been enumerated in advance; but that such enumeration in official reports in New York has had any causal relation to the extraordinary improvements that have been made in recent years, in California, for instance, and elsewhere is entirely a gratuitous assumption.

This error of confusing words with deeds; letter-writing with bill-drafting; the enumeration in an official report of desirable social changes which have not been suggested in this or other countries, with a constructive, determined effort to convert at least one of these desirable improvements into actual legislative and administrative accomplishment in the present year of grace—this is indeed the root of the trouble. This, we think, is what Commissioner Strong means by "aloofness."

The point of the Commissioner's criticism, as we understand it, is that this "aloofness" is inherent in the existing system of supervision of charities. The point of his recommendations is that we should have an efficient administrative board upon which the legislature may be willing to concentrate all the powers now scattered among many agencies.

WHAT THE STATE BOARD DEFENDS

Most disappointing of all is the unqualified defense of the institutions for children. After a searching inquiry, extending over months, Commissioner Strong, in a report, the judicial quality of which has not been denied and cannot be attacked, said among other things:

"There was one institution in which the beds were alive with vermin; in another they existed to some extent. There were two institutions, or one-half of those on the list, in which nits or vermin or both were found in the heads of some or many of the children. While it is not easy to keep an institute free from these, constant and intelligent attention will.

There were four institutions in which antiquated methods of punishment prevailed. • • •

There were five institutions out of the 24 in which the older girls were overworked at household tasks with little or no compensation. • • •

There were three institutions in which the children were inadequately fed, and several more in which they were improperly fed.

To such charges as these the defense that conditions had been steadily improving is not sufficient. What must they have been a few years earlier! The fact that notwithstanding whatever improvements have been made, these conditions still existed, seems to us conclusive evidence that changes in the system of supervision should be made—changes which after months of exhaustive study Commissioner Strong has outlined."
FIRST ROUND OF “POLIO” CLINICS IS COMPLETED

State Health Department Has NowCovered the Principal Centers of Infection Throughout the Entire State—1886 Patients at 72 Clinics

On January 20 the State Department of Health completed its first round of clinics for the examination of poliomyelitis cases, having covered the principal centers of infection throughout the State. Seventy-two clinics have been held in sixty-five different towns or cities located in thirty-two counties. A total of 1886 patients were examined—an average of twenty-six patients at each clinic, ranging from seven at the smallest to sixty-three at the largest.

Rotary Clubs Help

In eleven counties, the social service work is being done by county agents for dependent children. In Onondaga County the Syracuse Rotary Club has assumed full responsibility for the social service, not only in Syracuse but in the whole county. In Rensselaer County the Troy Rotary Club assumed responsibility for the expense of transporting patients to the clinic and the payment of braces when families cannot meet this expense. In several instances individuals or groups have contributed funds to meet the expense of individual cases.

Two social service workers have been put in the field to supplement the work of the nurses of the State Department of Health in looking after the needs of the cases that have been examined. At the end of the first round of clinics 160 braces, twenty-nine corsets and nine other pieces of apparatus had been ordered.

Many Old Cases Appear

A study was made of 722 of the cases examined at the various clinics in order to ascertain how many operative cases were coming to the attention of the examining surgeons. Of the 722 cases studied, 118 were old cases, the onset of the disease having occurred prior to 1916. In fifty of these immediate operations were advised, and of the remaining sixty-three new cases, fifty-six were in need of some form of apparatus.

Since January 20 supplemental clinics are being held in the localities previously covered. The patients previously examined and many new ones not heretofore seen are being brought for examination. It is already apparent that many more braces will be ordered after a second examination than were ordered at the first clinics, the period of necessary rest having passed. Other apparatus such as Bradford Frames and corsets to support weak abdomens will also be ordered in larger numbers.

Eight nurses, specially qualified for muscle training, employed by the State Department of Health have been assigned to territory to supervise treatment for those who have been examined at the clinics. In addition five nurses of equal training, paid by private organizations but working under the direction of the State Department of Health, are in the field. One of these is employed by the Nassau County Association, two are employed by a special committee on poliomyelitis in Westchester County, one is employed by a Tarrytown Association and one is employed by the Dutchess County Health Association.

Eleven Operations Performed

The Westchester County Committee on the After-Care of Poliomyelitis arranged for and have had performed operations upon eleven patients examined at the various clinics held within the county, seven of these being operated upon at the New York Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled and four at the White Plains Hospital; one has been performed in all of these operations. The expenses were met by the Westchester County Committee.

The small child, whose story was told in the State Charities Aid Association News of December, who was removed from the motherless home in which a child was reared, and placed with an intelligent caretaker, was found to have materially improved when examined at the supplemental clinic. A brace was ordered and she will soon be walking.

FATHER AS CHIEF NURSE

In one case a four-year-old child was found upon the original examination to be in bad condition, the muscles of the legs and of the abdomen being partially paralyzed. The treatment prescribed was rest, the child to be kept off its feet, and complete rest in position were ordered, a corset to support the abdomen, and warm salt baths were among the things recommended. It was said that the father was away and that there was small chance of the mother being able to carry out the treatment. One of the social workers called on the family. She said that the father had returned home and had become the chief nurse. Believing that natural sea water might be better than to use sea salt, he took the necessary long trips to obtain it. He fashioned a home-made corset, which, with but slight alterations, was approved by the clinic orthopaedic surgeon when he again saw the case. At the second clinic the little patient was measured for braces and will soon be walking, but may have to use crutches.

Assignments of the Nurses

Following is a list of the supervising nurses and the districts to which they are assigned:

Miss M. E. Peters, 27, W. 24th Ave., White Plains, N. Y.
Miss Bertha S. Kingsbury, 25 Washington St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Miss Emily Norvell, 209 E. Main St., Middletown, N. Y.
Miss Marie F. Gregory, State Dep't of Health, Albany, N. Y.
Miss Anne Stevens, 215 Mason Ave., Schenectady, N. Y.
Miss Margaret E. Nade, City Hall, Utica, N. Y.
Miss Helen Ryder, 174 Main St., Lawrence, N. Y.

Nurses Hear Dr. Mac Cracken

At the invitation of Miss Edith M. Ambrose, Superintendent of Field Work of the Dutchess County Health Association, all of the district nurses of Dutchess County, as well as some of the nurses connected with hospitals of the county, met recently at the offices of the Dutchess County Health Association for a conference. Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, President of the Health Association, as well as of Vassar College, spoke to them on "The Nurse as Educator." Dr. Hubbard, the Sanitary Supervisor of the district in which Dutchess County is located, outlined the duties of the local health officers and indicated how the district nurses might cooperate with them.

Reading Matter Wanted

For Paralysis Patients

The State Charities Aid Association's Committee on the After-Care of Poliomyelitis wishes to hear of individuals in the State who would be willing to furnish suitable reading matter to some of the older patients who have been examined at the clinics of the State Department of Health. The committee does not desire promiscuous reading matter sent to headquarters, but it would be glad to receive the names of persons willing to be called upon for reading matter suited to particular cases. Here is a typical case:

An 18-year-old boy living in a small community (one of 11 children) who was not strong in his arm and the abdomen badly affected. As he is much emaciated, the district nurse will arrange to have his lungs examined. In the meantime the boy has his mittens to amuse him. He has reached the seventh grade in school and has not passed the period when he enjoys the Heather Tim. He is unable to secure for him reading matter which he can appreciate, possibly the Youth's Companion. Anyone interested in this phase of social service is asked to communicate with the Secretary of the Committee, Miss H. Ida Curry, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City.

Estimate Based on the Returns Available Thus Far Indicate a Gain of 13 Per Cent. Over the Previous Year—Generous Fund for Anti-Tuberculosis Work

Upon the basis of preliminary reports and estimates of final totals of sales from 66 committees in localities comprising 75 per cent of the population of New York State, outside of Greater New York, the State Charities Aid Association estimates that the number of Red Cross Seals sold in its territory during the 1916 campaign will total 11,250,000.

The 66 reporting committees show an actual sale, up to and including January 8, of 8,554,962 seals, and an estimated final total sale of 8,851,203 seals, as compared with a total sale last year by the same agents of 7,784,701.

Gain of 13 Per Cent Over 1915

This is an estimated final gain of 1,066,502, or a gain of 13.7 per cent. If this percentage of gain holds good in the case of the localities not yet reporting, the estimated total sale of seals by local committees is 11,247,121. It would not be fair to apply the same percentage of increase to the sale of seals in the strictly rural districts by the granges, country postmasters and other individuals. But assuming that the same number of seals were sold in country districts this year as were sold last year, then the estimated total of the 1916 sale of seals in New York State exclusive of Greater New York is 11,822,068, as compared with 10,466,875 in 1915.

Deducting over half a million seals from this total to allow for possible over-optimistic estimates on the part of some local committees, the State Charities Aid Association anticipates on the basis of the available figures and estimates reported to it, a final total sale of 11,250,000 seals.

SYPHILIS AND DISPENSARIES

The survey which the Committee on Hospitals recently made, in cooperation with the Committee on Mental Hygiene, of the hospital facilities for the treatment of general diseases, especially syphilis, in hospitals in New York State, outside of New York City, will be supplemented by a similar study of the facilities of dispensaries in the State outside of the City. Questionnaires covering this subject have been sent to thirty dispensaries. The information obtained will be summarized and submitted to the Mental Hygiene Committee.

Bachelors Adopt Homeless Children

Spinners, Too, Provide Homes and Advantages for Needy Tots

Do bachelors and spinsters like children? They do. The records of the Child Placing Department of the State Charities Aid Association prove that. The number of unmarried persons, of both sexes, who are fond enough of children to assume the responsibility of providing a home for one or more of them, seems to be increasing. And many of them provide most excellent homes and advantages, too. For example:

Three years ago a bachelor business man interested himself in a little 5-year-old boy under the care of the State Charities Aid Association. The child had a rather unfortunate history and up to that time no one had taken much interest in him. This friend, whom the boy now calls "uncle," put the boy in a good boarding home under the care of a kind, motherly woman, and has been providing for him ever since. The child is developing very well and is exceedingly happy and contented. His "uncle" visits him in his home at least once a week.

Another interesting placement was made recently. A 6-year-old boy was taken by a young man of twenty-six. This young man is well educated, belongs to a good New York family and has traveled considerably. He is very fond of children, and, therefore, took this little child. He has a capable housekeeper who has been in the family for many years, and has just employed a special nurse to take care of the child. The young man has a great deal of leisure and an income of approximately $14,000 a year. He is able to provide splendid opportunities for the child.

Widower Looks After a Child, Too

An elderly man, a widower, became responsible for the board and clothes of a little 8-year-old-boy, three years ago. The child has always been delicate physically and somewhat backward, and was in need of special care. He is being boarded with a very conscientious woman and is improving remarkably under her excellent care. His friend keeps in close touch with his progress.

Spinsters Provide Homes for Tots

Spinsters as well as bachelors are interested in children and frequently provide good homes for homeless tots.

Four years ago a school teacher became interested in a girl of eight who had just been taken out of an institution. The child was greatly in need of building up and was taken by this friend for a short vacation during the summer. In that short period she became so attached to the child that she wished to keep her permanently. She has sent the child to an excellent school, and is giving her every advantage.

A little brother and sister, ten and twelve years of age, have made a place for themselves in a very superior home. An unmarried woman of independent means took the children two years ago to give them a short vacation in the country. She found them so interesting and attractive that she decided to keep them permanently. This is an excellent home and the children are having every opportunity and are developing well.

IMMIGRATION BILL

BARS ALIEN INSANE

Just as we go to press, the United States Senate has passed the Immigration Bill over President Wilson's veto. The House had already taken similar action. The bill now becomes law without the President's signature; it will go into effect May 1, 1917.

The law tightens up restrictions on the admission of immigrants and contains provisions carefully worked out by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene to exclude mentally diseased and defective persons. A more thorough mental examination of immigrants at the port of embarkation and again at the port of debarkation is provided for.

Measures to exclude the insane from other lands are exceedingly important when it is considered that approximately 9,000 of the 5,000 inmates of State hospitals for mental diseases in this State are aliens—practically one out of every four patients—and are costing the State $2,000,000 a year for care and maintenance.

Fuller details of the bill's provisions regarding the exclusion of the mentally unfit will be given in the next issue of The News.

DR. WILLIAMS COMES TO NEW YORK

Dr. Frankwood E. Williams has resigned as Executive Secretary of the Massachusetts Mental Hygiene Society to accept the position of assistant director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, with offices in New York City.
Supts. of Poor Urge State to Spend $2,500,000 on the Feebleminded This Year

Resolutions Passed at Albany Convention State That the Same Amount Will Be Needed Each Year for the Next Five Years to Provide for the Increasing Thousands of Mental Defectives

ALSO ASK GOVERNOR TO NAME COMMISSION TO REVISE THE POOR LAW

The Association of Superintendents of the Poor and Poor Law officials at their semi-annual convention in Albany, February 1 and 2, went on record as considering that the problem of the feebleminded is the most serious one met with in their work, and they urged that the State should adopt a definite policy of relief through adequate appropriations each year for the next five years to provide for the care of some 25,000 mentally defective persons who are now mingling in society. Action was also taken to secure a revision of the State Poor Law, which was described as antiquated.

Feebleminded Institutions Full

The superintendents pointed out that the five institutions in this State established for the care of feebleminded dependents are now filled to capacity; that the almshouses maintain many mentally defective inmates; and that in family homes there are great numbers of such persons without care or restraint. They asserted that the care of the feebleminded in the State is a most important duty of the public in view of the heavy financial burden for maintenance of this class of dependents, and their effect upon society by the increase of pauperism and crime.

The association adopted a resolution requesting the Legislature to make provision for an appropriation this year of not less than $2,500,000 to be used for the extension of the present State institutions for the feebleminded and calling for a like amount to be appropriated each year for the next five years.

Hearing Before Governor

The Poor Officials appeared before Governor Whitman at a conference in the Executive Chamber, and through their spokesman, Jay M. Strong, Commissioner of Charities of Syracuse, asked the Governor's aid in this movement. The Governor was told of individual cases that illustrate what a great menace feebleminded persons are to society. He heard of women who are becoming mothers of children who through no fault of their own are destined to become burdens on their communities. The effects of the disease these women are liable to spread throughout the State were also emphasized by the officials. The lives of poverty, immorality and crime faced by the offsprings of mental defectives were pictured. With the assurance that the Governor was anxious to give his support to any movement to remove the dangers resulting through feebleminded persons being at large, the Poor Officials decided to enlist the individual support of the legislators in their counties.

Ask Commission to Revise Poor Law

A committee of the association appointed to draft a definite program for a revision of the Poor Law reported that an entirely new measure is desirable. It was pointed out that the Poor Law was framed to meet conditions that existed many years ago; that amendments have been added from year to year, and other statutes enacted, until now the Poor Officials have to review a patchwork collection of they when they seek information. They reported that modern charity thought had advanced far beyond the content of the existing law.

Following the report of the committee the association adopted a resolution to appoint a committee to visit the Governor and recommend that the present Poor Law be discarded. They will ask the Governor to name a commission to make a comprehensive study of the situation in the State, and to study the measures in force in other States for the purpose of developing a progressive and constructive charities law for New York.

FRESH AIR CLASS IN MOUNT VERNON

The Board of Education, in cooperation with the Visiting Nurses' Association of Mt. Vernon, has opened a fresh air class for anemic children. The class started February 5th with 20 pupils. Sessions are held in one of the rooms on the top floor of the School of Industrial Arts. A daily lunch will be served by the domestic science department of the school, and the cost of the lunch and of the transportation of the children to and from school will be borne by the Visiting Nurses' Association.
STATE MOVES TO END HOSPITAL OVERCROWDING

Senator Sage Fathers Ten-Year Plan Which May Mean Total Expenditure of $20,000,000 on Buildings to House the Insane

A CONSTRUCTIVE PLAN JUST AS NECESSARY TO PROVIDE FOR THE FEEBLEMinded

Things seem to be looking up a little at Albany for the insane and feebleminded this winter.

Spurred to action by the realization that the State hospitals for the insane are overcrowded to the extent of 6,000 patients, Governor Whitman in his budget estimate, transmitted to the Legislature on January 3, recommended an appropriation of $100,000 toward the construction of a $369,000 building for 600 patients at the Middletown State Hospital. He also recommends a preliminary survey and plans for the new hospital on the site owned by the State at Marcy, near Utica, which was purchased in 1912, at a cost of $115,000 as a new site for the Utica State Hospital. No buildings have yet been constructed there. The Governor unfortunately does not recommend that actual steps toward starting the institution at Marcy should be taken until next year.

Governor Whitman recommends that new construction this year at institutions for the feebleminded should be limited practically to Letchworth Village at Thiells, Rockland County. For new construction at that institution he recommends an appropriation of $45,000 for a storehouse, bakery, refrigerating plant and cold storage building; $80,000 toward completing the construction of cottages E, F, G and H; $25,000 toward an assembly hall; $15,000 toward an industrial building, and an appropriation of $60,000 toward cottages I, J, K and L. These appropriations recommended by the Governor total $225,000.

Senator Sage's Plan For the Insane

Senator Henry M. Sage, chairman of the Finance Committee, is the father of a bill to provide for a constructive policy for a term of years in relation to the State hospitals for the insane. The bill creates a commission to be known as the Hospital Development Commission. This commission, after a survey of the entire situation, is to adopt a fixed plan for the systematic development of the State hospital system year by year for ten years.

Senator Sage estimates the cost of providing for the accumulated overcrowding and making provision for each year's increase in the number of the insane will not be less than $10,000,000 or more than $20,000,000 within the next ten years.

His bill provides that the Hospital Development Commission shall consist of the State Engineer, the State Architect, the chairman of the State Hospital Commission, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, the chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, and the legislative budget clerks, ex-officio.

The bill authorizes the expenditure of $1,250,000 for new construction on the site at Marcy of buildings to be known as the Marcy division of the Utica State Hospital, and also authorizes the expenditure of $369,000 for new construction at the Middletown State Hospital—a total authorization of $1,619,000. Of this amount, however, only $399,254 is actually appropriated this year, $100,000 being appropriated for the work at Middletown, and an unexpended balance of $299,254 remaining from the abandoned Mohansic State Hospital fund being reapropriated for the work at Marcy.

While Senator Sage's plan is a broad and farsighted one covering a term of years, the actual appropriations provided in his bill for new construction this year do not differ greatly from the appropriations in recent years. The 1916 Legislature appropriated $369,220 for new construction, permanent betterments and repairs. In 1915 the amount appropriated was $610,000.

Governor Whitman and Senator Sage are entitled to credit for tackling in earnest the big job of providing for the overcrowding in the State hospitals for the insane. The annual report of the State Hospitals Commission, recently made public, showed that the State has been steadily falling behind for a number of years in providing for the insane. At the present time the hospitals are overcrowded approximately 6,000 patients, or about 22 per cent. In the hospitals in the metropolitan district the overcrowding is even more serious.

THE FEEBLEMinded NEED ATTENTION

But closely akin to the problem of housing and treating the insane is the problem of making adequate institutional provision for the feebleminded.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the accommodations for the feebleminded are woefully lacking. Every one of the existing institutions is full and has a waiting list.

The problems of insanity and feeblemindedness are closely related in every day life as well as in the social and financial burdens which these dependents place upon the State.

A constructive plan for the State hospitals for the insane, extending over a term of years, is highly desirable, but the problem of the feebleminded is as serious and costly to the taxpayers and is pressing as hard for solution. It is earnestly hoped the Legislature will do something this year on the feebleminded situation—something big enough to make an appreciable impression on the problem.

NEW MEMBERS ON THE ASSOCIATION STAFF

Recent additions to the staff of the State Charities Aid Association, with their department assignments, are as follows:

Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded—Mr. Frank Cass of New Rochelle, New York, and Miss Alvin J. Richfield of Syracuse, assistant in legislative campaign for feebleminded; Miss Mary V. Bolton of Ritchfield Springs, field investigator; Miss Katharine A. Perry of Dunkirk, N. Y., stenographer.

Therapeutic Committee—Mr. Charles Smith of Richmond, Va., was sales manager of the 1916 Red Cross National Sale in New York State, outside of New York City, remains with the Tuberculosis Committee as field agent for the State, Miss Iva Brown, resigned. Miss Emily W. Smith of Brooklyn is now employed as a field agent. Miss Mildred D. Brown is secretary-stenographer to Mr. Neilbach, assistant secretary of the committee.

Mothers' and Babies' Department—Miss Constance A. Smith of Indianapolis, was still at work on schedule for the study of illegitimacy for the Federal Children's Bureau at Washington.

Central Office—Miss Estela M. Sherman, stenographer to Mr. Folks and assistant in legislative work.

Mental Hygiene Committee—Miss Ethel Prince of Yonkers, assistant on part time of Social Service department.

County Agencies Department—Miss Helen Hall, Agent in Westchester County; Miss Dorothy W. Huggins, Agent in Westchester County; Miss Cornelia Ophitee, who was the S. C. A. A. County Agent in Livingston County, is the new County Charities Investigator for the city of Amsterdam.

Policing Out Department—Miss Edith Footlick, Field Agent; Miss Irene Dayton, Miss Alice Taggart, Miss Florence N. Barker, and Miss Blanche S. Mason, volunteer agents.

Polio-vaccinators after-care workers—Mrs. Mary M. Shimer, Miss Edith R. Hubbell.

George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Mental Hygiene Committee, was made an assistant secretary of the Association at the November meeting of the Board of Managers. He is now the editor of the S. C. A. A. News and is in general charge of the legislative work of the Association, including the special legislative campaign of the Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded, to which he is assigned on half time for three months.

TREATMENT FOR DRUGS AND ALCOHOL

The Executive Secretary of the Committee on Hospitals, J. J. Weber, is engaged in collecting information for a pamphlet on agencies in and about New York City dealing with alcoholic and drug addiction.

THE NURSE IN THE MOVIES

Through the good offices of Prof. Shattuck of Vassar College, the Paramount Film Company, in cooperation with the Dutchess County Health Association, is preparing an educational moving picture film featuring the nurse as an educator, the value of educated women entering the nursing profession, and the nurse as sanitary inspector.
GOVERNOR URGES SIMPLER CONTROL OF STATE INSTITUTIONS

His Message Calls the Attention of the Legislators to Commissioner Strong's Report and Bespeaks Serious Consideration of Problem

In his annual message recently submitted to the Legislature Governor Whitman calls attention to the urgent need of "a unified, direct and simple plan of administration of the State charitable institutions."

He calls attention to the careful study of the situation made by Commissioner Charles H. Strong and states that he will submit the report to the Legislature later with recommendations for reforms. Following is the part of his message referring to this subject:

"The division of authority and responsibility in the management of the State charitable institutions has impressed me most unfavorably and seems to me responsible, to a large degree, for a lack of adequate results in this important branch of the State service.

"No less than six different commissions and officials have important duties in relation to these institutions. Having in mind the desirability of substituting a simple, clear and efficient system of this tangle of complexities, I appointed Mr. Charles H. Strong as a Commissioner to inquire into the actual operations of all the State departments, boards, commissions and officials dealing with these institutions.

"Commissioner Strong made a very thorough investigation of the entire subject and reported to me in October last a plan which, in his judgment, would remove all these uncertainties, overlapping of duties and consequent interminable delays, both in the establishment and in the subsequent operation of State charitable institutions.

"I shall transmit this report to you, together with a statement and recommendations, relative to the whole subject, prepared by the State Board of Charities and filed with me on December 26th.

"I ask you to give the subject your most serious consideration. It seems to me highly important that a unified, direct and simple plan of administration of the State charitable institutions be adopted.

"I desire to communicate with you and to confer with the Committees from the Senate and Assembly on this subject later."

The State Lags Behind N. Y. City in Providing for the Feebleminded

What the City Has Done at Randall's Island

On October 1, 1907, New York City had in its institutions on Randall's Island 778 feebleminded.

On January 1, 1917, the City had brought together under its care on Randall's Island 2,021 feebleminded persons, an increase of 1,243.

The State is twice as large as the City. Care of the feebleminded is primarily the State's Job.

JEFFERSON COUNTY OPENS ITS TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

The Jefferson County Tuberculosis Hospital was opened for the admission of patients on Wednesday, January 24, 1917. The institution can accommodate 40 patients according to present arrangements, but in case of necessity about 10 more can be cared for. Dr. H. H. Smith is the superintendent and he resides at the institution. The Board of Managers consists of George H. Hooker, of Watertown, chairman; William A. Mather, of miles. The municipal water and sewer systems have been extended to the institution.

Hospital is Result of Seven Years' Work

The opening of the hospital marks the culmination of a seven years' struggle for its establishment. The Board of Supervisors in January, 1910, issued bonds for $15,000 and later that year selected a site in the extreme northeastern sec-

Adams; John J. Barron, of Three Mile Bay; Dr. Harlow G. Farmer, of Watertown, and Dr. E. E. Babcock, of Adams Center.

The hospital is located on a tract of land of 54 acres on the outskirts of Watertown, within a few hundred yards of the city line. A splendid outlook is afforded from the property, and on clear days it is possible to view the country to the south and east for seven or eight tion of the county. Objections to the remoteness of this location from the larger centers of population in the county resulted several years later in the acquisition of the site in Watertown, and at the general election of 1915 the question of appropriating $25,000 more was submitted to the voters and carried by a large majority. Since then the building of the institution has been pushed with vigor by the Board of Supervisors.
PREPARED

It was a natural step for Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, Mrs. William B. Rice, and their associates, from the work of the Sanitary Commission during the Civil War, to the organization and development of an Association for the improvement of public charitable institutions a few years after the war had closed.

During the nearly forty-five years that have elapsed since the State Charities Aid Association was established, it has been continuously engaged in matters directly related to the organized efficiency of the State and its subdivisions, to the conservation of its human resources, the more effective operation of its organized welfare activities.

In case of need, it would be a short and simple transition from what the State Charities Aid Association is now doing to the kind of work in which the Sanitary Commission was engaged in the days of the Civil War.

We have no doubt that, in case of need, every asset and every ounce of strength of the State Charities Aid Association, its thousands of volunteers, and its staff, would be devoted to whatever form of public service, within the broad scope of its organized activities, seemed most essential at the time to the welfare of the State.

This Feebleminded Woman Now Has Six Children

Two of Them Are Already Known to Be Degenerates and There Is No Place for Mother or Children in State Institutions

This is a picture of a feebleminded woman and five children taken in 1914. Since that time another child has been born. Two of the children are already known to be degenerates and should be having custodial care.

Application was made several years ago for the admission of this woman to the Newark State institution, but owing to crowded conditions she could not be given its protection. This woman is a member of the Jukes family of notorious defectives and degenerates who have been a burden to the State for the last 100 years.

"There are reasons for believing that feeblemindedness is on the increase, that it has leaped its barriers, so to speak, as a result of changed conditions of civilization."—Dr. Walter E. Fernald, Supt. Massachusetts School for the Feebleminded, Waverly, Mass.

This boy on his mother's lap is one example from a “waiting list.” This 15-year-old boy is epileptic and feebleminded. Both of his parents are feebleminded. In December, 1912—more than four years ago—a County physician filled out a blank for the boy’s admission to Craig Colony for Epileptics. He was placed on the waiting list but has never been admitted.

The child is as helpless as a baby. He falls from his chair unless watched. He cannot eat without help. His feebleminded parents give him as good care as they know how, but he is a constant drain on their meagre resources and greatly increases their problem of getting along, handicapped as they are by their own mental weakness.

"The one effective way to diminish the number of the feebleminded in future generations is to prevent the birth of those who would transmit feeblemindedness to their descendants."—Dr. Walter E. Fernald.

These Are the Kinds of People State Should Segregate Without Delay

The feebleminded man seen in the picture at the left is known as the “dirtiest man in ——— county.” His clothes are foul with filth; his hair is long and matted. Dirt is crusted on his face and arms. He and baths are strangers.

Ten persons live in the shack in the center picture. The feebleminded woman sitting in the foreground left her husband and married her half uncle after having four children by him. The oldest child is feebleminded.

The woman in the picture at the right is a high grade mental defective and at times suffers from marked depression. Her husband is a drunkard with criminal tendencies and has a long jail record. The couple’s four children were taken away from them by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children on account of the woman’s immorality and neglect of her children.

Left to Themselves in the Community the Feebleminded Live and Breed in Shacks and Shanties Like These

These two men are feebleminded. Another brother, also feebleminded, is in jail for shooting a man for crossing his yard. The father of this trio committed suicide. Two aunts of these brothers are in a hospital for the insane.

Two Feebleminded Sisters Bring Ten Children into World

In ——— County there are two sisters whom we shall call Jane and Josephine. Jane is 33 years old. She has had six children. She is utterly incapable of taking care of them. One of them is in the Syracuse Institution for Feebleminded Children; two are in an orphan asylum; two have been placed out in family homes, and the baby is in a boarding home at public expense.

The other sister, Josephine, is 30 years old. After a career as a common prostitute, she married and has four children. All of them are of too low grade of mentality to be accepted in school. One of the children is colored and illegitimate.

This Hovel Shelters Branch of Notorious Finn Family of Defectives

In — County lives one branch of the notorious Finn family of feebleminded degenerates. A total of 127 descendants of one feebleminded woman have been accounted for as follows:

- Feebleminded: 30
- Served time in criminal institutions: 10
- Arrested and released with fine: 9
- Sexual offenders: 44
- Recipients of public charity: 34

Total: 127

Segregation of the feebleminded is a necessary measure of self-protection for society.

These Are the Kinds of Places Where the Feebleminded Live

The woman who lives in the house at the left is unable even to name the months or to speak plainly. Her father has been insane for fifteen years. Her mother is feebleminded.

In the shanty in the middle lives a moral imbecile who is repeatedly arrested for theft and drunkenness. He has been five years in a reformatory. He has been guilty of incest. When he gets tired of sleeping in this shanty he sleeps in the open lots.

Try in Vain Four Years to Get Boy into Institution

Four years ago there was on the waiting list of the Rome institution the name of a 15-year-old boy, very low grade feebleminded, though the son of sound, respectable parents. For eight years the family has exhausted every effort to improve the lad's mental condition. They have frequently sought the advice of experts, only to hear every time the same disheartening verdict, that it would be impossible ever to improve their child's condition. His care requires practically every minute of the mother's time. Frequent attempts have been made to get him into an institution where he could have proper care and the family thus be relieved.

This Hovel Houses a Man and an Epileptic Woman

Ever since she was 16 years old Susie Smith has had epileptic convulsions. Her father had the same disease, and an uncle was feebleminded. Susie married but separated from her husband, and is now living in this hovel with another man. She is dirty, deteriorated, vermin-ridden and quarrelsome.

Child Is Said to Have Died of Neglect in This Shanty

This dirty shanty shelters a moral imbecile, his wife and four children. The husband is a drunkard and has been arrested twice recently for cruelty to his wife and for disorderly conduct. One child is said to have died of neglect. The wife is suffering from a deteriorative form of mental disturbance.

This woman, 36 years old has a brain disease.
HOW STATE CARES FOR THE FEEBLEMINDED

The overcrowding in at least one of the State institutions for the feebleminded as well as in the State Hospitals is a reflection on the good name of the Empire State.

The State has assumed the responsibility of caring for the feebleminded, the epileptic, and the insane, but its accommodations are entirely inadequate.

The number of feebleminded persons who need institutional protection and care is constantly increasing, but facilities to house them do not increase anywhere near rapidly enough to meet the need. In fact, considering the number of defectives actually un cared for, the State has been falling behind in its task.

One of the institutions where the overcrowding is most evident and most serious is the Rome State Custodial Asylum. The overcrowding is to the credit of the institution, too, because of the Herculean efforts it constantly makes to "find a place for just one more case" for which the need of protection and care is most pressingly urgent.

In this institution the overcrowding is so serious that some patients have to sleep on mattresses laid on the floor; there are no beds for them. The recent development of a number of cases of measles made it necessary to care for a considerable number of patients in the basement because of lack of suitable isolation facilities.

The pictures presented herewith, which were taken at the Rome institution on the night of February 24, 1917, show the crowded conditions.

Patients Sleeping on Floor at Rome Institution

Basement Used as Dormitory at Rome

Beds So Close Together They Nearly Touch

Even the Stair Landing Used as Sleeping Place

The upper left-hand picture shows the crowded condition in the dormitory for disturbed and violent cases at the Rome institution. The room is used as a dormitory at night and as a sitting and exercising room in the daytime. The beds are removed during the day and replaced at night. Between the beds on the left there is not room enough in which to stand. Patients must either pull the beds out to get in them or climb over the foot of the bed. Notice the boys sleeping on the floor, exposed to drafts, in the middle of the room and in the corridor in the background.

On account of an outbreak of measles it was necessary to put beds in the basement so that the regular dormitory could be used as an isolation ward. The State does not provide isolation facilities for these poor afflicted boys and girls should they become ill with a contagious disease. All the bad features of overcrowding are illustrated in the upper right-hand picture.

Frequently it is necessary to find a place for a violent and noisy patient apart from the others in order that the occupants of an entire dormitory shall not be disturbed. The only available place, and one that leaves much to be desired, is a hallway or stair landing, shut off by a door from the general ward. The difficulty of watching a patient in such a location as seen in the lower right picture can be appreciated, and the danger of accident to a very disturbed patient is obvious.

But think of the 267 applicants who have been refused admittance and who cannot get even this poor care!

What Are We Waiting For?

We Know the Institutions for the Feebleminded Are Full and That Thousands Are at Large Causing Heavy Expense and Untold Harm

WHY NOT ENLARGE THE INSTITUTIONS THIS YEAR?

It would be hard to find a well-informed person any where in the State who did not think that something ought to be done about the feebleminded.

It is common knowledge that there are enormous numbers of feebleminded persons without protection in the community, propagating their kind and causing untold poverty, pauperism, immorality, crime, expense and general inefficiency. The five institutions for the feebleminded in this State contain about 5,400 inmates; they are all crowded and have long waiting lists. The number still uncared for is not less than 23,000.

In every community we see them living, often in hovels, reeking with disease and filth. Large families of children are the rule among them, for the birthrate is higher than among normal folk.

Nearly every school, large and small, has its quota of backward pupils, many of whom are backward in life, because they lack normal mental capacity due to defective development of the brain.

Feebleminded persons appear in every court. They are more or less irresponsible because of their defect, yet their conflict with the law clogs court calendars, wastes the time of judges and magistrates and results in many of them being sent to jails, prisons and reformatories. There is little or no chance of reforming them, but there they remain for varying terms, a burden to the taxpayers, aggravating the overcrowding, negative reformatory measures among helpless prisoners, and being themselves confirmed in criminal tendencies and practices.

Many Paupers Feebleminded

In every almshouse we see the feebleminded, for large numbers of them never will or never can become self-supporting. Superintendents of the Poor are constantly confronted with the problem of what to do with the growing number of feebleminded in the communities. There is no place to send them because the State institutions are already full and have long waiting lists. Relief organizations running down the causes of dependency and poverty find feeblemindedness at the root of a great many cases of distress.

The ranks of prostitutes are very largely filled up by feebleminded women and girls. Every individual and organization working to reclaim girls and women from lives of immorality and to protect boys from open temptation to vice finds feeblemindedness a most serious problem.

Seriousness of Situation Realized

The importance of providing institutions large enough to hold the feebleminded who ought to be segregated is realized, but Legislatures and Governors have temporized with the problem for years.

Commissioner Charles H. Strong, who investigated the operation of the State charitable institutions at the request of Governor Whitman, says:

"Mental deficiency is today perhaps the greatest social problem that confronts the State."

A recent carefully organized and executed survey of mental disorders in Nassau County showed 1 out of every 183 persons to be feebleminded.

Recent studies conducted by the United States Public Health Service have shown that 9 in every 1,000 American rural school children are feebleminded.

Dr. Walter E. Fernald, Superintendent of the Massachusetts School for the Feebleminded, and one of the most conservative and reliable authorities on feeblemindedness, says:

"It is conservative to say that there are at least four feebleminded persons to each thousand of the general population. There are reasons for believing that feeblemindedness is on the increase—that it has leaped its barriers."

The general public, the taxpayer, the magistrate, the teacher, the social worker, the philanthropist, sees the need of doing something about feeblemindedness. What shall it be?

There is general agreement among those who have studied the situation that the first and most essential step—the one which promises the greatest measure of relief in the shortest time—is the prompt and continuing construction of sufficient buildings to accommodate most of the thousands of feebleminded now at large in the community, especially women of childbearing age.

But while taxpayers, magistrates, teachers and others see the need of the segregation of the feebleminded, the Legislature, hitherto, has seen the need but dimly. Year after year has passed with only a dab here and a dab there at making adequate institutional provision.

Governors and Legislators frequently have gone on record as believing that something ought to be done about the feebleminded but almost invariably they add: "This is not the year." "The finances of the State will not permit it now." "We must do something about this next year."

But next year never comes!

In this year A. D. 1917, however, there are signs that a new light is breaking at Alhambra, and that there is a frank recognition of the size and the seriousness of the job. There is a disposition to start this year on a program on which work shall be done, year after year, for, say, ten years, until adequate relief is obtained.

The appropriation bill this year should include an appropriation of $1,000,000 toward the $2,000,000 needed to complete Letchworth Village and $52,000 for a cottage for fifty inmates requiring special provision at the State Custodial Asylum, Newark.

The sum of approximately $2,000,000 is needed to complete Letchworth Village at Thielis, Rockland County, to accommodate 3,000 patients. This institution was started ten years ago, and yet it has accommodations for only 340 patients!

The cottage proposed for the State Custodial Asylum at Newark is for adult female defective delinquents.

One of the existing reformatories for adult male defective delinquents should also be set apart to receive them from the other prisons.

For the Next Five Years

The Legislature should adopt a plan that will bring the following ultimate results within a period of five years:

New suitable State institutions for male and female adult defective delinquents.

Custodial provision for all the juvenile mental defectives needing custodial care.

Organized oversight of such mental defectives as give evidence of being able to conduct themselves properly in the community with such aid.

What are we waiting for? Why not tackle the job in earnest by appropriating $1,052,000 this year? It will not be any easier to wait until next year, or the year after.

This is the year.

S.C.A.A. Favors Study of Health Insurance

The Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association, at its last meeting, took action favoring the appointment of a State Commission to consider the matter of health insurance, and to report to a later session whether or not a system of health insurance should be adopted in this State, and, if it should be adopted, in what form.

No more important subject will come before the legislature during the current session than health insurance.

CARDINAL FARLEY
ON CHILD CARE
Asks Priests to Cooperate in Placing Children in Families
Since last autumn the Department of Public Charities of New York City, exercising the discretion vested in it in the charter to place dependent children in families or institutions, has been placing practically all destitute children coming under its care, under the age of seven years, in families and in New York City and its immediate vicinity, paying for their board. This is the system which is in use in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and very largely in foreign countries. It has long been the practice of institutions caring for children under two years of age.
It has been understood by many that this action would not be regarded with favor by the authorities of the Catholic Church by reason of the numerous institutions which have been established under the auspices of that faith. His Eminence, Cardinal Farley, recently addressed a communication to the clergy in the Diocese of New York, portions of which have since been published in the press. The letter is characterized by a most gratifying spirit of cooperation, a recognition of the changing conditions of child care, and an emphasis upon the importance of the spiritual training of children. Some of the important passages are:

"Such a policy will tend to lessen in proportion to the extent its acceptance the utility of our various homes and orphanages. It will withdraw from the salutary influence of the religious thousands of our Catholic children who otherwise would have been their wards.

"It will also necessitate, provided the new arrangement is found feasible, our diverting to other purposes the splendid buildings in which the people have erected during the last fifty years, and which must ever be regarded as monuments of our pious laity’s love for the faith.

"In spite of these inconveniences we have no objection to the new method of solving the problem of the dependent child. We recognize and have maintained that the home has many advantages which the institution cannot supply."

"Our first and most urgent duty, therefore, is to make it practical for the Commissioner to place out Catholic children with individuals of like religious faith."

"The pastor must keep in touch with all Catholic children placed out in homes within the limits of his jurisdiction."

"I have no doubt that our clergy will take a great interest in this work. I have been pleased to see that there has been an awakening on the part of both clergy and laymen in the interest in this work."

"No matter what new methods may be introduced by legislation or public opinion, fostered by the social agencies under secular control, the Church must always hold her traditional place in the field of charity. She must conform, where she possibly can, to such changes, and still fulfilling her ancient mission, must baptize and consecrate the new movement with the religious spirit."

"I trust also that the public authorities will have no excuse arising from antagonism or indifference on our part to place our children with individuals not of our faith."

A Desirable Constitutional Amendment

Hon. Ogden L. Mills has introduced in the Senate a concurrent resolution proposing the amendment to the constitution of the state of New York, under the auspices of the Senate of the State, and of the House of Representatives, the number 110, gathered in the main office on Monday afternoon, February 5, for a general conference. They were addressed by Mr. Homer Folks, the secretary, on "The Traditions, Aims and Unity of the State Charities Aid Association." The tenminute talks by heads of departments on their respective activities were given, after which the company was entertained at dinner at the Hotel Imperial as guests of Mrs. Willard Straight of the board of managers.

Mr. Folks said that the State Charities Aid Association wants as members of its staff those who are sincere of purpose and have an inherent interest in the work, who think hard on the work, and always study the job; who keep themselves familiar with advances in science and public health and who are loyal to the association as a whole and to the causes it stands for.

Mr. Folks hoped that the next five years would see an improved system of child-care in the State; the extension of preventive nursing; better public health machinery; adequate segregation of the feebleminded; a juvenile court in every county of the State, and a modern system of health insurance.

At the age of 12 years she bore an illegitimate child.

State Shirk's Its Duty—Costs County $4,100 A Year

Because there is no more room in the State institutions for the feebleminded, one county in the State is compelled to maintain 13 feebleminded persons in a private institution. The county pays $5.75 a week for each inmate besides $20 a year for clothing. This amounts to $4,147 a year.

These children could be maintained in State institutions at $3.45 a week—or $2,322.20 a year as against $4,147 in the private institutions.

How long must this county be penalized because the State doesn't do its duty?

The Price We Pay

The penalty of procrastination in segregating the feebleminded is:

Crime.
Poverty.
Vagrancy.
Immorality.
Illegitimacy.
Degeneracy.
Public expense.
Spread of disease.
Lessened efficiency of schools.
Pilling of jails, almshouses and prisons, thus hampering their work and defeating their purposes.

Continual propagation of the feebleminded to burden this and succeeding generations—and the birth rate among the feebleminded is abnormally high.

THIS IS THE YEAR TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT!

MR. CHOATE HEADS THIS ASSOCIATION FOR 17th TERM

Mr. Joseph H. Choate, who recently celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday, was reelected President of the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association for the seventeenth term at the annual meeting of the association held on February 8.

Mr. Martin A. Buckner, President of the New York Trust Company, was elected treasurer to succeed Mr. Edward W. Sheldon.

COMMISSIONER MORGAN REAPPOINTED

Hon. Andrew D. Morgan of Ilium, N. Y., has been reappointed by Governor Whitman as a member of the State Hospital Commission. Commissioner Morgan’s reappointment is exceedingly gratifying to all friends of the insane and is a deserved recognition of his valuable services in the commission.

APPROPRIATION BILL SHOULD CONTAIN $1,052,000 FOR THE FEEBLEMINDED

ENLARGE INSTITUTIONS FOR FEEBLEMINDED THIS YEAR, MAGISTRATES URGE LEGISLATURE

Strong resolutions calling upon Governor Whitman and the Legislature to provide adequate appropriations this year for additional accommodations for the feebleminded were adopted by the Association of Magistrates of New York State at their annual meeting in Albany on February 15. The appointment of a standing committee of five persons was authorized to take all suitable steps to secure the adoption of the recommendations, which are as follows:

Whereas, mental deficiency is one of the most frequent causes of disorder and crime.

Whereas, the only effective means of dealing with mentally deficient offenders is by custodial care in a suitable institution, and

Whereas, the construction and maintenance of such institutions is a duty of the State,

Be It Resolved, that the New York State Association of Magistrates urges upon the Governor and the Legislature, in the strongest possible terms, that adequate steps be taken at the present session of the Legislature to secure the following:

I. IMMEDIATE RESULTS:
(a) A cottage at the State Custodial Asylum for feebleminded women at Newark, suitable for adult female feebleminded delinquents.
(b) Setting apart one of the existing State reformatories or prisons for adult male feebleminded delinquents and legislation for commitments or transfers thereof.
(c) The immediate addition of not less than 1,000 beds to Letchworth Village, including cottages for juvenile feebleminded delinquents.

II. ULTIMATE RESULTS WITHIN A PERIOD OF FIVE YEARS:
(a) New suitable State institutions for male and female adult feebleminded delinquents.
(b) Custodial provision for all the juvenile mental defectives needing custodial care.
(c) Organized oversight of such mental defectives as give evidence of being able to conduct themselves properly in the community with such aid.

And Be It Further Resolved, that a standing committee of five persons on the care of the feebleminded be appointed by the President of the State Association of Magistrates to take all suitable steps to secure the adoption of the recommendations outlined in the preceding resolutions.

The president has appointed the following as members of the Committee:
Hon. Edward L. Garvin, Justice, Court of Special Sessions, New York City.
Hon. Charles E. Simms, City Magistrate, New York City.
Hon. Fred E. Lewis, City Judge, Utica.
Hon. Alexander J. Byrne, Police Justice, Seneca Falls.
Hon. Walter S. Gedney, Police Justice, Nyack.

$950,000 FOR COUNTY HOSPITAL

The Board of Supervisors of Westchester County, at its meeting on March 5, voted an additional appropriation of $650,000 for a new county general hospital. This, added to an appropriation of $300,000 previously voted, makes $950,000 available for the purpose. The hospital will be built on a unit plan, with provision made for a variety of cases, including tuberculosis patients.

Do Something About Feebleminded Girls
NOW SAYS MISS MINER

"We all recognize the need of protecting the little girl of five, seven or ten years of age. A justifiable spirit of indignation is aroused at any insult upon her. We empower societies to see that she suffers no cruelties and ensure to her some kind of guardianship. But the girl sixteen or seventeen years of age, with the mentality of the child of seven or nine years, lacks protection. Until she becomes a social problem and gives birth to an illegitimate child or is arrested for some offence, we seldom recognize her and protect her.

"In the absence of all protection from society, it is not a wonder that we find so frequently the feebleminded girl in maternity homes and hospitals, with a feebleminded baby in her arms, or in courts, reformatories and prisons, where her delinquent career has brought her. Her presence is a constant reminder of the lack of an adequate social policy for dealing with mental defectives and of the great menace of feeblemindedness.

"It is not enough to care for the feebleminded girl who has become delinquent. Far greater effort should be made to protect the feebleminded girl and to care for her before she reaches a court or a prison.

"Adequate care now will lessen for the future a tremendous volume of delinquency, illegitimacy, degeneracy, prostitution and crime." — Miss Maude E. Miner, Secretary New York Protective and Probation Association.

Wait in Vain for Years to Get Feebleminded Persons into State Institutions

Every one of the State institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic is full at the present time and has a list of applications on file waiting for admission.

It is practically impossible for judges, physicians, probation officers, poor law authorities or social workers to obtain the admission to these institutions of persons who have been definitely diagnosed as feebleminded.

When it is considered that there are no less than 23,000 feebleminded persons uncared for and unprotected in the community, the significance of the inadequacy of the institutions is evident.

Some of the names have been on waiting lists since 1909—8 years.

And still the prospect for getting the persons actually committed are apparently no better than they were at the time the applications were made. The waiting list for the five State institutions total 611, and some of the institutions are hardly recording applications any more.

107 on Waiting List at Newark

There are 107 on the waiting list of the State Custodial Asylum for Feebleminded Women at Newark, Wayne County. Of these, 33 are on the list compiled by this association in 1914 and submitted to the legislature at that time. Two of the names have been on the list since 1910, and 5 of them since 1911. All sections of the State are represented.

96 on Waiting List at Syracuse Institution

Ninety-six names are on the waiting list at the Syracuse State Institution for Feebleminded Children. Of this number, 31 were on the list compiled in 1914.

55 on List of Letchworth Village

Accommodations at Letchworth Village are so meager—accommodations being actually available for only 340, although the institution was planned for 3,000—that little attention has been paid to an actual waiting list, because the probabilities of admitting additional cases were so remote. Still there is a formal list of 55 persons for whom application has been actually made and to whom accommodations had to be refused. This is in spite of the fact that the institution was "established" ten years ago. The Superintendent of Letchworth Village has notified practically every superintendent of the poor and social worker that he could not admit anyone, and that there was no use applying. Nevertheless there is a file of inquiries concerning admission of children to this institution, to all of which reply has to be made that there are no beds available and no indication of when any will be available.

444 on Waiting List at Rome

The waiting list of the Rome State Custodial Asylum is a long one. It contains 267 names. Following is a list of the number of applications on file:

88 on Waiting List at Craig Colony

There are 88 persons on the waiting list at Craig Colony for Epileptics, located at SONYA, Livingston County. This entire list with one or two exceptions is from New York City.

Do It This Year!

The feebleminded girl shown in this picture is the oldest of a family of six children who have never been supported by their feebleminded father. The home became notorious. County officials learned that young boys in the neighborhood were being demoralized. The girl in the picture was placed in the County Almshouse. Application was made on May 19, 1913, to get her into Letchworth Village.

But she is still in the almshouse.

A Good Bill

Senator Brown has introduced a bill (Senate bill, printed No. 417) amending the Poor Law by providing that Superintendents of the Poor, on the expiration of the terms of office of the present incumbents, shall be appointed by Boards of Supervisors from eligible lists established as a result of competitive examinations held by the State Civil Service Commission, and that in counties in which there are now three Superintendents of the Poor there shall be but one.

The State Charities Aid Association has long believed that the Superintendents of the Poor should not be elected for short terms at a general election, but should be appointed by some suitable public authority in such a manner as to tend to prevent frequent changes in the office. The position is one in which experience, knowledge of the Poor Law and special training are important. These qualities can be determined by the right sort of competitive examination.

At its last meeting, the Board of Managers of this Association unanimously endorsed this bill.
COUNTING MENTAL DEFECTIVES IN NASSAU COUNTY

Preliminary Report on Survey, Now Being Compiled, Indicates That Previous Estimates of the Number of the Mentally Abnormal in Any Given Area Have Fallen Below the Mark

How many mental defectives are there in the community, in the county, or in the State? The answer to this question is not easy. The demand for an answer has been so frequent and persistent that from time to time many efforts to ascertain the defectives have been made, but for the most part these attempts, though sometimes elaborate and expensive, have yielded rather unconvincing results.

The most noteworthy recent effort at enumeration of mental defectives is that made in Nassau County, Long Island, during the summer and autumn of 1916, by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. In order to focus a clear picture of the facts regarding mental disorders of all kinds in a given locality, this committee made a survey which stands out among all surveys of its kind because of the scientific methods used, the thoroughness with which it was organized and carried out, and the clear cut picture which it promises to give when completed.

It will be some time before the full report of the survey is completed, but an opportunity given to the editor of The S. C. A. A. News to read the preliminary report of the director enables us to explain the method used, to show the careful work done, and to give an idea of what the survey is expected to accomplish.

1 of Every 100 Persons Abnormal

According to the figures on the examination of all the school children in certain parts of the county, there are at least 1,592 mentally abnormal people out of the county's total population of 115,817. This is 1.3 per cent of the population, or, if it is not out of every 100, it is close to it.

Of the 1,592 people found mentally abnormal, 638, or about 40 per cent, were cases of arrested development, more commonly called feeblemindedness. In other words, with the data on the school children left out of consideration, there is one feebleminded person to each 183 of the population in Nassau County.

How the Survey Was Done

The survey was made under the general direction of Dr. Aaron J. Rosanoff, who is a highly competent and experienced psychiatrist and is one of the leading authorities on mental hygiene, and his advisory board of eight members. Dr. Rosanoff is the director of the Psycho-Surgical Research Institute, which is supported by the Rockefeller Foundation, and his work and research was undertaken by and through the National Committee for Mental Hygiene in cooperation with the Nassau County Association for Mental Hygiene, the New York State Hospital Commission, a large number of local organizations, various State and county institutions, and numerous other interested organizations and individuals.

The survey was conducted in the following manner:

Dr. Charles B. Davenport, Chairman, Director, Station for Experimental Evolution, Carnegie Institute of Washington, Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, N. Y., in consultation with Prof. Stephen P. Duggan, Professor of Education, Teachers College, City University of New York, N. Y.; Dr. E. N. Ream, Chief, Bureau of Census, U. S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.; and Dr. Charles Bell, Department of Hygiene, Education, New York City; and Prof. J. A. Wilkins, President, American Orthopsychiatric Association, New York City.

The survey was carried on by the New York State Department of Health, Albany, N. Y., under the direction of Dr. Frank H. Hoffer, Director, Psychiatric Institute, Wards Island, New York City.

The survey was conducted by Dr. O. J. Rosanoff, First Assistant Physician, Kings Park State Hospital, Kings Park, L. I., and Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Visiting Health Worker, and Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, Medical Director, The Nassau County Committee for Mental Hygiene, New York City.

The staff consisted of the director, four physicians with psychiatric experience, a psychologist, sixteen trained field workers, and clerical assistants. One field worker and one clerical assistant were furnished by the State Hospital Commission. Students from the Eugenics Record office at Cold Spring Harbor also assisted to some extent in the field work. The physicians, justices of the peace, superintendents of the poor, and poor law administrators and others in the county cooperated. A very important part of the survey was made by the United States Public Health Service through five assistant surgeons under Surgeon Toliafero Clark.

The field work covered the four months' period from July 1 to October 31, 1916.

Methods of the Survey

Throughout the survey it was kept in mind, to use Dr. Rosanoff's words, that "modern psychiatry, unlike its predecessors, makes no attempt to draw a sharp line between mental normality and abnormality, but recognizes between the two the existence of many insensible grades of transition. Today the question of prevalence is no longer an academic one. In competent circles one no longer asks, What is the percentage of 'insane,' or 'feebleminded,' or 'mentally defective,' persons in a given community? But rather, What instances of social maladjustment have been sufficiently marked to become the concern of public authorities, and how great a proportion of these instances are, upon investigation, to be attributed mainly to a definite measure to mental disorders? It was with the hope..."
of finding an answer to the question, thus expressed, that the Nassau County survey was undertaken."

Although the survey was made on the broad lines stated by Dr. Rosanoff, it differentiated types of abnormality so that the number of the so-called feebleminded—a term which the lay public does not drop quite as readily as the psychiatrist of the modern school—can be separated from the total number of cases of mental abnormality of all kinds—insanity, epilepsy, etc. cetera. The cases found abnormal were classified both on a medical and sociological basis. The guiding feature of the method in general was an investigation of all socially maladjusted persons; more particularly, persons in jails, almshouses, State institutions of various kinds, certain applicants for out-door relief; and others known to physicians, ministers and priests, public officials, the police, etc.

The Results Compared With British Survey

It is interesting to compare the proportion of feeblemindedness found in the population of Nassau County with the results in the only other survey that is comparable to it in organization, thoroughness and reliability—the survey made by the British Royal Commission on the Care and Control of the Feebleminded in Great Britain and Ireland. In Nassau County one out of every 183 persons was judged feebleminded.

The Royal Commission, having spent four years, 1904-1908, and large sum in the investigation and the compiling of eight ponderous volumes in a report, reached the conclusion that in Ireland there was one feebleminded person to each 175 of the population; in England one to each 217; and in Scotland one to each 400.

The Part of the U. S. Public Health Service

The figures given in this article are complete as far as the adult residents are concerned, but they are not complete as to the children. The United States Public Health Service, through five assistant surgeons working under Surgeon Taliaferro Clark, made a complete mental and physical examination of all the school children in certain parts of the county. These numbered between two and three thousand. The results of their examination are not yet available.

Institutional Care

Of the 638 persons judged to be feebleminded, only 171, or 26.8 per cent., are now or ever have been in institutions; 454, or 71.2 per cent., have never been in an institution; the question whether they had been in institutions or not was unascertainable in 13 cases, or 2 per cent.

But most of the 171 feebleminded persons now or formerly in institutions have not received the kind of institutional treatment best adapted to their condition, many of them being in almshouses and prisons instead of in institutions especially adapted for such cases.

Family in This Hovel Victims of Both Feeblemindedness and Infantile Paralysis—What Was Done About It?

In an up-State county recently a local physician called the attention of one of the field agents of the S. C. A. A. Committee on After-care of Infantile Paralysis to the case of a little girl who had suffered from paralysis last August and whom it had been impossible to bring to a clinic, although the child was already seriously deformed.

The field agent visited the village and found living in the hovel shown in this picture a family consisting of a shiftless father, a feebleminded mother and five children.

Besides the crippled girl mentioned above, there was a little boy, slightly younger, who had also had infantile paralysis but who seemed to have made a complete recovery. There were twins, two years old—one, apparently normal, and the other pronounced "practically idiotic" by the doctor. The fifth child was a baby four months old, the shape of whose head suggested the possibility of feeblemindedness. The local health officer had been unable to get the family out of the little shack in order to fumigate the rooms, so the paralysis quarantine notice was still on the door, as seen in the picture.

To deal with the deplorable situation revealed by her visit, the field agent secured the cooperation of the wife of a former State senator, of the town board, the physician in charge of the case, the local overseer of the poor, the county superintendent of the poor and the superintendent of the Rome State Custodial Asylum. As a result, the following action as to the various members of the family was immediately taken:

Application was made for the admission of the mother, the four-month-old baby and the two-year-old girl to the Rome State Custodial Asylum, and they were taken to the county almshouse pending admission to Rome.

The little girl, who is crippled from paralysis, was placed in an orthopedic hospital for immediate treatment.

The boy who had recovered from paralysis and the normal twin were sent to a nearby children's institution.

The father was left to shift for himself.

New York City Has to Send Patients 340 Miles

The Newark State Institution to which New York City is expected to send its feebleminded women is 340 miles away—further away from New York than Portland, Me., and almost as far as Richmond, Va.

- How would it seem to tell the relatives of a feebleminded girl that she could be cared for and protected by the State only by being sent so far away from home as Portland or Richmond?

Do It This Year!

DO THE STATE INSTITUTIONS NEED A NEW DEAL?

How Long Would It Take You to Build and Move into a New House? Would Four Years Be Enough?

These are fine looking, new cottages at the New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford. They were planned with great care. They combine simplicity, economy of operation, and adaptability to the purpose for which they are to be used. Living in these cottages and doing simple work in this environment, the victims of the white slave trader were little by little to forget the ways of the "Great White Way."

The only thing wrong with the cottages is that they are empty.
They have always been empty.

The money for their construction was fully appropriated and all of it made available in 1913. We are not prepared at this time to locate the precise responsibility for the fact that nearly four years have elapsed and the cottages are still not in use. Some of the outstanding facts are that the contracts for their erection were not awarded until more than two years after the money was made available. Work on the buildings themselves proceeded with fair promptness and the buildings were practically completed in 1915. They have remained idle a year and a half because of the fact that there is no road leading to them. In 1914 the Board of Managers requested an appropriation for building such a road, but the item was cut out altogether. The request was renewed in 1915, $2,500 being asked. Somewhere on the long road, which begins at the institution, leads through the offices of the State Board of Charities, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, the Governor's budget advisors, the Senate Finance Committee, the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, and the Executive Chamber, this amount was reduced to $1,000. Very likely the person who did it had never been at the institution and did not appreciate that $2,500 was needed to build the road, and that the road was necessary to make the cottages usable. Very likely to him it was just any old road, and $1,000 seemed enough. The 1917 Appropriation Bill, now pending in the Legislature, carries $2,500 to complete the road.

The condition of the road on which the $1,000 has been spent is shown in the accompanying picture. The other road referred to above, leading through the multitudinous offices, committees and commissions is not an improved State highway. Many vehicles get stuck on the way and parts of their cargoes are thrown overboard.
A competent social engineer, Mr. Charles H. Strong, employed therefor by the Governor, has surveyed a new road through this bewildering multiplicity of boards, commissions and officials having powers in relation to State charitable institutions. He recommends that five of these different authorities be abolished and their duties transferred to a reorganized State Board of Charities.

It would be difficult to find a more conclusive argument for the adoption of Commissioner Strong's recommendations than the photographs which appear upon the preceding page, all taken in March, 1917.

This delay in making buildings available is not an isolated instance. In fact, it is almost typical. Instances are to be found at Rome, Newark and Letchworth Village; in fact, in a greater part of the construction work at the State charitable institutions in the last five or six years. We hope to give further particulars in later numbers of the S. C. A. A. News.

KIND WORDS ABOUT THE "FEEBLEMINDED NUMBER"

The "Feebleminded Number" of The S. C. A. A. News, published last month, has been the subject of favorable comment. Here are some of the comments: "The Feebleminded Number of the S. C. A. A. News is a striking thing, and should bring results."—Dr. Frankwood E. Williams, Assistant Medical Director, National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

"I wish to congratulate you upon the current issue of the S. C. A. A. News. This publication must be a wonderfully effective means of disseminating information regarding the urgency of the problem of the feebleminded."—Dr. O. H. Cobb, Superintendent of the Syracuse State Institution for Feebleminded Children.

"I think that your Feebleminded Number is a splendid piece of propaganda. It certainly made a very definite impression on me."—Professor Selasar M. Gunn, Secretary, American Public Health Association.

"Many thanks for the copy of the S. C. A. A. News. I hope it will reach the many people who are responsible for our chaotic conditions."—Adolph Meyer, M. D., Psychiatrist-in-Chief, The Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md.

Segregation Now Would Prevent Another Generation of Defectives

In an up-State county lives a man and woman who are both feebleminded. They have both been supported by the town for years. They have three children, and all of them are feebleminded.

Shall room be provided in a State institution for people like these, or shall these three feebleminded children be allowed to grow up at large in the community and bring another generation of feebleminded children into the world to be supported by the public and to be a constant source of social infection?

Special Classes for Defective Children in All Public Schools

An excellent bill introduced into the legislature by Senator Lockwood amends the education law to provide for the education of children with retarded mental development in all the public schools throughout the State.

It provides for a census within a year after the bill is passed of all children attending the public schools who are three years or more retarded in mental development. In each city or union free school district where ten or more retarded children are found, special classes of not more than 16 members are to be established "to provide instruction adapted to the mental attainments of such children." Any school district having less than ten retarded children may contract for their special instruction in some school maintaining a special class. Each city and each school district organizing such special classes and maintaining courses of study approved by the Commissioner of Education shall receive in its annual apportionment of school moneys a special quota of $300 for each of the special classes.

No Place for Feebleminded Mother of Seven Children

Here is a picture of a feebleminded woman and five of the seven children she has brought into the world. The woman is a member of the notorious Jukes family of defectives and degenerates who have been a burden to the State for a hundred years. Already one of the children has been sent to an institution.

Recently it was discovered that the woman and four of her children were suffering from tuberculosis. Their filthy home and their manner of living made them a source of infection to everyone with whom they came in contact. They were removed from the hovel where they lived and placed in a tuberculosis camp.

There is no place for this woman in any State institution for the feebleminded.
The Public Has to Support These Nine Children Because the State Failed to Protect Their Feebleminded Mother

These are the nine children of a woman in Oneida County. Application has been made for her admission to the Rome State Custodial Asylum for feebleminded, but the institution is already full and has a long waiting list.

If the woman could have been found and her admission to the proper institution secured before these children were brought into the world, what a saving it would have meant to the county and to society!

Now all the children are public charges. They had to be taken from the mother because she was an unsuitable guardian for them. They are now being supported in various institutions at the expense of the county. They will be examined to determine their mental capacity.

Death Cuts Short An Exceptionally Promising Career

Jay M. Strong, Commissioner of Charities of Syracuse, is Stricken Suddenly

Jay M. Strong, Commissioner of Charities of Syracuse, and a former member of the staff of the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, died of heart disease at his home in Syracuse on March 14. He had been ill only four days. Mr. Strong was 51 years old. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mabel Mack of Syracuse, and by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Strong.

Commissioner Strong was graduated from Syracuse University in 1908 and for the next two years was secretary of the Associated Churches and Charities in Syracuse, after which he came with the State Charities Aid Association. While engaged in tuberculosis work for this association, he was induced by friends to accept the office of Commissioner of Charities in Syracuse, which was tendered him by Mayor Will. His highly efficient administration of the office resulted in his reappointment by Mayor Stone.

Mr. Strong was a prominent member of the Association of Superintendents of the Poor of the State and had been active this winter in efforts to secure the appointment of a legislative commission to revise the Poor Law. His death cuts short a career of unusual promise and has greatly saddened an extremely wide circle of friends throughout the State.

An Appreciation

An intimate friend of the late commissioner writes to the S. C. A. A. News:

In the death of Mr. Strong, the career of a man, efficient in social welfare work and loyal to his vocation to the point of self-sacrifice, was terminated when it appeared that he was about to begin a task that would have realized his greatest ambition. He wanted the Poor Laws of New York State revised; the work of the official organization that deals with the dependent classes unfettered by a maze of conflicting statutes; the entire agency for succoring the unfortunate placed on a simple, businesslike and economical basis free from politics. To that end he worked untiringly, and the day before he was stricken with a fatal illness he returned to his home from Albany, where he had been in the interests of a plan that, if carried out, would give the State a model system of administering relief to its wards. Were he alive, his greatest pleasure would come from a knowledge that he was succeeding in this work; his reward would be a recognition that he was a constructive and faithful public official.
Bills Before the Legislature
Provide for Enlarging Institutions for Insane and Feebleminded

$614,500 Proposed This Year for the Feebleminded and $1,301,724 for the Insane

SHOULD BE APPROVED BY THE GOVERNOR AND LEGISLATURE

The present Legislature seems in a fair way to achieve the distinction of actually making a start this year toward a program of systematic up-building of State institutions for the insane, feebleminded, and epileptic.

If the Legislature passes and the Governor approves the appropriation and special bills now pending, the State will have tackled in earnest the problem of dealing with the segregation of the feebleminded and the overcrowding of the State hospitals, and will actually have started on a program which will command widespread public approval.

Recognize Seriousness of Job

Senator Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Finance Committee; Assemblyman H. Edmund Machold, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and other legislative leaders have frankly recognized the size and seriousness of the job of providing for the mentally abnormal. The appropriation bill which was submitted to the Legislature by the financial committees of the Legislature on March 16th provides substantial appropriations this year for new construction.

Furthermore the Hospital Development Commission Bill provides for a thorough investigation of the whole problem of segregation of the feebleminded and of how to provide for the excess of about 6,000 insane persons over the present capacity of the hospitals. The investigation would be made by a commission of elective and appointive State officials and legislators and would report to the Legislature early in the session of 1918.

The appropriations provided in the pending bills are a start on a program upon which something shall be done each year for say, ten years, until relief from the present intolerable situation is obtained.

The appropriation bill which is now before the Legislature carries the following appropriations and authorizations for new construction and permanent betterments at institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic:

Most of the funds which will be available for new construction at feebleminded institutions, if the Legislature passes and the Governor signs the bill, will be spent at Letchworth Village and Newark. The funds will provide for the completion of the four cottages already under way at Letchworth and for the erection of eight additional. These twelve cottages will accommodate 840 persons. One item in the appropriation for Newark is for the erection of a cottage to hold 50 women requiring special supervision. These 13 cottages, when completed, will accommodate 890 persons, increasing the present capacity of these institutions, 5,899, by about 16 per cent.

Relief in Metropolitan District

The hospitals at which most of the new construction will be done with the funds provided in the pending bills, in addition to Utica and Middletown, will be the Brooklyn State Hospital (which gets an appropriation of $528,410), Central Islip and Manhattan, all in the metropolitan district.

$614,500 Provided for Feebleminded

In the Appropriation Bill are items of $614,500, available this year for construction at State institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic, and contracts for $592,600 additional are authorized, making a total of $1,144,100 of appropriation and authorization for the feebleminded and epileptic this year.

Of the $614,500 appropriated and available this year, the bulk will be spent on new cottages at Letchworth Village, Thetford, Rockland County, as proposed by Governor Whitman, and on an additional building at the Newark Custodial Asylum for feebleminded women. The appropriation provides for finishing four cottages now under construction at Letchworth Village and for building a group of eight new cottages there. These twelve cottages will provide for 840 inmates. The additional building at Newark will be a cottage to house 50 women requiring special supervision.

To the total additional accommodations to be made available when these twelve cottages at Letchworth Village and the one at Newark are completed will be 890, increasing the present capacity of the institutions, 5,899, by about 16 per cent.

$1,301,724 Is Sum Provided for Insane

The Appropriation Bill carries items totaling $399,254 for new construction at State hospitals, and Senator Sage's Hospital Development Commission Bill carries special appropriations for Utica and Middletown State Hospitals totaling $399,254. This makes a total appropriation of $1,301,724 available for new construction or permanent betterments at State hospitals this year. This is the largest appropriation made in recent years. Last year only $592,220 was appropriated, and the year before $610,000.

It is believed that if an appropriation equal to the amount proposed for this year is granted each year for ten years, the present overcrowding of 6,000 patients in the 13 civil State hospitals will be wiped out and something like adequate provision made for the average yearly increase which has been about 900 for the last ten years.

In addition to the sum of $1,301,724 actually appropriated for this year, the Appropriation and Hospital Development Commission bills carry an additional authorization of contracts amounting to $1,650,745, making a total of $2,932,470 of appropriation and authorization for the State hospitals for the insane.

Senator Sage's
Courageous Stand

Senator Sage, as Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has taken a strong stand in favor of facing the situation frankly and granting the appropriations which are necessary for upbuilding the system of State institutions. He takes the position that it is the weakest kind of false economy for the State to cut out appropriations for necessary projects as has been done many times in the last few years. So-called economies, he says, have too often consisted in cutting out necessary appropriations for new construction at State institutions, until the lack of facilities has become a disgrace to the good name of the Empire State.

May Be a 10-Day Bill

The Appropriation Bill now before the legislature will very likely become a "ten-day bill"; that is, it is likely to be submitted to the Governor more than 10 days before the close of the session. The Governor, under the constitution, would then have only ten days to consider it and must then return it to the legislature, which has a chance to consider passing over the veto any items which the Governor may have cut out. The bill was submitted to the legislature on March 15 under the new budget law of the State. This is a significant departure from the custom of preceding years when the bill usually was introduced in the closing hours of the session and hurried through without much knowledge of its contents.

The system of early introduction provides ample time for public and legislative scrutiny and a thorough consideration of all disputed items. The financial committees of the legislature are now through with the bill, and changes, if any, will be made by the legislature. It is hoped that the construction items of the bill, if passed in its present form, will be approved by Governor Whitman. The Governor is known to be in favor of catching up with the institutional situation as rapidly as the finances of the State will permit.

The Hospital Development Bill

Senator Sage's Hospital Development Commission Bill provides for a thorough study of the whole situation as regards the insane and feebleminded. The Commission, which is to be composed of elective and appointive State officers and members of the legislature, is to report to the next legislature, making recommendations for a systematic plan of developing each of the present institutions and for developing the institutional system of the State as a whole in the light of the facts turned up by the investigation.

Senator Sage and other legislators who have been studying the institutional system are entitled to credit for their frank recognition of the seriousness of the problem, for the substantial appropriations recommended in this year's bill and for the plans formulated and now pending in the legislature for a thorough study of the situation in its broadest aspects as the next step in the systematic upbuilding of the various institutions over a term of years.

There is every indication of a disposition at Albany to tackle the problem in earnest and to deal with it adequately. It is important that the thorough study of the whole problem be made, and also important that the appropriations in the pending bills this year be made to meet the most pressing immediate needs.

This is the year to begin!

2,320 Polio Patients at 122 State Clinics

Seventeen Per Cent. of Cases Had Disease Before the 1916 Epidemic

Up to March 21 the State Department of Health had held 72 primary clinics for infantile paralysis patients and 50 supplemental clinics, making a total of 122 clinics. In all, 2,776 examinations had been made, of which 455 were re-examinations; 2,350 different patients had, therefore, been examined.

Complete and definite figures are not yet available, but about 17% of the patients examined have been old cases—that is, cases having the disease prior to 1916. This indicates that over 1,900 cases resulting from the 1916 epidemic have already been examined. According to the figures of the State Department of Health, the 1916 epidemic left 2,500 living cases outside of New York City. It would seem that the clinics have already reached nearly 2,000 of the 2,500 possible cases. Of those not seen, a considerable number returned to New York City, from which they had come, and a number had made complete recoveries without paralysis.

Braces for 300 Patients

On March 21, 306 patients had been measured for braces—80 for corsets and 21 for other apparatus; 141 braces, 21 corsets and 9 other pieces of apparatus had been delivered.

The staff of the committee now consists of one director of field work and two agents, who work under the general direction of the secretary of the committee. One of the assistant superintendents of the S. C. A. A. County Agencies Department is also assisting with the work. A member of the staff has attended each clinic, taking notes as to the social status of each case, arranging for suitable shoes on which braces are to be fitted, paying for the transportation of patients to the clinics, and assisting the clinic staff in numerous other ways.

The field agents have visited many families of patients in counties where there is no organized social work. The following is typical of the work these agents are doing:

How Children Are Helped

Two paralyzed children living in a rural spot of the country were brought to a city where they could be under the immediate supervision of the State Department of Health. These children were found to need hospital care and were accepted in the city hospital, the health department nurse visiting them therein and giving them their daily exercises. The hospital has accepted the two patients at half the usual rate. The overseer of the poor is paying half the amount; our Poliomyelitis Committee is taking the other half.

One case was boarded until it could be placed in a hospital according to the recommendations of the examining surgeon. A local charity organization paid two-thirds the board bill, the Poliomyelitis Committee paying one-third.

Another case was placed in a hospital, the local poor law officer agreeing to pay one-half the hospital charge; the husband agreeing to pay $1.00 a week toward the expense; the Poliomyelitis Committee bearing the rest.

170 Operations Advised

Up to the middle of March 170 operations had been advised, and other orthopedic treatment involving hospital care was advised in 53 cases, making a total of 223 patients needing orthopedic hospital care. It is hoped that arrangements can be made to provide suitable treatment for these cases very shortly.

The committee has been furnished by the supervising nurses the names of a number of patients in need of reading matter, and the committee is arranging to secure suitable reading matter for each of these patients.

25 YEARS AS HOSPITAL SUPT.

Dr. Charles G. Wagner recently celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his appointment as superintendent of the Binghamston State Hospital. During this quarter of a century the institution has grown from a hospital of 1,000 patients to 2,500. Dr. Wagner has been secretary and vice-president and is now president of the American Medico-Psychological Association, which includes the leading men in the United States and Canada engaged in the study and cure of mental disease.

INSPECTORS WANTED

The New York City Civil Service Commission will hold shortly a competitive examination, open only to women between the ages of 21 and 45, for inspectors of institutions; salary from $1,600 to $1,920 per annum. Applications must be filed out and filed not later than Tuesday, April 17.
Senator Sage Scores State's Sham Economy

Chairman of Finance Committee Says Cutting Out Necessary Items Is False Saving

Senator Henry M. Sage, of Albany, delivered an address on the State budget at a luncheon of the City Club in New York on March 10th, which has attracted widespread attention by reason of the frank, forward-looking and courageous statements he made about the State's finances and financial policy.

The Senator said that State expenditures are bound to grow by reason of activities to which the State is already committed and the taking on from time to time of new activities made necessary by the enlightened conscience of the people. He said he believed the people generally, when they understood the situation, would be prepared to face it frankly and to support the necessary activities of government in this growing and progressive State. Provided the State is getting a dollar's worth of service for a dollar's worth of expenditure—and he earnestly said this is the case at present—he believed the people were willing to pay the bills for the things they must have.

The Senator declared that there are two ways of making a budget. One is to determine in advance, irrespective of the needs, what amount is to be spent in a given year and cut down the appropriations to that amount. Opposed to this destructive method of budget making the Senator outlined a constructive plan, which is to consider the activities to which the State is definitely committed by its statutes and to provide the funds necessary to carry them on adequately and effectively—that is, to build up to the figure necessary. The latter is the plan which the present financial committees of the Legislature are trying to follow.

Senator Sage's speech has been printed in pamphlet form and copies are available at the office of the State Charities Aid Association. Space will not permit its reproduction here. A few extracts follow:

I am sorry to say that economy has generally consisted in cutting out necessary appropriations in order to keep down the total expenditures.

"We hear a great deal about what it cost to run the State of New York fifty, forty, thirty or twenty years ago. We see a great deal about the increase in personal service and jobs, but no one stops to realize that the enormous increase in necessary appropriation is due almost entirely to new activities which the State has undertaken, which activities almost universally are made necessary by the enlightened conscience of the people of the State. I wish to impress on you that the talk of decreasing the budget of the State is either ignorant or dishonest. We must anticipate more and more each year, and a budget of a hundred million dollars looms in the near future. Our departments are growing as new laws are passed enlarging their activities.

"Owing to the mistaken economy, so called, of the past ten years, our State institutions have suffered grievously. It has generally been the policy of an executive in trying to keep down the total of appropriations to cut the large sums necessary for new construction in our hospitals, charitable institutions, and prisons. We are suffering from this today."

"There is another subject which is engaging our attention. It is estimated that there are something over thirty thousand feebleminded persons in the State of New York. Today the State is taking care of about five thousand of these people. Many experts on the subject of the feebleminded estimate that the feebleminded population of the State, including those so-called high grade, is one hundred thousand. The Legislature has been timid in attempting to meet this situation. If it is allowed to continue as it is now it is feared that the State will become bankrupt both financially and, what is far more important, mentally. Every one of these people is a large burden on the State. They are constantly propagating. The only possible answer to the problem is segregation. Do you realize what it is going to cost? When you add up what it costs, it is the duty of the State and of the Legislature representing the people of the State to see that in this matter. I, for one, have not the slightest doubt that again the taxpayers will approve.

"But I submit only my word for it, but far as that will go I can say positively that the State is today getting a dollar's worth of service for every dollar expended. If the people of the State can be made to believe this, I don't think that they will object to a seventy million dollar budget or a hundred million dollar budget."

The Feebleminded Cost
Erie County $13,000 a Year

The failure of the State to provide adequate institutions to segregate and protect the feebleminded puts a heavy and unjust burden upon the various counties. For instance, Erie County, according to its Superintendent of the Poor, Frank M. Stage, spends about $13,000 a year to provide for feebleminded persons in institutions because the State institutions are so crowded that there is no room for others. Many other counties are faced with a similar problem.

N.Y.'s Insane to Aid Allies by Making Hospital Supplies

The State Hospital Commission has completed arrangements whereby the patients in the New York State hospitals will assist in preparing hospital supplies for use at the front. Roll bandages, folded gauze compresses, knitted socks and knitted bandages will be made. The material for these articles will be provided by the British and Belgian Relief Committee. Should the United States become involved in the war, the patients could at once be set to work on hospital supplies for the American troops.
Twelve Million Red Cross
Seals Sold in 1916 Campaign

Goal Set for New York State, Outside of Greater New York, Reached and Passed—Buffalo, Troy, Elmira, Ithaca, Larchmont, Richfield Springs, Cold Spring, and Roxbury Win State Pennants

Two and a half Red Cross Seals for every man, woman and child in New York State outside of Greater New York were sold during the 1916 holiday season under the direction of the State Charities Aid Association. Final reports from local tuberculosis committees give a total sale of 12,004,044 seals, an increase of 14.6 per cent over 1915, when 10,446,875 seals were sold. "Twelve million" was the goal set at the beginning of the 1916 campaign.

How the Money Is Spent

Direct educational work as to the nature, treatment and prevention of tuberculosis; propaganda efforts for the establishment and operation by public authorities of hospitals, nursing service, clinics, open-air schools, fresh-air classes, preventoria and other kindred agencies, are among the important anti-tuberculosis measures which will be financed, in whole or in part, by the proceeds from the 1916 sale.

The Red Cross Seal campaign itself fulfilled an important educational function along public health lines. State-wide publicity through the press, supplemented by the extensive distribution and display of advertising material, focussed public attention on the anti-tuberculosis crusade and aroused intelligent interest in the organized effort for improved health conditions.

Pennant Contests Were Stirring

The contests for Red Cross Seal pennants awarded by the State Charities Aid Association for the highest per capita sale of seals in eight classes of localities in the State were won by Buffalo, Troy, Elmira, Ithaca, Larchmont, Richfield Springs, Cold Spring and Roxbury. The result in Class 1, population 160,000 to 500,000, was in doubt until the last few days of the competition. Then Buffalo captured first place from Rochester by reporting the remarkable sale of 4,213 seals per capita, as against Rochester's sale of 4,083 seals for each inhabitant. In Class 2, population 50,000 to 150,000, despite the avowed intention of the other contestants to prevent it, Troy won the pennant for the third consecutive year, with a per capita sale of 6.26. Elmira was an easy winner in Class 3, and Ithaca captured the Class 4 banner in spite of the splendid efforts of Cortland and White Plains.

TROY AGAIN LEADS

2nd Class Cities

Captures Red Cross Seal Pennant for Third Consecutive Year

All the Red Cross Seal pennants ever awarded by the State Charities Aid Association for the highest per capita sale in cities with a population from 50,000 to 150,000, have been won by Troy. Not once has Trojan supremacy been seriously endangered by the other six competitors in this population group. At the height of the recent campaign the Association suggested that all second-class cities challenge Troy to a race for the pennant. Several of them did so, defiantly proclaiming their intention of humbling the champion. So far from achieving its purpose, the opposition stimulated the Trojans to such an extent that they beat their own record by selling 472,929 seals, 96,591 more than in 1915. Following is the final score of the second-class city competition:

TOWNER CHILD WELFARE BILL PASSES LEGISLATURE

The Towner Bill creating a County Board of Child Welfare in Dutchess County, to be appointed by the local county officials, has been passed by the Senate and Assembly and is now before the Governor for consideration. The bill is in accord with the thought of leading child-caring experts in the country and would constitute a very great advance toward a responsible handling of the whole subject of child-care by a county. This bill, which was endorsed by the State Charities Aid Association, places in the hands of the new board the duties which for several years have devolved largely upon the local organization of the State Charities Aid Association in Dutchess County in co-operative agreement with the county officials. The duties of the present Dutchess County Board of Child Welfare, which administers relief to widowed mothers, are also transferred to the new board. The new measure is based upon the sound theory that the care of dependent children is a public duty, and responsibility for it should be placed in a properly organized public body. The bill follows the plan of child-care outlined by a committee appointed by the National Conference of Charities and Correction after a study of several years.
State Charities Aid Association Offers Its Services to the Nation

With Joseph H. Choate, its president, in the chair, the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association adopted a resolution at its March meeting offering the services of the Association to the nation “in such form as may be considered advisable and most efficient” in the event of war. The resolution was offered by Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, the founder of the Association.

A special committee on carrying the resolution into effect was appointed. It consists of Mr. Choate, Miss Schuyler, Mrs. William B. Rice, Mr. Charles S. Fairchild, Mr. George F. Canfield, and Mr. Homer Folks. The resolution follows:

WHEREAS: A crisis has arisen in the history of this nation which may, in the near future, involve the country in war, waged not alone for self-defense but also for upholding, with other nations, the principles of liberty, justice and humanity; and

WHEREAS: It is the privilege and duty of all loyal and patriotic citizens and organizations, in such eventuality, to render to the nation all possible service; and

WHEREAS: The State Charities Aid Association, in its early membership, was largely recruited from former members of the New York Branch of the United States Sanitary Commission, which, through the four years of the Civil War, when there was no Red Cross, was engaged in providing hospital supplies for the sick and wounded soldiers and sailors of our Army and Navy; and

WHEREAS: This Association, therefore, would seem, in like instance, clearly called upon to take part in providing efficient war-relief service today; be it therefore

RESOLVED: That the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association hereby offers to the Nation the services of this Association, in such form as may be considered advisable and most efficient; and be it further

RESOLVED: That the President be requested to appoint a Special Committee, of which he shall be one, to consider this subject and, after due investigation and inquiry and after conference with National and State authorities, to report to the Managers in the near future, at a special or regular meeting of the Board, how, in its judgment, the intent and spirit of this resolution can be given practical effect.

CHILDREN COLD AND HUNGRY LOCKED IN THE HOUSE BY FEEBLEMINDED MOTHER

On complaint of the Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, a Brooklyn woman 38 years of age, but of a mental age of 9 years, has recently been committed to an institution for the feebleminded.

Investigation revealed her utter inability to look after her five children. Agents of the society found the children in a house almost unbelievably dirty. They leaned that the mother frequently left the house and locked the children in rooms alone for hours. Often there was no fire in the house and the scantily attired children suffered from severe cold. Many times, too, they were without food. When the question of the woman’s mentality was raised, an examination revealed her defective. After the mother was sent to an institution, the children were taken into the home of a relative.

Such cases as these, of children being neglected and mistreated by feebleminded parents or other guardians, are common in the records of children’s societies and charitable organizations in every section of the State.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

“Mental Hygiene," the new magazine published by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, has made its appearance. It will present non-technical articles on the practical management of mental problems in all relations of life, and on new enterprises in connection with the management of delinquency, crime and inebriety. Reports also will be given of surveys, special investigations and new methods of prevention or treatment in the broad field of mental hygiene.

The magazine contains about 160 pages. We strongly recommend it to all persons who desire to keep in touch with the mental hygiene field. The magazine is $2 a year. Subscriptions may be sent to Clifford W. Beers, Secretary, National Committee for Mental Hygiene, 60 Union Square, New York City.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has begun the publication of a new monthly magazine for physicians and research workers in tuberculosis, entitled, "The American Review of Tuberculosis." The editorial staff is composed of seven members and was appointed by the board of directors of the National Association. Dr. Edward R. Baldwin, Saranac Lake, is Editor-in-Chief.

DR. MABON

The Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association has adopted the following minute on Dr. William Mabon, Superintendent of the Manhattan State Hospital, who died recently:

In the death of Dr. William Mabon the State Charities Aid Association has lost one of the most interested members and trusted assistants of its Committee on Mental Hygiene; the Manhattan State Hospital has lost an exceptionally efficient administrator and medical head, and the State hospital system has lost one of its most distinguished and valued representatives. Dr. Mabon's activities during the past quarter of a century have been an integral part of the progress made by the State of New York during that period of time in developing and maintaining high standards in the management of its State hospitals, in protecting them from the danger of interference, from time to time, by political or other unwise pressure groups and in constantly raising the standards of humane care and of high professional attainments on the part of the medical staff. The Board of Managers of the Association learns with the greatest sorrow of Dr. Mabon’s death and extend to his family an assurance of its deepest sympathy.

Know What You’re Getting

When illness occurs in your family and you call in a man who writes M. D. after his name, you know that you are getting a medical doctor. He has at least complied with educational requirements established by the Board of Regents. When you call in a “trained nurse” or “graduate nurse,” you know absolutely nothing whatever about what you are getting. Her “training” may have consisted largely or wholly of a course of reading. She may have “graduated” from an institution consisting of an office, a prospectus, a course of reading, and an arrangement for granting handsome diplomas at so many dollars per. Her knowledge may be like the schoolchild’s knowledge of the Indian Ocean.

In taking care of many serious diseases, such as pneumonia, typhoid, and others, the work of the trained nurse is important to the highest degree. The difference between a properly qualified nurse and one without such qualifications may easily mean the difference between life and death.

Senator Mills, by his bill No. 317 (Amended, Senate bill, printed No. 1169), aims to let us know what we are getting when we call in a "trained nurse," a "certified nurse," a "graduate nurse," or a "registered nurse." It is a good bill and ought to pass without delay. It is favored by the medical profession, the hospitals, educational authorities, nursing organizations, and opposed only by some so-called "schools" for nurses.

In vital matters of life and death, we are gradually getting away from fakes. The school which trains nurses by correspondence belongs in the same category as Lydia Pinkham and Orangeine.
A CALL TO ARMS! FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS NOW!

Preparing to Combat Tuberculosis in This State as Vital War Measure

Rise in Death Rate from White Plague Is Threatened Under War Conditions—Immediate Mobilization Against the Disease Is Imperative

It becomes increasingly evident that the greatest service which the State Charities Aid Association can render under the circumstances incident to war is to prosecute with all possible vigor the lines of activity in which it is already engaged.

This is particularly true of the prevention of tuberculosis and the promotion of mental hygiene.

The Great War threatens to reverse the present tendency toward a decline in the tuberculosis death rate. To prevent such reversal the anti-tuberculosis “campaign,” long so-called, must become a real campaign, aggressive, vigorous, unrelenting, and as much a war measure for national protection, safety and stability as the mobilization of armies and navies.

Have Been Winning the Fight

Many factors have contributed to a remarkable decline in the tuberculosis death rate in New York City and, in a lesser degree, in the State as a whole in the last twenty years. If, in the prosecution of the war, the United States should assemble an army of a million men or more, and if the impending scarcity of food supplies should be realized and accentuated, it is distinctly possible not only that the decline of the tuberculosis death rate may be arrested, but that it may actually take an upward turn.

Privation an Ally of Tuberculosis

Privation has always been a close ally of tuberculosis. Insufficient food and unusual strain transform latent infection into active disease. Unless all signs fail, we are about to enter upon a period of greatly diminished food supplies which, among multitudes of the poor, will mean diminished vital resources. The withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of men from active production, the mounting prices of every factor in the cost of living, and the serious mental strain involved in adjustment to new conditions and new anxieties—all these prepare a rich soil for the seeds of tuberculosis.

Europe Scourged by Tuberculosis,
Dr. Biggs Finds

State Health Commissioner’s Investigation in France Shows Disease Menaces Army and Civilians

SHOULD FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS MORE VIGOROUSLY HERE

From time to time disturbing rumors have reached this country as to the effect of the Great War upon tuberculosis among both the military and civilian population in the belligerent countries.

A few weeks ago Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, was requested by the Rockefeller Foundation to make an inquiry as to the actual conditions in France, at the invitation of the French Government. Governor Whitman consented to Dr. Bigg’s absence for this important mission. Dr. Biggs has recently returned and has summed up his observations at the request of the S. C. A. A. News.

The magnitude of the tuberculosis problem abroad and the lessons for this country and New York State from Europe’s experience—both in peace and wartime—compel interest and point the way clearly to the imperative and immediate urgency of waging unrelenting warfare on tuberculosis as one of the deadliest foes of health, efficiency and life itself. Dr. Biggs says:

“An extremely important lesson with relation to tuberculosis may be drawn by the United States and New York State from the experience of the European countries now at war. In every country on the continent, directly or indirectly involved in the Great War, there has been a great increase in the prevalence of tuberculosis. In some of these countries this increase has reached such an extent as to be a real menace to the future life and economic development of the respective nations.

"As one would anticipate, those countries have suffered the most severely which before the war had the highest death rate from this disease; namely, France, Austria-Hungary and Russia. England alone has experienced the least difficulty from this cause, owing to the fact that before the war England had a very low death rate from tuberculosis—only about one per thousand of the population—and owing further to the fact that in the mobilization of the army great care was exercised in the physical examination of the troops and in the exclusion of any with suspicious histories or signs of symptoms of this disease.

150,000 French Soldiers Tuberculous

"France has suffered very severely. Previous to the war, no official cognizance of tuberculosis had ever been taken by the sanitary authorities and the limited precautions which had been adopted were solely the result of private initiative. While more than 100,000 deaths a year occurred in France from tuberculosis of various forms, there were only 1,000 sanatorium beds in the entire country, and the only provision for the care of advanced cases was in the general medical and surgical wards of the general hospitals. (The reception of cases of pulmonary tuberculosis in the general wards of general hospitals was prohibited by the Department of Health in New York City nearly twenty-five years ago.) Up to December, 1915, 86,000 soldiers had been returned from the army with active tuberculosis, and up to July 1, 1917, it was estimated that about 150,000 soldiers had been discharged for this cause; exact data are not obtainable at the present time.

"Such information as can be had as to the conditions in Austria-Hungary and Russia seems to indicate that they are equally serious, and it would also seem that the German troops have suffered severely, although in Germany, owing to the large number of tuberculosis sanatoria existing before the war, the tuberculous soldiers have received much better care.

Civil Population Affected

"Tuberculosis affords in France a problem of great magnitude and of the utmost urgency. Aside from the cases of tuberculosis returned from the army and those still remaining in the army there are, we know, a large number among the French prisoners in Germany, an immense number among the civilian prisoners in Germany and the French refugees, and also a very large number in the civil population. Tuberculosis has been so prevalent among the French prisoners of war in Germany who have been returned to France, that the French officials have felt that it could only be explained on the assumption that the prisoners had been deliberately inoculated with the disease. I do not think, however, there is any good ground for this assumption. The known facts with reference to tuberculosis and its dissemination under the conditions in which these prisoners of war have been kept would readily explain the large number of cases among them.

"In those Departments of France which have until the recent retreat of the Germans been occupied by them, there were previous to the war more than four and one-quarter million people; about one-half of these fled before the first German invasion and have since been living in the cities and villages nearest their homes under the most unfavorable conditions possible. These refugees are not only homeless but absolutely without resources and dependent entirely upon the relief organizations for their support. Behind the German lines, as civilian prisoners in Germany —partly in their homes, partly in concentration camps and partly distributed through Germany (practically all of the population, both male and female, between the ages of 15 and 45, were deported to Germany)—there are about two and one-half million people.

"It requires no imagination to picture the deplorable conditions under which these people are living nor the ravages which tuberculosis has made among them. And then, finally, with reference to tuberculosis in the civil population, if in its estimation we simply adopt the methods which we follow here, of computing the number of cases existing in a locality by the number of deaths occurring annually from the disease, and estimate that only two cases exist for each death, there would be over 200,000 cases. We thus gain some idea of the prevalence of the disease and the enormous size of the problem which is to be met in France on the termination of the war.

"While we all have had a profound respect and intense admiration for the superb spirit and determination and self-sacrifice of the French people, I think that few of us have fully realized the fact that considerably more than one-fourth of the total population of France at the present time is included in the three classes: 1st, the army; 2nd, the civilian prisoners in Germany; and 3rd, the refugees. If we should apply the same proportion of the population of the United States, it would mean between twenty-five and thirty million people in the United States would be enrolled in the army, or would have been made civil prisoners or refugees."

CIVIL SERVICE OPPORTUNITIES

The State Civil Service Commission at Albany has announced examinations to be held on June 10 for filling positions in the State civil service:

Sanitary Supervisor, State Department of Health. $2,000. Open to men and women, and limited to physicians. Persons desiring admission to the examination, which will be held on June 8, 1917, should write to the State Civil Service Commission, Albany, N. Y., for a special circular of information.

Supervisor, Nurse, State Department of Health. $1,200. Open to women only. Additional study in sociology, public health problems, eugenics, feeblemindedness, modern psychotherapy, etc., is required, so far as they relate to the work of the respective divisions. Standard history and relative weights: Written examination relating to the duties of the position and knowledge required as indicated above, 4; education, experience and personal qualifications, 4. In connection with the qualifications, candidates may be summoned for an interview with the examiners. In the case of each position, experience relating to the work of the division will receive special credit.

A CHALLENGE TO ALL TUBERCULOSIS WORKERS!

Will You Do Your Bit to Fight a foe that is slaying thousands and is about to strike harder than ever?

Every step taken toward completing a well-rounded organization of tuberculosis hospitals, dispensaries, and nursing rooms for the State of New York helps to meet an immediate and urgent need in the preparedness program. To help in completing this provision is a patriotic service of the highest order.

Those citizens through the State who have been and are fighting tuberculosis are "doing their bit," are helping to strengthen the vital resources of the country, preparing it to undergo strain and yet not break, to meet extraordinary difficulties and meet them successfully, to take part effectively in winning a great war, and to come through it with a strong, vigorous people fully equipped for the world's work after the war.

To all the workers in the tuberculosis cause who may be asking "How can I best help?" there is one immediate answer: "By pushing the tuberculosis campaign still more vigorously to an early conclusion."
READY TO DEAL WITH INSANITY IN WAR-TIME

State Hospital Commission Offers to Establish Mental Clinics at Training Camps in N. Y. State—S. C. A. A. Mental Hygiene Committee Ready to Co-operate

PSYCHIATRIC HOSPITALS OFFERED TO THE NATION

Thorough and comprehensive preparations are being made to deal with mental disorders in military life in this State and in the nation.

The State Hospital Commission has made an offer to the Adjutant General of New York State to establish mental clinics or dispensaries at each of the larger military camps in this State, with the medical service provided by the State Hospital Commission.

The Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association is prepared to cooperate with the Commission in carrying out the details of the plan for the establishment of the clinics, for the securing of the fullest use of them, and for the distribution of suitable literature on mental health among soldiers in training and concentration camps.

Offer to Adjutant General

The offer of the State Hospital Commission to establish clinics at the training camps in this State is extended to Adjutant General Stotesbury as follows:

STATE OF NEW YORK—STATE HOSPITAL COMMISSION

April 23, 1917.

Hon. Louis W. Stotesbury,
Albany, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

In further reference to the Commission’s recent offer of resources of the State hospitals for use and cooperation in connection with the State’s military operations, the Commission suggests the following as a definite recommendation:

As you are aware, mental disease of one form or another has proven to be a frequent cause of discharge from the Army; in fact, it was the most frequent cause among the troops stationed at the Mexican Border. The Commission believes that it will be practical to establish mental clinics or dispensaries at each of the larger military encampments in the State. The physician from the State hospital nearest such encampment might visit the encampment once a week, or as often as it appeared to be necessary, examine all cases which the commanding officer or the medical officer in charge thought might be mental cases, and report his recommendations as to treatment or disposition to the officer in charge. If you will advise the Commission as to the location of these centers as soon as they are established, arrangements will be made for supplying the medical service offered.

Very truly yours,

EVERETT S. ELWOOD,
Secretary.

Mental Health Work of State "Just Beginning"

Chairman of Hospital Commission Sees Promising Future for Free Clinics

Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, sees a most promising future for the mental hygiene work of the State hospitals and for the free clinics established by them for early diagnosis and treatment of mental disorders. In a recent letter on the subject Dr. Pilgrim said:

"The out-patient and mental hygiene work of the State hospitals is just in its beginning.

"Ultimately I believe the mental hygiene movement will not only aim at the prevention of insanity, but will also operate for the promotion of mental efficiency."

"The movement will have performed a great service to coming generations when it succeeds in bringing to parents, teachers, general practitioners, clergymen, and others engaged in the training and guidance of youth, a portion of the practical knowledge which modern psychiatry has developed in regard to human conduct, adjustments to environment, and the development of good and bad habits of thought."
Another Strange Record! Promptness Plays No Part in the State's Program for New Buildings

Money Appropriated in 1911 for Three Buildings at Newark Custodial Asylum—Two of Them Not in Use Yet—Third Took Three and a Half Years to Finish and Move Into

There is a general impression that there are serious and unnecessary delays in the construction of State institutions. So far as known, a careful inquiry into this subject has not heretofore been made. That the facts are much worse than had been supposed is indicated by a study of exactly what happened as to each of the appropriations made in 1911 for new construction at State charitable institutions.

A study of later years will appear in subsequent numbers of The News. Also we hope to keep an eye on progress made in construction of buildings from the appropriations of 1917.

The Legislature of 1911 made provision for nine new buildings at five institutions, to cost a total of $412,000 and the appropriations were made available on July 28 of that year, nearly six years ago. Two buildings of the group are not yet in use and will not be for some weeks.

These are a cottage and a hospital at the Newark State Custodial Asylum for Feebleminded Women. The sum of $120,000 was voted for these buildings and the money was so delayed that it had to be reapportioned by two subsequent Legislatures.

The funds for two other buildings also were delayed and re-appropriated. The best the State succeeded in doing on the buildings provided for with the 1911 appropriations was to complete a central brick school at Sonya, at a cost of $25,000, in eighteen months. It required from twenty-one months to four and a quarter years to build and equip the other six structures.

It appears, therefore, that the nine buildings for which appropriations were made by the Legislature of 1911, were finished as follows:

How the Building Dragged

A detailed report of how the projects dragged along follows:

The New York State School for the Blind received $35,000 for a new building for the younger children. This amount proved insufficient to erect the building according to the plans and specifications prepared, and a supplemental appropriation of $15,000 was granted by the Legislature of 1912 and became available April 18th of that year. Bids were advertised for and opened September 19, 1912, work on the building was begun October 12, 1912, and the building was first used March 14, 1914.

The New York State Training School for Girls at Hudson received two appropriations, one of $75,000 for a school building, and one of $52,000 for two new cottages and connections. This money became available July 28, 1911. In connection with the school building, the

Why State Institutions Need a New Deal

The April issue of the S. C. A. A. News told of the four cottages at Bedford, appropriation for which was made in 1913 and which are not yet in use.

This issue tells the story of all the buildings for State charitable institutions for which appropriations were made in 1911—a story of almost unbelievable delays and disappointments. The extent to which the achievement of the purposes for which the State establishes institutions have been thwarted and delayed, by interminable delays in construction of buildings for which appropriations have been made, cannot be measured.

The facts told in this issue about the 1911 buildings are an unanswerable argument for the establishment of a centralized, authoritative State agency to deal with institutions—such an agency as proposed by Commissioner Strong.

Delays at Newark Asylum

At the Newark State Custodial Asylum for Feebleminded Women, two appropriations were made by the Legislature of 1911, one of $30,000 for an employees' building, and one of $120,000 for two cottages to accommodate ninety each. These amounts became available July 28, 1911. The contract for the cottages was let March 50, 1912, equipment was purchased and installed in the winter and spring of 1912 and 1913.

New hospital building at Newark State Custodial Asylum for Feebleminded Women. The money to erect it was appropriated in July, 1911—nearly six years ago—but the building is not yet in use because of lack of heating facilities and hot water and because of defective plastering.

State Architect advised a fireproof building, and the amount appropriated proved to be too small to erect a fireproof school with an auditorium, as had been originally planned, an additional sum of $35,000 being required for an auditorium. The same amount was reapportioned by the Legislature of 1913 and became available June 2, 1913, and the Board of Managers decided to construct a fireproof building and omit the auditorium, their opinion being that the additional sum required for the auditorium was more needed for other buildings. The contract for the school was let in June, 1913, and a formal opening was held in December, 1914, but most of the equipment has been installed since that date. The $65,000 appropriated for two new cottages and connections became available July 28, 1911. The contract for them was let March 50, 1912, equipment was purchased and installed in the winter and spring of 1912 and 1913.

completed and used in January, 1915. The other appropriation was also allowed to lapse and was reappropriated by the Legislature of 1913 and 1915, becoming available finally for one cottage and one hospital. The contracts were finally awarded in the summer of 1915, but the buildings are not yet ready for use.

In the hospital the plastering was done when the building was insufficiently heated, with the result that it has cracked so badly that much of it will have to be replaced. The State is now engaged in a controversy with the contractors on this subject, and this building has not yet been accepted. Even if the buildings were ready, however, they could not be used because of the lack of money to equip the boiler house with additional apparatus to make possible the supplying of these buildings with heat and hot water. While the buildings could be used during the summer without heat, they can hardly be used without hot water. An appropriation for the needed addition to the boiler house was passed by the Legislature of 1916 but vetoed by the Governor on the advice of the State Architect that the money was not needed at that time. The failure to secure this appropriation has probably delayed the use of the buildings at least a year.

At Craig Colony and Letchworth Village

The Craig Colony for Epileptics at Sonyea was granted by the Legislature of 1911 an appropriation of $25,000 for a central brick school building. This became available July 28, 1911. Final plans were approved by the Board of Managers April 23, 1912. The contract was awarded June 11, 1912, and the building was occupied February 1, 1913.

Letchworth Village at Thiells received an appropriation of $75,000 for a power and heating plant from the Legislature of 1911. This appropriation was allowed to lapse, and was reappropriated by the Legislatures of 1913 and 1915, and finally became available May 24, 1915. Bids were advertised January 27, 1915, and contracts awarded February 18, 1915, and the building was ready for use October 1, 1915.

New Mental Clinic at Binghamton Makes 23 in Regular Operation

500 Persons a Month Visit the Free Treatment Stations of the State Hospitals

At a public mental hygiene meeting held in Binghamton on April 25th, under the auspices of the Binghamton State Hospital and the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, announcement was made of the establishment of another mental dispensary by the Binghamton State Hospital. Sessions of the new clinic will be held at 9 Court street, Binghamton, every Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, beginning May 7. This is the second clinic to be established by the Binghamton State Hospital. It already maintains one at the State Hospital itself.

This new clinic makes a total of twenty-three in which the State hospitals are now operating for the diagnosis of mental disease and defect and for early treatment of mental and nervous disorders. The clinics are being attended by an average of five hundred persons a month.

The public meeting in Binghamton was attended by a gathering of 408 citizens, social workers, teachers and physicians. Dr. Charles G. Wagner, superintendent of the State Hospital, spoke on "Mental Hygiene," and George A. Hastings, executive secretary of the Mental Hygiene Committee, discussed "Why Should So Many Go Insane?" Dr. Theodore L. Townsend, first assistant physician of the Binghamton State Hospital, and Miss Mildred H. Hurley, social worker of the Middletown State Hospital, also spoke extemporaneously. J. G. Brownlow, president-secretary of the Binghamton Chamber of Commerce, presided.

In addition to providing facilities for early diagnosis and treatment, the State clinics are serving as centers of education about the State hospitals, and about the nature, causes and prevention of mental diseases generally.

Some of the clinics are held at the State hospitals themselves and others are in nearby communities in the various hospital districts throughout the State. Nearly all of the State hospitals maintain one or more of these clinics. The clinics are located in the following cities and towns: Ogdensburg, Malone, Watertown, New York City, Oneida, Poughkeepsie, Peekskill, Mt. Vernon, Buffalo, Jamestown, Salamanca, Dunkirk, Brooklyn, Olean, Middletown, Kingston, Binghamton, etc.

The social workers attached to the various State hospitals are doing effective work attending clinics, visiting homes of preventive cases, etc.

Mental Hygiene and Feebleminded Committees Unite

The Committee on Mental Hygiene and the Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded of the State Charities Aid Association have been combined.

Acting upon the expressed wish of experts in the field of mental deficiency and disease, and at the express request of both committees, the Board of Managers of the Association, at its April meeting, amended its by-laws to impose upon the Committee on Mental Hygiene all the powers and duties exercised by the Association in relation to the feebleminded as well as the mental diseases.

Resolutions were adopted that the Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded be discontinued on and after May 1, 1917, with an expression of cordial appreciation on the part of the Board of the work done by that committee since its establishment in 1911, especially during the legislative sessions of 1914 and 1917.

Committee to Be Enlarged

It is the plan to enlarge the Committee on Mental Hygiene, and the Board voted to ask the President of the Association to take into consideration the present membership of the Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded in enlarging the Mental Hygiene Committee.

Numerous new activities will be made possible through the enlargement of the Committee by bringing feeblemindedness within its scope. The staff of the combined committees will be the same as the present staff of the Mental Hygiene Committee, with possible additions as the need therefor may develop.

Statement of Committee's Objects

The amended by-laws providing for the consolidation of the committee are as follows:

1. It shall be the duty of the Committee on Mental Hygiene:

   a. To aid in all practicable ways in the promotion of mental health in the State of New York.

   b. To resist, in accordance with time and means, the essential facts as to the nature, extent and results of mental diseases and deficiency in the State of New York.

   c. To promote scientific research by public and private agencies according to the nature, causes, and results of mental disease and deficiency and to the methods and agencies for the prevention, recognition, diagnosis, treatment, and after-care of mental diseases and deficiency.

   d. To cooperate with the State authorities and with the State institutions maintaining mental disease and deficiency in preventive and educational work, and in the establishment and effective operation of hospitals for the treatment of mental diseases and deficiency.

   e. To cooperate with the State authorities and with the State institutions maintaining mental disease and deficiency in the research work in general and educational work in the treatment of mental diseases and deficiency.

   f. To aid in developing and maintaining high standards of social service for the attendance of the Governor Signs Bill Granting $1,144,000 for the Feebleminded

New Appropriations and Authorizations Will Provide 890 More Beds and Increase Capacity of Institutions 16 Per Cent

Governor Whitman has approved all the items in the Appropriation Bill for new construction at State institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic.

Total appropriations of $614,500 are made available this year, and contracts for $529,600 additional are authorized. This makes a total of $1,144,100 of appropriation and authorization for the feebleminded and epileptic this year.

Such a substantial sum is a credit to the Legislature and to the Governor.

These funds will provide, among other things, for the construction of one new cottage at the State Custodial Asylum at Newark, the completion of four cottages already under construction at Letchworth Village and the erection of eight additional cottages and other necessary buildings at Letchworth. These twelve cottages at Letchworth and the one at Newark will provide 890 beds, increasing the present capacity of the State institutions, 5,399, by about 16 per cent.

Here is the allotment of the funds:

Most of the money appropriated for Craig Colony for Epileptics is to replace old construction that has been condemned.

To Push Building Plans

Efforts will be made to expedite the erection of the buildings provided with the funds granted this year. With good team work by everybody concerned there is no reason why the buildings provided for should not be completed, furnished, and occupied not later than the autumn of 1918.

In the course of the legislative session the need of these additional accommodations was clearly demonstrated from every section of the State, and the demand for funds to meet the need was widespread. The action of the Legislature and the Governor is meeting with widespread public approval.

Mr. Macy Establishes Mental Clinic for County Institutions

At a dinner given on the evening of April 20th in the Hotel Biltmore, New York City, to fifty prominent residents of Westchester County, including public officials, physicians, business men, clergymen, jurists, social workers, and newspaper men, Mr. V. Evret Macy, Commissioner of Charities and Corrections in the county, announced the establishment of a mental dispensary as a feature of the facilities of the new county institutions and the children's department of the Commissioner's office.

The clinic is already in operation. It is in charge of Dr. Bernard Glueck, a psychiatrist of wide reputation, who has been doing similar work at Sing Sing Prison. Dr. Glueck will examine all prisoners committed to the new Westchester County Penitentiary, and he will also test the children coming in contact with the child welfare department of the Commissioner's office as dependents and delinquents.

The establishment of this clinic will round out Mr. Macy's plans and facilities for making the county almshouse, penitentiary, children's department, and almshouse a great human repair shop to mend broken lives. The physical rehabilitation of dependent and delinquent children, of almshouse inmates, of hospital patients, and penitentiary prisoners will be supplemented by expert attention to mental health needs. Efforts will be made to secure such attention and treatment as is needed in cases of mentally diseased or defective persons.

Five Mental Clinics in County

This new clinic is the fifth mental clinic in Westchester County. Three are maintained by the State hospitals and are located at Yonkers, Mt. Vernon, and Peekskill. Dr. Charles I. Lambert of Bloomingdale Hospital, White Plains, a private institution, also conducts a clinic in the schools of White Plains.
A MOVE TO PUT VISION, POWER AND DRIVE INTO STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES

Senator Mills Introduces a Bill Giving Effect to Com'r Strong's Recommendations

The S. C. A. A. News of December contained a résumé of the report of Commissioner Charles H. Strong on the reorganization of the various charitable institutions having to do with the State charitable institutions. These recommendations included not only the reorganization of the State Board of Charities, but the abolition of the office of Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities and of four other minor commissions.

The Strong investigation had been marked by controversy and bitterness injected unnecessarily and unfortunately into a serious proceeding. The Strong report, however, was so manifestly judicial, fair-minded, searching and conclusive that it went far toward restoring the complicated subjects with which it dealt to an atmosphere in which they could be dealt with on their merits.

By a tacit common consent, the leadership in framing and promoting legislation designed to carry into effect Commissioner Strong’s report was left to an important citizens’ committee on dependent children of which Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge was general chairman, and Mr. George W. Wickersham, chairman of the executive committee. This executive committee felt that it might be possible by a conference with the various parties concerned, to secure substantially common consent to the adoption of Commissioner Strong’s recommendations either as a whole or in all their essential aspects. These efforts, extending over a considerable period of time, led to no immediate result.

The executive committee, which includes a number of the best known persons in philanthropic work in New York City, addressed a letter to the Governor, on April 7 (which we print elsewhere in this issue), urging the enactment of the legislation recommended by Commissioner Strong. This was followed on April 9 by the introduction of a bill by the Hon. Ogden L. Mills of the State Senate, carrying into effect Commissioner Strong’s recommendations in full. The late date on which the bill was introduced and the absorption of all public authorities in matters connected with the war may make it impossible to secure that consideration of the subject at this stage of the issue to which its importance deserves. If so, we have no doubt that the subject will receive full and adequate consideration at the hands of the next Legislature.

Citizens’ Committee Urges Reorganization of the State Board

Governor Whitman has received from The Citizens’ Committee on Dependent Children a letter urging the reorganization of the State Board of Charities along the lines recommended by his special commissioner, Charles H. Strong, and embodied in a bill introduced by Senator Mills. The letter follows, in part:

New York, April 7, 1917.
Hon. Charles S. Whitman, Governor of the State of New York, Executive Chamber, Albany, N. Y.

Sirs:

In the field of charitable administration the present governmental system has been found to be seriously unsatisfactory. The following statement has been made about charitable institutions caring for the city’s orphan children up to higher standards of cleanliness, care and education. It has begun to put into effect gradually the policy of placing children in private homes rather than in institutions, in recognition of the established humanitarian principle that the happy life of a normal child is greater than the life of a normal home.

In attempting to perform these two great public services the government of New York City has had to struggle against very natural and understandable forces of inertia in various charitable institutions. It is a pleasure to be able to inform Your Excellency that these forces have been largely overcome and a spirit of hearty co-operation with the Department of Charities exists.

Every institution complained of in 1914-1915 is now in receipt of commitments from the City of New York—contrary to the ultimate cooperation of the institutions and a complete demonstration of the lack of any partisan or religious animosities on the part of the city administration.

The old backless benches have been replaced by chairs. Tables covered with cloths have superseded the depressing long uncovered wooden tables. Iceboxes are to be found where previously the spoon was the only table implement. Combs, hair brushes, and tooth brushes are now regularly used. Vermin have disappeared. Children are permitted to talk at meals. Dentists have been employed. Teaching staffs have been reorganized. Classes in domestic science, carpentry, sewing, and stenography and typewriting have been established. Child labor, under the guise of vocational training, has been abolished. Toys have been introduced where previously unknown, and playgrounds which were easily lacking now have been provided.

Your Excellency will of course understand that no institution was found in which all the improper conditions existed which are above referred to. But there were many in which some of those defects were found, and the past three years of unremitting work by the City Department of Charities have proved of inestimable value to the institutions and to the children. A result of so dramatic and pathetic a nature as to touch every heart.

But, on the other hand, the conditions previously existing and the changes accomplished constitute an overwhelming argument in favor of the present State Board of Charities.

On October 25, 1916, Commissioner Strong made a report, and severely censured the State Board of Charities for the issuance of non-approved and for the failure to issue certificates of non-approval, “as to every one of the twenty-four institutions on the city’s [then] controversial list”; and he further found that:

"The city has proved its case against the State Board out of the figures of the State Board’s own inspection report."

Commissioner Strong then made a series of constructive recommendations, all of which were predicated upon the fundamental personnel and methods of the present State Board of Charities.

That Board, we are informed, has drafted and is considering presenting to the Legislature a number of bills augmenting its powers without effecting any change in its personnel and effecting no adequate change in its administrative methods. We feel it our duty to protest against these bills.

We urge upon Your Excellency the necessity of carrying out the essential recommendations made by Commissioner Strong and generally in the form made by him.

We have drafted a bill embodying Commissioner Strong’s chief recommendations, which is our purpose to submit to the Legislature without delay. In reliance upon the statements of your message to the Legislature on January 3, 1917, we sincerely hope and respectfully request that you will support this bill and send a special message to the Legislature upon it.

Not only has the present State Board of Charities constantly failed to take the necessary steps to better the conditions which the Department of Charities of the City of New York has radically bettered, but by its own action it has amended the rule under which the present State Board of Charities has been working, thus placing the onus upon the receipt of certificates to charitable institutions issued by the State Board. The power which the Board could exercise under this rule, in our opinion, the most important power in its possession.

If, as we are convinced, and as Commissioner Strong finds, the Board is properly censurable for not having frequently exercised this power in the past, how much more censurable is it for having deprived itself of this weapon by its own action?

The improvements effected by the courageous action of the city administration cannot be preserved without the creation of a new, vigorous and progressive State Board of Charities. The welfare of all state charitable institutions will be immeasurably advanced by the same means. We are convinced with Commissioner Strong that it is only upon a new and vigorous State Board that the Legislature can afford to concentrate the powers and duties now vested in the Fiscal Supervisor and in other state agencies.

For these reasons we vigorously oppose the proposed legislation under consideration by the present State Board, because it would be too weak and too visible which does not start with a thorough reorganization of the personnel and methods of the Board.

We have delayed taking this action as long as possible, having for months hoped that the Board would take the exercise of a spirit of conciliation the necessary forward steps could be taken without controversy. These hopes have been dispelled by the attitude of the State Board of Charities, which, while assenting to most of Commissioner Strong’s recommendations, has failed to respond to his fundamental recommendation which calls for the Board’s reformation and reconstruction, and upon which all his other recommendations are predicated.

Respectfully submitted,

THE CITIZENS’ COMMITTEE ON DEPENDENT CHILDREN,
By its Executive Committee:

GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM,
Chairman.
GEORGE F. CANFIELD,
WILLIAM H. CHILDS.

How Canada Deals with Tuberculosis in War-Time

Mr. Nelbach Visits Dominion to Study Methods of Caring for Tuberculous Soldiers

George J. Nelbach, executive secretary of the State Charities Aid Association's Tuberculosis Committee, recently visited Canada to obtain information at first hand about the experience as to tuberculosis in the Canadian Expeditionary Force which, as of April 1st, totaled 437,000 men, drawn from the Dominion's population of approximately 8,000,000 persons.

“The outbreak of the Great War in August, 1914, found Canada totally unprepared,” said Mr. Nelbach. “Its standing army consisted of only 3,000 men. There were in addition some provincial militia comprising a total of 60,000 men, but inadequately equipped and poorly trained. A hurried rush to the colors followed. In the hurly-burly and haste of organizing regiments, rigorous medical examination was not made of those volunteering for service. This error has been fraught with serious consequences, but the country is responding magnificently now to meet the situation resulting from the invalidation of medically unfit soldiers. Some obviously advanced cases of tuberculosis were rejected by the army medical men and kept out of the service. Nothing, however, seems to have been done about them. The opinion expressed was that undoubtedly the majority of them were left to their own devices, the public, as well as private, resources for the relief, care and treatment of tuberculosis in Canada being for the most part very inadequate.

Invalided by Tuberculosis

“Altogether, between 1,400 and 1,500 men have been invalided out of active military service because of tuberculosis. Approximately half of these men had gone overseas. At one time as high as 60 per cent of the tuberculous soldiers under the care of the Military Hospitals Commission had never left the country. Only 15 per cent of them had reached France. Life in the training camps, the forced marches, exposure to severe weather, wet clothes, wet feet and in general the strain of adjustment to the military regime brought to light those active cases unrecognized at the time of enlistment and caused many latent and arrested cases to develop into active tuberculosis.

Some of the cases returned from France have been ‘gassed,’ that is, they have been affected by the clouds of poisonous gas used by the Germans. Just how many no one seems to know. Not all ‘gassed’ men develop tuberculosis, but a great many of them do and seem to be affected with a very serious type of the disease.

Big Task for Military Hospitals Commission

“Only through working under tremendous pressure and employing most energetic measures has the Canadian Military Hospitals Commission—the Government agency charged with the duty of caring for invalided, wounded and disabled soldiers—been able to keep the supply ahead of the demand for hospital beds for tuberculosis cases. It has been kept ahead of the demand except for a few days following the closing of the Canadian training camps last fall when with only forty-eight hours’ notice the Commission was called upon to provide for a large number of cases whose presence in the camps had not been reported.

Hotels and Schools for Hospitals

“The demand for beds has been met by leasing and remodeling to summer hotels and a public school building, by contracting for a portion of the capacity of existing private tuberculosis institutions and also by effecting agreements with some of the institutions for the construction of additional facilities, both administrative and hospital, and sharing the cost thereof dollar for dollar, such new construction to become the property of the institutions when the Military Hospitals Commission passes out of office. Altogether, a total of 1,218 beds, as of April 29th last, have been, or are about to be, made available for the treatment of the tuberculous soldiers.

“This hospital provision will probably need expansion in the near future if the rate of return of invalided soldiers from overseas established for the first three months of 1917 is kept up for the balance of the year. Two hundred and nineteen men were received from abroad during the first three months of this year as against 378 and 103 for the whole of last year and 1915, respectively.

Weak Spots in the System

“From the public health point of view, that is, from the standpoint of diminishing infection, two conditions relating to the system of hospitalization of the invalided tuberculous soldiers seriously impair its effectiveness. The first is that the sick soldiers are not compelled to go to and remain in the institutions for care and treatment. They are still enlisted men and subject to military discipline, but public opinion would not, now at least, countenance the compulsory hospitalization of these cases. The country knows that the sick soldiers returned from overseas are longing for the sight of their homes, the prospect of which has sustained them in irksome hours, and are eager to meet their kinsfolk and friends. The public and the press ventilate these men who have suffered so grievously for their country. Enforced hospital care of these tuberculous invalids, in the present state of public opinion, would be considered harsh and inhuman and undoubtedly would not be tolerated.

“Secondly, the institutions are relatively widely scattered and the military districts served by them cover enormous areas, excepting in the case of the three maritime provinces, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. The policy is to persuade the men to go to the sanatoria in the military districts from which they enlisted. But the districts are so large, with the exceptions noted, that the relatives and friends cannot readily visit the patients. The sick men become homesick; and weakened by disease, their initiative slackened by enforced idleness, their fibre softened by experiences that have been enervating, they would have their right for further care and treatment and return home, taking their disease with them and exposing their households to infection.

“It sometimes happens that when the men invalided from overseas arrive at the disembarkation depots in Quebec, Halifax or St. Johns there do not happen to be any available beds in the particular military districts from which they enlisted. Consequently, a number of these men waive their right to medical treatment, take their discharge from the army with pensions and leave directly for their homes. Just recently a group of 26 men, finding that there were no hospital beds immediately available for them in the military district of a western province, elected to be discharged and pensioned and left for their homes.”

Lessons for This State

Mr. Nelbach believes that the State of New York can draw three important lessons from the experience of Canada. He says the lessons that should be applied are:

(1) Adequate medical examination for tuberculosis of all men considered for the army,

(2) Sanatorium care for the early cases rejected by the medical examiners should be provided by the State; and hospital care for the moderate and advanced cases thus discovered should be provided by the local communities, cities or counties.

(3) Soldiers invalided because of tuberculosis should be kept under military discipline and required to come in and a willingness to cooperate with the hospital authorities in pursuing the course of treatment.
Anti-Tuberculosis Workers Mobilize on a Wide Front

Big Drive Against Tuberculosis Is on All Over the State

From various sections of the State come encouraging reports of progress in relation to county tuberculosis hospitals and the establishment of fresh-air classes.

The Niagara County Board of Supervisors recently decided to move the abandoned almshouse hospital building to the site where the new county tuberculosis hospital will be constructed. This building will be utilized for the care of tuberculosis cases until the new hospital is ready for occupancy. A third set of plans for the new $100,000 institution is now being prepared, the two previous sets having been rejected by the State Department of Health.

The Warren County Board of Supervisors recently appointed a committee to acquire title to two farms near Glens Falls as a site for the new county hospital. The State Department of Health has approved the site. Fifty thousand dollars for this institution was authorized by referendum last November.

Laboratory for Saratoga County

The Saratoga County Tuberculosis Hospital has received a complete laboratory for research work by animal experimentation. This is the gift of the Saratoga County Medical Society and of General H. W. Carpenter of Galway and New York City.

Local Committees Active

Much activity is reported by the Association's local tuberculosis committees. The Elmira committee has just opened a preventorium for children who are or have been exposed to "open" cases of tuberculosis at home. It is located on a farm on the outskirts of the city. The money for the enterprise was secured through the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals and through a generous donation from Mrs. J. Sloat Fassett, a member of the State Committee on Tuberculosis.

The Waterford Tuberculosis Committee and the Board of Education have decided to cooperate in the establishment of a fresh-air class in one of the public schools. The local committee will furnish the equipment and the teacher, and the Board of Education will provide the room, desks and other educational equipment.

The Dunkirk Committee has offered $250 to the Board of Education to start a fresh-air class. The President of the Board of Education has advised us that the offer will probably be accepted and the class started next September.

The Ithaca Committee has decided to extend its activities throughout Tompkins County and to employ a county organizer to begin work in May. The committee has also placed its medical staff at the dispensary on a paid basis. The Board of Health of Little Falls has decided to establish a tuberculosis clinic in that city.

Keep Tuberculous Men Out of Enlisting Army, Canadian Expert Warns

The Honourable, Sir James A. Longheed, Leader of the Government in the Canadian Senate and President of the Canadian Military Hospitals Commission, in a letter to Hon. Joseph H. Choate, President of the State Charitable Aid Association, offers two suggestions growing out of Canadian experience with tuberculosis in its army:

"The first has to do with the enlistment of men physically fit but incipient tuberculous or otherwise. The anxiety of the commanding officer and staff of a regimental unit to reach full strength has given rise to insufficient medical examination being made concerning recruits. Most frequently this examination is made by the medical officer of the battalion, or by a medical officer interested either directly or indirectly in the speedy organization of the battalion. My judgment is that an independent and thorough medical examination of each recruit, looking to his ultimate service, is absolutely necessary for economic reasons.

"Secondly, (as to our) experience in the matter of returning invalided or wounded men to the military district from which they originally recruited. While economically it would be more desirable to centralise returned men in large and specialised institutions, irrespective of their former residences, yet we find that such strong pressure is brought to bear upon us, both through the press and through the public and otherwise, as to necessitate our returning invalided and wounded men to their districts from which they have originally come, irrespective of the question as to whether we can more economically or efficiently deal with them in the central and specialised institutions."

The lesson is for the counties of New York to provide tuberculosis hospitals for their military and civilian citizens.

Mr. Weber on Staff of Mayor's Defense Committee

The services of Mr. J. J. Weber, Executive Secretary of the Association's Committee on Hospitals, have been loaned to the County Committee on Hospitals and Medical Facilities of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense of New York City. The committee will endeavor to formulate a definite program for hospital and medical facilities in Greater New York, with a view to offering such facilities to the National Government in case of need arising out of the war. Mr. Weber will act as Secretary of the committee.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY

TO DOUBLE CAPACITY OF TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

The Montgomery County Board of Supervisors has voted to increase the capacity of the county tuberculosis hospital from twenty-five to fifty beds. A bond issue of $20,000 was passed unanimously at a special session called to consider the question. Plans have already been prepared and construction will be started as soon as the weather permits.

The hospital has had a waiting list continuously since its opening in September, 1913. It began operations with twenty beds. Five beds were added two years ago, also a residence for the medical superintendent and the nurses and employees. The institution is four miles east of Amsterdam and within seven minutes' walking distance of the trolley stop of the interurban line running between Amsterdam and Schenectady. A great deal of the success of the hospital has been due to the efficient management and administration. The board of managers consists of Mr. H. F. Gardner, president; Dr. Charles Stover, Mr. Thomas F. McCaffrey and Dr. James S. Walton. Dr. Edwin J. Kibbe is the medical superintendent and resides at the institution.

ENCOURAGING!

The table below gives the number of deaths and the death rate from pulmonary tuberculosis in the State (exclusive of New York City) for each year since the up-State tuberculosis movement began in 1907. The figures are from the State Department of Health:

Additional ground for encouragement may be derived from the fact that the decline in the death rate would be even more marked if the deaths among residents of New York City and from outside states which have occurred at the health resorts in Franklin, Essex, Hamilton, Sullivan, Orange, Ulster and Greene Counties were not included in the figures above.
THE NEW IMMIGRATION LAW

An Analysis of the Changes Which Relate to the Mentally Defective

By SPENCER L. DAWES, M.D.

Deputy Medical Examiner of the Bureau of Deportation, New York State Hospital Commission, Formerly Special Commissioner on the Alien Insane and Member of Commission on Federal Legislation for the Alien Insane.

H. R. No. 10,384, popularly known as the "new immigration law," has attracted much attention, chiefly on account of the illiteracy test, while the far reaching importance of its provisions as to mental defectives has been but little considered by the general public. While it is not my purpose to discuss any but the latter provisions, it might be stated that whatever we may think of the propriety of the illiteracy provision, competent observers believe that the latter will do little from a practical standpoint as a means of exclusion. This opinion is based on the fact that since the introduction of this clause in pending legislation about eight years ago, many thousands of schools have been established by several governments for the sole purpose of teaching adults enough of some language to pass the illiteracy test.

The Committee on Immigration of the Sixty-third Congress in reporting on H. R. 6,060, which was substantially the same as the law under consideration, said: "All laws heretofore enacted on this subject have been of a selective rather than restrictive character. None of the existing selective features have been omitted in preparing this act; on the contrary, they have been strengthened wherever experience has shown them weak, and have been so supplemented with the addition of a few excluded classes, of the same general nature, to the list contained in the present law as greatly to improve the effectiveness of the law in its purely selective features," a very accurate estimate indeed.

The best method of considering the changes in the law is by studying the changes in each section.

Italics wherever used are for emphasis only and do not so appear in the law.

PROVISIONS OF THE NEW LAW

Sec. 2. The new act provides for a head tax of $8.00 (an increase of $4.00) on every alien passenger arriving in the United States, and also provides that children under sixteen years of age who accompany a parent are exempt. The purpose of these changes is not only to make possible the maintenance of a large immigration service, but to provide a means of securing revenue to offset the loss which its moderately restrictive factor may entail.

Sec. 4 provides that the group of persons who have had one or more attacks of insanity at any time previously, instead of "persons who have been insane within five years," shall be excluded; whereas, persons who have had two or more attacks of insanity at any time previously, and adds to the excluded classes of persons "persons on account of mental inferiority and persons with chronic alcoholism." The wisdom of these changes is at once apparent to any one who has noted the large number of foreign born insane who have been admitted to our state hospitals whose histories clearly show hereditary taints, and who, for the most part, have been excluded on account of the war in Europe, and, as a result, the under treatment of mental defectives, as well as the influx of insane persons affected by chronic alcoholism.

The old law excluded "persons mentally or physically defective, such mental or physical defect being of a nature which may affect the ability of such alien to earn a living." In the new law the words "mental or" are stricken out. The result will be that the mental defective the possession of money or the ability to earn a living will in no way affect his right to enter the country and is a provision of great value. Unquestionably as to the latter persons will be "likely to become a public charge" could enter and transmit to his progeny strains of mental defect far reaching in their effect upon future generations. It is unlikely from a eugenic standpoint that any of the changes in the immigration law will have a more beneficial effect than this.

HEAVIER FINE FOR STEAMSHIP COMPANIES

Sec. 9. The corresponding section of the existing law imposes a fine upon the transportation companies of $100 for bringing in certain excluded classes, but it does not include the insane. The law now adds insanity, constitutional psychopathic inferiority and chronic alcoholism and increases the fine to $200. If "such mental or physical defect might have been detected by ordinary consciousness at the time of embarkation," and the fine of $25.00 is imposed. The possibilities of this section as a restrictive measure are at once evident when we observe that the transportation company must also, at its own expense, return the alien to the country from whence he came and refund to him the money paid for his transportation from the initial point of departure. It is quite apparent that a heavy fine for bringing immigrants to this country will abate their lax and cursory methods of exclusion at points of embarkation for more careful and scientific methods when their pocketbooks are affected.

INSPECTORS ON BOARD SHIPS

Sec. 11a is entirely new and is framed with a view to detailing "inspectors and matrons of the United States Immigration Service" with the duty on vessels entering the United States to make thorough observation and examination of aliens with a view, not only to detect diseased mental and physical condition but to lighten the work of the medical inspectors at the ports of entry.

Many observers believe that this will result in the under treatment of both the insane and mentally defective, while fully as many consider its worth to be problematical.

Sec. 16. Under the present statute all aliens "shall be inspected and may be examined" at ports of entry. In H. R. 10,384, there are made "shall be examined by not less than two medical officers and two inspectors." How beneficial this provision is to the alien depends on the statement in the last report of the Commissioner-General of Immigration (page 9) that this intensive form of examination has been augmented and enlarged since the immigration has fallen off on account of the war in Europe, and, as a result, the under treatment of mental defectives, as well as the influx of insane persons affected with . . . . or with any mental or . . . . or with any mental or physical disability which would bring such alien in any of the provisions excluded from admission to the United States under section three of this act," is of paramount interest. Those of us who are at all familiar with deportation problems will remember the great wrong wrought the State of New York by the notorious "Decision No. 120," which has been the means of placing upon the State the burden of many aliens who, but for its unfairness, might have been deported. The decision referred to amounted to an assertion of the principle that medical and other examinations of an insane alien, opinions of qualified aliens, are valueless unless supported by some affirmative facts which would prove to a lay mind the alien's mental condition. The paragraph referred to makes it plain that quantity of a purely medical nature shall be determined by medical men and not by laymen.

THE "PRIOR CAUSE" CLAUSE

Sec. 19 relates entirely to deportation and, of course, implies the right mentioned in Sec. 3. One very important change, however, is made in the law. The provision mentioned makes it impossible for an insane alien to be deported, that the causes of his insanity arose prior to his
NEW STATE COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE NEEDS OF THE INSANE AND FEEBLEMINDED

Governor Signs the Sage Bill for a Thorough Study of the State's Institutional System and the Formulation of a Definite Financial Policy Over a Term of Years

PLAN TO RELIEVE THE OVERCROWDING SYSTEMATICALLY

Just what are the present needs of the State in relation to the insane and feeble-minded? What are the actual facts as to the adequacy, or rather the inadequacy, of institutional provision for these classes? What definite fiscal policy should the State adopt, and how and where should it proceed in order to face the situation frankly and deal with it adequately, effectively, and, in the long run, economically?

These and other important questions of State policy regarding the care and segregation of the insane and feeble-minded and the systematic upbuilding of institutions for them over a term of years will be determined by the Hospital Development Commission, which is created by an act introduced by Senator Sage, passed by the present Legislature and just approved by Governor Whitman.

The Commission will consist of the State Engineer, the Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, the State Architect, the Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, the Chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, one member of the Legislature who shall also be a minority member of one of the financial committees of the Legislature, and two members to be appointed by the Governor.

The act takes effect immediately, and the Commission is to complete its study in time to submit its report to the Legislature early in the session of 1918. The sum of $20,000 is appropriated for the expenses of the Commission.

What the Commission Will Do

Among other things the Commission will do the following:

- Examine each site of hospital development in the State, together with similar other sites as the State now owns or which in the future may be developed for hospital purposes.
- Make a complete investigation of the capacity of the present State hospital buildings.
- Consider the future policy of the State for the care of the insane.
- Adopt a general plan of hospital development.
- Devise and adopt a plan to provide for the proper accommodation of the present surplus or a moderate surplusage of accommodations at its completion at the end of ten years.
- Estimate the probable cost of the plan.
- Submit a comprehensive plan for the development of each hospital site.
- Recommend to the Legislature each year an expenditure equal to one-tenth of the entire hospital plant when completed.

Investigate the problem of the proper care of the feeble-minded with the purpose of devising a plan for its solution. When this problem is under consideration, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities takes the place of the Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, and the Secretary of the State Board of Charities takes the place of the State Engineer.

Need of Such a Commission

From a certain point of view there is little need of the Commission to study the question of the insane because the facts are already pretty well in hand. The overcrowding of the State hospitals is common knowledge. On the other hand, the State should have such a Commission to study the question of the feeble-minded which is not so well known.
other hand, there is need of determining more definitely certain general procedures and policies in relation to the type of buildings, the size to which the various hospitals shall be developed, et cetera. Above all, there is urgent necessity for the establishment of a definite fiscal policy on the part of the State, facing the situation as a whole and establishing a constructive method for dealing with it within a definite time.

With important members of the financial committees of the Legislature serving on this Commission and becoming familiar with the existing facts, the recommendations which they will have a part in framing will naturally have very great weight with the Legislature.

The Needs of the Feebleminded
The same set of facts is true in relation to the feebleminded, with the one difference that instead of being overcrowded in State institutions as the insane are, the feebleminded are overcrowded in unsuitable institutions or in their own wretched homes.

These overcrowded homes of the feebleminded are centers of everything that is disturbing in the State's social life—disease, crime, poverty, immorality and degeneracy. It is equally urgent that the State look this matter squarely in the face and establish a definite policy for dealing with it in a definite time.

The measure creating the Development Commission was unanimously approved by the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association, and the Association stands ready to cooperate with the Commission as one of the most important features of its work during the remainder of the current year.

Appropriations for Two Hospitals
In addition to providing for this comprehensive study, the bill carries appropriations for erecting buildings on the Marcy site near the Utica State Hospital and for the erection of buildings at the Middletown State Hospital.

For Marcy, the bill carries an appropriation of $299,254.85 (the unexpended balance of a $300,000 appropriation heretofore made for the Mohonic State Hospital, now abandoned). Additional contracts at Marcy amounting to $950,745.15 are authorized, making a total of $1,250,000 of appropriation and authorization for the Marcy institution, which is to be known as the Marcy Division of the Utica State Hospital. The State already owns nearly 1,000 acres of excellent farming land at Marcy.

For Middletown the bill carries an appropriation of $100,000 and an additional authorization of $269,000, a total of $369,000 of authorization and appropriation.

The total appropriation in the bill available this year, therefore, is $399,254.85, and an additional authorization of $1,219,745.15, making a total of $1,619,000 of appropriation and authorization.

Bills Providing $2,934,470 for the Insane Are Signed by Governor

Bills Sponsoring $1,297,724 for New Construction This Year and Authorizes Additional Contracts of $1,636,745—Will Help Relieve Overcrowding of State Hospitals

Appropriations totaling $1,297,724.85 for new construction at State hospitals for the insane are provided in the appropriation bill and the hospital development commission bill which have been passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Whitney.

In addition to these appropriations available this year, the bills carry an additional authorization of contracts amounting to $1,636,745.15, making a total of $5,934,470 of appropriation and authorization for the State hospitals for the insane.

This year's appropriations are the largest in a number of years and constitute a very substantial step toward relieving the present overcrowding of about 6,000 patients in the State hospitals. Whereas $1,297,724.85 was actually appropriated this year for new construction, only $369,000 was appropriated a year ago, and $610,000 in 1915.

The funds for the construction at the State hospitals are provided in two bills.

Items in the Hospital Development Bill

The hospitals at which most of the new construction will be done with the funds provided, in addition to Utica and Middletown, will be at the Brooklyn State Hospital (which gets an appropriation of $528,410), Central Islip and the Manhattan State hospitals, all in the metropolitan district. This is where the overcrowding is the greatest, and such a substantial sum for new buildings for the insane in New York and vicinity was greatly needed.

It is believed that if appropriations equal to the amount granted this year are forthcoming each year for ten years, the present overcrowding in the 13 civil hospitals for the insane will be gradually wiped out, and adequate provision made for the annual increase, which has averaged about 500 patients a year for the past ten years.

In addition to these substantial appropriations this year a thorough study of the whole question of the needs of the insane and feebleminded is provided for by the Hospital Development Bill. The problem of these classes becomes more and more pressing each year and weighs heavily on the State because of the neglect and delay in keeping up with the increase in the number of insane and feebleminded year by year.

FRANKLIN COUNTY COMMITTEE OF S. C. A.

The Malone Social Service Society has been designated by the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association as the Franklin County Committee of the Association.

The Society plans to appoint sub-committees in the various towns and villages of the county and to extend the scope of its work. The organization has already done excellent work in the community through its committees on relief, public health and child welfare. It maintains a child welfare station, with a visiting nurse.

County Judge Frederick G. Paddock is President, Mrs. Halbert D. Stevens and Arthur E. McClary, Associate Presidents, and Miss Florence C. Mallon, Secretary.
Board of Managers Adopts Minute on the Services of Its Distinguished President

The death of Hon. Joseph H. Choate, one of the incorporators of the State Charities Aid Association and its President for sixteen years, occurred on May 14th. At the regular meeting of the Board of Managers on May 21st the following minute was adopted by a rising vote:

In addition to his many other public-spirited services, Mr. Joseph H. Choate was connected with the State Charities Aid Association for a period of 41 years, from 1876 until his death, May 14, 1917. He was President of the Association for sixteen years, from January, 1896, until the autumn of 1899, after his appointment as Ambassador to Great Britain, and again immediately after his return in 1905 until his death. He was one of the original incorporators of the Association in December, 1889.

Mr. Choate's services began as a member of the committee to visit Bellevue Hospital. He became interested in all the varied work of the Association. In 1881 he appeared before the Senate committee in Albany in support of the bill giving the visitors of the Association the right to visit public charitable institutions.

He was a member of the Committee on Legislation for the Insane during the strenuous years leading up to the enactment of the law establishing State care for the insane as the settled policy of the State, and with ex-President Cleveland, Bishop Potter and others made an address at the meeting held May, 1881, to incorporate the establishment of the State care system. During the sessions of the Constitutional Convention of 1884, Mr. Choate became deeply interested in the care of dependent children in this State, and was directly responsible for the inclusion in the revised Constitution of the law establishing the State orphanages which has led to very great benefits to the dependent children of this city and State. For several years thereafter he served as Chairman of our Standing Committee on Dependent Children.

Mr. Choate took a deep interest in the work of the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in the State of New York. He presided at a great public meeting in Albany in January, 1906, at which this State Campaign for the Prevention of Tuberculosis was inaugurated, and again at a similar meeting in Albany in March, 1910, at which President Taft and Governor Hughes spoke. At the annual and other meetings of the Association Mr. Choate rarely failed to inquire how much the death rate from tuberculosis had diminished.

One of Mr. Choate's last services to the Association was as a member of the Special Committee on War Measures, the first meeting of which was held at Mr. Choate's house, April 10, 1917. At this meeting plans were made for a drive with renewed vigor for the prevention of tuberculosis, made still more urgent by the increase of tuberculosis which the war undoubtably will cause. Some of these plans have since received the approval of the Legislature and the Governor.

For many years Mr. Choate has presided and spoken at the annual meetings of the Association, and was generally present at the monthly meetings of the Board of Managers.

Mr. Choate not only gave the Association the prestige of his great name; he also gave it his personal services, at committee and board meetings, at hearings before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, before committees of the Legislature, and in addresses at momentous public occasions. His leadership was an inspiration to the thousands of workers in the various committees of the Association throughout the State. His initiative and strong support of all the forward steps in legislation and administration relating to public charities and public health advanced these interests immeasurably.

Together with the nation, the State and the city, we recognize that Mr. Choate leaves no successor, and rejoice in a life full to the very end of inspiration and service to the country.

Mr. Canfield Pays Tribute to Mr. Choate

In announcing Mr. Choate's death to the Board, Mr. George P. Canfield, Acting President of the Association, paid the following tribute to him:

"We meet today in the shadow of a great loss and with a sense of a large space unfilled in our membership and Board of Directors. We are grateful to Mr. Choate for all that he did for this Association, as a member of the Board of Managers and as its President, for his wise judgment and counsel upon broad questions of policy, for the weight and influence of his great reputation and prestige.

"We are also grateful that this Association commanded his unqualified confidence and his unqualified support, and by its actions and policies justified them both. There is no association with which Mr. Choate was connected, in which he took a keener interest than ours, and when he was more ready to respond to every request.

"Finally, we are grateful that we, members of the Board of Managers and members of the staff, have personally had the opportunity of knowing this remarkable man and feeling the charm of his unique qualities—a charm difficult to analyze or define and appreciated fully only by those who felt it. As we contemplate his long and brilliant career, we have an impression as of a sunny and far-reaching landscape, of rich meadows, fertile fields and cool shady groves on the banks of gently flowing streams, whose waters reflect the blue sky and glitter in the sunlight.

"Mr. Choate's life was singularly radiant, fruitful and restful and grew more and more inspiring until its glorious end, which was equally radiant and beautiful, suggesting a confident and victorious answer to the age-old question, 'Oh, death, where is thy sting? Oh grave, where is thy victory?""

Other States Are Copying N. Y. Public Health Law

Members of the State Charities Aid Association and all other persons interested in public health who worked so hard and successfully for the enactment of a new public health law in this State in 1913 will be glad to hear that the Legislature of Maine has just adopted a new health law which is substantially the same as that now in effect in this State.

The fruits of the work done in this State are being reaped far beyond its borders. In addition to Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Ohio have also adopted health laws which are based upon that of New York State; Texas has reorganized its public health machinery by incorporating some of the New York ideas into its law and a similar leaven is working in Minnesota.

EFFECTIVE CO-OPERATION

The State Charities Aid Association is indebted to the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness for generous and effective co-operation in the State-wide campaign to arouse interest in the needs of the feebleminded. During the legislative session just closed the Association, at the request of the Committee on Feeblemindedness, acted as its representative in its legislative work. The expenses involved in bringing the subject to public attention were met by the committee. The Association makes grateful acknowledgment of this co-operation.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS

Extremely important developments in the Association's program to deal with tuberculosis as a measure of war efficiency have been crowded out of this issue of THE NEWS. A special issue will be printed forthwith and will contain material of widest interest and public import.
State Pays Dearly for Delays in Building Charitable Institutions

Records Show That It Usually Takes Five Years After the Money Is Available to Erect and Occupy Buildings

It is always desirable to convert general impressions into definite knowledge.

Our May issue traced the history of new buildings at State charitable institutions authorized in 1911. It was a story of incredible delays. Two of the buildings after five years and nine months were not yet ready for use. The time elapsed between appropriation and use in the case of the other buildings varied from a year and a half to four years and three months.

Record Gets Worse and Worse

In this issue we present the facts in regard to all the buildings for which appropriations have been made, from 1911 to the present. The story does not improve with these additional chapters. The 1912 appropriations were characterized by even greater delays than those of 1911. In not less than seven out of twelve instances, the time elapsed between appropriation and use of building was, or will be, over five years.

What is the world? What is the State of New York? What sort of paralysis has been injected into its affairs? At whom does the finger indicating responsibility point?

This is an unimportant subject. The delays in providing these buildings authorized by the Legislature for the feebleminded and the epileptic, the juvenile delinquents and others, have cost the State dear.

Delays Costly to the State

In shackles, in hovels, in huts of vice and disorder, in homes of poverty and suffering, hundreds of human beings have been left unprovided for over a period of several years for whom the State had intended to make provision.

It may be impossible to locate the responsibility when so many authorities have a hand in it. Too many cooks have spoiled this broth beyond repair.

It ought not to be too much to expect, however, that the next Legislature will provide a uniform, simple, direct system by which, if a State charitable institution is delayed five years in course of construction, it will be possible to say who is who and to hold him responsible—to the public, and publicly!

The record in cold type shows:

The legislatures of 1911 to 1915 inclusive made appropriations for 43 buildings.

Five of them have not yet been begun.
Six for which money was provided in 1911-1912 are not yet ready for use—after more than five years.
Two were ready between five and six years after the appropriations were made.
Two of the buildings were finished between four and five years after the money was available.

Thirteen were completed between three and four years after the appropriations.
Eleven were finished between two and three years after.
Four were finished within two years.
Only 32 of the 43 buildings have been completed.

Striking Cases of Delay

A few of the more striking instances of difficulty and delay are worth detailing. In our April number we described at length the delay at Bedford Hills in getting plans for the farm cottages, awarding contracts and completing construction, and the postponement of authorization for the cottages to be built to connect the farm group with the main group. At last, four years after the appropriation for these cottages was made, they were actually opened for the reception of inmates during the month of May, 1917.

The State Training School for Girls at Hudson received from the Legislature of 1913 appropriations for a hospital and equipment, a contagious hospital, and a storehouse, refrigerating plant and equipment. Bids were advertised for twice, in the case of one building three times, and all bids received were rejected. Meanwhile the appropriations, so finally the Legislature of 1915 reapportioned the three amounts in a lump sum to be divided as many of the buildings as could be built for the amount, and finally the main hospital and the contagious hospital were completed, the storehouse and refrigerating plant having been crowded out. Considerable delay was experienced in connection with the plans for the hospital, some parts of the plan approved by the Board of Managers having been lost, and as a result the building was finally completed and ready for use in May, 1917.

The Situation at Industry

The State Agricultural and Industrial School at Industry was given $12,000 for a cottage for boys by the Legislature of 1913, and the same amount for the same purpose by the Legislature of 1916. The first appropriation lapsed because the plans submitted called for the construction of a fireproof building which would have considerably increased the original appropriation of $12,000. The plans for the other cottage also called for such expensive construction that the bids were received they were all too high, and no contract was yet been awarded. The loss of the earlier appropriation, and the delay in the use of the building, renders it ready by July 1, 1917. The institution is now crowded (28 inmates over its capacity May 1) that the admission of boys has been temporarily suspended.

How Craig Colony Fared

Craig Colony for Epileptics at Seneba was allowed $22,000 by the Legislature of 1912 for a cold storage plant. Plans were completed and prepared received May 27, 1915, but as the bids exceeded the appropriation, it was necessary to prepare new plans, which were approved by the Board of Managers, March 10, 1914. Proposals were received and the contracts awarded by the Board April 14, 1914, but, unfortunately, four days between April 14 and April 18, when the appropriation lapsed, were insufficient to secure the approval of the State Controller and other State officials whose consent is required by law, and Governor Glynn vetoed the amount when it came up for appropriation. After continued effort for several years a new appropriation for this purpose, this time for $35,000, was granted by the Legislature of 1916.

A modified set of plans was prepared and the contract was finally awarded and called for the completion of the building in November. Perhaps in five or six years after the original scheme of having a properly cold storage plant was approved, such a building will actually be in operation.

Letchworth Village received a number of important appropriations from the Legislature of 1911 and 1912 for purchasing the buildings whose construction was authorized by the Legislature is sufficiently indicated by the fact that six years seems to be the time that generally has to elapse between the appropriation for and the occupation of a building at Letchworth Village.

Delays at Rome

The Rome State Custodial Asylum was allowed $25,000 in 1913 to reconstruct A and B, which constitute an old frame building, to be converted into almshouses accommodating 250 inmates, which if repaired and fireproofed would accommodate about 300, thus amply warranting an expenditure of $250 per capita required to increase the capacity in this way. As a result of the failure of the highly simplified and inexpensive plans, the money has not been used and was reapportioned in 1913, again in 1915, and is asked for again as it is not provided for in the budget of 1916. Appropriations of over $10,000 for buildings at the Rome State Custodial Asylum only the January session of 1914 gave this institution $150,000 for a dormitory building to accommodate from 340 to 400 inmates with kitchen and dining-room accommodations for the same number. This money became available June 10, 1914, and it is understood that there was an agreement at that time with the Governor, the State Architect, and the Fiscal Supervisor, that if this appropriation were made plans for the building would be perfected at once so that it could be ready within a year from that time, and it was on this understanding that the Governor signed the bill. Plans were not submitted until the Spring of 1915. The contract was awarded in April, 1916, and called for the completion of the building by May 1, 1916. The original contract was signed for $120,000, but additions have been made, such as a conduit from the power house, the addition of porches, etc., which will bring the price up to something over $140,000. The work has been greatly delayed and is not expected to be completed before January 1, 1916, July 1, 1916, then January 1, 1917, and it is now expected that the contract will be extended until July 1, 1917, more than two years after it was supposed to be ready according to the original understanding.

MAN POWER
Tuberculosis and the Tug-o'-War
A Word to Members of Tuberculosis Committees
By Homer Folks

The term, "man power," occurs with increasing frequency in the news from Europe. It is a new term. It signifies the total effective organized power of the people of the nation. It shows that the war is not being fought only at the front, but that the lines extend back to the uttermost distances in the countries involved. Every man (and every woman) is being put into a position in which he can exert his power to the utmost. It is the tug-o'-war of college days, but on a worldwide scale. It is sheer massed brute force, cold bloodedly organized.

We are now in the war. Our man power is being organized. Its total weight depends upon how many healthy men and women there are in the country. The number of healthy men and women depends upon how thoroughly public health has been taught and observed; how effectively public agencies have been organized to safeguard health.

As members of the S. C. A. A. Tuberculosis Committees, you are entitled to substantial gratification in the realization that during the past ten years you have contributed substantially to the man power of the Empire State. You have realized all along that your country needed you and you have responded. You have been saving your country all these years. Now and then you may have been called uplifters, busy-bodies, and squanderers of public money by those who were too busy making money or spending money to see anything in tuberculosis; too busy to realize that the conservation of the man power of the state is a patriotic service of the highest order. Some of those very persons are now running frantically about, calling on everyone to save the country, but not telling them how to do it.

Except for what you have done, there would be thousands more graves in the churchyards, and thousands fewer men in

Commissioner Kingsbury
Acquitted and Vindicated
John A. Kingsbury, Commissioner of Charities, and his counsel, William H. Hotchkiss, have been acquitted in the Supreme Court before Justice Kelby of the wire tapping charges which grew out of the charities investigation last Spring.

At its regular meeting on May 25th, the New York City Visiting Committee of the State Charities Aid Association adopted a resolution "that the New York City Visiting Committee extend its congratulations to Commissioner Kingsbury on his acquittal of the charges unjustly made against him and on the triumphant public vindication of his course."

J. F. Thomas, secretary of the committee, outlined some of the vital and far-reaching accomplishments in the administration of public and private charities which have been made by Commissioner Kingsbury. He especially called attention to the important reforms wrought in the public institutions and bureaus as well as in the private institutions.

STATE HOSPITAL APPOINTMENTS
Dr. Walter C. Lyon, Medical Inspector of the State Hospital Commission, has been appointed and confirmed as superintendent of the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie to succeed Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, now chairman of the State Hospital Commission.

Dr. M. B. Heyman, assistant superintendent of the Central Islip State Hospital, has been appointed and confirmed as superintendent of the Manhattan State Hospital on Wards Island to succeed the late Dr. William Mabon. spite of the great armies they have sent to the front, have maintained their labor standards with little or no variation.

Safeguards in the Labor Law represent not privilege to a class, but protection for the entire community against wasteful consumption of human resources. Removal of this protection would weaken our power to wage war effectively before national measures protecting health and increasing vitality should be strengthened, not weakened, in times of stress.

Special Classes for Defectives in All Schools

Another important step toward providing for the feebleminded has just been taken. The Lockwood Bill amending the Educators' Law so as to provide for ascertaining the number of mentally retarded children in each public school in the State and for establishing special classes in each school where there are ten or more such children has been signed by Governor Whitman.

The law provides for a census within a year of all the school children who are three years or more retarded in mental development, and the organization of special classes of not more than fifteen pupils.

This bill extends to all parts of the State a plan which is already thoroughly established in New York City and in several other cities in the State, and which is already established and in practice in several other states.

Should Be Recognized in School

It is becoming increasingly clear that the place in which feeblemindedness should be recognized is the public school. This is the only agency which deals with practically all the children in the community. Here by taking ordinary steps, feebleminded children may be recognized before they have caused great injury to themselves or others. Not so many of them will be found in the courts, penal institutions and almshouses if reasonable steps are taken to find them in the public schools and to provide for them according to their various needs.

The establishment of this method of identifying feebleminded children in public schools and establishing separate classes for them is the logical introduction to, and in fact an integral step in the provision of adequate custodial institutions by the State.

An additional important consideration is the fact that defective children in classes of normal children are a disturbing and retarding element. The schools can never attain their largest usefulness until they are free from the drag and hindrances of large numbers of backward children who cannot respond to the ordinary methods of instruction.

This bill was urged by a large number of organizations and individuals interested in education and the charitable institutions of the State, and is considered an important step in dealing with the whole subject of dependency and delinquency.
Three hard and effective blows have just been struck at the venereal disease evil in New York State.

1. Governor Whitman has signed a bill requiring all applicants for marriage licenses to certify that they have never had a venereal disease, or if they have had, that they are now free from infection.

2. The Governor has also approved a legislative bill aimed at venereal disease quacks. This law prohibits publication of advertisements concerning treatment of such diseases.

3. The State Health Department has amended the Sanitary Code by declaring syphilis and gonorrhea "to be infectious and communicable diseases highly dangerous to the public health." Treatment and precautions to prevent spread of infection are made compulsory.

To Prevent Marriage of Diseased Persons

The law requiring a clean bill of health from all prospective brides and bridegrooms is embodied in an amendment to the Domestic Relations Law. It provides that all those who apply for licenses to marry must make a statement in the following words: "I have not to my knowledge been infected with any venereal disease, or if I have been so infected within five years I have had a laboratory test within that period which shows that I am now free from infection from any such disease."

This law is more moderate than similar acts enforced in other states, but is an important forward step in both public health and mental hygiene, especially along the line of education and impetus to enlightened public conscience about marriage.

From the standpoint of mental hygiene, the blow at syphilis is extremely important, for syphilis is the chief preventable cause of insanity. About 20 per cent of the men and 8 per cent of the women in the New York State hospitals are insane as a result of syphilis.

Ban on Quack Advertising

The law prohibiting the publication of advertisements of quacks is embodied in a new section to the Penal Law making it a misdemeanor to publish an advertisement concerning venereal diseases, sexual weakness and similar ailments, and calling attention to medicine to be used or persons to be consulted therefor. One of the things this bill is aimed to accomplish is to increase and meet the public demand for the real facts about venereal diseases through checking the spread of misinformation and fraud by which "doctors" and "cure clinics" are misleading people.

Venereal Diseases Declared Communicable

The amendment to the Sanitary Code which has been adopted by the Public Health Council makes it the duty of every physician when first attending a person affected with venereal disease to furnish the patient with a circular of information approved by the State Commissioner of Health giving instructions as to the precautions to be taken in order to prevent the communication of the disease to others. The Public Health Law already gives the health officers power to deal summarily with diseased persons who fail to obtain treatment and observe precautions.

These three steps constitute a vital measure of preparedness by conserving individual and public health, vigor and stamina.

1953 Examined at 138 "Polio" Clinics

Arranging Now for Operations on Paralysis Patients Needing Them

The State Department of Health has now completed its second round of clinics for after-care of poliomyelitis. In all, a total of 138 clinics have been held.

Of the 2,682 living patients outside of New York City reported by the State Department of Health, 1,953 have been examined at these clinics, and 553 patients who had the disease prior to 1916 have also been examined, making a total of 2,506 patients who have received examinations by the orthopaedic surgeons of the State. Braces to the number of 393 have been ordered, and 146 corsets and other appliances. Operations have been recommended for 308 cases.

The After-Care Committee is continuing to arrange at working for operations to be performed in cases where they have been recommended and where the family physician and the parents desire to have them performed. Some of these are being entered at the State Hospital for Crippled Children at Haverstraw and some at the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled in New York City. In the latter institution, by special arrangement with the State Department of Health, Dr. Royal Whitman will perform the operations. As in the cases of temporary relief, part of the expense involved in the new cases will be paid by the After-Care Committee when local resources cannot be developed to cover the entire cost. At the present time there are 10 cases in the hospital which have either been operated upon or are awaiting operation. In addition, arrangements are being made for bringing 25 cases to the hospital within the next few weeks. In 15 cases from Westchester County, operations have already been performed by Dr. Royal Whitman.

The field agents have arranged for individual members of the After-Care Committee and others to send reading matter, post cards, hair ribbons, candy and toys to patients who must be kept quiet, those whose resources are meager and those living in isolated communities; 71 patients are now receiving such attention.

Through the interest and activity of Dr. Armitage Whitman, one of the examining surgeons under Dr. Lovett, funds have been given with which to purchase an automobile for the use of one of the supervising nurses in the northern part of the State. The After-Care Committee is collecting funds to cover the running expenses of the car. Cars have been furnished for the nurses' use in Nassau County by the Nassau County Association of Nursing with the assistance of Westchester County through the courtesy of the County Commissioner of Charities, V. Evcrit Macy.
WAR EMERGENCY NUMBER ON TUBERCULOSIS

CARE FOR TUBERCULOUS SOLDIERS PROVIDED

NEW YORK HEEDS WARNING FROM EUROPE

Counties with Population of 35,000 or More Are Required to Build Hospitals

New York State has not heard in vain the warning from tuberculosis-ridden Europe. The present ravages of tuberculosis among European soldiers and the civil populations, due to the inadequacy of provision for the care of the tuberculous, point unmistakably to an impending crisis in this state and country due to tuberculosis under war conditions.

New York State is pointing the way in meeting this crisis.

Governor Whitman, as chairman of the State Council of Defense, has recently notified the county Boards of Supervisors of a very important statute enacted at the last session of the Legislature.

Need for Law Described

The need for this new law, and its chief provisions, are described in the Governor's letter which follows:

The experience of all European countries since the beginning of the present war has shown that the increased prevalence of tuberculosis constitutes one of the most serious problems of the war. The French authorities estimate that 150,000 men have been returned from the trenches with active tuberculous disease. The conditions in Austria-Hungary and Russia, and to a somewhat less extent in Germany, have been similar.

The United States is now engaged in this war and is about to mobilize an army of 1,500,000 men, which is likely to be increased before the end of the year to 2,000,000 or 2,500,000. There is every reason to believe that the experience of the European countries will be repeated in the case of our own troops.

The conditions imposed by modern warfare are absolutely unlike those which have prevailed in previous wars. The soldiers when at the front live in trenches and dugouts which are damp and cold, and when on leave from duty in the trenches they are billeted in the very much overcrowded houses of the peasants and farmers in the villages and towns near the front, at all times under the most unfavorable hygienic conditions.

In view of this situation and of the certainty of our being required to provide for our own tuberculous soldiers returning to their homes, the Legislature has felt that every locality in the state should undertake to do its part and should provide accommodations for the care of its own tuberculous soldiers as well as its own tuberculosis citizens. It may be noted in this connection that all of the institutions for tuberculosis existing in France before the war have been taken over solely for the care of tuberculous soldiers.

Under the provisions of an act of the Legislature approved by the Governor on May 16 every county in the state with a population in excess of 35,000 inhabitants is required to provide a county hospital for the care of persons suffering from tuberculosis, unless there already exists in such county a hospital or institution provided by the county or other authority for the care of persons suffering from tuberculosis which is approved by the State Commissioner of Health. Such county hospital shall be available for patients on or before the first day of July, 1918.

In order to insure prompt action in this matter and to meet the demands which will probably be imposed within a year for the care of tuberculous soldiers the law provides that if the board of supervisors of any such county shall have failed to secure a site for a county tuberculosis hospital and to have awarded contracts for the erection of suitable buildings thereon by the 1st of January, 1918, it shall be the duty of the State Commissioner of Health to forthwith proceed to locate, construct and place in operation a tuberculosis hospital in and for such county, and all expenditures incurred by the said Commissioner of Health in this connection shall be a charge upon the county, and provision shall be made for the payment thereof by the board of supervisors of such county in the same manner as in the case of other charges against the county.

You are respectfully urged to take up this matter at once and proceed as expeditiously as possible in the selection of a suitable site and the provision of plans for such a hospital, and you are further advised in all such action to confer with the State Department of Health, which will render every possible assistance in facilitating and expediting this important work.

Very truly yours,

CHARLES S. WHITMAN,
Chairman State Council of Defense.
The necessity for this law is obvious. The facilities for the prevention and care of tuberculosis in this state are inadequate in peace as well as in war. In New York State, in the year ending March 31, 1916, the average number of deaths from pulmonary and acute military tuberculosis for the last five years is 4,641.

Only 1,600 Beds Available Now

The number of hospital beds needed is equal to this average annual number of deaths. The actual number of hospital beds available at the present time, however, eight years after the enactment of the county tuberculosis hospital law, is only 1,600. A total of 1,272 additional beds have been authorized, making the total of 3,079 beds available or authorized in New York State outside of Greater New York. If the authorized beds had already been provided there would still be a need for over 1,500 additional beds to meet the minimum requirement for tuberculosis hospital bed provision. These are the statistics of peace.

The entry into the war intensifies and makes more imperative the necessity of vigorously combating an evil already serious. The medical examination preliminary to military service, if thorough, will bring to light hundreds of cases of incipient, moderate, and advanced tuberculosis. Many latent and arrested cases of tuberculosis will undoubtedly fail to be excluded from the army.

The rigor of camp life and the unhygienic conditions of modern trench warfare will result in the breakdown of such cases and their consequent discharge from military service. Six out of the French soldiers have been discharged. Their return to civil life will be fraught with the most serious dangers to those among whom they will live. Moreover, the constantly increasing cost of living makes the struggle for adjustment to unusual conditions and new anxieties, and the possible removal in the excitement of national reorganization of many of the safeguards to health in industry, will tend to increase the prevalence of tuberculosis among the civil population. It is these tendencies which accentuate an already existing need into a positive emergency. It is this emergency which the amendment to the county tuberculosis hospital law seeks to meet.

The new law applies directly to nineteen counties. Of these, seven have already made appropriations for tuberculosis hospitals through referendum action of the voters, but in no case has the project advanced to the point where contracts have been let for construction.

The seven counties are Broome, Nassau, Niagara, Chautauqua, Livingston, Rockland and Herkimer. The other twelve counties—St. Lawrence, Wayne, Otsego, Clinton, Washington, Franklin, Delaware, Columbia, Madison, Genesee, Allegany and Sullivan—have no tuberculosis hospitals, nor have they up to the present time, made any provision for the construction of such institutions.

Hospital Problem Not Solved

It should not be supposed that the new law in any sense solves the tuberculosis hospital problem in this state or justifies a lessening of the activities of anti-tuberculosis agencies. Under the provisions of the statute, the capacity of the county hospital is not required to exceed the average number of deaths from tuberculosis in such county during the past five years. The maximum number of beds provided by the law is therefore the minimum number required for the proper institutional segregation of the tuberculosis.

New Way To Get Into Ray Brook

Application to Enter State Hospital Now to Be Made Through Health Officers

Incipient cases of tuberculosis desiring to go to the State Hospital at Ray Brook will hereafter make application for admission to the health officers in the localities in which the patients reside, instead of through the local commissioners of charity or the overeers of the poor. The health officer shall thereupon issue a written request to the superintendent of the State Hospital for the admission and treatment of the patient. This important and highly desirable change has been effected by chapter 241 of the laws of 1917.

The fundamental objective of the care and treatment of the tuberculosis is the protection of the community from this disease. Poor law officials are not in a position to understand, nor have they the technical knowledge necessary to handle, the highly complicated and difficult problems involved in safeguarding public health. In the matter of protecting the community against tuberculosis a poor law officer can hardly be expected to realize the importance of securing prompt attention for incipient cases.

The new amendment therefore places the power of applying for the care by the State of incipient cases exactly where it belongs—in the hands of the local health officer. This will undoubtedly result in the wider use of the scientific care and treatment offered at the Ray Brook institution.

Labor Unions Give Auto for Nurse's Use

The labor unions of Ithaca have presented a five-passenger touring car to the Ithaca Tuberculosis Association for the use of Miss F. L. Brown, the association's nurse. The fourteen labor unions and the Central Federation of the city participated in the gift, which was in appreciation of the association's work to control the white plague in that city.

Tuberculosis associations are beginning to recognize the automobile as almost a necessity in enabling their nurses to cover the amount of ground required of them in performing their duties. With the use of an auto the nurse can visit to a larger number of patients and more frequently.

Several associations in the State have either purchased cars or are maintaining them for their nurses. These nurses have been given the use of autos by the associations employing them: Miss Suzanne Hurlburton, Dutchess County; Miss Rosamond Le Beaux, Poughkeepsie; Mrs. Josephine Eddy, Niagara Falls; Miss Eva M. Schied, Herkimer County, purchased her own car, and the tuberculosis association is paying the cost of maintenance.
Counties Respond Quickly to Emergency Call for Tuberculosis Hospitals

Eight Committees Already Appointed to Select Sites for Institutions Required by New Law

That the provisions of the new county tuberculosis hospital law will be promptly and whole-heartedly complied with is indicated by the action already taken in response to Governor Whitman's letter to the Boards of Supervisors of the twelve counties affected by the law and which had heretofore taken no steps toward the building of hospitals.

In eight of these counties—Columbia, Wayne, St. Lawrence, Allegany, Franklin, Madison, Otsego and Clinton—the Boards of Supervisors have already met and appointed tuberculosis hospital committees whose duties are to immediately inspect properties and take options on such as are suitable for the location of tuberculosis hospitals; to determine the capacity, type of construction and approximate cost of a hospital adequate to the needs of the county; to determine the method of raising the necessary funds for the establishment of the institution, and to report their findings, conclusions and recommendations at special sessions of the boards of supervisors called for the purpose.

Following are the names of members of tuberculosis hospital committees that have already been appointed by the boards of supervisors:

Columbia County, population 44,111—Wesell Ten Broeck, chairman, Hudson; William A. Mallery, Jr., Hillsdale; Chas. W. Van Hoesen, Hillsdale; Edward Risdorh, Kinderhook; Theron Moore, Elizaville; George A. Hodge, Hudson; Ransom H. Gillett, New Lebanon Center.

Wayne County, population 55,476—Ulysses W. Sherburne, Walworth; Addison P. Smith, Savannah; Charles Fewster, Ontario.

St. Lawrence County, population 90,291—Fred A. Sweet, Waddington; Wm. H. McCadam, Oswegatchie; Nathan F. Clark, Jr., Potsdam; Andrew J. Hamner, Massena; C. G. Cheney, Canton; Henry J. Corbett, Clifton.

Allegany County, population 40,216—Fred C. Mulkin, Friendship; John C. Darcy, Wellsville; Fred Miner, Black Creek.

Franklin County, population 46,181—H. N. Ramadell, chairman, Dickinson Center; S. M. Howard, Malone; W. H. Hill, Chateaugay.

Madison County, population 41,742—A. M. Hoadley, Earville; A. G. Nauman, Oneida; C. F. Hughes, Oneonta.

Otsego County, population 49,534—Charles J. Armstrong, chairman, Milford; W. A. Ferguson, Oneonta; John M. Hopkins, Unadilla.

The names of the Clinton County supervisors committee have not been reported.

The boards of supervisors in Delaware, Genesee, Sullivan and Washington Counties are reported to be planning to meet within the next two weeks and take appropriate action looking to the early establishment of hospitals.

National Association Adopts Important and Timely Resolutions

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis at the annual meeting held in Cincinnati, May 9th to 11th, adopted the following timely and exceedingly important resolutions:

National Prohibition Urged

Whereas, several of the European countries engaged in the great war have found it desirable to place themselves on a prohibition basis, and

Whereas, we wish to neglect nothing that will make for the general good of the service, and

Whereas, our loyalty in such time of stress should lead us to ask nothing of those going to the front which those remaining at home are not willing to demand of themselves; therefore be it

Resolved, that this Association place itself on record as favoring national prohibition both for the soldiers and civilians during the war period and for one year thereafter.

Tuberculosis Nurses in Wartime

Resolved, that the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis urges upon all public health nurses and particularly upon those who have had special training in tuberculosis work that they can best serve our country in its present crisis by continuing, for the present at least, to employ their energies with the complicated health problems of our various communities.

Recommendations to Defense Council

Resolved, that the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis urges upon the Council of National Defense the following measures:

I. The registration and organization for the term of the war of all the tuberculosis workers of our country, including clinicians, roentgenologists, laboratory workers, nurses, social workers and administration officers, and their commission as reserve officers.

II. The division of the country into districts in which these new federal forces may be utilized without unduly interfering with the present vital work of conserving the health of their several localities.

III. The employment of these forces for the following specific purposes:

(a) To make under the command of a ranking medical officer of the army corps, repeated routine examination and observation of recruits while in training and mobilization camps for the purpose of detecting any obscure tuberculosis lesions;

(b) To utilize and enlarge the existing sanatoria and hospitals of our country so that all cases of tuberculosis arising in our forces may be separately cared for as near as possible to their homes;

(c) To work out in co-operation with existing health authorities a definite, comprehensive, and far-reaching program for adequate prevention and control of tuberculosis among the whole population.

Unpreparedness Costly to France!

Inadequate hospital and sanatorium facilities have added materially to the mortality among the tuberculous soldiers and contributed to the spread of tuberculosis in Europe.

France, in her struggle to meet the tuberculosis problem, hopes to have 15,000 sanatorium beds and a further 20,000 beds available by the end of 1917—15,000 beds for her 450,000 tuberculous people!

As a result of this unpreparedness in sanatorium facilities, 100,000 of the 160,000 actively tuberculous French soldiers have been compelled to return to their homes to spread the disease among their families.

NEW COUNTY HOSPITAL WILL HAVE 92 BEDS

Final plans for the new Niagara County tuberculosis hospital have been sent to Albany for the approval of the State Department of Health. They provide for an administration building and two pavilions with a capacity of 92 beds. The estimated cost is $100,000.

The old county hospital, which is to be made an annex of the tuberculosis hospital and be opened for patients pending the building of the tuberculosis hospital, has not yet been moved from the old county almshouse because rainy weather has delayed the construction of the foundations.
More Beds Urgently Needed in Existing Tuberculosis Hospitals

Of the twenty-two counties in New York State outside of New York City which have tuberculosis hospitals in operation only three—Erie, Schenectady and Tompkins—have institutions in which the number of beds available meets the standard agreed upon by the tuberculosis workers of the State at the North Atlantic Tuberculosis Conference held in Albany, in November, 1915.

According to the standard adopted then, the minimum number of hospital beds needed in each county, under normal conditions of peace, should equal the average annual number of deaths from pulmonary and acute milary tuberculosis in the county for the last five years. This is one bed for each death from tuberculosis.

The war makes imperative and compelling a larger number of beds in each county. A marked increase in the prevalence of tuberculosis is threatened. Hundreds of cases of the disease will be discovered in the physical examinations preliminary to military service; hundreds of other cases will develop under the hardships of modern military life; and the pressure and tension of war-time conditions will undoubtedly cause an increase in the disease among the civil population.

In the face of this impending crisis, the fact that nineteen of the twenty-two county hospitals have fewer beds than the average annual number of deaths from tuberculosis in those counties, is a cause for serious concern. The exact situation of the counties regarding their hospital bed provision is shown in the following table:

The superintendent of the State Hospital at Ray Brook is to give courses of instruction to the superintendents of county tuberculosis hospitals, and the maintenance of these superintendents while taking the courses at the state hospital is made a state charge. Their expenses in traveling to and from the State Hospital is made a county charge.

The staff at the Ray Brook institution is competent and widely experienced in the treatment and management of tuberculosis, and in the past has devoted voluntarily much valuable time to the aid and assistance of superintendents of tuberculosis hospitals who had come there at their own expense. It is gratifying that the services of the staff at the State Hospital are available and willing to render will be made available to a larger and increasing number of hospital executives.

Another Tuberculosis Number of the News

A subsequent issue of The News, which will be published within a month, will contain further valuable information on the state-wide program with reference to tuberculosis as a measure of war efficiency, and will tell of vital developments in the movement to prepare the State to meet new conditions regarding the tuberculous which will arise out of the war.
War Emergency Statute Offers Chance for Patriotic Service

Help Is Needed to Make New Law Effective—County Officials Face Big Task Requiring Prompt and Efficient Action

To prepare the counties of New York State for the tide of returned tuberculous soldiers which will inevitably set in soon after our forces have been subjected to the exposure and hardships of trench warfare, many things must be done that will call for the active co-operation of all public-spirited citizens willing to lend a hand.

The war emergency statute converting the permissive tuberculosis hospital law into a mandatory one, so far as counties having sets before the officials and citizens of these and efficient action.

Between now and the end of the year the law provides that the following steps shall be taken:

First, a hospital site must be selected. This in itself is a most difficult step.

Second, the site, if selected in a town, must be approved by the State Commissioner of Health and the Health Officer of the town. The procedure calls for a petition on the part of the Board of Supervisors to the State Commissioner of Health for a hearing; that official shall fix the date and place for the hearing which shall be held not less than 30 nor more than 40 days after the receipt of the petition. The hearing must be advertised at least twice. The State Commissioner of Health and the Town Health Officer sit as judicial officers at the hearing. They have 30 days after the hearing in which to file their decisions. If they approve the property, the decision is final. If they disagree, as has happened a number of times in the past—the local health officer on these occasions reflecting the opposition of the people of the locality to the erection of the hospital on the site chosen—the county may appeal the case to a board consisting of the Lieutenant Governor, Speaker of the Assembly, and State Commissioner of Health, and this board has 30 days in which to come to a decision. If a majority of them disapprove the site or if in the first instance the State Commissioner of Health and local Health Officer both disapprove it, the county must begin all over again.

Third, plans and specifications must be drawn and submitted to the State Commissioner of Health for approval. If the architects will confer with the Commissioner, who is widely experienced in the planning and construction of tuberculosis hospitals, and will take advantage of his desire to be of assistance, the adoption of the plans and specifications need not prove a difficult step. If the architects fail to utilize this opportunity, the plans and specifications may oscillate back and forth between Albany and the county until the views of the Commissioner are substantially complied with.

Fourth, the contracts shall be advertised. Fifth, the bids shall be opened and canvassed.

Sixth, if the lowest bid comes within the sum of money appropriated for the construction of the hospital, the contract shall be let, otherwise the Board of Supervisors will have to appropriate additional funds, or else cause plans and specifications or both to be modified to bring the cost of construction within the amount appropriated. This latter step involves securing the approval of the State Commissioner of Health to the proposed modifications, and the re-advertising for bids.

The task of getting the needed hospitals ready in time to receive the sick soldiers can only be accomplished by prompt, energetic action and by active co-operation on the part of every one concerned. Opportunity is thus afforded for patriotic service. Those who cannot don soldier's khaki or the nurse's uniform may serve their country in this way. If the citizens of every county will do their share, New York State can be spared the tragic fate of France and other belligerent nations of continental Europe.

To Organize Emergency Committees

The Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis of the State Charities Aid Association will organize war emergency tuberculosis committees in the counties affected by the new law. These committees will be composed of local civic citizens interested in anti-tuberculosis work, and they will assist the Boards of Supervisors in a co-operative capacity and help secure prompt and whole-hearted compliance with the provisions of the new law.

Canada's Experience Teaches Lesson

"Canada has been faced with a vast and expensive problem in the care of enlisted men who have developed tuberculosis. On the ground of expense alone, your nation can afford to take no chances of this kind. It has cost Canada between $1200 and $1300 a year for the care of each one of these tuberculous men. This sum is estimated on the basis of about $600 a year for institutional treatment, about $53 a month additional as separation allowance for a married man, or $33 for a single man; and there must be added sums representing the outlay of capital on institutions, and further outlay for medical service.

"Every one of these men who were enlisted and passed as sound by the medical authorities, although a closer examination undoubtedly would have shown that the men was likely to develop active tuberculosis, has cost the Government tremendous and avoidable expense in cost of training, pay, transportation, and maintenance."

—E. H. Scammell, former Canadian Military Hospitals Commission.

NEW PRESIDENT Elected

BY BINGHAMTON COMMITTEE

John J. Irving, former mayor of Binghamton, has been elected president of the Binghamton Anti-Tuberculosis Committee to succeed Rev. Dr. J. J. Lawrence, who was elected honorary president. He had been president of the organization since its foundation five years ago.

A new executive committee also was chosen. The members are Mrs. George Hall, Rev. C. A. Ritchie, and Mr. John J. Irving.

MISS CURRY ON SPECIAL RED CROSS COMMITTEE

Miss H. Ida Curry, superintendent of the County Agents Department of the State Charities Aid Association, has been made a member of the special Consultation Committee of the Civilian Relief Committee of the New York County Chapter of the Red Cross. This committee has been formed to further the work of having families that come under the care of the relief committee receive the benefit and experience of persons trained to consider carefully the problems of family life.

All County Hospitals To Have Visiting Nurses

The new law requiring the establishment of tuberculosis hospitals in every county in the state of 35,000 population, also makes it obligatory upon the Board of Managers of every county hospital to employ a county nurse for the discovery of tuberculosis cases and for the visitation of such cases and of patients discharged from the hospital.

The old law gave authority to the Board of Managers to employ a county nurse. Under the provision of the new law the employment of the nurse is made mandatory.

The value of the work of the county nurse is materially increased by the further provision of the amendment that the Board of Managers of the county hospital shall cause to be examined by the superintendent or one of his medical staff every suspected case of tuberculosis reported to him by the county nurse. All cases reported by physicians, teachers, employers, heads of families, or others, must be examined in the same manner.
Tuberculosis Associations Should Apply Their Funds Primarily to Preventive Work

Families Affected by White Plague Should Be Helped by Relief Agencies, Both Public and Private

That present methods of relief of families in which there is tuberculosis leaves much to be desired, was the assertion made by Mr. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, in the course of a paper read before the Sociological Section at the annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, at Cincinnati, on May 10th.

Mr. Folks stated that if the care and relief of tuberculous families were assumed wholly by tuberculosis associations with their present or prospective incomes, the families would be less sufficiently relieved than they are at present. He also stated that the primary responsibility for the relief of tuberculous families should rest upon relief agencies, and that tuberculosis associations should hasten to liquidate their revenues and apply them, primarily to propaganda, educational and preventive work.

In concluding he expressed a belief that the entire question of tuberculous families and the relation of relief agencies and tuberculosis associations would undoubtedly be modified by the adoption of a system of health insurance.

Mr. Folks indicated some of the outstanding facts and some possible lines of adjustment and cooperation between tuberculosis associations and relief agencies, public and private. Extracts from the paper are here given:

A Most Puzzling Problem

"In most localities there have long been in existence both public and private agencies for relief work including home relief. These relief agencies usually antedate by many years the tuberculosis associations. Both these public and private relief agencies deal with tuberculous families as with other families. In fact, almost without exception, dependent families in which there is tuberculosis, constitute one of their very largest liabilities, and, whether the fact is recognized or not, are one of their most puzzling, unsatisfactory, and depressing problems.

"Family relief, no matter by whom carried on, is always and everywhere a delicate and difficult job. Rarely is it efficiently done by volunteers, unless under the direct supervision of trained, experienced agents. This training and experience, whether it does or not at present, should take fully into account all the facts in regard to the families. It should take a long look ahead and consider not simply present income and need, but the health and efficiency of the family in the years to come.

"In every locality the sums required for the adequate relief for families having tuberculosis are in my judgment vastly greater than the present receipts in such localities from the tuberculosis seal sale, even if such proceeds were devoted wholly to family relief. For instance, the amount now expended in home relief of tuberculosis families in New York City is about $310,000, but the net amount received from the sale of Red Cross seals in that city last winter was $62,000. If the relief of tuberculous families were transferred bodily from the shoulders of relief agencies to those of tuberculosis associations, the families would be vastly worse off than they are now from the point of view of adequate relief.

Unimportant Preventive Factor

"Thus far, home relief has not been an important factor relatively in the prevention of tuberculosis. On the contrary, without the most efficient medical and nursing supervision, home relief may even be a factor in the spread of the disease by keeping together families who otherwise would separate. With one exception, every careful study that has been made of the results of home care in families having tuberculosis has been distinctly discouraging from the point of view of the possibilities of preventing spread of the disease.

"The one exception is the Home Hospital in New York City. This experiment which, from the crucial test of preventing infection and improving the conditions of those already infected, must be pronounced a success, is, however far from being ready for wide application. Several critical points remain to be worked out before we can interpret this experiment, and form some opinion as to how widely it may be applicable.

"With few exceptions the relief of families in which there is tuberculosis is at present far more unsatisfactory than it need be, from the point of view of the prevention and cure of tuberculosis. The incipient case, if discovered, is allowed to continue to work when it should be under treatment; the arrested case is permitted to resume work too soon and too strenuously; the amount of relief given is insufficient to permit the maintenance of conditions in the family which would help to check further infection and to promote the development of resisting power on the part of all members of the household. These are the criticisms made of relief work in one of the central states by the experienced president of the State Tuberculosis Association. While not universally applicable, I doubt whether the relief workers in any locality are wholly free from them.

"The primary responsibility for the relief of families in which there is tuberculosis should rest upon relief agencies and should not be assumed by tuberculosis associations. If the resources of such relief agencies are inadequate, the tuberculosis workers may well co-operate in helping to secure larger resources for them. If the methods of the relief agencies are ineffective and unsatisfactory in dealing with tuberculous families, the tuberculosis workers can and should use every opportunity to secure a change in those methods.

Lines of Work Evaluated

"The resources of any tuberculosis association might well be expended for the following purposes, arranged in the order of their estimated value:

1. The development of effective state-wide tuberculosis associations.
2. The establishment in state and local health departments, of divisions of tuberculosis, or at least definitely organized tuberculosis activities.
3. Direct intensive and extensive educational work so as to be possible, to securing the adoption of definite community activities and the prevention of tuberculosis.
4. Propaganda work, the establishment and operation by public authorities of the varied agencies for the prevention of tuberculosis, such as surveys, nursing, clinics, hospitals, sanatorium, day and night camps, open-air classes or schools, etc.

In all communities having a population of, say 30,000 or more, the promotion of these four objects can most effectively be obtained by the employment by the tuberculosis association of a paid, full-time, trained executive secretary.

5. Employment of nurses for tuberculosis surveys (pending public provision) for visiting and aiding the tuberculous sick.
6. Organization and temporary operation (pending public provision) of clinics.
7. Establishment and temporary operation (pending public provision) of open-air schools or fresh air classes.
8. Establishment and temporary operation (pending public provision) of preventoria or children's divisions of sanatorium or hospitals.
9. Payment for maintenance of patients in hospitals or sanatoria when funds cannot otherwise be had.
10. After-care of patients leaving sanatoria.
11. Relief for families in which there is a case of tuberculosis which cannot be placed outside of the home, if such relief cannot be had from other sources.
12. Relief, if it cannot be had from other sources, which may be needed to enable the head of the household to win or a caretaker of a family to accept hospital care.

The tuberculosis association should consider it a part of its duty to secure the adoption by all relief agencies, public and private, of such methods in their dealings with tuberculous families as the nature of tuberculosis and its manner of infection demand; that is to say, such methods as will insure:

1. Recognition by all relief agencies of what constitute evidences of a possible case of tuberculosis and the securing of prompt and authoritative diagnosis of such cases.

2. The prompt relief of all incipient cases from the necessity of supporting families and the assurance to patients entering sanatoria that their families will be promptly and adequately cared for.

3. Maintenance of conditions in the home, which will at least tend to minimize the chances of infection until it is possible to secure the removal of the tuberculous patient to a sanatorium or hospital.

4. Co-operation between relief agencies, tuberculosis associations and health officials in securing the compulsory removal to hospitals of patients unwilling to go when safe conditions cannot be maintained in the home.

5. After-care for patients returning from sanatoria or hospitals as recovered, arrested or improved and sufficient relief to prevent too early resumption of family support.

"An interesting instance of co-operation between a private relief organization and a tuberculosis association, in which both share the responsibility, is found in the city of Springfield, Illinois. The features of the co-operation between the Springfield Tuberculosis Association and the Springfield Associated Charities, which has been reduced to a written memorandum, are: That the Tuberculosis Association shall give only strictly medical relief, that term being carefully defined to include medical treatment, nursing care, medicines, window tents, porches, etc., but not to include milk, eggs, food, blankets, clothing, etc.; that all other forms of relief are to be given through the Springfield Associated Charities; that the Tuberculosis Association agrees to furnish medical relief on recommendation of the Associated Charities; and that the character and duration of relief given by the Associated Charities shall be determined, so far as practicable, by the medical service of the Tuberculosis Association, particularly as to the amount of work to be done by a tuberculous patient.

Health Insurance Would Help

"The entire question of the relief of tuberculous families and of the relation of relief agencies and tuberculosis associations will undoubtedly be profoundly modified by the adoption, which seems to me to be inevitable in the near future, of a system of health insurance. Health insurance will not, indeed, remove the problem. Health insurance has not abolished out-door relief in Germany. On the contrary, expenditures for out-door relief have increased, notwithstanding the enormous sums made available for family support and for the maintenance of hospitals, sanatoria, etc., by health insurance in Germany.

"By removing certain classes of families, Seventy-five children supervised in boarding homes by the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association were among the several thousand youngsters who enjoyed the hospitality of the management of the Barnum & Bailey Circus at its annual Orphans' Day performance in Madison Square Garden, New York City. The youngsters were escorted to Madison Square Garden by workers of the Association. There was nothing about the children to indicate they were not the most fortunate of kiddies all "fixed up" in their best Sunday clothes by loving mothers.

The managers of the circus, as in many years past, had a programme that especially delighted their little guests. A seven-year-old boy of the party described the "big animal that had a hump on its back" and the "elephant that drummed" so vividly, that he found a home for himself that afternoon with a family who had come to adopt a little boy.

TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE FOR COUNTIES WITHOUT HOSPITALS

Tuberculosis workers in the counties not yet equipped with tuberculosis hospitals will be greatly pleased to hear of the recent enactment of a law providing that the superintendent of the poor, when requested so to do, must apply for the admission of a patient residing in the county and desiring institutional care and treatment into a tuberculosis hospital of a county having such an institution. Heretofore there has been some doubt, as to whether the law on the subject was permissive or mandatory. The new amendment makes it clear that the provision of such care and treatment is mandatory upon the superintendent of the poor of a county which has made no hospital provision for its tuberculous sick.
Care Needed in the Selection of Hospital Sites

Many Important Factors to Be Considered in Choosing Locations

One of the most important steps in putting into effect the new law relating to county tuberculosis hospitals is that of wisely locating the new institutions.

Accessibility Important, Not Altitude

The site should be readily accessible from the populous parts of the county so that relatives of the patients and public spirited citizens may visit frequently and keep in touch with its work. Such visits and kindly interest on the part of the people are real factors in promoting the efficient administration of such institutions.

Proximity to a large center of population is highly desirable for it gives to the hospital the great advantages of municipal water supply, sewerage, light and power, and fire protection. Moreover, nearness to the markets affords the advantage of lower prices for supplies and reduced cost of construction, etc. It is desirable, too, that places of amusement for employees should be close by, as otherwise the monotony and depressing effect of institutional life would make it difficult to retain their services. A location on the outskirts of a city or village therefore is to be preferred.

Abundant Water Supply Essential

The site should have the advantage of pure bracing air, free from the dust and smoke of large buildings, factories, railroads, and a frequently traveled dusty roadway. If smoke or dust nuisances in the neighborhood are not entirely avoidable, the distance of the proposed hospital site from such nuisances and the direction of the prevailing winds must be considered. Strong winds and high humidity are other conditions to be avoided.

The water supply is of the utmost importance. If city water is unavailable, there should be a pure and abundant supply from wells, ponds, lakes, or rivers.

The site should be selected so that natural protection from winds and storms is afforded by nearby hills and trees, which should especially shelter the porches and grounds. Trees upon the premises are desirable, though too many of them are apt to shut out the sunlight, cause unnecessary dampness and obstruct the free circulation of air around the buildings.

Plenty of Ground Desirable

The site should be large enough to give the hospital some degree of privacy from the surrounding neighborhood and to afford the patients necessary space for recreation. It should be of sufficient acreage to accommodate buildings adequate for the initial needs of the institution and for future development without crowding or congestion. Space for outdoor sports, amusement, and walking—so that the patients are not obliged to leave the grounds for exercise—and for the general development in beautifying the grounds, is necessary.

Eminent Physicians Endorse Drive Against Tuberculosis

Outgoing and Incoming Presidents of American Medical Association Heartily Approve War Emergency Campaign

During the recent meeting of the American Medical Association in New York City, the retiring president and the president-elect took occasion to commend warmly the intensive war emergency campaign to enlarge the facilities for fighting tuberculosis.

The retiring president, Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, one of the leading sanitarians in the country and for many years the Government's expert in the suppressing of epidemics, indicated the imminence of the problem of tuberculosis intensified by conditions growing out of the Great War.

The newly installed president of the Association, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, of Rochester, Minnesota, one of the foremost surgeons in America and one of the famous Mayo brothers whose clinic in Minnesota is of worldwide prominence in the field of surgery, was equally as earnest and outspoken in approving the campaign.

By DR. RUPERT BLUE

Among other stern realities with which war brings us face to face, is a threatening increase of tuberculosis. This is a tuberculosis-breeding war. One of the most serious after effects of the war in France will be the appalling increase in tuberculosis. We can only protect ourselves from this same result by taking every precaution, and by making ample provision for the discovery of cases of tuberculosis, and for the immediate and effective care of those found to be infected.

Impressive duty rests upon every public official to do his part in completing the provision for hospitals, sanatoriums, clinics, nurses, and other facilities for the diagnosis and prevention of tuberculosis.

By DR. CHARLES H. MAYO

The time to prevent the development, in this country, of the appalling conditions which now exist in France as to tuberculosis, is now. Careful and competent examination of recruits is imperative. Tuberculosis hospitals must be made available everywhere. Facilities for immediate care and treatment of all who are found to be tuberculous, either upon examination for entrance into the army, or upon return from Training Camps, or from active service, must be provided. If we do this the net result may be a better control of tuberculosis than we now have. Without this, we must look forward to a serious increase in the prevalence of tuberculosis.

The soil of the hospital site should be dry, preferably sandy or gravelly to permit easy drainage. It should likewise be tiltable and productive. A rocky or clay soil should be avoided as it retains the cold, is unsuited to agricultural purposes, and hampers drainage.

The site should permit of proper grouping of the buildings; the placing of the power-house below their level and in a position where the prevailing winds will not carry the smoke toward them; the location of the water supply at a higher level and of the sewage disposal at a lower one, and at a sufficient distance from the hospital. The arrangement of the buildings should be such that the porches command a pleasant outlook with a southerly or southeasterly exposure.

WOULD EXEMPT GIFTS TO CHARITY FROM WAR TAX

The Committee on War Charity and Social Work of which Prof. Samuel McCune Lindsay of Columbia University is chairman, has taken active steps to have income devoted to gifts to charity, education, religion and social work, exempted from the war emergency revenue measure now being considered by the Finance Committee of the U. S. Senate.

Professor Lindsay, in a statement made to the Senate Finance Committee, suggested that income used for this purpose be deducted in whole or in part from gross incomes in ascertaining net incomes subject to either normal tax or any surtax. This means that any funds given for these four purposes would be regarded as contributions made indirectly to a public or governmental purpose.

DEFENSE COUNCIL NAMES TUBERCULOSIS COMMITTEE

A Sub-Committee on Tuberculosis has been appointed by the General Medical Board of the Council of National Defense. Dr. Hermann M. Biggs is chairman of this sub-committee, the other members being Dr. George T. Palmer of Springfield, Ill., Dr. Charles B. Grandy of Newport News, Va., Dr. John W. Trask of the United States Public Health Service, Drs. E. R. Baldwin and Lawson Brown of Saranac Lake, and Mr. Homer Folks of Yonkers, N. Y.
Homer Folks Goes to France on Commission to Organize Campaign Against Tuberculosis

Red Cross and Rockefeller Foundation Join Hands to Help France Fight Disease Among Military and Civil Population

It has become increasingly evident during the past few weeks that the enormous prevalence of tuberculosis among the military and civil population of France constitutes the most serious public health problem confronting any of the Allied Nations today.

The stupendous task of dealing adequately with this problem both as a measure of war efficiency and of race preservation has challenged the best thought of public health workers of all the Allied Nations.

The S. C. A. A. News is now able to announce that a commission of experts has gone forth from the United States to mobilize the forces of modern treatment and scientific prevention in France. A cable has announced the arrival in Europe.

The Rockefeller Foundation and the American Red Cross have joined hands to help France wage an effective fight against the scourge. The Foundation has designated Dr. Livingston Farrand, President of the University of Colorado, as its chief executive in the campaign, and the Red Cross has named Mr. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association.

Associated with them are Dr. James Alexander Miller, Professor of Clinical Medicine in Columbia University; Prof. Selskar M. Gunn of Boston and Dr. William C. White of Pittsburgh.

"U. S. Has Sent Her Best"

"In sending this commission, the people of the United States may be assured that America has sent her best," says Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, whose recent study of the situation in France revealed the imperative need of an organized movement against tuberculosis.

Readers of the S. C. A. A. News will recall that in the May issue, Dr. Biggs, who is the Commissioner of Health of New York State, summarized some of the tragic facts learned in the inquiry which he made in France a few months ago for the Rockefeller Foundation.

Dr. Biggs found that in every country on the Continent involved in the Great War there has been a great increase in the prevalence of tuberculosis and that in France the increase has become a real menace to the future life and economic development of the nation.

He concluded that up to February, 1917, approximately 150,000 soldiers had been discharged from the French army because of tuberculosis, and that there were undoubtedly more than 400,000 cases among the civil population. Later advices, received by Dr. Biggs from France, place the probable number of cases among the military and civil population of France as close to 800,000.

Experts Who Will Help France Grapple with White Plague

The following experts in the prevention of tuberculosis are now somewhere in France planning a nationwide anti-tuberculosis campaign:

Dr. Livingston Farrand, President of the University of Colorado, acting as chief executive in behalf of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Mr. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, in general charge of the American Red Cross participation in the campaign.

Dr. James Alexander Miller, Chief of the Tuberculosis Dispensary, Bellevue Hospital, in immediate charge of the medical work.

Prof. Selskar M. Gunn, Secretary of the American Public Health Association, in charge of educational campaign for the commission.

Dr. William C. White, of Pittsburgh, representing the Edith Wharton Sanatorium Fund.

MR. HOMER FOLKS.

Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, in charge of the tuberculosis work for the American Red Cross in France.

DR. LIVINGSTON FARRAND.

Executive Representative of the Rockefeller Foundation in tuberculosis work in France.
The Rockefeller Foundation was prompt in taking action after it received Dr. Biggs' report, and has taken the initiative in working out a system assuring intimate and close co-operation between the various organizations dealing with the subject. Co-operating with the Foundation, the American Red Cross now plans to make the prevention of tuberculosis in France one of its substantial, if not one of its chief interests.

Health Emissaries Men of Experience

Dr. Farrand, the Foundation's chief executive in France, is well known to the readers of the S. C. A. A. News as Executive Secretary of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis for ten years, and as a member of the executive committee of our own Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis from 1907 until his removal from this State to become President of the University of Colorado in 1914.

Dr. Farrand will be assisted by Dr. James Alexander Miller, chief of the very important tuberculosis dispensary at Bellevue Hospital in New York City; Chairman of the Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis in the New York Charity Organization Society; an examiner for the Ray Brook State Hospital for Tuberculosis; and for the past several years a member of the State Charities Aid Association Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis. Dr. Miller will have immediate charge of the medical work.

Mr. Folks Given Leave of Absence

On behalf of the Red Cross, Mr. Folks, who has been given a leave of absence by the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association, will be in general charge of its participation in the tuberculosis movement under the general direction of Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, chief representative of the American Red Cross in Europe. Mr. Folks for many years has been prominent in modern health legislation and its application. He is a former president of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and a member of the Public Health Council of New York State.

Prof. Gunn is Secretary of the American Public Health Association, a member of the faculty of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and editor of the American Journal of Public Health. He has had long experience in public health administration.

His work in France will be specifically to take charge of the educational campaign which the commission will undertake.

Dr. William White, medical director of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh, has also gone to France as executive representative of the Sanatorium Fund established through the efforts of Edith Wharton. Dr. White has been an active member of the Executive Committee of the National Tuberculosis Association for several years. The work of the Sanatorium Fund will be co-ordinated with that of the other agencies in the field.

Will Co-ordinate Efforts

It is most gratifying that a plan of cooperation has been worked out between the Foundation and the Red Cross which insures the carrying on of the work by them substantially as a unit. The Red Cross will have to do chiefly with the relief work in its broadest phases, including whatever help it can give to the rehabilitation of tuberculosis families, in America and in France.

Task Will Take Decades

The task confronting this commission is complicated and of great magnitude. Its solution is not a matter of months or a few years, but of decades.

The record of results accomplished by these authorities in this country is ground for assurance that they will be able to contribute toward laying wisely and securely the foundation of a movement for the prevention of tuberculosis in France which can only be carried on to ultimate success by the people and Government of France.

SAVE FOOD TO HELP WIN WAR!

Food Commissioner Hoover Calls on Housewives to Stop Waste—This Will Also Be a Blow to Poverty and Disease

Herbert C. Hoover, National Food Commissioner, has sent out a call to the housewives of the United States to help win the war. They can do their bit toward gaining a victory, he says, by systematically preventing waste in American households. Incidentally their efforts will not only help win the war but will strike a blow at poverty and disease.

He writes the following message to housewives:

SAVE THE WHEAT.—One pound of wheat makes a meal a day. Use corn, oatmeal, rye or barley bread and non-wheat breakfast foods. Order bread twenty-four hours in advance, so your baker will not bake beyond his needs. Cut the loaf on the table and serve for breakfast or thick oatmeal bread for cooking, toast, etc. Eat less cake and pastry. Our wheat harvest is far below normal. If each person weekly saves one pound of wheat floor, that means 150,000,000 more bushels of wheat for the Allies to mix in their bread. This will help us and the Allies.

SAVE THE MEAT.—Beef, mutton or pork not more than once daily. Use freely vegetables. At the meat meal serve smaller portions and stew instead of steaks. Make more dishes of all leftovers. Do this, and there will be meat enough for every one at a reasonable price.

We are today killing the dairy cows and female calves as the result of high prices. Therefore, eat less, and eat young meat. If we save an ounce of meat each day per person we will have additional supply equal to 2,000,000 cattle.

SAVE THE MILK.—The children must have milk. Use buttermilk and sour milk for cooking and making cottage cheese. Use ice cream. The United States Government wants more milk for the soldiers in Europe.

SAVE THE FATS.—We are the world's greatest fat wasters. Fat is food. Butter is essential food for the health of children. Use butter on the table as usual, but not in cooking. Other fats are meat, lard, and oil. Use all of these for food. Soap contains fats. Do not waste it. Make your own washing soap at home out of the saved fats.

Use one-third ounce less per day of animal fat and 575,000 tons will be saved yearly.

SAVE THE SUGAR.—Sugar is scarce. We use today three times as much per person as our allies. There may be enough for all at reasonable prices. Use less candy and sweet drinks. Do not stint sugar in putting up fruit and jams. They will save butter.

If every one in America saves one ounce of sugar daily it means 1,100,000 tons for the year.

SAVE THE FUEL.—Coal comes from a distance and our railways are overloaded hauling war material. Help relieve them by burning fewer fires. Use wood when you can get it.

USE THE PERISHABLE FOODS.—Fruits and vegetables we have in abundance. As a family group, taste the fruits and vegetables at their best and share them with your neighbors. Use all garden products.

USE LOCAL SUPPLIES.—Patronize your local producer. Distance means money. Buy perishable food from the farm nearest you and thus save transportation.

General Rules

Buy less; serve smaller portions. Preserve the fruits of the "Clean Plate." Don't eat a fourth meal. Don't limit the plain food to growing children. Watch out for the wastes in the community. The other 50 per cent of our people will avoid waste and eat no more than the need. The high cost of living problem of the less fortunate will be solved.

HERBERT C. HOOVER,
United States Food Commissioner.

NEW COMMISSION BEGINS INVESTIGATION OF STATE'S METHODS OF PURCHASING

Readers of the S. C. A. A. News will recall that the last Legislature created a commission to investigate the methods of purchasing materials and supplies for State departments, boards, commissions, offices and institutions, to report thereto on the Legislature of 1918. The Commission consists of the State Comptroller, the Superintendent of State Charities, the State Commissioner of Education and the Secretary of the Trustees of Public Buildings, the Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, the State Commissioner of Education and the Secretary of the Trustees of Public Buildings, and the Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, the State Commissioner of Education and the Secretary of the Trustees of Public Buildings. In addition the Commission the head of each department is authorized to detail to the Commission the services of experts or other employees in their respective departments to assist the Commission in making such investigations, and they have done so.

The Commission has begun its study promptly, having held one informal meeting and two regular sessions. Its report to date is:

Chairman
Hon. Eugene M. Travis of Brooklyn, State Comptroller.
Secretary
Hon. William A. Orr of New York City, Secretary of Trustees of Public Buildings.
Mr. John H. Finley of Albany, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission.
Mr. Frank R. Utter, Friendship, Allegany County, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities.
Mr. Charles W. Pilgrim of Albany, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission.
Mr. Frank R. Utter, Friendship, Allegany County, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities.
Mr. John H. Finley of Albany, State Commissioner of Education.

Personnel of Commission on State Purchasing

Following is the personnel of the State commission to investigate the methods of purchasing materials and supplies for the various State departments, boards, commissions, offices and institutions:

Secretary: Hon. William A. Orr of New York City, Secretary of Trustees of Public Buildings.
Mr. John H. Finley of Albany, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission.
Mr. Frank R. Utter, Friendship, Allegany County, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities.

The Commission has been appointed to study various phases of the purchasing problem and will report back to the central Commission at a meeting called for September 12.

Mr. Edward E. McFar, representative of the State Hospital Commission, is chairman of the sub-committee on laws governing purchasing and will make an analysis of the laws and examine all forms of contracts and specifications now in use, including provisions for standards and tests.

Mr. Orr is chairman of a sub-committee to study purchasing systems of the Federal Government, other State governments and New York City.

Mr. Henry D. Alexander, Deputy Superintendent of Public Works, is chairman of the sub-committee to study the methods now prevailing in the making of purchases by the various State departments and will make comparisons of the prices paid.

The bill provides that "if the Commission finds that a centralized control of the purchase of such materials and supplies is practicable, the Commission shall recommend the agency by which, and the manner in which such control should be exercised."

It is not considered likely that the Commission will recommend a system of rigid central purchase with the evils universally inherent therein. As is well known, a rigid system of central purchase carried beyond obviously natural limitations leads to paralyzes of effective departmental activities and autonomous. Complete fiscal control is actual control, and it inevitably and always results in shaping and controlling policies as well as finances.

One of the State departments, the State Hospital Commission, has built up a scientific purchasing system which secures for the State hospitals the maximum benefits of limited joint purchase for the several institutions with a minimum of the objectionable features of joint purchasing. It is thought that this plan may be taken as the basis for a uniform system for the other departments, with a full realization that purchasing for scattered institutions, agencies and departments serving varying and divergent purposes is not entirely a matter of bookkeeping, and that absolute unity of purchasing action is neither practicable nor economical when applied to the whole category of institutions and bureaus and the whole range of supplies and commodities needed by various departments.

COUNTY HOSPITALS INCREASE PROSPERITY OF COMMUNITIES

Localities where tuberculosis hospitals have been in operation for a number of years have found them decided factors in improving the health and material well-being of the community. A close study of the experiences of these communities reveals facts which prove that many assertions made in opposition to the location of a hospital are unfounded; it shows a record of influences upon the life of the community that is in direct conflict with what some persons fear would result if a hospital were erected in their neighborhood. Among the outstanding facts which answer questions now being raised in many counties where new hospital projects are pending are:

1. A tuberculosis hospital has a beneficial effect on the health of the residents of the community.
2. The value of property in the vicinity of a hospital does not depreciate. In some instances it has increased.
3. The hospital enlarges the market for the supplies of farmers and tradesmen and brings more money into the locality than it takes out. In the cases of 54 sanatoria it was found that the presence of the institutions had had a decidedly beneficial effect on the health of the neighborhood. In no case was there indication that the hospital was making the neighborhood poorer. The people of the community consciouly or unconsciously imitate the régime of the hospital. There is less public expectoration. More persons sleep with their windows open. Facilities for better ventilation are provided in churches, schools and public places. More open air sleeping porches are made parts of the homes.

The late Dr. Edward L. Trudeau, whose celebrated Adirondack Sanatorium was opened over 50 years ago, once said: "When I bought the land on which the Adirondack Cottage Sanatorium is built (in 1886) I paid $25 an acre for it, because it was small and poor land, but the price was then thought absurdly high. Every time I have purchased more land the price has risen steadily and my last purchase of five acres was $25 an acre. Meanwhile the village of Saranac Lake, whose limits were nearly a mile away from the sanatorium, had steadily crept up toward the institution, until now private residences are built, and every yard and tenement for prices which are far in excess of similar properties in small towns elsewhere."

The case of the Samuel W. Bowne Memorial Hospital, one half mile from Poughkeepsie, which city has a population of 35,000, is typical of the effect on the value of neighboring properties. The hospital accommodates 75 adults and 25 children. The assessed valuation of the buildings and grounds was $28,000 in 1908 but grew to $45,000 in 1912. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in a report on a hospital stated:

"Mr. A. recently refused $3,500 for a four-acre plot near his hospital grounds and for which he paid about $2,000 before the hospital was built. Mr. B. lately declined an offer of $20,000 for 80 acres of adjoining property assessed at $6,000. Mr. C. recently refused $30,000 for 41 acres located one quarter of a mile from the hospital in the direction of the city and assessed at $10,000."

Reports from many other communities contain concrete examples showing increases in property values following the erection of the hospital. The testimony of a score of medical superintendents shows that the tuberculosis hospital is of material benefit to a community in that it supplies a larger market for the supplies of farmers and tradesmen and for the labor of the men and women employed in sanatoriums. The experience of many communities shows that the expenditure of sums ranging from $15,000 to $50,000 a year in a given town or city unquestionably has a beneficial effect upon the business life of that community.
NEWSPAPERS COMMEND NEW TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL LAW

Newspapers in the State are commenting favorably on the new law which aims to prepare the State for the threatened increase in tuberculosis under war conditions by making counties having a population of 50,000 or more to build a tuberculosis hospital if not already equipped with such an institution. Extracts from some of the editorials are here given:

THE ALBANY ARGUS

. . . This is a good law and it will result in a lowering of the death rate from the white plague in this State. At present there are about 20 counties that have no means of caring for tuberculous patients. . . .

But there is no excuse for any county in the State being without a hospital for tuberculosis patients. Statistics show that the disease is found in even greater numbers in proportion to population in some of the rural counties than in cities, and this is undoubtedly largely due to the lack of hospitals where the afflicted can be segregated and given treatment before the disease reaches an advanced stage. The fact that tuberculosis has within the last ten years shown a marked decrease in the cities of this and other States is sufficient proof that it can be robed of its terrors if it is fought persistently and scientifically.

The counties that have neglected to provide hospitals for the tuberculous have not done their duty. They have placed a few dollars above human life and the welfare and protection of the community. Frequently those afflicted with tuberculosis remove from those counties to other parts of the State and become a menace to their neighbors. This is unfair to those that have gone to the expense of building, equipping and maintaining tuberculosis hospitals, and it is gratifying that at last the slackers are to be forced to do their duty. Even with one in every county, there will still be less accommodation than is needed, but the situation will be considerably improved.

THE TROY RECORD

. . . Obviously if the United States Government is to mobilize an army of a million and a quarter men, with the probability of a later draft perhaps as large, our communities undoubtedly will be confronted with the tuberculosis problem in an exaggerated form on the return of the boys from the front. This is not a pleasant fact to contemplate, but it would be a fact still more unpleasant if on the return of large numbers of tuberculosis patients there had been no provision made for their care or comfort.

The Troy Times practically every county in the State could very well use such a hospital. Rensselaer County has recognized and taken the proper steps toward providing itself with quarters suitable for sufferers with the white plague. With the situation accentuated by more of its citizens needing hospital care, the necessity for such quarters would become at once evident. It is better, therefore, that such quarters be provided now, by law if necessary, than to wait for the return of large numbers of men afflicted with pulmonary disease. The bill signed by the Governor is a measure justified by a probable emergency, but it also is a measure that will be of permanent benefit to the counties affected.

THE NEWBURG JOURNAL

. . . The bill was drawn as a result of the recent personal observation of Dr. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, on sanitary conditions in the British and French armies. The purpose that Governor Whitman and Dr. Biggs have in mind is to take measures to safeguard the army to be raised from the state and漫延 to France. The building of hospitals is simply another step in the direction of preparedness in which the State has led since the war.

Orange County has the Memorial Sanitarium, on West street, and if this institution had not been established by private benevolence the county would now have been compelled to erect a hospital.

THE LYONS REPUBLIC

Every county with a population of more than 50,000 is compelled under the law to construct a county tuberculosis hospital. It is a fact that Wayne County must build such an institution, it is infinitely the wise thing to do it with all reasonable speed so that the public will be protected from the ravages of the menacing malady as soon as possible.

THE HUDSON GAZETTE

Governor Whitman has written the officials of twenty counties calling their attention to the new law providing that every county of over 50,000 population must have a tuberculosis hospital by July 1, 1916. Only fourteen counties are not affected by the law. Last year it was Michigan which was carrying on a county campaign against tuberculosis. Public education was united with the service of visiting nurses. The year before it was Missouri and California which voted State aid to county hospitals, and Alabama, which created a tuberculosis commission to direct work in county hospitals.

The principle of the county as a unit for both preventive and remedial measures is being widely accepted, though where the population is sparse a district hospital will suffice. All over the land counties and cities have been voting sanitariums—five New York counties voted them in the fall elections of 1915.
HOSPITAL DEVELOPMENT PLAN NOW UNDER WAY

New Commission Starts Statewide Study of the Needs of Insane and Feebleminded

Promptly convened and organized, the new Commission, created by the last Legislature to study the needs of the insane and feebleminded in order to relieve overcrowding in the existing institutions and to formulate a definite institutional policy, has already begun its investigation.

The Commission consists of the Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, the State Architect, the State Engineer, the Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, the Chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, the Secretary of the State Board of Charities, the Fiscal Supervisor of Charities, one member of the Legislature representing the minority, and two members appointed by the Governor.

At the first meeting held in Albany, Senator Henry M. Sage, who was the author of the measure creating the Commission, was elected as its chairman; Mr. H. Edmund Machold, Chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, was elected as vice-chairman, and Mr. Lewis F. Pilcher, State Architect, as secretary.

Medical Committee Appointed

The Commission authorized the naming of a sub-committee to be known as the Medical Committee and to consist of Dr. James and Dr. Pilgrim, and three other physicians to be selected by them. This step, which insures adequate medical representation in the counsels of the Commission, meets with universal approval in view of the importance of the medical and scientific questions involved in the care of the insane and feebleminded.

It is provided in the bill creating the Commission that when the subject of the feebleminded is under consideration the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities shall take the place of the Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, and the Secretary of the State Board of Charities shall take the place of the State Engineer. The Commission, however, at the first session invited Mr. Frank R. Utter, the Fiscal Supervisor, and Mr. Charles H. Johnson, the Secretary of the State Board of Charities, to sit with them during the entire investigation to afford opportunity for full understanding of the whole situation as affected by the various officials and boards.

The Commission will have two offices, one in the Senate Finance Committee's rooms in the Capitol, and the other in State Architect Pilcher's New York office in the Woolworth Building.

The second meeting of the Commission was held in Utica on July 17, when the proposed State hospital development at Marcy was inspected and considered.

Systematic Upbuilding of Institutions Over Term of Years May Cost $20,000,000

The Need of a Definite Policy

The creation of this State Commission to investigate thoroughly the needs of the insane and feebleminded and to formulate a definite financial policy for a term of years is considered one of the most important steps which has been taken in a generation in behalf of these classes. And it is an exceedingly important matter from the standpoint of the taxpayer, whose interests have not been served by delay in solving the problem.

While the facts in regard to the insane are already pretty well known, the overcrowding in State hospitals has become an extremely serious matter and there is need of determining more definitely certain general procedures and policies in relation to the type of buildings, the size to which various hospitals shall be developed, etc. Above all, there is urgent necessity for the establishment of a definite fiscal policy on the part of the State for facing the situation as a whole and for establishing a constructive method of dealing with it within a definite time.

To Spend Fixed Amount Each Year

The act provides for recommending to the Legislature each year when it convenes:

What Hospital Development Commission Will Study

Among other things, the State Hospital Development Commission will do the following:

Examine each site of hospital development in the State, together with such other sites as the State now owns or which in the future may be developed for hospital purposes.

Make a complete investigation of the capacity of the present State hospital buildings.

Consider the future policy of the State for the care of the insane.

Adopt a general plan of hospital development.

Submit a comprehensive plan for the development of each hospital site.

Develop and adopt a plan to provide for the proper accommodation of the present surplusage of patients and a moderate surplusage of accommodations at its completion at the end of ten years.

Estimate the probable cost of the plan.

Recommend to the Legislature each year an expenditure equal to one-tenth of the entire hospital plant when completed.

Investigate the problem of the proper care of the feebleminded with the purpose of devising a plan for its solution.

Men Who Will Plan for Developing State Institutions

Following is the personnel of the new Hospital Development Commission:

Chairman
Hon. Henry M. Sage of Menands, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Vice-Chairman
Hon. H. Edmund Machold of Ellisburg, Chairman of Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

Secretary
Hon. Lewis F. Pilcher of Brooklyn, State Architect.

Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim of Albany, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission.

Hon. Frank M. Williams of Goshen, State Engineer.

Hon. Thomas H. Cullen of Brooklyn, representing minority members of Legislature.

Mr. Charles H. Johnson of Albany, Secretary of the State Board of Charities.

Mr. Frank R. Utter, Friendship, Allegany County, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities.

Dr. Walter B. James of New York City, President of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Mr. Benjamin W. Arnold of Albany.

New Superintendent of Iola Sanatorium

Dr. John Lloyd, superintendent of the \nVirginia State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at \nCatawba, Va., has accepted the superin-\ntendence of Iola Sanatorium, the Monroe \nCounty tuberculosis hospital, the largest \ncounty sanatorium in the State, if not in \nthe country, Dr. Lloyd will enter upon the \nduties of his new post on September 1.
Dr. Lloyd for a number of years after \n receiving his degree from the University of \nVirginia practised in northern Alabama, \npaying especial attention to tuberculosis. \nHis work attracted widespread attention, and seven years ago he was called to the \nState of Virginia to take charge of the \nState sanatorium, which had been opened \ntwo years before, at Catawba, in the Blue \nRidge Mountains, fifteen miles from Roan-\noke, Va.
From a small beginning, the Virginia \nSanatorium has been developed by Dr. \nLloyd into one of the largest tuberculosis \nhospitals in the United States.

War Emergency Committees Form for Quick Service

War Emergency Committees are being organized in several counties to help make \npreparations for the care and treatment of \nthese soldiers who break down with tuber-\nculosiis in the training and concentration \ncamps or in the trenches overseas.
If special and adequate medical examina-\ntion for tuberculosis is made of the men \nwho are drafted for the new national army, \na great many will be rejected because they \nhave active, arrested or latent tuberculosis. \nIf the examination is not rigorous and thor-\nough, these men will be taken into the army \nand will, judging from European and Cana-\ndian experience, break down with tubercu-\nososis under the hardships and strain of ad-\njustment to the military regime while in the \ntraining and concentration camps.
Following up these men and the tuber-\nculosiis soldiers invalided from the armies \nand seeing that they receive proper care \nwill be one of the greatest services these \nWar Emergency Committees can render. \nThis kind of patriotic work the commit-\ntees will employ county visiting nurses, \nwho will perform their duties under the \ngeneral supervision of the local health offi-\ncers and of the family physicians pending \nthe establishment of the tuberculosis hospi-\ntals which the counties are required to \nhave ready for operation by July 1st next.
The visiting nurses will teach the tuber-\nculosiis soldiers that are returned home \nand others how to follow out the directions \nof the physicians as to hygiene and treatment, \nhow to take precautions to prevent trans-\mittin the disease to other members of \ntheir households, and thus pave the way for sounder and improved standards of \nsanitation and right living in the homes.
The committees will cooperate with the \nboards of supervisors in the multiple duties \nplaced upon them in preparing for and \nestablishing hospitals.
A committee was formed in Allegany \nCounty following a public spirited meeting. \nThe officers, who constitute the executive \ncommittee, are:
President, Dr. William K. Paul, Belmont; \nvice-presidents, Mrs. Frank R. Utter, \nFriendship; Mr. George C. Rose, Wellsville; \nDr. J. C. Young, Cuba; secretary, Mrs. J. \nF. Sortore, Belmont; treasurer, Mr. C. A. \nAckerly, Cuba.
The officers and executive committee of \nthe Washington County Committee are:
Chairman, Frank Beecher, Granville; \nvice-chairman, Dr. W. A. Leonard, Cam-\nbridge; secretary, Rev. Gordon Kiersstead, \nGreenwich; treasurer, R. G. Hays, White-\nhall; Hon. W. A. Huppach, Hudson Falls; \nA. H. Bunell, Fort Edward; E. F. Crum-\nley, Fort Ann; M. L. Sheldon, Salem; Milo \nS. Graham, Argyle; Mrs. Marcus Allen, \nHudson Falls.
The officers of the Otsego County \ncommittee, who also constitute the executive \ncommittee, are:
Chairman, Hon. Abraham L. Kellogg; \nvice-chairman, Harris L. Cooke, John D. \nCary, O. A. Weatherly, Dr. G. E. School-\ncraft; secretary, Mrs. Edith Scott Ludlam; \ntreasurer, Hon. Charles Smith.
Tuberculosis Hospital Executives and Guests

Dr. David R. Lyman, superintendent of the Gaylord Farm Sanatorium, at Wallingford, Conn., discussed "The Follow-up of Discharged Patients." He described the method of keeping in touch with former patients, by annual letters, giving information as to their work and wages and the attitude of their fellow workers toward them as discharged patients. He spoke of the reunions he had arranged from time to time with old patients who were glad to return to the hospital at intervals to show their improved condition. He also declared that in order to get permanent results the work must be carried into the homes, for carelessness there will bring on relapse.

A paper was read by Dr. Otto R. Eichel, Supervisor of Tuberculosis, State Health Department, on "Home Tuberculosis Problems Growing Out of the War." Dr. Eichel said: "One of the great problems which we will have to face in the near future will be the great increase in the number of tuberculosis cases. This will be due to many causes, including inefficiency of the medical examination of men entering the service and also from contact with the vast number of cases at present existing at the front."

An interesting feature of the convention was an inspection of the Samuel W. Bowne Hospital and the children's preventorium which has just been completed. Luncheon was served at the hospital, some of the young women patients acting as waitresses.

New Officers Elected

The new officers of the association are: President, Dr. A. Clifford Mower of Ossining; vice-president, president, board of managers, Onondaga Sanatorium; vice-president, Dr. A. C. Gates, of Kingston, superintendent, Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital; secretary, Dr. H. St. John Williams of Poughkeepsie, superintendent, Samuel W. Bowne Memorial Tuberculosis Hospital; treasurer, Dr. Robert L. Bartlett of Rome, superintendent, Oneida County Hospital.

The institutions represented at the sessions were: Onondaga County Sanatorium, Montgomery County Sanatorium, Oneida County Hospital, Lakeview Sanatorium of Rensselaer County, Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital, Glenridge Sanatorium of Schenectady County, Homestead Sanatorium of Saratoga County, Iola Sanatorium of Monroe County, Suffolk County Sanatorium, Buffalo Municipal Tuberculosis Hospital, Samuel W. Bowne Memorial Tuberculosis Hospital of Poughkeepsie, Yonkers Municipal Hospital for Advanced Cases, Westchester County Hospitals, Tuberculosis Service.

The next meeting of the association will be held at the Oneida County Hospital at Rome.

NIAGARA HOSPITAL CONTRACTS LET

Final plans for the new Niagara County Tuberculosis Hospital have been approved by the State Department of Health, and the contracts for the construction of the buildings let by the board of supervisors. The institution will comprise an administration building and two pavilions with a total capacity of 99 beds. The contracts are for a total expenditure of $108,960.
COUNTIES ACT PROMPTLY TO GET NEW HOSPITALS
STATE PREPARING FOR INCREASE OF TUBERCULOSIS

Vigorous activity to provide facilities for the care of American soldiers who develop tuberculosis in the trenches overseas or in the training camps in this country continues in counties which are moving to establish county hospitals as provided in the new law requiring each county of over 35,000 population to have such a hospital.

In our May issue of the S. C. A. A. News we sounded a call to arms to fight the white plague as a vital war measure. The terrible price which France and other European countries involved in the Great War have paid for their unpreparedness to deal with the disease becomes more evident every day.

The duty of New York State to safeguard both her troops and her civil population against similar experiences is being fully realized. In our last issue we told how several of the counties had promptly started measures to meet such a crisis. Since then other counties have taken decisive steps looking toward preparing the State to meet any emergency as a unit.

No Delay for Rensselaer

The people of Rensselaer County before the law compelling all counties to have tuberculosis hospitals was passed, had voted to expend $150,000 for a hospital. Recently the bids for the construction of the institution were opened, and the lowest exceeded the amount authorized by the referendum vote. The Troy Times comments on the situation in this way:

The people of Rensselaer County voted to build a hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis. The agitation preceding this decision was long continued and ample, and the result of the referendum was therefore expressive of the will of the people. That being so, the hospital should be built.

It is not surprising that with the advance of the cost of materials of all kinds the bids for the construction of this county sanatorium should exceed the amount appropriated. But the excess, however great, and can be eliminated by a pruning of the plans and a deferring of non-essentials until a more convenient season.

The plans adopted for the hospital should be adapted as to produce the cost and to bring it within the amount appropriated by the people. This can be done. But the will of the people fairly expressed should be carried out, and there should not be the delay involved by a new referendum nor the permission to a few thousand dollars to stand as an obstacle in the way of an improvement which has already been postponed because of which is mandatory and inevitable.

Build the hospital! Economize, if necessary, as other enterprises are doing. But the people of Rensselaer County are not in the habit of halting after they have made a decision, and will not now.

No back track! Build the hospital!

Attorney General Merton E. Lewis recently announced that the supreme court has applied to just such situations as the one that has arisen in Rensselaer County. He held that the board of supervisors of a county has the power to increase the amount of an appropriation which the board is authorized to make for a tuberculosis hospital without submitting the question of appropriating the additional sum to a second referendum.

Sites Committee Steps Lively

What is probably a record for speed and intensive investigation by tuberculosis hospital sites committees of Boards of Supervisors has recently been made in Otsego County.

The Committee on Sites consisting of Mr. Urail A. Ferguson of Oneonta, Mr. Charles J. Armstrong of Milford, and Mr. John M. Hopkins of Unadilla was appointed on June 27. On June 30 they inspected the Montgomery County hospital at Glensherville, on July 3 they investigated a site at Unadilla, on July 4 they visited various sites between Oneonta and Cooperstown. And so it went.

The result was that on July 12, or just sixteen days after their appointment, they were ready to report back to the Board, which meets August 8.

As we go to press word is received that the supervisors voted an additional appropriation sufficient to construct the sanatorium according to the bids submitted.

Steuben Solves Difficult Problem

The spirit of the supervisors of Steuben County is encouraging. Two years ago by a referendum vote the sum of $30,000 was appropriated for a hospital. Preliminary steps for the erection of the buildings were taken in due course. When the bids were opened several weeks ago the lowest estimate was found to be far in excess of the $30,000 appropriated. The supervisors did not attempt to apply the pruning knife and make the proposed building fit the sum appropriated. Instead, they decided they would have nothing but an institution adequate to the needs of the county. To insure this they voted an additional appropriation for the building. Contracts for the work were let immediately.

The situation in Herkimer County has taken a turn that bids fair to bear fruitful results in the not distant future. An appropriation of $25,000 for the erection of a hospital was authorized by a vote of the people in November, 1915. Some time after the election a committee of the Board of Supervisors chose a site, but it was disapproved by the local health officer. Nothing further had been done in the matter until recently when the Board of Supervisors authorized the bond issue in the sum of $35,000 to cover the cost of the hospital. A committee is now busy at work looking for a suitable location.

Livingston Makes Wise Selection

On July 9th a hearing in the matter of the application of the county of Livingston for permission to establish a sanatorium in the town of Leicester was held before the local and state health authorities in the court house in the village of Genesee. The site is just outside the village limits of Mount Morris. It is within a mile of the stations of the railroads and is the most accessible point that can be secured in the county. Village water and sewer systems are only a quarter of a mile away. Natural gas mains pass through the property. Electric light is available. Fire protection is assured from Mount Morris. No opposition to the location of the institution has been raised.

The Board of Supervisors of Clinton County has appointed the following committee to have charge of the matter of a tuberculosis hospital and to make an investigation as to available sites: C. E. Sample, F. H. Greaves, Thomas B. Cahen, and Harry LaBounty, with A. E. LaMarche as secretary. The committee on July 11th had a conference with officials of the State Department of Health at Albany. The subject of a suitable site, capacity of a hospital, adequate to the needs of the county, and the type of construction were discussed.

The supervisors of Genesee County have appointed a committee whose duties are similar to those of the committee named in Clinton County. The members are: Edward P. Reynolds of Dansville, William F. Huyck of LaFayette, George W. Buckholts of Batavia, John H. Oderkirk of Batavia, S. Willis Elliott of Batavia, Dr. J. B. Miller of Alexander.

Broome May Seize Its Site

The Board of Supervisors of Broome County on July 13th approved the selection of the site for the new county hospital in the town of Chenango Bridge to take the place of the present county hospital, which is inadequate. The Tuberculosis Hospital Committee of the Board reported that an adequate supply of good water had been found to be available on the site. Thereupon the Board appropriated $2,000 for one parcel of land, and for the remaining three, which comprise the property of 41 acres, $1,400 will be offered. If this offer is refused, condemnation proceedings will be instituted. Under the law the county may take immediate possession of the lands, leaving the question of the award to be determined later by the condemnation commissioners. The committee has been authorized to employ an architect to submit plans and specifications for the hospital as soon as possible.

CHILDREN OF TODAY, MEN AND WOMEN OF TOMORROW
WHAT THE S. C. A. A. IS DOING TO CONSERVE CHILD LIFE

"THE war will be decided in 1935."

This is how Sir Baden Powell emphasizes the fact that the true victory in the Great War will lie not so much in gains on the battlefield as in the quality of the men and women who will have to carry on the world's work after the war.

War kills off the best of a nation's manhood, and every nation is today feeling the necessity of redoubling its energies to save the rest from becoming human waste material.

The conservation of child life, therefore, becomes not only a humanitarian problem but a vital question of national stability and supremacy.

To provide proper housing, care and training for all children—the homeless, neglected, destitute and forlorn, as well as those more happily situated—is one of the greatest needs of this day and hour and of this country's tomorrow.

For nearly a score of years the State Charities Aid Association has devoted increasing energy and larger and larger proportions of its income to the care and safeguarding of dependent and homeless children. For this work the Association now maintains three large departments—the Department of County Agencies for Dependent Children, the Department of Placing Out and Supervision of Children in Families, and the Department for Providing Situations for Mothers with Babies. The work of these three departments last year absorbed practically 50 per cent of the total budget of the Association.

For a number of years it has been the custom of the Association to explain the work of these various departments in a special number of The S. C. A. A. News and to state the needs of the departments. This issue is devoted to that purpose.

The issue is a very human story about the very human task of bringing homeless children and childless homes together, about assisting the various counties to provide wisely, economically but adequately for children, alone, forlorn, neglected in the world, and about a rather unique but, very necessary work, i.e. finding positions for homeless mothers with small children so that they can be self-supporting and keep their children with them.

Only the barest sketch of the activities of the various departments can be given because of the limitations of space. The brief statements in the following pages will give some idea of the scope, the importance and the "worthwhileness" of the work.

All of this work is supported entirely by voluntary contributions, and the amount of work which can be done is limited only by the funds available. Funds are urgently needed to carry on and to extend this work which is of such exceeding importance and has an appeal as broad as humanity itself.
From the railroad station the road leads north through a prosperous fruit farming region, one farm adjoining another, with no uncultivated land or small holdings. After a drive of a quarter of a mile by even set fields of peach trees, we stopped in at one of the farms. The house came out clearly through a mist of driving snow; a young girl, with several columns of the porch lifting to the roof, two green hemlock trees on either side of the walk reaching to a height above the house defined the age of the homestead. Mrs. C. came to the door, a well-built woman whose grasp had the strength and warmth of welcome.

"Come right in, and what a day! I suppose you have lived in the country too, or you wouldn’t have come out. And I wrote you to get a boy, and I’ll tell you about it. You see my husband and I—here’s John now, this is the lady to see about our boy—well, we were married twenty-two years ago and bought this place, which belonged to John’s family way back. Then we farmed it and worked hard until some one began planting fruit trees, peaches and apple and plum, and say, they just seemed to find the right sort of soil. Every one set out trees and left off raising cows and selling milk, and every one long this road is comfortable now, and made all our money off the land. In summer my husband has three or four hired help and I get a girl, a sister usually of one of the men, and we do work during seasons. We have invested in another farm and have a tenant, and now we don’t need to work hard, and rest back in the traces. We can keep anything up to date here and take our vacation in the winter.

"Always Wanted Big Family."

"We are grangers, of course, and get our reading at the Cornell University reading course, and with rural mail and a telephone and good neighbors to visit, we are pretty well content. Except, I don’t say that either, both of us always wanted a big family of children, and the Lord never gave us any. My sister hasn’t but one, and he is to be married soon to a girl whose farm joins his and it has seemed to me lately as if I grew discontented facing the future with no one about to live on a house. Me and John was always great on company and we come home from grange meetings nights when the children speak pieces, and are too full to speak. Now you know if we was shiftless and no hand to save, and rented our place and so on, I’d understand why, but we are more than we’ll need and I don’t see why.

"One night we read in the newspaper about your finding homes for children who hadn’t any show of one, and I says to John then to John, there’s a chance now, and what will we ask for. John, he wants a boy about six or seven or eight, anywhere around there, that can do some honest punk and brains so that he’d want to leave the place in good hands. I want one that I can—can’t say, I don’t want one that I can—can’t say, I don’t want one that I can’t feel people are going to get along some. Now I have no difference from any of my own if I’d been blessed with any. John and I like boys and always have, and now his hair is getting gray and I’m not far behind him there, we need some one to stave old age as long as possible. Once, years ago, a boy walked in here, said he was a new boy from New York, and John, wasn’t he bright?—John thought the world of him. He was fourteen, he said, but I guess might have been older, and he knew all about New York. He stayed with us eight years. Then he got married and took up a farm in the next county.

"Can you send us a boy so it won’t be so lonesome like?"

Sequel: The boy was sent and the farm home is no longer "lonesome like."

Raised Her Boy to Be a Soldier—and Proud of It!

This young soldier’s mother secured employment through the Mothers and Babies Committee when he was a year old. The position enabled her to keep her child with her, and guide the course of his young life. He developed into a fine young man with ability for mechanical arts. Last year he answered the country’s call to arms and is now in one of the big eastern camps preparing for service overseas.

State Hospital Needs More Than One Social Worker

The preventive and after-care work of the Manhattan State Hospital done through its out-patient department is so vital and efficient that the hospital has publicly announced its need of more than one social worker. The twelfth annual report says:

"The term important inadequately expresses the urgency of the department. Judicious after-care of discharged psychopaths may be the means of keeping steady the mental equilibrium which at best rests upon a slender foundation. Proper after-care may enable the unfortunate ones to work at their chosen occupations, and thus be an economic gain to their families and to the community they live in. After-care rightly and sensitively carried out and enforced may prevent recurrent outbreaks of insanity, avoid recurrences and lessen the already intolerable congestion of the wards. Homes for convalescents are a recognized necessity in civilized communities. Why not adopt methods of care for the mentally afflicted as they leave State institutions? We ask for more than one person to do this kind of work. Would that our voice and our pleas reached the benevolent ears of the men and women who are in the making of the laws and women of the State. What a magnificent and fruitful field for philanthropy is this after-care of the formerly insane."

Amelina J. Massopust is the hospital’s social worker; she succeeded Miss Elizabeth H. Horton, who resigned a year ago after long and faithful service.
HOW HOMES ARE FOUND FOR HOMELESS CHILDREN

Placed Out Children Are No Different From Other Children

BRINGING together the child who needs a home and the home which needs the child is the work of the State Charities Aid Association's Department on Placing Out and Supervision of Children in Families.

When one realizes that there is on one side the loneliness of the waif, the child who has no one to love him and care for him, and on the other side the emptiness and bareness in the lives of people who want children and who have none of their own, it is clear that there is only one thing to do, as Christina Rossetti has so well expressed it:

"Motherless baby and babyless mother,
Bring them together to love one another."

This is what the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association has been doing for nineteen years.

Where are the Homeless Children?

Ordinarily one thinks that all the children in orphanages and children's homes are homeless orphans and are available for adoption. But most of the children in orphanages are there only temporarily, while the fathers are out of work or the mothers are too ill to care for them. These children should, of course, be kept for their own people and do go back sooner or later to their own parents, or to the homes of relatives.

It is the children who have no people of their own to go to who need foster parents. In all big cities, especially in New York, babies are sometimes abandoned on park benches and in hallways. They are the foundlings. The police try to find the person who has deserted the baby, but if they get no trace the baby is given a name, baptized, and is placed in a temporary shelter. These babies are often delicate and need to be nursed into good health before any one would think of adopting one of them. Some of the children have lost one parent through death and have been deserted by the other, and their relatives have no way of taking care of them. Other children have been so neglected and cruelly treated by their own people that they are permanently removed from the custody of their natural guardians. It is these children who have no parents or no fit parents or relatives who need the Child Placing Agency's help to find permanent foster homes for them.

Careful Inquiries Necessary

So that each child can be placed in the home in which it can most nearly and quickly reach its highest development, the Child Placing Agency has to study carefully the child who is to be placed and the prospective foster home.

The Agency makes careful inquiry into the family history of the child. It is important to know what sort of people the parents and grandparents and aunts and uncles were, whether or not they were normal in body and mind, and how they lived. The Agency also makes a study of the child's early life, its physical history, school record, and its play life, for the early years of a child's life have a great influence on the child's future, and it is only by knowing under what influences the child has lived during these impressionable years that one can guide the child wisely through later childhood and adolescence.

Care Needed in Selecting Homes

While the children are having their histories studied and are being given medical attention, tested mentally if old enough, taught good manners and made to look as attractive as possible, the Association is also looking up the families who want children, for it was learned long ago that the desire for a child is not in itself a guarantee that a child will have a good home.

The utmost care has to be exercised in selecting foster homes for children. The Association's visitor is sent to talk to the prospective foster parents in their home, to see that the house is well cared for, sanitary, and in a good neighborhood, that the woman of the family understands the feeding and physical care of children, that the family is in good health, that the finances are adequate, and, most important of all, that their character and intelligence are such that the child will be intelligently and affectionately cared for. The endorsers of the family are personally interviewed.

Helps Interpret Child to Family

After the "match" has been made between the child and the foster parents, the work of the Agency is by no means completed. In fact, in some ways it has only just begun, for the responsibility for the children lasts until they are either legally adopted, which is not permitted until a year of trial has elapsed, or the children are old enough to look after themselves. At intervals of several months, and often if necessary, a representative of the Association visits the family and sees the child. In the course of these visits the agent talks with the foster parents about any difficulties that may have arisen, perhaps a matter of discipline or of health. She sees the room where the child sleeps, notes the general appearance of the house, its cleanliness and order, she finds out what the child has to eat, how it is clothed and what work the child does. The visitor sees the older child alone and gets acquainted with him and frequently begins a correspondence with him. She sees the teacher, and if need be, the family doctor, and helps to smooth over any difficulties which may have arisen. She helps to interpret the child to the family and the foster family to the child.

All this is done with a spirit of friendliness and assistance to both the child and the foster family.

No Two Children Alike

These children are absorbed by the community. They do not stand out in any particular way. Some of them are exceptionally intelligent, some of them are very handsome and show particular ability of one sort or another. Many of them are just ordinary children and some of them are backward or are especially difficult to discipline and control. Considering the handicap under which many of them begin, it is especially encouraging to find that placed children are really not very different from other children in the community. It is difficult to make any general statement as to the way children develop, for no two children are alike, no foster parents are alike, and few situations work out in the same way.

Over 2,500 Children Placed

The Association has placed during its nineteen years of work, 2,663 children. The following table shows in statistical form how these children are accounted for:

Are Girls More Popular Than Boys?

Yes, but Homeless Boys Win Homes and Love Against Odds

Little girls are always more in demand than boys, but sometimes families, almost without knowing it, find themselves the proud "parents" of fine little sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Y—had applied for a young baby girl. When the visitor called on them to talk over the matter of placing a child with them, she was told that they wanted a very young baby girl. The visitor was shown a dainty batiste slip which Mrs. Y—had been making for the baby girl whom they were going to take. There was no little girl available.

As they were anxious to have a child about, they told the visitor of the Association that she might send any child to pay them a visit over a week end. John had been in a boarding home, waiting for months for some one to take him. He was a nine-year-old, quiet, lovable little boy. He was gentle and loved flowers and out of doors. Because he was a boy and had slightly crossed eyes no one wanted him, and again and again he was seen by would-be foster parents but not chosen. As he needed a little encouragement he was allowed to go for this visit.

After a week end visit Mrs. Y—wrote: "We have learned to love John in the short time he has spent with us, and feel that he is just what we have wanted all the time. He seemed to remain with us and felt badly that he had to return for the few remaining weeks of school." After school closed John was placed with Mr. and Mrs. Y— and they now write that they love him and want to adopt him.

Smile Won Him a Home

Last October Mr. and Mrs. J—applied for a little girl between three and five years old. There was no little girl available, so the agent described handsome, little brown-eyed and blue-eyed sturdy boys, in the hope that they might take one, but Mr. and Mrs. J— were firm in their decision about the kind of child they wanted. Two weeks before Christmas Mr. and Mrs. J—called at the office again, hoping that some news might be given them of a little girl. Just as they came in they happened to see Philip, a little two-year-old boy who was being refused by another applicant who wanted a tiny baby. Philip stretched out his little hand to Mr. and Mrs. J— and smiled at them so charmingly that Mr. and Mrs. J— asked if they might take him home.

Philip had a little brother Robert, four years old. When Mr. and Mrs. J— knew of this they asked if he might come and spend Christmas with them. The two little boys were so happy together and were such engaging children that they have won for themselves the love and devotion of Mr. and Mrs. J—.

Many Advantages Go with Home Found for This Placed-Out Child

Not infrequently children are placed by the Association in homes where the best educational and other advantages come to them. Here is one such case from the records:

"Mr. and Mrs. W., are childless. Both are college graduates. Mr. W. is a mechanical engineer with an income of about $5,000 a year. Mrs. W. has a small private income. The family owns its own home. The character and standing of both Mr. and Mrs. W., are of the highest. They are broadminded, interested in the welfare of their community, and take an active part in civic and national movements. Mrs. W. has been president of the Women's Club of the community. They both stand for the highest standards politically, socially, intellectually and spiritually."

Sturdier or more attractive children are seldom found in any home than these two little ones who are enjoying all the pleasures of childhood under the care of foster parents with whom they were placed by the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association.
Adopted Children
Are the Sunshine of Many Homes

An intimate glimpse into the home lives of foster parents and the children they have befriended is given in letters that come to the Placing Out Department of the State Charities Aid Association. Here are extracts from letters from former homeless children who, through the Department, have taken their place in a happy home—some of the happy homes which the Committee has established for children who were formerly neglected.

Made Different Woman of Her

One little boy’s foster mother writes: “My boy has made a different woman of me; broadened my vision, sweetened my heart, shown me the answers to problems I never dreamed of understanding, given me new ideals and a deeper comprehension of life.”

An older girl writes: “It is just a year since I started my new life. I want to thank you all for your kind interest in me. After changing my position in life and really finding out what love means to any one, I have come to the conclusion that we cannot live without love.”

Mr. and Mrs. X— took David, a delicate little boy of 7, “just because he needed a mother and father.” This is what the mother writes of him now:

“He is the center of attraction wherever we go, he is so beautiful! Oh, I suppose you will say ‘impossible, that little dump-ing’? But he has grown almost two inches and in suitable clothes it makes all the difference in the world. His hair has become a soft, beautiful light brown, and his tan is so ruddy and healthful from being out of doors all the time, and with his exquisitely lovely eyes, engaging manner and manly sturdy walk—well, I am proud of my son! . . . He has proven a gold mine of joys every moment, I assure you.”

Her Home Is “Just Grand”

This is from one of the older girls of the Association:

“I never expected to get a home like this. I never thought that there was any one in the world as nice as Mrs. X. The home I live in is just grand and I am going to try with all my strength to keep it because I will never get the chance again. I have a nice little room all to myself and a nice little bath room. Everything is just grand. Your most affectionate friend, Elizabeth.”

Doesn’t Someone Want One of These Little Boys?

Phyllis, the first child placed by the Department, was seven months old when she was put in the home of a childless couple. Only recently she wrote:

“It was nineteen years ago yesterday that I came to —— to live. For the past two years I have been very, very busy with my school work and music. This spring one of my school chums and I went out on farm cadet work. We have three garden lots we care for. I have had four years of high school work. I take piano and vocal lessons. I study piano with a private teacher and vocal at the Conservatory. I received my fourth grade certificate at the Conservatory this June. Next year I will have my teacher’s certificate and the following year my diploma.

How I wish I could drop in your office and see you all . . . With much love, I remain, as always, Phyllis.”

One of the problems of the Child Placing Agency is to find homes, for bright little boys between the ages of five and seven years. Most couples seem to want only little “blue-eyed girls,” and the department is never able to supply the demand. Isn’t a chubby boy of five just as capable of bringing happiness to a home? This picture shows four such boys waiting for homes, any one of whom many childless couples would love.

Want War OVER, Or OVER HERE?

“Do you want to see the war over, or over here? “If you want to see it over, back the duly constituted authorities. “If you want to see it over here, find fault and shirk your duty.”

The mother of this child sought work after her husband joined the fighting forces and she was assisted in finding it by the Mothers and Babies’ Department of the State Charities Aid Association.
County Agency for Dependent Children
Is War-Time Need of Every County

Number of Dependent Children Will Increase and Cost of Their Maintenance Is Already Higher—How County Agents Can Help Poor Law Officials to Meet Serious New Problem

Besides bringing new problems, war leaves us all the old problems and complicates and intensifies many of them.

While it is necessary to make provision to deal with these new problems, it is equally important that our machinery for handling the old problems in their intensified forms shall be kept running and adjusted and strengthened to meet the emergency demands upon it.

One of the old problems which has already become more serious, and is bound to become increasingly so, is that of providing for dependent children. The high cost of living is already resulting in the breaking down of more families and the consequent necessity for public support of a larger number of children.

Institution Charges Much Higher

Confronted with the necessity of placing more children in institutions, public officials and private organizations find themselves faced with greatly increased charges for the care of children in the institutions.

In planning to meet the present situation and conditions arising in the future when children are left fatherless or their fathers and brothers are left maimed or in broken health by the war, the various counties of the State face an extremely serious problem.

It is particularly important that while paying for the support of all children actually in need of public care, the county shall pay for support only so long as may be absolutely necessary and that it shall in no instance support children for whom other suitable care can be found.

In times of peace 20 counties in this State have already found that the employment of county agents for dependent children is an effective step in dealing with the problem. Unquestionably the usefulness of such agents to deal with the county's problems arising out of the war will be greatly increased, and when their function is properly understood, should result in many, if not all of the remaining 42 counties making arrangements to employ such agents.

To state it briefly these county agents are generally employed by a joint arrangement between the Board of Supervisors and local committees of the State Charities Aid Association. These agents have furnished the superintendent of the poor in various counties the help needed to insure a careful and wise consideration of the needs of children for whom public support is asked.

Agents Decrease Financial Burdens

Experience has shown that where well qualified agents are employed, giving all their time to the work, the average stay of children in institutions is very materially lessened. Often relatives who can care for them are located, or free homes are found or other special care arranged for. It is also found that when full and careful investigations are made as to the circumstances of the families desiring free care for their children, that agents have recommended the acceptance of public charges of only one child in ten. The saving in dollars and cents to the county is obvious.

It is our firm conviction that every Superintendent of the Poor in the State of New York needs the assistance of such an agent and that the employment of one or more agents is warranted as a war measure and would be one of the best investments which the county could possibly make.

This suggestion is earnestly commended to poor law officials in all counties which do not yet employ agents. Further information about this important matter is obtainable from the Association's County Agencies Department, of which Miss H. Ida Curry is Secretary.

How County Agents Help Dependent Children

THE State Charities Aid Association's Sub-committee on County Agencies for Dependent Children has for its main object the assisting of public officials in providing for the care of all dependent and neglected children throughout the State.

Constantly since its organization in 1908 the committee has extended its work until now it has agents in eighteen counties of the State. The duties of the agent are very diversified and she is required to deal with unfortunate conditions of children in manifold ways. She comes in touch with practically every phase of the problem of the child who needs public or private support.

A "Make-Believe Stork."

One of the agents has described herself as "a make-believe stork" who brightens the lives of childless couples by finding youngsters for them whom they can love and rear as their own. She also occasionally is the Nemesis of a father who has deserted his children, a co-worker of the district attorney in prosecuting willfully negligent parents, a friend of the sick for whom she secures medical attention, a mother to wayward boys and girls who secures their commitment to reformatories if incorrigible, a person who prevents the return of children to unsuitable homes, and generally serves as a counselor and protector to all the children needing aid or protection who are brought to her notice.

What a County Agent Does
Here is the general classification of her duties:

1. To investigate the circumstances of the parents of each child supported at public expense.
2. To assist in returning to their homes children supported at public expense, when the families of such children become financially able, and are moral, fit, to care for them.
3. To assist in collecting from parents or relatives payments, in whole or part, for the board of children who are public charges, when such parents or relatives are able to contribute toward the support of the children, but unable to assume their care.
4. To investigate the circumstances of the parents and relatives of every child for whom application is made for commitment as a public charge.
5. To visit from time to time children who have heretofore been placed in family homes by public officials.
6. To investigate the character and circumstances of families applying for permission to adopt children.
7. To assist in securing suitable homes for families for children available for adoption.

How these duties are performed is best told in a typical month's work. The following is an outline of part of the work done in a county employing two agents.

Rum Bottle Shared With Little Girl
A little girl of 6 was found near X living in a barn with her father who was trying to escape from justice. According to the child's own story, the father took her to "hotels" for rum and shared his bottle with her, except that it was sometimes withheld as a punishment. The father was placed on probation with a court order to pay for the maintenance of the child. The mother was in the tuberculosis camp and it was found necessary to remove the only other child, a boy, from the dissolute home of his grandparents. The children were being interfered with, and the parents were planning to spend the money which should go for this purpose in taking all the family to visit the boys and presenting them with gifts. The agents arranged with the judge to have the parents given a court order to make weekly payments to this agency, which money will be turned over to the County's account with children's institutions.

Seek Foster Homes for Six

Three children from Y were committed to this Agency by a justice of the peace, who at that time committed the mother to Reformatory. For a year and a half the agents worked with this family, trying to advice, guidance and warning to make them provide properly for their eight children. Two months ago five of the children were taken, but the mother continued to neglect her children in her pursuit of a young man of the neighborhood who twice has been sentenced to prison on her account. The father drinks heavily and is below par mentally. Two of the children were placed with relatives and the agents are looking for foster homes for the other six.

Both Parents Neglect Children

From a family in Z—a frail little boy of 6 was sent to the tuberculosis camp. He and his five brothers and sisters were suffering from the neglect of both parents. The agents hope to get two other children from this family admitted to the camp, and the father has been warned that unless he provides properly for his family he will be punished and all his children taken from him.

Feebleminded Boy a Problem

The last commitment was a failure because of the State's negligence in providing adequate room for the feebleminded. The boy, an orphan, has been under the care of the agents, who became interested in him when he was 16 whose father was dead and whose mother deserted years ago. The boy's grandfather brought him to the agency and the boy refused to have any more to do with him. The District Attorney wished to give him a chance, and after much discussion, the agents persuaded one of their boarding mothers to take him in and try by kindly advice and motherly interest to keep him straight. He prove a success and was taken into any of the four good positions secured for him. A mental test showed that he was only 10 years old mentally.

Of those discharged from public care during the month, one was the feebleminded boy just referred to. Two colored boys were placed out where they attend school but earn their own way out of school hours. A girl of 16 from X, who was living at rights of age, is living at Farm, is being kept there at private expense.

Long Record of Other Work

The committee's work and activities give only a small idea of the agents' work. In cooperation with the courts and the district attorneys, they did the following:

Pressed two cases of abandonment; brought before the city judge for alleged cruelty and neglect, a woman with whom they had refused to board children but who was boarders at private expense; warned a business enterprise in the city which is employing children under 14 to sell popcorn on the streets, that this practice is a violation of the education laws; brought to court two fathers for non-support and secured court orders that they should pay the support of their children; through a charitable society in Detroit, rescued a 15-year-old girl who was trying to elude the law for sending a 15-year-old unmarriage mother and her baby to a church home upon money to be collected from the four or five young men involved, and investigated a case of incest which was presented to the grand jury.

Children Placed Out Boarding

Forty-one children in boarding homes were supervised, and when necessary the children were taken to hospitals and physicians, and clothing was secured; two new boarding homes and one free home were investigated; homes with relatives or at employment were found for three children who did not have proper protection in their own homes; a charge of rape alleged to have been committed against a 15-year-old girl have been dismissed; improper housing conditions were brought to the attention of the county board of the village of Y, and the agents refused to care for the illegitimate babies and the responsibility for their care left where it rightly belonged, and they arrested a man who had been sent for at private expense or with relatives with two other families that applied for the committee's aid.

The agents also answered many requests for help from other societies and made special investigations for the New York office of the State Charities Aid Association.

Case of Covidi. Five children held in X, Y, and Z. A total of $274.96 was collected from parents.
Here is a Group of "Association" Babies Who Have Grown Healthy in the Country

On the left—This baby, when her mother first came to the Mothers and Babies’ Department seeking to place her out for adoption, was very frail and weak. A position that agreed with the mother was found in the country. Does the country agree with the baby?

In the center—This is the little son of a Russian girl for whom a position was found in the country. She remained there a long time and her baby developed into the healthy little fellow the picture shows him to be.

On the right—This is the child of a Norwegian widow who is a capable worker. The position found for her not only enabled her to keep her baby with her, but she saved money from her wages.

The Story of the "Make-Believe-Stork"

They had wanted to adopt a little child. They had heard that there was wandering about the county a sort of make-believe-stork who sometimes knew about babies and so they had sent for her. Their appointment with her was for seven that evening.

Now the make-believe-stork had had a very busy day and along about seven she was a bit droopy about her wings. So as she climbed to the house on the hill where the would-be-parents lived she was not in the best of humor, and so she scolded to herself: "Of course it’s no use my coming up here. They’ll be wanting a little blue-eyed girl with sunny curls and about two. They all do. Why hasn’t any one sense enough to like the little seven-year-old Billies with red hair, amber noses and eyes as to front teeth? There will never be enough blue-eyed baby girls to go around—never."

And soon she came to the house and announced herself as the "agent for children" (which was her real title), and she was received not as agents usually are received, but her greeting was that of an honored guest.

The cheery-voiced man and the quiet-faced woman who comprised the household ushered her into the best room and in a business-like tone the man began: "You tell her, mother—and so the woman told about the little baby that had come to them after six long years of waiting, only to slip back almost at once into eternity. "She didn’t seem to need us, " the woman continued. "But she has left us with a big need that only a baby can fill." And the woman’s eyes were very pleading and her voice very eager as she asked: "Do you suppose that somewhere there is a little girl going on two with curly hair and blue eyes—for our baby would have been—to take her place?"

And when the make-believe-stork saw the love spilling out of that mother’s eyes, just for a minute, for the merest fraction of a minute, she wished that she could slip off the years and the responsibilities—for make-believe-storks are so busy with other folks’ living that they have very little time for their own—and then perhaps if she had curly hair and were just about two—who knows perhaps she could be brought—but she pulled herself together; she was here on business and the business of being a make-believe-stork is very serious.

Real storks, you know, can have the best time—just dropping babies in the most unexpected places! Why, they must chuckle to themselves most of the time at the jokes they are continually playing on unsuspecting mortals.

But a make-believe-stork! She has to stand in awe of that ponderous giant called the "law" who decides what can and what cannot be done with children. She has to be on speaking acquaintance with those twin sons of modern science, Heredity and Environment, and their younger brother Eugenics. She has to have a far-seeing eye that can detect a skeleton in a family chest—for skeletons are not considered good playmates for little boys and girls. She has to be very sincere, very firm and very open-minded—and then when she has cogitated and considered and laid the matter before much wiser heads than her own, if then there is a little child, examined and ticketed and charted and unencumbered—perhaps, just perhaps, and if it happens in about one case out of three—perhaps she may have a chance to play stork.

And here in this house all the requirements were fulfilled—but alas, there were no curly-haired, blue-eyed girls "going on two" anywhere, and so she said: "Perhaps, you know, by and by there will be one. I was just wondering if in the meantime you would be willing to take a little seven-year-old to board." It didn’t seem quite fair to let so much love go to waste when there were so many little children needing...

It. And so the make-believe-stork told them about Nora, a frail little wisp of humanity who had been taken a few weeks before and before her other parents. No one knew whether she had a mother or not. She needed good food, doctoring, warm clothes and a home—things that her short life, some way, had not meted out to her.

The woman looked questioningly at her husband—and his "We’ll try" settled it for Nora.

The next day the make-believe-stork climbed the hill again—this time she had by the hand a pale-faced, shy little girl, frightened of folks and very very timid.

For weeks the make-believe-stork kept in touch with them and the doctor until she was satisfied that Nora was rosy and happy, and then because the baby was very, very busy, she entrusted to school report and telephone calls to know that Nora was receiving the care that she needed.

Then one day—months later—she picked up a newspaper and saw that a real stork had visited that house on the hill and left a little girl.

"Well! Guess that I had better go up there and get Nora away. She will be a bother now."

It was a plump, sunny-faced Nora who greeted her and ushered her into the bedroom. And, sure enough, the bed was a large one and some time would be "just about two," and perhaps might have golden curls.

"So the real stork got ahead of me, didn’t he? If Nora is in the way, you know..."

But the woman whose motherhood had known both its home and its Calvary, slipped her arm around the seven-year-old:

"We need her very much now—the baby and I. Will you let us have her for always?

—Amy Payson Tapping.

CONNECTICUT PAVES WAY FOR MODERN HEALTH WORK

Still another State has fallen in line for modern and effective public health administration. The Governor of Connecticut has signed a bill making a radical change in the health system of that State. Through the new law the State Board of Health is abolished and a State Department of Health created, with additional duties and increased powers.

The powers conferred upon the new department are similar to those exercised by the New York State Department of Health. The Connecticut Board of Health herefore is a purely advisory and rule-making body, and each of the 200 health districts adopted their own regulations and methods of controlling epidemics and other health conditions. The appropriation for the coming two years is $110,000 as compared with $48,000 for the past two years.

THE MOTHER-HEART

I never touch the wonder of her hair—
Her golden nimbus, like a sunlit mist—
That curls of other children are not there,
Woe heads, unkind, unkissed.

I never feel her small, confining hand
Slipped softly, like a flower, within my own
But other little ones beside her stand,
Unloved, untaught, unknown.

I never bend above her rosy sleep,
Or kneel in gratitude beside her bed.
But other babes in outer darkness weep,
Unwatched, unconforted.

O little daughters whom no mother tends!
Very things lost lambs that stray in stony ways!
How shall we find you?—and how make them ours?
For our child’s happy days?

—Robert Emmet Ward in Columbus.
The County Agent for Dependent Children

One of Them Paints the Portrait of That “Strange Creature” Who Has Become a Familiar and Indispensable Worker in 18 Counties

What is a “County Agent”?

She’s a whole lot of things to the county and to the dependent, destitute and neglected children in it.

But no one can tell as well just what a “County Agent” is as one of them herself. Miss Mabel Easton, formerly this Association’s Niagara County Agent for Dependent Children, described an “Agent” for the Mount Holyoke Alumnae Quarterly as follows:

Henry James has painted for you in some five hundred unheralded pages the “Portrait of a Lady.” I have just ten minutes to paint the portrait of a County Agent. I wonder if Mr. James would include her in his category of ladies? To use a good Scotch phrase, “I hae me doots.”

In eighteen counties of New York state there wanders at large a strange creature known as the “County Agent for Dependent Children.” She generally slips into her chosen field unheralded and unsung, settles down in an office in the county court house and then wonders dazedly what she is for.

She is financed in part or wholly by the County Board of Supervisors, is directly responsible to the County Superintendent of Poor, is sponsored by the State Charities Aid Association, and is supervised by a local committee of prominent citizens. If no such committee exists it becomes her duty to create one, and in the effort she is apt to feel like a tall running frantically about in search of a dog to wag it.

To the Supervisors she is mainly an economic proposition. They expect her to “get children off the county” as the expression goes, to save board money. The Superintendent of Poor expects her not only to get children off but to keep them from coming on the county. The State Charities Aid Association looks to her for a program of broad humanitarianism. The local committee is supposed to be more or less interested in the local problems, and if well organized, stands behind the Agent in all her case work.

Her first task is to look up the children (perhaps a hundred or so) whom her county is boarding in possibly a dozen different private institutions, with a view to returning them to their normal family environment. They have been committed by the Superintendent of Poor for destitution or by the various courts for bad home conditions or juvenile delinquency. Several solutions are possible.

There is the fascinating adventure known as the still hunt for relatives, as in the case of Johnnie and Tommie, who, after five years in a Catholic institution, were restored to good grand-parents, and later legally adopted by them as a safe-guard against a worthless father. There is the still more thrilling quest for that illusive creature, the deserting husband. He generally makes for some spot far from the “madding crowd.” But he comes back! Sometimes he calls him. Even as I am talking to you, he or one of him has returned recently from a brief sojourn in Ontario and is manfully paying for the support of his three children in an institution. Some children must be transferred to institutions for the feebleminded, others to state institutions for delinquents.

Last but not least is the task of placing children in family homes for adoption. This is the involvement of the “agent” in the applying home, inspecting its outward, probing gently into its inwardness, chatting easily about the weather, with one eye on the closet for the possible emergence of a skeleton; enthusiastically considering the peach crop, while digging furiously about the roots of the family tree. Then, if all’s well, follows the placing of the child, fitting it into the needs and requirements of that particular home. It is not always easy. It is not always successful, especially since all the World-and-his-Wife is clamorous for the little golden-haired blue-eyed girl of two (who is non-compliance of the in the heart matter of insensible to the charm of the small shock-headed urchin of seven (whose name is legion). There is a new slogane these days, “The homeless child for the childless home.” And when it works, which is often and often, comes a joy like none other, the joy of filling an empty home with the sound of a child’s laughter and theitter of a child’s toys.

The subsequent supervision of the placed-out child may include anything, from relentless insistence on the weekly abutting of Bruni Carduccio, and monthly shaming of same, to becoming an advisory committee of one in the heart matter of seventeen-year-old John Garfield, who craves permission to pay court to the lady of his choice.

Side by side with the needs of the children when placed, the difficulties of the parents, are the needs of those who may become so. So, at the behest of the Superintendent of Poor, the County Agent investigates his applications for public relief. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children frequently calls upon the County Agent in its cruelty and neglect cases; and she becomes the complainant in the court action which removes Tony Murato from the custody of his brutal, saloon-keeping father and degenerate step-mother and gives him his chance in life. And because she is a public servant, the great general public feels free to call upon her to settle its problems to her brother’s keeper and to find out why the baby at 65 Filmore Street cried “practically all night” and to have it stopped at once. Sooner or later in her community, as time goes on, the County Agent will have come in contact with every known organization, or agency, or institution, public or private, dealing with public betterment.

In the pursuit of her duties, the County Agent notes the quaint ways of the genius politician, discovers that often the main question as to the applicant for a public office is not his fitness for but his need of the job. By way of illustration: In a certain County, the Overseer of Poor is a paralytic. His predecessor had no legs. For years, metaphorically speaking, these two ran in opposition. When at length the considerate public felt that the no-legged man had had his share of favors, they installed the paralytic in his place and went about their business in a fine glow of self-approbation. There are the still quainter ways of the Magistrate. Before one such came a deserting husband, pursued to his lair and brought back with infinite trouble by a harassed County Agent. He was tried, found guilty of abandonment and non-support, and by way of punishment, was given his estate out of town.

Presently it is borne in upon the County Agent that her problems are not unique, that in her small way she is dealing with problems universal, as far-reaching and as deep as the world itself.

Three great causes of dependency stand aghast the path of every social worker—alcoholism, tuberculosis, and the social evil, and of these three, the greatest is alcohol.

Alcohol is the cause of the most grave dangers. Much of her work is with life very sordid; manhood marred and mis-shape, womanhood banished and soiled, childhood cursed into being, stunted and blasted, and the mind that unless the Agent is very careful, of value suffers, the whole world seems gone astray, society crumbling and degenerate. More than all others, the County Agent must do battle with the liars, the con artists, the gamblers and the profession of the other day.

As a result, the County Agent is better qualified than old times to do battle with the hereafter.

They call her the “County Home Watcher.” They call her the “County Stork.” They look at her curiously as she travels hither and yon, with now an unwieldy, nondescript infant sagging painfully from her arm and now a family of five trudging stoically in her wake, and they wonder what it is all about. And some time she herself may wonder. But through the “shouting and tumult” she has glimpsed a vision. She is working for an ideal community. In the old, old question, “Am I my brother’s keeper?” Daily she must answer that question by her work. But she must do more. She must make it a challenge to her community, an insistent and unescapable challenge, until one day the answer will come back incorporated in a program of broad constructive public welfare. And the answer will be this: “Yes, I am my brother’s keeper if it means me the brother’s keeper today that I may conserve my brother’s child for the morrow.” When that day comes, whether in her time or another, the work of the County Agent will not have been in vain.
Important Work Done for Children After "Polio" Epidemic

During the past year the State Charities Aid Association has been called upon to take up a new phase of children's work of an emergency nature, necessitated by the epidemic of infantile paralysis which swept the State in the summer of 1916.

The community was confronted with the possibility of some 2,500 children who had the disease becoming permanently deformed or crippled. The task, therefore, was to supply competent orthopedic examination, advice and treatment and to supplement this high grade surgical care with social service aid where needed.

To deal with the situation the State Department of Health secured funds to obtain orthopedic specialists of wide reputation and ability and made their services available to the children needing them by means of a series of clinics held in centers of infection throughout the State.

At the request of the State Department of Health the State Charities Aid Association assumed the responsibility of providing social service aid and appointed for that purpose a special Committee on After-Care of Poliomyelitis in New York State outside of New York City. Mr. Oran Root of its Board of Managers was named as Chairman and Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of its County Agencies Department, was made Secretary. The work of the Committee began on November 15, 1916.

The new Committee has had a representative at each of the 146 clinics conducted throughout the State by the State Department of Health, to advise in regard to the investigation and relief of families of patients, to arrange for the purchase of the braces and other appliances ordered, to meet when necessary the cost of transporting patients to and from the clinics, to supplement the clinical work of the clinical staff with needed social service, and to assist in other suitable ways.

The details of how this work to prevent children from becoming cripples was accomplished on a State-wide scale constitutes a very interesting story. A complete report on the work is now being compiled and will be ready for publication in an early issue of THE STATE CHARITIES AID ASSOCIATION'S NEWS.

Civil Service Positions

The Municipal Civil Service Commission of New York City announces examinations for two positions:

(Director of Children's Home Bureau) Appointment will be made at Municipal Building, until September 15. Duties of incumbents are to be responsible for the entire activities of the Children's Home Bureau:

Social Investigator (female). Applications will be received until September 14, at 4 P.M. Candidates must be familiar with the laws affecting the relief of needy children and with methods and agencies for the care and assistance of needy children. Applicants must have some knowledge of the present work and historical growth of such private and public agencies as the Social Investigator sees.

Only experienced workers are eligible for these positions. For further information apply to the Commission.

Helping Helpless Children Back to Health and Happiness

The following is taken from the report of one of the infantile paralysis after-care field agents and shows the type of social service which has been given by a field agent in cooperation with members of the Poliomyelitis Committee of the Association:

"Among the cases visited was that of a boy 19 years old who was hanging around the corner near the hotel. He was badly deformed, having been ill five years ago. One arm was helpless, and his back badly curved. He had great difficulty in walking. Some of the fingers on the unaffected hand had been cut off. This boy has not attended school in the past five years. His father drinks heavily, and, as the boy says, 'I am an orphan now.' He has a housekeeper whom he sometimes calls his stepmother. He was a cheerful, friendly young man with no plans for his future. Our committee members suggested that we try to have him tutored at the normal school. The boy seemed to like the idea, and on the following morning I took him up to the normal school and we saw the president. The boy soon started a course of private tutoring beginning with fifth grade work under the direction of the school. He was enthusiastic over a suggestion that he might learn telegraphy. We took him to see the other committee member in this county, the boy was given a membership in the local Y. M. C. A.

"I again saw the boy two weeks after these arrangements were made, and the change in his outlook and his hopeful ness was remarkable. He told with much pride of the people who had become interested in him and of how Mr. W. had seen his father and had promised that if he did well in school that he could have a position in Mr. W.'s office. This boy was sent to the hospital to have his paraplegia examined and was given a artificial spastic recommended at the clinic, which it is hoped will correct, in part, his present deformity.

Crippled Child Rescued From Neglect

"At my request the supervising nurse of the State Department of Health accompanied me on one round of visits. One case called to our attention by a physician was a little girl 19 months old. The home was a dismal place and we had great difficulty in gaining admission to it. The child's mother, who apparently had been drinking, finally burst out through the door asking what had been done with her son. Her face was huddled together in one filthy room. The paralyzed child, one of the most beautiful little girls I have ever seen, had a plaster cast applied, afterward placing her in a good boarding home with some one of greater leisure who could give the child the needed treatment. She hesitated long, but when the disastrous results of neglect were impressed upon her she finally consented.

"The problem then was to find a boarding home. An ideal boarding mother was found in a woman who had two children, one attending normal school; the other high school. The question of payment for the hospital treatment and the boarding home was taken up with the poor law officials of the town of the child's lives, with the final arrangement that the hospital expenses and board bill were met by the State. The other member committee member in this county, the boy was given a membership in the local Y. M. C. A.

Six Months' Progress in Dutchess County Public Health Work

The Dutchess County Health Association, which was organized at the instance of the State Charities Aid Association, has completed its first half-year's work. In the report which Miss Edith M. Ambrose, Superintendent of Field Work, submitted to the Executive Board, she reviewed the Association's work. Here are some of the more important items, though they do not, of course, tell the whole story:

Established a one year's course of training for household attendants in co-operation with one of the county nurses in New York City and secured the first class of six women.

Assisted four local communities in securing public health nurses.

Organized a Nurses' Advisory Committee, consisting of representatives of the various local committees throughout the county supporting nurses.

Secured the adoption of a uniform system of record-keeping for county nurses.

Provided a number of illustrated lectures on the work of the public health nurse, which was to stimulate the interest of individual communities in this work.

Employed a tuberculosis nurse for this important phase of health work in the county.

Employed and loaned to the State Department of Health a special nurse for infantile paralysis after-care work.

Co-operated in the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals, as a result of which the sale in the county exceeded last year's.

Organized a number of classes in first aid to the injured.

Secured the publication of a number of articles on health matters in the newspapers of the county.

Likes "Whole-Hearted Spirit" of "Polio" After-Care Workers

Following is a letter received by the Association's Committee on After-Care of Poliomyelitis from the four town superintendents, with a gratifying sidelight on the work and spirit of the committee:

"Enclosed herewith please find my check for — for the braces. I was unable to come to town to mail it on Monday and regret it very much. I also wish to express my thanks to the various State officers who have so kindly assisted my child during the past six months. They have been kind and have shown such a whole-hearted spirit in trying to assist those afflicted and the family as well."
PREVENTING SEPARATION OF MOTHERS AND BABIES

The Department of Mothers and Babies of the State Charities Aid Association finds situations for homeless mothers with babies so that they can keep their children with them, and gives them advice, information and temporary assistance.

When the work was first suggested in 1898, the suggestion was met with skepticism. Few believed there were any families that would receive servants with babies. It was not thought that a woman could take care of her baby and in addition do any work that would justify her in accepting a position. The question whether an employer would tolerate the presence of a “crying baby” was raised. Agencies in Boston and Philadelphia, nevertheless had demonstrated that the plan was feasible, and, in fact, comparatively easy and simple.

These agencies greatly impressed a committee of the State Charities Aid Association. Its members recognized the need of some similar agency in New York that would abolish the custom of making a homeless mother “give away” her baby to be cared for by strangers, either in an institution or some other far-away home, the whereabouts of which she would never be permitted to know. So they set about energetically to establish a counterpart of the Boston and Philadelphia agencies in New York. The scope of the committee’s work was to assist any homeless mother with a dependent child.

Mother Love the Telling Factor

Obviously the child in the case comes from an incomplete family group. He has only the mother-love to depend upon and the mother is dangerously close to dependency. She must provide not only nurture for the child, physical, mental, spiritual, but she must also become the breadwinner.

“A young mother, often uneducated and inefficient, sometimes adrift from her own family, give so much to her child!” That she can, if her love be great and she receives proper advice while passing over the hardest part of the road, and assistance in securing a position, is shown by the records of the Mothers and Babies Committee. Not infrequently reports come to the committee telling of children whose mothers had been assisted by the committee who have grown up and are occupying responsible positions. Others tell of women who have held their positions for years and that their services are considered invaluable by their employers. Still other reports tell of women whom the committee has helped that have acquired substantial bank accounts.

Over 12,000 Positions Found

During the first sixteen months of the committee’s work 185 situations were provided. The work has grown in volume until now an average of about 60 positions per month, or 720 per year, are being provided. The grand total of positions provided up to the end of September, 1916, was 12,466.

The work involves the solution of all sorts of difficult problems. Painstaking attention must be given to each individual and many types of social work must be called into cooperation. In the manifold activities of the department can be gained from the record of one day’s work.

Typical Day’s Work

On an August day, this year—which was chosen for use as an illustration—eight new applicants for assistance called at the Committee’s office.

One of these, whom we shall call Magdalena, is Polish. She was deserted by her husband in 1914, and since then she has supported her three children by working as a janitress. She was a hospital patient last spring. She now asks for work as a cook. Investigation disclosed that she has tuberculosis and that two of her children are being treated for the same disease. So strong is her desire to live with and for her children that Magdalena has withheld the truth about her disease.

The second, named Maria, a colored girl, who came from Cuba a few years ago, has made a meagre living by working out by the day. Recently she was discharged from a hospital with a baby to support.

Katherine, a native of Tipperary, came next. She has a blue-eyed baby girl. Her husband was dying. She was so despondent that it was hard to detect in her the courage, or even the desire, to take up her burden.

The fourth left her drunken husband three months ago because he did not support her. Her baby boy was eight months old. She was thin and unshavened. The fifth was a Belgian widow with a thirteen-year-old daughter who was sent in from an employment bureau. The remaining three mothers presented similar social problems for the staff to work on.

For each of the mothers who were met for the first time that day the securing of employment was but one link in a chain of social work. Magdalena’s problem centered about sickness; Maria must be trained morally and industrially for the sake of her baby’s future and for the protection of society; Katherine must be inspired with a new attitude toward life. The others must be dealt with in other ways—and the resources of the Department are now being brought to bear on them.

Two Contrasting Cases

On this typical day, five women with children were placed in positions. Eleven others, some of whom had been placed, others were arranging to go to work, came for consultation.

Of these sixteen mothers, two, Alice and Minnie, have some characteristics in common. Both are of English birth and unmarried, and both show marked devotion to their babies. Here resemblance ends.

Alice is handsome, vigorous, well equipped for the economic struggle. She gives her baby scrupulous care. If she continues to make as good an impression upon future employers as she made upon the Department’s workers, five-weeks-old Gladys will be provided for adequately. Minnie, on the other hand, is irresponsible and untrained. Left an orphan at eleven, she drifted among relatives in England until she was fifteen. Then she came to this country to the care of a sister who was on the stage. In various occupations Minnie has never earned even fair wages. Is she mentally defective? Could an ordinary mentality reach full development under the circumstances? What is the cause of her adolescence? Through the agency of the Department, Minnie and baby Dorothy have aroused the interest of a philanthropic woman who is entertaining them as her guests.

Physician’s Examination

During the day the mothers and children were examined by the Committee’s physician in her office connected with the Young Mothers Who Have Been Advised and Placed in Positions

The young women shown in this picture are representative of those who come to the Mothers and Babies Department of the State Charities Aid Association for assistance. They all were placed in positions where they were able to keep their babies with them.

The picture in the center of the group is that of a deserted wife and her boy for whom she has worked since 1912. They now have a good home in another state where she is employed. The boy is attending school.

Department. Nine of these examinations were of mothers and babies who have lately come under the care of the Committee. That they are in good health must be shown before they can be placed. If not, means must be taken for their improvement. The other four were re-examinations. One woman has been known to the Committee for several years and is now working in a factory, but she continues to come to the office for treatment.

Co-operation With Other Agencies

While the mothers were being advised and provided with employment, the telephone was in constant use. Some of the messages were from employers. Many messages (and calls in person) were from social workers, in regard to co-operation. The Committee is asked by organizations, public and private, to look after mothers and children, and it uses the resources of charitable agencies all over the city.

Woman Grateful for Assistance

Mrs. A., who came in, showed deep appreciation for the service secured for her through co-operation. A few weeks before she had called to ask that her baby be placed at board while she went to a hospital of her choosing, for a mastoid operation. Instead of this, an arrangement was made for her to go to Bellevue Hospital, and the baby, to be cared for in the hospital so that she could nurse him. She was delighted with her experience and especially so because she was not separated from baby John. She was placed in a position near the hospital so she can go there twice weekly for dressings. She was nervous and despondent before the operation. She goes to her new work, smiling and courageous.

A Woman's Victory Over Adversity

Two young girls, Mary and Helen, came for the doctor's certificate of health, which would admit them to a girls' camp for a vacation. The record of the family to which these girls belong, going back to 1908, is a story of maternal love slowly winning its way over unfavorable circumstances. Their mother, Mrs. B., was deserted by her husband. She had four little girls, one a tiny baby. Besides being untrained, she could not speak English. She was put in positions, first with her baby, then with two children, until she was able to establish a home. Another social agency cared for the older children while the mother was working out with the little ones. During all her struggles the Committee has kept in close touch with her. Now victory is in sight. The eldest daughter is taking a business course. The two girls who called are doing well at school. All four girls are growing to be wholesome, attractive young women.

The Committee has a visitor to do the investigating and other social work which is a necessary part of the general business of the office.

Parents Adopt Two Tots to Take Place of Their "Boy" Gone to War

Through the generosity of Mrs. Frederick Rupprecht of the Placing-Out Committee of the Association, the Committee has been able again this year, as it was last, to maintain the farm home, Bella Vista, during the summer for children awaiting placement who are delicate or in need of special care and attention.

More and more brothers and sisters are being placed in the same home or the same locality. Of the 18 children who were placed during a recent month, two brothers, 14 and 10 years old, were placed in a farm home together. The home is a very good one. The son of the family is in the army, and the parents took these two boys to have at home with them in place of their son.

Cares for Her Own and Helps Other Mothers With Their Babies

This woman who was found a position by the Mothers and Babies' Department of the State Charities Aid Association was able to take care of her own child and to help other mothers by nursing their babies.

WATERFORD DOES GOOD WORK

During the late spring of this year a fresh air class was established in the village of Waterford, which has a population of 3,047, and conducted under the joint auspices of the school board and the Waterford Tuberculosis Committee. Its success was pronounced from the very start and the demand for another class became so insistent that the school board granted a request to include $1,000 in the budget for two classes.
MR. FOLKS NOW DIRECTOR OF CIVIL AFFAIRS IN FRANCE

CABLES THAT COUNTRY IS GAINING GROUND IN FIGHT ON DISEASE

Just as we go to press we receive from Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who is now in charge of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France, a cable message giving his impressions after two months’ work.

His message indicates that American relief work is being pushed with exceptional devotion, that France is rapidly fortifying herself against disease, and that additional American workers with special qualifications are needed in the field. His message in full is as follows:

"After two months in charge of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France, I have gained the following definite impressions:

"First. A large number of new and useful social activities have been started by the French in all parts of France since the war began.

"Second. The plans of work of some of these institutions are extremely good, but as a whole they are without co-ordination.

"Third. There is great interest everywhere in tuberculosis and child welfare work, and American agencies operating here in these lines have wonderful opportunities.

"Fourth. There is complete accord and sympathetic co-ordination among all American organizations in France.

"Fifth. If the present rate of progress can be maintained it is possible that France will have in four years, notwithstanding adverse conditions, an equipment of agencies for the prevention of tuberculosis and infant mortality second to no state in America.

"Sixth. There is great need for additional workers who bring special technical experience, such as physicians with special experience in tuberculosis or child welfare, trained nurses with health experience, social workers with general experience. Some knowledge of French is very desirable. All such who are willing to consider coming should apply through the American Red Cross in Washington, and start only when and as sent for from here.

"Seventh. There is no need for additional Americans without special experience and special qualifications.

"Eighth. All American social workers here are delighted with the favorable opportunity for constructive work.

"Ninth. Everything which the State Charities Aid Association workers can do at home to increase the effectiveness and improve the quality of social work has an important and directly useful effect here.

"Tenth. I am thoroughly convinced that American relief work here is being pushed with exceptional devotion under expert direction and promises exceptional results."

(Signed) HOMER FOLKS.

Mr. Folks went abroad in July as a member of the Commission to organize a campaign against tuberculosis. He soon was made Director of the Department of Civil Affairs in France.

The work of that department of the Red Cross now includes, in addition to the organization of the campaign against tuberculosis, the care and education of destitute children, the care of mutilated, sick and disabled soldiers, and relief work in devastated areas.

According to a report on the work of the American Red Cross in Europe recently issued by Henry P. Davis, Chairman of the War Council of the Red Cross, the budget of Mr. Folks’ department up to November 1, 1917, calls for $2,190,383.

Mr. Folks is also a member of the Finance Committee of the French Commission of the Red Cross, which passes upon the expenditures of all departments.

Dr. Garvin to Help Fight Tuberculosis in France

Dr. Albert H. Garvin, Superintendent of the New York State Hospital for Incipient Tuberculosis at Bay Brook, recently sailed for France to join the commission of American experts sent to that country in July by the American Red Cross and the Rockefeller Foundation to organize a campaign against tuberculosis.

Dr. Livingston Farrand, President of the University of Colorado, is chief executive in the campaign for the Foundation, and Mr. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, has general charge of the Red Cross participation in the work.

Dr. Garvin has been granted a seven months’ leave of absence by the Hospital Trustees. He left a full and competent staff of workers at the hospital.
NEW YORK CITY BLAZES NEW TRAIL IN CHILD-CARE

SETS EXAMPLE FOR REST OF STATE IN MODERNIZING METHODS

ORDINARILY the average up-State resident doesn’t care very much about how New York City is governed. He has troubles of his own, and the troubles or triumphs of Father Knickerbocker seem a long way off.

Of course, if Father Knickerbocker’s police department goes on a rampage or there is a scandal in some other department of Gotham’s government, it makes interesting reading up-State on a rainy Sunday.

But when New York City gets an administration where the city goes calmly about its business and the various departments of the city government do their work efficiently and quietly, not much is heard about it up-State.

During the last four years, however, we have had the unusual spectacle of Father Knickerbocker attracting attention up-State without standing on his head or indulging in spectacular antics.

Reforms Widely Noted

The administration of John Parry Mitchell has done some things so well that it has attracted attention, not only throughout the State, but throughout the country. Now that the time is rolling around when the citizens shall say whether the reform administration is to be thrown on the scrap heap or returned to office, attention naturally is directed closely to the details of the job which the administration has done. The importance to the whole State of the reforms which have been brought about makes the high lights of the administration of interest to readers of The S. C. A. A. News in all sections of the State.

In the first place it seems a rather healthy sign that politicians and ex-job holders of the old school are sighing for “the good old days.” The present administration hasn’t made much of a hit with them; it has been too straight and too strict. Things have had to be done right. Doing the job, not holding the job has been the important thing.

Big reforms have been worked out with little noise. The Police Department can look into the mirror without being ashamed of itself. The moral and personnel of the force has been immeasurably improved. Children don’t run in terror from the police on the streets in New York City any more. They remember how the cops played Santa Claus in the station houses the last two or three Christmases.

The Health Department in New York City has been efficient these many years. Its efficiency and usefulness have greatly increased under the present administration. Its purposes are better understood by the general public. Its service reaches more people than ever before, and the city has had value received for every dollar expended.

A new spirit has come to dominate the Department of Corrections. The inmates of the city penal institutions are no longer looked upon as human wreckage, but as human beings, and modern methods are being used to rehabilitate and regenerate them.

“KIDS IS KIDS”

As Ellis Parker Butler, author of “Pigs is Pigs,” puts it: “Kids is kids.”

They are never mere orphans, or foundlings, or dependents, or “cases”; they are children, human, flesh-and-blood boys and girls.

Furthermore they will be the citizens of tomorrow. The kind of men and women they will be depends a great deal on the kind of care, education and treatment they are receiving today.

The thousands of homeless, destitute and forlorn children in this State deserve good homes, a good education and kind treatment as much as the more fortunate children.

What kind of provision is your community or your county making for destitute children? This question concerns you, Mr. Taxpayer, as well as the children.

It will interest you to read in this issue how New York City has improved the method of child care in the last few years.

Changes in Charities Department

And in the Charities Department most definite and significant advances have been made. This department is not infrequently the yellow dog of the administration. It probably has the biggest, the most many-sided and difficult job of any of the departments. It comes in easily for public criticism.

To handle this difficult job Mayor Mitchel appointed John A. Kingsbury as Commissioner of Charities. Mr. Kingsbury was qualified by training and long experience for the job. His incumbrancy has not been any bed of roses, but his work has been one of the most constructive features of the Mitchel administration.

Kingsbury is a fighter. He immediately set to work to improve obsolete methods and end scandalous abuses in his department. He found himself with a fight on his hands that rocked not only his own department and the New York City administration, but extended throughout the State as well.

The strong investigation of State charities is too recent to require extensive reference.

Commissioner Kingsbury, in short, found that New York City was not doing its full duty by the destitute, homeless and forlorn children who are wards of the State, and that it never could do its duty until the State Board of Charities did its duty in regard to public institutions.

The Commissioner’s determination that the children should have their rights, including a decent home, educational opportunities and kind treatment, brought on the investigation of the whole system of State charities, which not only disclosed abuses which had been a festering sore in the body politic for a generation, and corrected many of them, but also pointed the way to the need of a unified, direct and simple plan of administration of the State charitable institutions.

The investigation became bitterly controversial, and many irrelevant things tended to confuse its purposes at times, but in the end the facts came out, the atmosphere was cleared, conditions remedied, and the general public now has a new interest in the conduct of its charitable matters.

In the end New York City has blazed a new trail in child-caring work and set an example for the rest of the State in modernizing its methods.

“Kids Is Kids”

On the last page of his story, “Pigs Is Pigs,” Ellis Parker Butler left Mike Flannery, the Irish express agent, stealing guinea-pigs into bushel baskets with a coal scoop. He was winding up the guinea-pig episode, an I with Mike it was “anything to get rid of them guinea-pigs.”

“Well, anyhow,” he said cheerfully, “what if them guinea-pigs had been elephants!”

“What,” Butler asks, on the other hand, “if them guinea-pigs had been children? What if they had been helpless orphan babies?” If Mike Flannery had been in charge of them in the New York Department of Charities a few years ago, he would have got rid of them in just about the same way. He would have shoved them out to various institutions without caring much what happened to them afterward and said, ‘I’ll hell wid ‘em; I’ve got ‘em off me hands, anyhow!’

City Knows What It Pays For

But children are not handled this way in the New York City Department of Charities any longer. The city now fully recognizes its duty to the 25,000 children who are its wards—and does that duty. As it is, for the first time the city has its own Bureau of Inspection and now receives definite information concerning the character of service prevailing in 329 private charitable institutions to the value of nearly $6,000,000 annually from the city. Other than paying the bills presented to it, the Charities Department knew prac...

A NEW ERA IN THE CARE OF THE SICK AND POOR

COMMISSIONER KINGSBURY HUMANIZES CHARITIES DEPARTMENT

Under the caption, "An Adventure in Optimism—the Department of Public Charities," Commissioner John A. Kingsbury, has written for a New York newspaper a summary of the accomplishments of his department during four years as Commissioner.

Steering skilfully between pointing with pride to his own achievements and minimizing the importance of results which have been of great benefit to the sick and poor of the city, Commissioner Kingsbury shows how optimism carried him over many difficulties and helped him in the end to humanize his department, to provide better care for the city's wards and to save taxpayers' money.

$200,000 SAVED FOR THE CITY IN A YEAR

"During the first six months of our intensive re-examination of the city's dependencies, the investigators recommended the discharge of 1,692 children committed to private institutions for destitution or for improper guardianship. In addition, there were referred to placing-out agencies for placement in free family homes the names of 1,575 children.

"As the result of this work the city was relieved of the support of 1,422 dependent children; 455 neglectful parents were located and compelled, when found able, to contribute to the support of their children, while the names of 261 children found to be improper charges on the city were referred for action to the State Board of Charities. It has been estimated that on a one-year's basis the results of this special re-examination represented a financial saving of more than $200,000 to the city."—Commissioner Kingsbury.

Tuberculosis Patients to Learn Handicraft

To enable tuberculosis patients in the village of Saranac Lake to utilize their time in an enjoyable and productive way arrangements have been made to teach them handicraft. The course of instruction has been arranged by the Saranac Lake Society for the Control of Tuberculosis and it will be inaugurated in co-operation with the physicians of the village. Miss Seem, formerly engaged in the workshop at Trudeau Sanitarium, has been secured by the society as instructor.

The patients will be taught basket weaving, clay modeling, pine-needle work, bead work, rug weaving and knitting. Miss Seem will visit the various cottages to give individual lessons. The patients also will be taught to knit sweaters for soldiers and sailors wherever conditions warrant the task.

WORST INSTITUTION IN THE CITY IS REORGANIZED

Regarding the reorganization of Randall's Island, the city institution which cares for about 2,000 feebleminded, Commissioner Kingsbury has this to say:

"One administration after another, during the past 15 years, had beheld the mires and torpedoes in the channels leading to improved conditions in this worst institution in New York City and had either turned back or become partially wrecked in their efforts to go through them.

"It was probably optimism that actuated Farragut when he said: 'Darn their torpedoes,' and steamed up Mobile Bay.

"Some of the Randall's Island torpedoes in the path of the Charities Department, we knew; others remained hidden until we struck them.

"The buildings of this institution for the feeble-minded were old and tumbled down, many of them erected before the Civil War, infested with rats and vermin, had been forgotten and neglected, not only by the public, but also apparently by the Superintendents for more than twenty years. Brutality, amounting almost to a system, held sway. The children were underfed, neglected and beaten.

"The blind optimism of the Department of Charities, however, has succeeded in bringing about many improvements. The Court of Appeals has upheld the removal of the former superintendent. We now have a medical superintendent, appointed as the result of a competitive civil service examination. As the result of a visit by the Mayor and the Comptroller to Randall's Island, the worst institution of its kind in the country, followed by a visit to the Massachusetts State School for the Feebleminded, maintained at Waverly, the best institution of its kind, $1,600,000 has been appropriated for new buildings. Under the new plans the female employees will be taken out of the disagreeable cow barn that formerly housed them.

"The institution was called a children's hospital, but for some time prior to 1914, long periods frequently elapsed in which there was not a single resident physician on the premises. Now there are eight physicians. The dual system of medical boards which resulted in an utterly discreditable spread of infectious diseases with no one responsible, has been done away with. The number of low-paid employees has been reduced and the salaries of those remaining have been increased, attracting higher types of help. Women attendants have replaced low-paid men in charge of small boys. Small children are now being trained to use their hands, so that they will be useful inmates of the institutions where they will remain for the remainder of their lives."

LIGHTENING THE GLOOM OF THE CITY MORGUE

"It may seem difficult to be optimistic in dealing with an institution of such gloomy portent as the city morgue, but we have nevertheless tried to humanize it and to lift away to which 70,000 people go annually in search for the remains of relatives or friends. For the first time in the city's history, flowers and ferns can now be found in the morgue. We found that there was not a single woman attendant in the place, although thousands of women are forced to visit the institution weekly under the most deplorable circumstances. Many of them fainted and became ill. To bring comfort and help to these people the morgue now has three kindly and humane women attendants.

"The place was in charge of low-grade, low-paid men with no interest in their work and no conception of its importance. Every one of the old employees has gone, and the staff has been entirely reorganized under a superintendent appointed as the result of a competitive civil service examination.

"The practice of selling bodies for $5 each has been eliminated, and the whole institution has a new conception of its responsibilities to the city."—Commissioner Kingsbury.

HEARTY CO-OPERATION IN COUNTY HEALTH WORK

An interesting report has been submitted to Dr. Henry N. MacCracken, president of the Dutchess County Health Association, by Miss Edith M. Ambrose, the superintendent of field work of that association, and Mr. Joseph J. Weber, the executive secretary of the State Charities Aid Association's Committee on Hospitals, acting as a committee to look into the question of ways in which the Dutchess County Health Association might co-operate with other health agencies, both State and national. Information has been received from the following agencies, all of which have expressed a strong desire to co-operate with the health association and indicated specific ways in which this might be done:

- American Society for the Control of Cancer.
- American Social Hygiene Association.
- New York Social Hygiene Society.
- New York Committee on Fecundity.
- Tuberculosis Committees of the State Charities Aid Association.
- National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.
- Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association.
- American Association for Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality.
- U. S. Public Health Service.
- National Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded.
NEW YORK CITY BLAZES NEW TRAIL IN CHILD CARE

New York City Blazes New Trail in Child Care

New Day Dawns for Randall's Island

A new day has dawned for the 2,000 defective children on Randall's Island. The complete reorganization and reconstruction of the institution is being effected. The first event in the long series of improvements was the discharge of the former superintendent whose administration had for many years been known chiefly for its shortcomings. Second came the discharge of both medical boards and the appointment of a high-class visiting board. After these two improvements an increasing public interest in Randall's Island aided Commissioner Kingsbury to secure $1,600,000 for new construction, making it possible to almost entirely re-house the present population.

The new Randall's Island has taken on excellent educational methods, modern methods of diagnosis and record making and immense improvement in the quality and quantity of industrial work among the inmates. Where fifty used to be employed daily, practically 1,000 are now employed. The treatment and training now provided by the city for its feeble-minded children may well be copied by up-State institutions.

Other Significant Reforms

Limitation of space prevents, of course, a complete summary of the achievements of Commissioner Kingsbury's administration. It has indeed been manysided. Through him we have come better business methods and more effective safeguarding of the city's interests, as well as a clearer understanding both of the children and the more intelligent provision for dependent children; a more effective organization of medical work; greatly increased facilities for the treatment of tuberculosis, and improved methods in the care and education of the feebleminded.

In spite of its manysidedness, however, if we were asked to characterize Mr. Kingsbury's administration in a single phrase, we would mention first its intensity and practicability of all its great outstanding reforms center about the patient.

The State Charities Aid Association is a non-partisan body. It is not interested in the success or failure of political parties as such. It believes, however, that the reforms wrought in the charitable work by the Fusion administration in New York are so important and significant, not only to the city but to the whole State, that it would be a public calamity if the result of the election should lead to the abandonment of its methods or prevent the completion of its work.

Public Welfare Committee

William M. Chadbourne, Chairman of the new Public Welfare Committee recently created to inform the public more fully of the work which has been done in the welfare departments of the city, says: "We believe that in the last three elections the people of this city have been getting infinitely more and much better public welfare service for less cost than the people of any other community in this country are getting. This is a work that affects the life of every man, woman and child in the city, and each has the right to insist that the work be prosecuted to the best advantage."

"In order to guarantee the continuance of this important welfare work, our committee deems it necessary to focus public attention in an emphatic way on the work that has been already done."

"We will show to the taxpayers from the standpoint of economy alone, that these humanitarian activities are good business for the city of New York."

And what is good business for New York City is good business for New York State, of which it forms such an important part.

Facing the Future

Looking at the whole question of the State's duty toward its dependent wards, it seems important that New York City should not disturb the machinery so recently set in motion to improve conditions which have long cried aloud for improvement.

The city is contributing immeasurably to the cause of efficient, modern charitable administration. Its work is important not only for the city but for purposes of demonstration everywhere.

Its continuance will aid in the important task of getting enacted into law Commissioner Strong's and Governor Whitman's recommendations for a unified, direct and simple plan of administration of State charitable institutions. It will help eventually to "put vision, power and drive into the State Board of Charities.

It is not too much to hope that the next session of the Legislature will see these recommendations enacted into law, will see the overlapping, inefficiency and lost motion of useles boards and bureaus eliminated, and the administration of the State's charitable work rank with the other great departments in efficiency, modern methods, and public usefulness.

CHEMUNG COUNTY HOSPITAL

WILL OPEN THIS AUTUMN

The Chemung County Tuberculosis Hospital is nearing completion and probably will be ready to receive patients late this autumn. The Board of Managers has been named, as follows: Charles E. Rapelyea, to serve five years; Dr. J. Stotesberry, four years; Dr. Elliott T. Bush, three years; Dr. Arthur W. Booth, two years, and Burton S. Chamberlin, one year.

The hospital site was given to the city of Elmira by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rapelyea in memory of their son, Edward Rapelyea. When the city and county made arrangements for the hospital Mr. and Mrs. Rapelyea gave $50,000 toward the erection of the institution.
Hospital Development Commission
Digging Hard for Facts About Needs of the Insane and Feebleminded
Works All Summer Inspecting Present Institutions and Studying the Problem of Providing More Accommodations Promptly

The State Hospital Development Commission, which was created by the last Legislature to make a thorough study of the needs of the insane and feebleminded, and to plan for a systematic increase of accommodations for them, has been showing what good stuff it is made of by working vigorously at its big job all summer—vacation time and the Great War notwithstanding.

When everywhere around us we see so many activities vital to the public welfare either slowed up or discontinued entirely on account of the war, it is distinctly heartening to see this commission going ahead energetically and uninterrupted in its efforts toward finding a solution for the tremendous problem of the insane and feebleminded.

And it is wise that such activity should obtain, because the war will aggravate the problem, already one of the most serious in the State. Prompt steps toward dealing with it adequately and effectively will not only constitute a measure of economy, in the long run, but also a vital war measure calculated to improve the man power of the State.

Commission Engages Mr. Prescott

The commission has recently strengthened its organization by engaging Mr. Herbert F. Prescott, of Albany, who will devote his special attention to the investigation of the needs of the feebleminded. Mr. Prescott was formerly Deputy Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities and is a widely known newspaper man. His knowledge of public institutions and their construction and administration will make him an exceedingly useful associate of the Commissioners.

Although the work of the Commission so far has been confined pretty largely to discussions of vital questions of construction and administration, and to the gathering of first-hand information on which to base a program, it now seems fairly certain that the Commission will recommend to the 1918 Legislature substantial appropriations for new construction at institutions for the insane, the feebleminded and the epileptic.

A good start on the job of taking care of the accumulated overcrowding was made by the last session of the Legislature when bills providing for appropriations and authorizations of $2,934,470 for the insane, and $1,144,100 for the feebleminded and epileptic were passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Whitman. If similar appropriations could be made regularly over a period of years, the State would soon solve the problem of overcrowding of the State Hospitals and be in a fair way to do its complete duty by the insane and by the unprotected feebleminded in the community.

Conditions Bad in Metropolitan District

The investigation has revealed a most serious lack of accommodations both for the insane and feebleminded in and around New York City. The overcrowding of the insane hospitals in the metropolitan district constitutes about half of that in the entire State hospital system. A new institution near New York is sorely needed.

The need of additional accommodations for the feebleminded of New York and vicinity is also strikingly evident. At the present time New York City is expected to send its feebleminded women to the Newark State Custodial Asylum, which is 342 miles from New York City—farther away from New York than Portland, Maine, and almost as far as Richmond, Va.

It is expected that the Commission will be disposed to recommend the provision of additional accommodations near New York City as one of the first steps in its program of amelioration. The State is now committed to the complete n of Letchworth Village at Thiells, Rockland County, to accommodate approximately 3,000 inmates, but it may be necessary to establish still another institution for feebleminded in the metropolitan district.

The Craig Colony for Epileptics, at Sonyea, Livingston County, is overcrowded and contains many New York City patients. It may be found advisable to establish another institution for epileptics in the vicinity of New York City to receive New York City patients. This would make it possible eventually to receive Sonyea for up-State patients.

Western New York Wants Institution

Representations have been made to the Commission of a need of an additional institution for the feebleminded located in the western part of New York State, and the Commission will consider this matter.

In connection with the study of the feebleminded, the Commission has in its possession data showing that the number of feebleminded in the State is conservatively estimated at 86,000, of whom only 6,000 are in institutions established for them, 4,500 are in other institutions not intended for them, and 24,600 are unprotected in the community, causing great harm to themselves and others, and heavy expense to taxpayers.

Provision for Defective Delinquents

One phase of the problem of the feebleminded which will come in for serious consideration by the Commission is that relating to defective delinquents. It is believed that special provision will have to be made for the care of disorderly and delinquent cases apart from other inmates, and the Commission is devoting much time and thought to the study of how this may best be done.

The Commission will visit all of the State institutions for the insane and feebleminded in order to study the ground and get first-hand information on which to base plans for additional buildings.

Of the State hospitals, they have visited so far the institutions at Rochester, Geneva, Willard, Ogdensburg, Buffalo, Ward's Island, Brooklyn, Central Islip, Kings Park, Middletown, Utica and Danemora.

Aside from the institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic, those at Sonyea, Newark and Syracuse have been visited thus far.

The Commission is also planning to visit some other States to inspect the construction and administration of institutions and get ideas for New York State. Some members of the Commission will go next week to inspect the Massachusetts State School for Feebleminded at Waverly, which has the reputation of being one of the best, if not the best, of its kind in the United States.

Personnel of Commission

The Commission consists of: Hon. Henry M. Sage, of Menands, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee; Hon. H. Edmund Machold, of Ellisburg, Chairman of Assembly Ways and Means Committee, Vice-Chairman; Hon. Lewis F. Pilcher, of Brooklyn, State Architect, Secretary; Charles T. Johnson, of Albany, Secretary of the State Board of Charities; Mr. Franklin Williams, of Goshen, State Engineer; Hon. Thomas H. Cullen, of Brooklyn, representing minority members of Legislature; Mr. Charles H. Johnson, of Albany, Secretary of the State Board of Charities; Mr. Frank R. Uter, Friendship, Allegany County, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities; Dr. Walter B. James, of New York City, President of the New York Academy of Medicine; and Mr. Benjamin W. Arnold, of Albany.

Medical Committee Named

In order to deal wisely with the medical and scientific questions involved in the care of the insane and the feebleminded, the Commission has an advisory medical committee which consists of: Dr. B. E. James, of New York Academy of Medicine; Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission and a member of the Hospital Development Commission; Dr. M. W. Salmon, Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene; and Dr. Isham G. Harris, Superintendent of the Brooklyn State Hospital.

Recommendations of Medical Committee

The Commission has received a recommendation from its Medical Committee that hospitals should not be constructed to accommodate more than 5,000 patients. Hospitals of this size are consequently necessary in the metropolitan district. The trend of the State is toward smaller institutions, but a more efficient one for the care of the insane and the feebleminded of the State. The efficiency of an institution must be measured in the first place of the hospital system, and the second place in the second place of the hospital system. The efficiency of an institution must be measured in the first place of the hospital system, and the second place in the second place of the hospital system. The efficiency of an institution must be measured in the first place of the hospital system, and the second place in the second place of the hospital system. The efficiency of an institution must be measured in the first place of the hospital system, and the second place in the second place of the hospital system.

The State hospital system is directed to a large corporation by county units, as any other system of these institutions and special services.

RED CROSS SEALS TO HELP FINANCE CAMPAIGN AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

Expect to Sell Fifteen Million This Holiday Season

Red Cross Christmas Seals will provide 90 per cent. or more of the funds for financing the war-time campaign against tuberculosis, which has proved to be peculiarly the disease of the Great War.

The progress of the world conflict in all of the belligerent nations has been marked by an alarming increase of the “White Plague.” Russia, Austria, Serbia, Belgium, France, and even England and Germany, with their efficient public health agencies, have all suffered.

France, which was least prepared to cope with tuberculosis and which assumed the first and greatest burden in the defense of civilization, is in a pitiable condition. It is estimated that there are present among the French civilian population at least 800,000 cases of tuberculosis, 600,000 of which are said to be directly attributable to the war.

Campaigns Being Organized

To provide funds for financing the measures necessary to save New York State from a similar tragedy, local tuberculosis committees and other organizations, under the direction of the State Charities Aid Association, are already organizing their annual Red Cross Christmas Seal campaign.

A total of 40,000,000 little holiday tokens have been ordered from the American Red Cross by the State Charities Aid Association, agent for the sale in New York State outside of Greater New York. More than half of these have already been distributed among local agents and the remainder will be shipped in the next few weeks. This enormous distribution has been made necessary by the high goal for the 1917 seal.

The organizers of the campaign are planning a drive for this objective: “15,000,000 seals sold in New York State outside of Greater New York.” This represents an increase of approximately 3,000,000 seals over the total of 1916, when 12,073,226 seals were sold.

Over 60 per cent of the local Red Cross Seal agencies have already been organized and are prepared to start the campaign. It is expected that every agency will be ready within a few weeks so that fully a month may be devoted to publicity and the mastering of the fundamental methods in advance of the actual sale, which begins on November 16.

Unusual Need Will Mean Early and Vigorous Campaign

“Selling Red Cross Christmas Seals in time of war,” says George J. Nelbach, Executive Secretary of the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, “is an enterprise that has no precedent, a project the intricacies and difficulties of which cannot be entirely foreseen. Whatever the obstacles that must be overcome, it is certain that there was never a more compelling need for early organization, tireless vigilance, and almost faultless efficiency than there will be in the campaign of 1917, at the threshold of which we now stand.

“Red Cross Seals provide 90 per cent or more of the financial basis for the fight against tuberculosis. That financial basis must this year be deepened and broadened, for tuberculosis, greatest of all diseases in time of peace, has proved to be peculiarly the disease of the great world war. It is sapping the life-blood of France, and all of the warring countries are suffering. It is for us to dedicate ourselves resolutely to the task of saving our state and nation from a similar tragic situation.”

Using the X-Ray to Detect Tuberculosis Among Soldiers

New York State, in tests made upon 1,030 members of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, has demonstrated the usefulness of the X-ray in detecting pulmonary tuberculosis among large bodies of troops, reports The Health News of the State Department of Health.

Seven and one-half hours were required for the making of the 1,030 exposures, or 26 seconds per man; developing and reading increased the time for the entire process to three minutes and 38 seconds for each plate.

Application of the X-ray to determine the presence of tuberculosis among large bodies of troops is a most advanced step in science, and the value of the studies made in this State is fully realized at Washington, where the problem of proper physical examinations is one of the most important questions now confronting the medical corps of the army.

Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, had charge of the examination. They were made by a group of lung specialists and roentgenologists under the authorization of Governor Whitman and the State Council of Defense.

DO YOUR RED CROSS SEAL SHOPPING EARLY

They are planning to sell 15,000,000 Red Cross Christmas Seals in New York State this year.

This ought to be easy. Over 12,000,000 were sold last year, and the need of money to carry on the fight against tuberculosis is ever so much greater this year.

The campaign will start early. Do your seal shopping early!
Herkimer County Happy Over Prospect of Tuberculosis Hospital

Hold Community Picnic on Site of New Institution Which Will Accommodate 60 Patients

There was a big community picnic in Herkimer County on September 12. Hundreds of persons attended. Judges, supervisors, farmers, merchants, doctors, and scores of women were in the party. There were speeches a-plenty, much handshaking, band music and good things to eat.

If you were asked to guess the purpose of the gathering you probably would say it was old home week for one of the villages or perhaps honor was being done a distinguished resident. But you would be wrong. This picnic was different. It was unique in its inception and probably the first of its kind in the State. It was arranged by the Anti-Tuberculosis Committee of Herkimer County to give the people of the county an opportunity to inspect the site selected for the new county tuberculosis hospital.

The picnic was held in a grove on the site, which is part of the Heller Farm in the town of Salisbury, less than two miles from Salisbury Center. On this site a hospital to accommodate 60 patients will be erected. A spirit of gratification over the prospect of the county taking the final steps to provide for the proper care and treatment of its tuberculous residents predominated.

J. D. Frederiksen, chairman of the committee that arranged the picnic, presided. Among the speakers, most of whom confined their remarks to the need of the hospital and the results expected of it, were Hon. George W. Ward, Dr. Joseph E. Clark of the State Department of Health, Dr. I. S. Eadsall, School Commissioner S. C. Krim, Hon. Irving R. Devendorf and Miss Eva M. Schied, county tuberculosis nurse.

The site comprises about 120 acres and is about 1,800 feet above sea level. It is in the Adirondack foothills, the soil is dry and sandy. The contract for the erection of the building will be let before the end of the year.

State Hospital Staff Sees 100 Out-Patients in Month

Here is a sample of the outpatient work done by members of the staff of one State hospital in a month. During one month the physicians of the Rochester State Hospital had 100 consultations with patients outside of the hospital who came for diagnosis, advice or treatment. Public Attitude Toward Mental Disorders Is Changing for the Better

A total of 403 persons were examined during the past year in the out-patient department of the Rochester State Hospital which provides opportunities for early diagnosis and prompt treatment in cases of nervous and mental disorders. Of this number of mentally sick people, 86 were found ill enough to make hospitalization advisable. These figures furnish interesting light on the attitude of the public toward a medical activity of such a delicate nature.

"A surprisingly large number of persons," says Dr. E. H. Howard, superintendent of the hospital, "came voluntarily to the hospital during the past year and frankly stated symptoms that caused them to feel that they were suffering from mental disorders. Their action was in sharp contrast with the attitude of people ten years ago. They shunned the hospital then. Those that did seek advice were very secretive and so hampered the authorities in their work. "A change in the attitude of the State officials toward preventive measures for insanity also has come. Ten years ago we were not permitted to treat a patient unless he was formally committed to the institution. Now, on request of the family physician or any responsible person, we are permitted to make an examination and prescribe treatment. If the patient is frank about his illness he usually responds to the treatment."

A further activity of this department is the guidance of persons discharged from the institution. When a patient is paroled in the care of family or friends his name remains on the hospital books for six months and during that time he is visited frequently and treatment is given to him.

Jonathan Baker, Veteran Almshouse Keeper, Nominated for Suffolk County Poor Superintendent

The Republican electors of Suffolk County recognized efficient and faithful public service when they chose Jonathan Baker, keeper of the county almshouse at Yaphank, for their candidate this year for the office of County Superintendent of the Poor. Two other candidates entered the primaries for the nomination.

Mr. Baker has been keeper of the county almshouse since April 1, 1887, and his wife has acted in the capacity of matron. During this period of nearly 30 years they have made a record the equal of which is hard to find. They have conducted the affairs of the institution economically and efficiently, and with a high regard for the welfare of the county's wards.

small and large dormitories. In all dormitories the space per patient should not be less than 60 square feet. No dormitories should be constructed to accommodate more than 50 patients and none less than 4 patients. All large dormitories to have cross-ventilation.

(a) Day space and sitting rooms: Not less than 60 square feet of day space should be allowed per patient—the day space to include corridors used for sitting purposes, all alcoves and sitting rooms. All corridors used for sitting purposes to be less than 15 feet wide, and to have side lights and ventilators as well as end lights. All connecting corridors and passageways to be six feet wide.

(b) Dining rooms: Not less than 18 square feet per patient should be allowed; the tables should be round and large enough to seat six patients.

Dr. Van Wagner Head of New Chenango Sanatorium

Dr. Lewis A. Van Wagner of Sherburne is the superintendent of the new Chenango County Tuberculosis Hospital. It has been decided to call the hospital Brookside Sanatorium. This is in honor of Dr. Paul B. Brooks of Norwich, who was the pioneer in creating sentiment throughout the country for the institution. He also has given much of his time and attention to organizing the hospital. The sanatorium is located just north of the village of Sherburne.
MOST COUNTIES MAKING GOOD PROGRESS TOWARD PROVIDING TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

MATTER DRAGS ON IN A FEW COUNTIES; STATE MAY HAVE TO ACT

Readers of the S. C. A. A. News will be interested in the progress made in twenty counties of the State in complying with a law passed by the Legislature last spring requiring counties of over 35,000 population to provide tuberculosis hospitals, if not already thus equipped.

It will be recalled that the new hospitals must be available for patients on or before July 1, 1918, and that the law further provides that if the board of supervisors of any county shall have failed to secure a site for a county tuberculosis hospital and to award the contracts for the erection of suitable buildings thereon by the first of January next, it shall be the duty of the State Commissioner of Health forthwith to locate, construct and place in operation a hospital at the expenses of the county.

Three Already Under Construction

In three of the twenty counties affected by the law very prompt and expeditious action has been taken. The majority of the rest are proceeding in a way likely to result in the selection of sites and the letting of contracts for construction by the first of January. Other counties are proceeding slowly and will need to step lively if the hospitals are to be built by the county authorities and not by the State Commissioner of Health.

Otsego in the Lead

Otsego has set the pace and has far outstripped her sister counties. The board of supervisors of that county met early in June and took appropriate action under the new statute, and now ground is about to be broken for the hospital. The sum of $40,000 has been appropriated for site, construction and equipment.

Construction also has been started in Rensselaer and Niagara Counties. A general committee consisting of three leading citizens, six supervisors and the county attorney has charge of the construction of the Rensselaer County Hospital, which is to have 200 beds and for which contracts have been let totaling $173,290. The Niagara County Hospital is to have 92 beds and the contracts total $108,960.

Sites Selected in Eight Other Counties

Sites have been selected and approved by the State and local health officers and plans have been drawn and submitted to the State Commissioner of Health for approval in Chautauqua, Broome, Livingston, Rockland and Herkimer Counties. In Nassau, Wayne and Columbia sites have been selected, and approval by the State and local officers is pending.

Some Counties Must Step Lively

In Allegany, Franklin, Clinton, Genesee and St. Lawrence Counties suitable sites are said to be available and the selection of a property by the board of supervisors is pending in each case. These counties can comply with the statute if the boards of supervisors will select the sites before October 16th and petition for their approval by the State and local health authorities as required by the Public Health Law. It would not be possible for them to take the various steps that need to be taken before the close of the year if the selection of a site and the appointment of an architect are postponed until the annual sessions of the boards in November.

The matter has dragged along most of the summer in Delaware, Washington and Sullivan Counties and only by dint of prompt and sustained action throughout the balance of the year will these counties be able to meet the requirement that sites be selected and contracts let by January 1, next.

Is There a County Hospital in Your County?

Is there a county hospital for tuberculosis in your county? There should be if your county contains 35,000 or more inhabitants. Furthermore a new State law says there shall be.

Such an institution is a vital war measure to live or die.

What are the authorities in your county doing to establish a hospital promptly in accordance with the new law?

It is needed now. Delays will not save money, and they will cost lives.

ESPECIALLY FOR BOARDS OF SUPERVISORS

Otsego County has established a record in the annals of the State for speed in the establishment of its tuberculosis hospital. It is one of the 20 counties affected by the mandatory tuberculosis hospital statute enacted last May.

On June 27th the Board of Supervisors met to take action under the new law. On August 8th the Board selected a site on the interurban trolley line between Coopertown and Oneonta, and appropriated $40,000 for land, construction and equipment. Since then an architect has been engaged, plans have been drawn and approved by the State Commissioner of Health, and the contracts have been let. The foundation is now being put in.

The committee that has made this notable record consists of Supervisors Ursil A. Ferguson, Oneonta, chairman; Charles J. Armstrong, Milford, and John M. Hopkins, Unadilla. Frank M. Smith of Springfield Center is the chairman of the Board of Supervisors.

DR. BIGGS NAMES COMMITTEE ON COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

George J. Nelbach, executive secretary of the Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis of the State Charities Aid Association, has been selected by Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, as a member of a committee to supervise the selection of sites, plans, construction and equipment of tuberculosis hospitals in the counties affected by the law compelling each county having a population of 35,000 or more to erect a hospital if not already equipped with one. Dr. John A. Smith, secretary of the State Department of Health, is chairman of the committee; Dr. O. R. Eichel, vice-chairman; Dr. E. C. McSweeney, secretary; Mr. C. A. Holmqvist, engineering expert; Mr. Frederick Spranger, construction expert; Mr. J. D. Burt, architect; with Mr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., deputy commissioner of health, ex-officio member.

The advisory board consists of Dr. Albert H. Garvin, superintendent of the New York State hospital, at Raybrook; Dr. John S. Billings, of New York City, medical director of New York Telephone Company; Dr. Charles Stover, of Amsterdam, secretary of the board of managers of the Montgomery County Tuberculosis Hospital; Dr. Horace J. Howk, physician in charge of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Hospital at Mt. McGregor, and Dr. Lawrason Brown, of Saranac Lake.
Red Cross Gives $1,000,000 for Model Health Center Under Mr. Folks in France

France may yet "show" America something in effective public health work.

Bread cast upon the waters in the form of American physicians, scientists, sanitarians and public health workers sent abroad in the hour of need to help France fight disease in war time may return after many days to this country in the shape of improved public health administration and methods which will be far reaching in their results.

Word comes from Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who is now director of Civil Affairs for the American Red Cross in France, that the Red Cross has appropriated $1,000,000 for a model health center to do every kind of health work in some one city of France for three years as an object lesson.

This plan has been evolved after two months' study of the conditions in France. Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, the American Red Cross Commissioner in Europe, cabled to Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the Red Cross in Washington recommending the plan, and the desired appropriation for the work was made.

The project is considered by experts to be the finest thing ever started in the way of a public health object lesson.

The work of the Department of Civil Affairs has been thoroughly systematized under bureau chiefs. Mr. Folks now has a staff of fifty-nine assistants and the number is steadily increasing.

"The task of organized public health work," he writes, "has been hard work with extraordinary difficulties, but one by one they are gotten out of the way."

Tuberculosis Big War Problem; Over 20,000 Tuberculous Men of Draft Age in This State

The fourth annual North Atlantic Tuberculosis Conference was held in Baltimore, Md., October 17th and 18th. The speakers, among whom were included the chief medical authorities of the United States Army and Navy, as well as tuberculosis workers in the States of the North Atlantic group, brought out clearly the problems created or intensified by the entry of this country into the Great War. Constructive lines of work to meet these problems were mapped out.

It was agreed that due to the prompt measures established by the military authorities the tuberculosis problem will be a gigantic civil problem rather than a military problem. The examinations in camps and cantonments result in the sending back to their communities of the large numbers of men who would have come down with the disease had they been allowed to go overseas. These men returning to their homes become at once a problem for the local authorities and the tuberculosis work. This means more hospital beds, more dispensaries and many more visiting nurses.

Two hundred and fifteen tuberculosis experts have nearly finished examining the members of the regular army, have gone over the chests of about 50 per cent of the federalized National Guard, and have made a good start with the men in the new national army cantonments. Those who are found to have active tuberculosis or are likely to develop the disease are being discharged and sent back home. The men who pass the expert tuberculosis examination and are definitely accepted into the Federal service and who develop the disease "in the line of duty" will probably be looked after by the Federal Government. That is, the incipient cases will doubtless be sent to sanatoria to be built and maintained by the Federal Government in various parts of the country, while the chronic cases will probably be sent to the local public or private tuberculosis hospitals nearest their homes and maintained there at Federal expense.

At Least Two Per Cent Tuberculous

The most conservative estimate of the percentage of men rejected because of tuberculosis by the local exemption boards under the selective service law is 2 per cent of the total number of men thus far examined. Many competent authorities believe that it will be between 3 and 4 per cent. Using 2 per cent as a basis, it is estimated that between 21,000 and 22,000 men in New York State alone have been or will be rejected from service in the national army because of tuberculosis. The names and addresses of these rejected conscripts are to be made available to the State health departments and State tuberculosis associations for follow-up work.

This great increase in the number of known cases is at once a tremendous problem and a very real opportunity. More institutional beds are needed and the fact that this host of men afflicted with tuberculosis has been brought to light is the most convincing argument for the provision of such beds. However, a large number of these rejected men are married and have small children and would not accept institutional care. For these a system of careful home supervision and dispensary care and treatment, which will afford them as good an opportunity for improvement and possible arrest as may reasonably be expected, and which will aim to protect the other members of the household from infection, are immediately and imperatively needed.

DR. DEVINE IN CHARGE OF 850,000 FRENCH REFUGEES

Edward T. Devine, Secretary of the New York Charity Organization Society and Director of the New York School of Philanthropy, who went to France in August, has been appointed Chief of the Bureau of Refugees and Home Relief under the American Red Cross Commission there.

He is now in charge of all relief work outside the city of Paris, and is organizing relief and welfare measures in behalf of 850,000 refugees.
BUILD UP CHILD LIFE IS WAR'S LESSON TO U. S.

War will mean much to children in America, as well as to children in the belligerent nations of Europe. If the experience of European countries in war time is duplicated here there will be a marked increase in juvenile dependency, delinquency, and illegitimacy; in fact, a considerable increase in dependency is noted here already.

The State Charities Aid Association is strengthening in every way possible its department of children's work. Its eighteen county agencies for dependent children are being operated at the highest possible efficiency. The child placing agency is seeking free family homes for homeless children and keeping careful supervision over more than 1,300 children already placed. The Committee on Obtaining Situations for Mothers and Babies is extremely busy.

Naturally, the Association is pleased that several of its "boys"—that is, boys for whom it has found permanent homes in past years—are now with the American military forces in France. There are a considerable number of young soldiers on the honor roll of the Association. One of these young men, on the day before sailing for France, wrote:

"Berlin or Bust."

"We left Port Royal, where we first went from New York, the first of the month and went to Quantico, Virginia, where we stayed until this morning. Now we are in Philadelphia expecting to board a battle ship tomorrow bound for France under General Pershing, and then tackle the Germans. I forgot to tell you of our trip from Quantico to Philadelphia. On the outside of the cars we had these words written: "The Fighting 40th Co. Berlin or Bust.""

Cecilia, Seven, Wants Catholic Father and Mother

Cecilia is a blue eyed, fair haired little girl of seven. She is a slight girl, and if she could be given pretty clothes would be considered charming. When she was a baby she was left an orphan. Her sister tried to make a home for her. She did the best she knew how, but the struggle was too great. The sister broke down in health and Cecilia had to go to an orphan asylum, where she has been now for two years. The Sisters in the Orphan Asylum are kind to Cecilia, but Cecilia longs for a mother and father of her own, a mother and father who will not only love her and care for her, but who will be Catholics and who will bring her up in the faith of her own parents.

Will not some good Catholic family share their home with this lonely little girl?

TEN OF THE ASSOCIATION'S CHILDREN AT "THE FARM" FOR THE SUMMER

The children who went there needed good physical care and individual training. Good food and pleasant outdoor life made all strong physically and better behaved.

Tony Is "Dandi"

A letter just received by the Child Placing Agency from the Italian family with whom little Tony was placed says:

"In regard of Tony I like to tell you that at present time he is very happy. He is strong and fat, eat three time a day, and I call him happy boy. Now he begin to walk chair by chair and he is the joy of our home. He sleep very well in the night and 6 o'clock in the morning he get up from the bed. In the at noon he sleep two hour, very quiet. He like fresh air, and I take him to walk in the street every morning from 9 o'clock to 10, and in afternoon from three to four o'clock. We like him very much, and love him sincerely. Thanks to GOD, for this little boy, and Lord may watch him in his life. He now talk and call ma-ma and papa, some time said good-by. In one word I tell you that Tony is dandi and we are very glad to adopted him."

Red Hair and His Smile Won This Boy a Home

Teddy's bright red hair and engaging smile won for him one of the best homes the Association has under supervision.

The girls who were at "The Farm" for Association Children have found homes. These little boys have no homes of their own. Is there not some one who will take one of them?
Mental Hygiene Committees
Aiding in Efforts to Provide for the Insane and Feebleminded

Gathering Data for Hospital Development Commission and Promoting Establishment of More Ungraded Classes

Although wartime slows down progress in many lines of social work, mental hygiene work has shown an increase in activities during recent months.

The Committee on Mental Hygiene of the State Charities Aid Association and the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, now operating in close co-operation with a joint staff, have devoted the greater part of their efforts recently to aiding the Hospital Development Commission in its study of the needs of the insane and feebleminded in order to plan for the systematic upbuilding of institutions over a term of years.

A study summarizing the results in the most important surveys and estimates of the prevalence of feeblemindedness in America and Great Britain has been submitted to the Commission.

On the basis of these figures, the number of feebleminded persons in New York State is conservatively estimated at 35,000. A recent survey by county agents of the State Charities Aid Association in eighteen counties showed 832 persons definitely diagnosed as feebleminded who have already come to the attention of county agents because of poverty or anti-social conduct and are in need of institutional care. If this rate prevails throughout the State there are not less than 5,543 persons already known to the authorities and in need of institutional care, treatment, and training.

A memorandum on defective delinquents, their prevalence, nature, and their institutional and legislative needs is in proof and will shortly be submitted to the Hospital Development Commission. Memoranda on the parole system of the State hospitals, care of chronic patients, and the need of psychopathic hospitals in the larger centers of population throughout the State are also being prepared and will be submitted to the Commission at public hearings to be held in the Academy of Medicine in New York early in the month.

During the summer the New York Committee made a special study of the needs for increasing the ungraded class department of the New York City Department of Education. The results of this study were submitted in a printed memorandum to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. This memorandum contained historical and descriptive information about the department and arguments supporting the requests of the Board of Education for an increase in the number of classes, inspectors, visiting and substitute teachers. The city budget as prepared by the Board of Estimate makes provision for the increases substantially as requested.

In response to a request from Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, the New York Committee has begun a study of the type of instruction that should be given in special classes for retarded children. Consideration is being given to the best plans for establishing the ungraded classes provided for in the Lockwood Bill passed at the last session of the legislature. This new law calls for a special class in every school where ten or more retarded school children are found.

Miss Florence M. Rhett is chairman of the Committee on Mental Hygiene, and Mr. R. Bayard Cutting of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness. George A. Hastings is executive secretary of both committees.

THE INSANE COST COUNTRY
ANNUAL LOSS OF $350,000,000

Horatio M. Pollock, Ph.D., Statistician of the State Hospital Commission, and a First Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps of the United States Army, was one of the speakers at the annual convention of the American Public Health Association in Washington last month.

"It is significant," said Lieutenant Pollock, "that while the rate of physical disease and mortality has been steadily declining, the rate of insanity has apparently been mounting upward. Already the number of hospital beds occupied by the insane exceeds the total number of hospital beds for general physical diseases of all kinds in the United States. The total yearly economic loss to our nation on account of insanity is now more than $350,000,000. Is it any wonder that those of us who see the enormity of the burden of mental diseases should advocate that they be studied in every possible way—in the laboratory, in the hospital, in the clinic, and that the results of such study be reported in such a way that they may be made available to all workers in the field, to the end that the mental health of our people may be made more secure? Only when the facts concerning the cause, course and outcome of the various mental diseases are fully known shall we be able to solve successfully the great problems of cure and prevention."

A Home Made Baby Betty
a Happy and Healthy Child

When Betty was a baby she was motherless, sick, ill-tempered and unhappy. Now she has parents, a brother, and a garden full of flowers. She is a sturdily happy, nature-loving little girl.
Yates County believes in the conservation of its children. Thirty mothers registered their children in the baby show at the Yates County Fair; eleven babies were rated at 100 per cent.

Dr. George H. Kirby, formerly Director of Clinical Psychiatry at the Manhattan State Hospital, Ward's Island, and more recently Medical Inspector of the State Hospital Commission, has been appointed Director of the Psychiatric Institute of the State Hospitals, to succeed Dr. August Hoch, resigned, who has gone to California to reside.

Plans are being developed for the establishment of a free mental clinic in Schenectady. It will be the twenty-eighth established by the State Hospitals.

Three hundred people attended the third annual Westchester County Conference of Charities and Corrections at White Plains on October 25th. War-time social problems, the need of a children's court, and an indeterminate sentence and parole law in Westchester County were among the topics considered.

A course of six free lectures on mental hygiene is being given at the Labor Temple, New York City, by the Department of Education in cooperation with the State Charities Aid Association's Mental Hygiene Committee. The speakers are Dr. Walter E. Fernald, Dr. Charles G. Wagner, Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, Dr. Bernard Glueck, Dr. Ira S. Wiley and George A. Hastings. The general theme of the course is “Can We Make This Country Safe for Democracy?”

The National Committee for Mental Hygiene announce that funds are to be supplied from official and unofficial sources to establish a psychiatric clinic in the Staten Island Hospital at St. George's, Staten Island, with a full-time resident psychiatrist and social worker.

The annual meeting of the Westchester County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association will be held at the home of the President, Adolph Lewiston, in Ardsley, on Saturday afternoon, November 10th.

A course of four free lectures on the general theme “Why Should So Many Go Insane?” to be given at the Central Branch Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn this season, has been arranged by the Mental Hygiene Committee.

In a number of counties, in addition to their other work, this Association's County Agents for Dependent Children act as probation officers, as investigators of outdoor relief and as investigators for boards of child welfare which grant pensions to needy widows and children.

The Association's Committee on Hospitals has published a handbook on the care and treatment of alcohol and drug addicts, including a directory of public institutions in New York City in which such patients are treated.

The New York City Visiting Committee is helping to make the hospitals under its visitation as efficient as possible to meet conditions brought on by the war. This includes Red Cross work of various kinds, planning training courses for nurses, and devising plans to increase the productivity of institution farms and gardens.

The Child Placing Agency of the Association has placed 210 children in free family homes during the last year. Supervision has been maintained over 1,351 children, of whom 1,141 were placed in previous years.

Mr. R. Bayard Cutting, Chairman of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, and Mr. Franklin B. Kirkbride, Acting Chairman of the Executive Committee, are in Europe engaged in organizing Y. M. C. A. activities among the American military forces.

"Protect the defective children, provide for their training and proper care, and you will lessen the burden of dependency and delinquency," is the gist of a report on mental defectives issued by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor. This is an important phase of home defense in wartime.

Because the work keeps them happy and their minds occupied it causes a favorable reaction on the patients themselves.

There need be no fear of any possible infection, for the garments and the candles are all thoroughly disinfected before they leave the institution.

Other hospitals will be interested in this means of enabling the sick to join the army of workers at home that is helping the army of fighters to win the war.
RED CROSS CHRISTMAS SEAL ARMY MOBILIZING

Sale Opens November 15th—Many Local Committees Have Already Started Campaigns—Mail-Sale Again a Big Feature

A goal of selling 15,000,000 seals in New York State outside of New York City, is necessitated by the tremendous tuberculosis problems growing out of war conditions.

Seventy-five per cent of the local tuberculosis committees under the direction of the State Charities Aid Association have already completed the preliminary organization of their Red Cross Seal campaigns on a scale hitherto unprecedented. To avoid the transportation difficulties anticipated in the near future, most of New York's quota of 40,000,000 seals has already been distributed throughout the counties of the State, and the sale will open on November 15th.

The high standard set for the 1917 sale is indicated by the size of the seal order for the larger cities in the State. Buffalo heads the list with 5,000,000 seals; Syracuse, 1,500,000; Elmira, 1,250,000; and Albany and Troy, 1,000,000 each. Allotments for other localities are in the same proportion.

Sale by Mail

The sale of seals by mail will again be a big feature of the campaign. At the North Atlantic Conference on Tuberculosis, held in Baltimore in 1917 and 1918, was generally agreed by representatives from all the participating States that the probability of attaining the 1917 Red Cross Christmas Seal goal would depend upon the extent to which the mail sale method was employed by local agencies. Despite the increase in postage required by the new war revenue bill, carefully compiled statistics establish beyond dispute the fact that the sale by mail is the most economic and profitable selling plan that can be used in the Red Cross Christmas Seal campaign. As a matter of fact, most of the mail sale letters will be sent at the same New York State rate as heretofore. The post office ruling is that the postage cost of letters mailed and delivered in the same postal district will be two cents as heretofore. It is expected that nearly 500,000 letters will be sent to prospective purchasers of seals in this State during the coming campaign.

Penneant Contest Again

Greater interest is being shown than ever before in the national and State competitions for Red Cross Christmas Seal honors and pennants, which are awarded for the highest per capita sale of seals among the localities of various population classes. Last year New York State claims the pennant for the highest per capita sale in States having a population in excess of 2,400,000. Five New York State cities, out of a possible ten for the whole country—Elmira, Rochester, Troy, Buffalo, and Brooklyn—were awarded pennants by the National Tuberculosis Association and the American Red Cross for selling the greatest number of seals per inhabitant of any cities in their respective population classes. Winners in the competition conducted in New York State by the State Charities Aid Association were as follows: Buffalo, Troy, Elmira, Ithaca, Larchmont, Richfield Springs, Cold Spring, and Roxbury. This year the competition for honors and pennants takes on a new significance. The winning of these prizes becomes analogous to the over-subscription of a locality's Liberty Bond quota. It is the expression both of the community's interest in public health and its patriotism in time of national peril.

Expect Liberal Response

New York State has contributed liberally to the provision of facilities for our soldiers in the field by over-subscription to Liberty Bonds, and has responded in like manner to the appeal for funds to finance the war work of the American Red Cross. It is confidently expected by the organizers of the Red Cross Seal campaign that the people of this State will provide the money for the anti-tuberculosis measures so urgently needed to safeguard public health and conserve the Nation's man power.

"GLAD TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY" FROM ITHACA

Ithaca Establishes Open Air School—Splendid Health and Educational Facilities for City's School Children

"Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy," was the salutation of Mr. Frank D. Boynton, Superintendent of the Ithaca Public Schools, apropos of the news that the Board of Education had decided to conduct an open air school on the top of the new $500,000 school building.

The Ithaca Board of Education voted at its last meeting to accept an appropriation of $250 offered by the Ithaca Tuberculosis Association toward the establishment of a school in which the anemic and sickly children of Ithaca could pursue their studies under ideal "fresh air" conditions.

Mr. Boynton's letter shows that in addition to its open air school, Ithaca has provided practically every modern facility for the education and health protection of its school children. In a recently equipped dental clinic, a graduate school nurse on full time, a practical nurse with a Red Cross diploma on half time, a well equipped infirmary for 20 patients in which a physician works with the nurses and examines all the pupils. There are classes for atypical children with two instructors, a complete system of vital statistics which furnish the facts for notices to parents on their children's defects. Moreover, at the city hospital, the Board of Education has put in an endowment of $10,500, the interest of which is used to care for self-supporting teachers, and pupils who need help. In addition to these measures designed to safeguard and conserve the health of children and teachers, the Ithaca schools are provided with all of the modern educational facilities.

"Do you think of anything that has been omitted?" asks Mr. Boynton in closing his letter. We don't!

COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS NURSES

The War Emergency Committees on Tuberculosis of Allegheny and Washington Counties have recently secured tuberculosis visiting nurses. It is especially opportune that the nurses are already at work at this time, for they will be ready to advise and assist the men who have been examined under the selective draft law and rejected from military service on account of tuberculosis, of whom it is estimated that there are over 20,000 in New York State alone. As stated in another column, the names of these rejected conscripts are to be turned over to the tuberculosis nurses in the near future.

The War Emergency Committees on Tuberculosis of Madison and Otsego Counties and the Greene County Tuberculosis Committee have decided to employ such nurses. The Otsego County Committee has already raised over $400 for this purpose.

RED CROSS SEALS ARE WINNING THE FIGHT AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

Red Cross Christmas Seals have for many years provided 90 per cent of the funds to finance the local campaigns against tuberculosis in New York State outside of New York City.

The story of that winning fight against the deadliest of all diseases is told in the following record of achievements:

TEN YEARS OF PROGRESS

(1) 28 local tuberculosis hospitals in operation; 22 additional hospitals authorized.
(2) 30 free tuberculosis dispensaries.
(3) 133 visiting nurses.
(4) 27 fresh air classes for pre-tuberculosis children.
(5) The present death rate from tuberculosis in New York State outside of New York City is 114.2 per 100,000 living population.

1907
(1) 2 public tuberculosis hospitals in connection with almshouses.
(2) 2 dispensaries.
(3) 2 visiting nurses.
(4) No fresh air classes.
(5) In 1907 the death rate from tuberculosis in New York State outside of New York City was 129.4 per 100,000 living population.

RED CROSS SEALS ARE SAVING HUMAN LIVES
STATE AFTER-CARE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS VICTIMS

2,500 PATIENTS TREATED AT 146 FREE CLINICS

"Do you think the baby will ever walk, nurse?"
"I give Jimmie his muscle training exercises every day; I don't care if it takes three years, if he only walks in the end!"

These remarks, addressed to the nurses in charge, show the extremes of anxious dependence and grim determination with which the mothers of New York State whose children were crippled in last year's epidemic of infantile paralysis face the problem of their children's future. For the future of these children is a problem and one which must be faced not only by the children and their parents, but by the public as well.

Concerns the Public
If the future of these children is overlooked; if they are neglected and left to grow up helpless cripples, the public will have to pay the bill for their support. If it is considered and they grow up capable, self-supporting citizens, the public must provide the funds now for the after-treatment which is necessary to restore the use of the disabled limbs.

Science, skill and mother love are three powerful forces already working to improve the conditions of these crippled children.

The "Follow Up" Work
What is the after-treatment of infantile paralysis?

The after-treatment is a system of muscle training, or "child manipulation," designed by Dr. Robert W. Lovett to stimulate affected muscles, restore elasticity to those that are contracted, retract those that are stretched, and to train unaccustomed muscles to live, of the worst of which we are "gone" or lifeless. Without some such treatment, deformities are apt to follow.

Over 3,300 Cases

Following the epidemic of infantile paralysis which swept New York State in the summer of 1916, the community was confronted with the possibility of some 3,300 children who had the disease becoming permanently deformed or crippled.

To deal with the situation, the State Department of Health secured orthopedic specialists of wide reputation and ability and made their services available to all children by means of a series of clinics held in centers of infection throughout the State.

At the request of the State Department of Health the State Charities Aid Association assumed the responsibility of providing social service aid and appointed for that purpose a special Committee on After-Care of Poliomyelitis in New York State outside of New York City.

The after-care treatment begins as soon as the pain of the acute attack leaves the patient and the doctor can make a thorough muscular examination. Such examination is given by the trained workers under Dr. Lovett at clinics held at the centers of the infection throughout the State. He and his assistants—orthopedic surgeons, expert muscle-trainers, and muscle-testers—make minute examinations of all patients who are brought to these clinics by the local private physicians and health officers. The condition of each muscle is charted in every case, and the advice as to treatment made by orthopedists is recorded. Where local physicians desire, actual treatment, principally by muscle-training, is given under special muscle-training nurses employed by the State.

Mothers Are Real Heroines.

The mothers are, as a whole, very faithful in putting the children through the exercises, and so much depends upon the mother! However able the doctor, however skilled the nurse, the mother is the real pivot on which the child's future hangs, for she is responsible for its food, its cleanliness, its discipline, and the persistence in exercising. Most of the mothers are busy women, with perhaps from two to four other children to care for, and yet each spends from fifteen to forty-five minutes each day in urging and encouraging one small son or daughter to turn or lift a hand or foot or leg.

The child must, in many instances, be kept from crawling or walking, since weight-bearing exercise after an acute attack tends to increase the paralysis.

Sometimes the recovery is so slow that the mothers become discouraged. Then the nurse must use every atom of influence, tact and personality she has to prevent the child's disability being accepted as a visitation of Providence or fate or bad luck, and to make the mother see the hope that lies ahead.

Children Not Puny
How do the children look? Are they sickly and puny? Not a bit of it. Most of them are plump and healthy, many unusually attractive and intelligent. Tiny, curly-haired babies, small boys active as eels, shy little girls—good citizen material all of them, far too valuable to be lost to the State, and well worth the effort that is being made to save them perfect.

Size of Problem
A total of 146 clinics have been held—2,551 patients have been examined; 1,427 of those had the disease in 1916, 751 had it in past years and 76 had orthopedic conditions not due to infantile paralysis. The nurses of the Department continually visit the patients and one of the surgeons of the Department is on call for emergency visits.

Of the 3,339 cases of 1916 known to be living in the State outside of New York City, the Department of Health had examined 1,694 cases; 161 had promised to attend the next clinic; 495 had fully recovered; 190 were under other orthopedic care; 267 had moved from the State or into New York City; 80 had refused clinic care. In other words, 85 per cent. of the living cases were satisfactorily accounted for on October 1.

Work Done by Committee
The committee paid in full or in part for 484 braces and 158 corsets and other apparatus.

SHOULD DOUBLE ACCOMMODATIONS FOR DEFECTIVES

REPORT SHOWS THAT 5,500 MORE NEED INSTITUTIONAL CARE AT ONCE

Doubling the State's institutional facilities for the care, treatment and training of the feebleminded and epileptic is recommended in the first annual report of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, which has just been issued. The report covers the work of the committee since its inception in May, 1916, and its active career since the appointment of a staff and the opening of offices in September a year ago. Mr. R. Bayard Cutting is chairman of this committee.

The report recommends additional institutional accommodations for at least 5,543 mentally defective persons without delay. This figure represents the number of feebleminded in New York State who are already known to public officials or service agencies as feebleminded and in need of institutional care.

The figure was arrived at by a recently compiled partial directory of the feebleminded in 18 counties by County Agents of the State Charities Aid Association, who found 832 such persons in eighteen counties already known by reason of poverty or anti-social conduct.

If this proportion holds good throughout the State, the number of feebleminded persons already known to the authorities (because of poverty or anti-social conduct) and needing institutional treatment is at least 5,543.

The report states that the total number of feebleminded persons in the State is conservatively estimated at 35,000, of whom only about 6,000 are cared for in institutions designed for them. Consequently, accommodations for 5,500 more would practically double the present provision.

Other Needs in State Care

Among other outstanding needs in State care to which the report calls attention and which is of special importance at this time because of the plans of the State Department of Education to put the Lockwood Law into operation, is that of special classes for the backward and retarded children. In the words of the report, "To detect them (defective children) promptly, to place the weaker in the experimental institutions, to train the remainder in the simplest employments that will make them of some use in the community—these are the tasks to which the State should set itself more resolutely."

Gratification is expressed over steps looking toward a "substantial and unusual advance in provision for the feebleminded."

The committee commends the creation of the Hospital Development Commission, in which it sees promise of developments in a plan that may cost the State from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 in the next ten years, but insuring more adequate accommodation for the mentally disabled and defective, and economy in the long run.

The legislative campaign which resulted last spring in appropriations and authorizations for State institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic, totaling $1,144,100 and increasing the present capacity by 16 per cent, is presented in detail and is credited as having helped to stimulate the present interest and active efforts for the feebleminded.

A long list of legislative measures came under the consideration of the committee, some of them successfully passing the legislature; others failed or were deferred to be laid before the Hospital Development Commission. Among those which were successful are the Lockwood Bill providing for special classes for mentally defective children throughout the State and the Sage Bill creating the Hospital Development Commission.

For More Ungraded Classes

Special study was given to the State and city situation with regard to classes for retarded children. A questionnaire was sent out to the towns and cities in New York having a population in excess of 5,000, and the tabulated results show the facts regarding selection and payment of teachers, visiting teachers, school nurses, selection of pupils, character of instruction, location of classes, etc. This data has been made available to the State Department of Education.

In New York City a study of the needs of the Department of Ungraded Classes was made and submitted to the appropriating authorities.

During the year several conferences were held, among them one on educational aspects, one on correctional work, and two of the superintendents of State institutions for the feebleminded.

In addition to promoting legislation to relieve the community of the presence of the feebleminded, and the gathering and the dissemination of information concerning mental deficiency, the committee aims to organize and lead the efforts of individuals and social agencies in the accomplishment of such measures as can be effected privately for the welfare of the feebleminded.

The New York committee has more than 150 members on its general committee, and twelve sub-committees on the various phases of the subject it is dealing with.

A co-operative arrangement was made with the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association whereby the two committees occupy the same offices and operate their staffs practically as a unit. This arrangement has made for economy and increased efficiency.

The committee secured the consent of the family, arranged for transportation to the hospital, and paid the hospital expenses, collecting what it could toward the cost in each case. The first patient for operation entered the hospital on May 1st, 1917.

Operative care has been offered to 156 of the 277 for whom it was recommended, and 94 patients have been operated upon.

In 35 cases the operations were locally provided. The Westchester County After-Care Committee arranged for operations on 15. Nine were placed in the State Hospital at Havenstraw and 37 in the New York Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled, by the committee. Nineteen patients were in the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled on October 1, while 10 were awaiting admission. Five were awaiting admission to the State Hospital.

The Department of Health will hold two series of clinics during the next year—examining cases not heretofore seen, and re-examining cases already under care.
SENATOR SAGE SCORES STATE'S FALSE ECONOMY AND NEGLECT OF INSTITUTIONS

STATE SHOULD SPEND MORE, NOT LESS, FOR NECESSARY NEEDS

New York State should spend more money.

It takes a courageous man to make such a statement as this. Senator Henry M. Sage of Albany is the man who says it. And the Senator knows what he is talking about.

Senator Sage is Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Chairman of the recently-created State Hospital Development Commission, which is working out a plan for systematic increase of accommodations for the insane and feebleminded.

Senator Sage, during his incumbency of the Finance Committee chairmanship, has made a thorough study of State expenditures and sources of revenue, and of the administration of State institutions. He has devoted much time to visiting State institutions and otherwise ascertaining at first hand their needs and conditions. The Hospital Development Commission which he heads has spent the past summer working vigorously on its investigation of the needs of the insane and feebleminded.

With a background of experience in an extensive private business, and thorough knowledge of legislative questions and State finances, Senator Sage in a recent issue of "State Service" made this significant statement:

"When three years ago I became chairman of the Finance Committee, I thought I could introduce large economies. I tried my very best, and the result has been an increased budget every year of my service. I am appalled today, not at the money the State is spending, but at the increased sums which the State ought to spend for absolutely necessary State needs. When we adjourned this year we had killed in committee, bills carrying more than six million dollars of direct appropriations, and I think that nearly every cent was a justifiable State expense. In addition to this, about eight millions were cut out of the requested appropriations for the departments, commissions and institutions.

"I believe that our duty lies in appropriating properly for the State's needs, at the same time seeing that the money appropriated is spent efficiently and economically, rather than in attempting to drastically reduce the amounts appropriated. I believe that the people of this State are willing to pay all the money necessary to enable the State to perform its full duty so long as they know that they are getting full value for their money.

"It is probable that the Hospital Development Commission will recommend a plan involving an ultimate expenditure of between ten and twenty million dollars over a term of years to make the accommodations in the State institutions for the insane and feebleminded adequate to the need.

"Shamefully Neglectful" in Past

"The State has been shamefully neglectful in these matters," adds Senator Sage. "A very superficial examination of the hospitals discloses that we ought to spend $200,000,000 to enlarge these [various State] institutions. This is considered necessary for care for the insane population and provide decent and sanitary accommodations for these unfortunate. Many of the buildings are very old and unsuitable for present needs. They should be entirely rebuilt.

"Then comes the problem of the feeble-minded. We can care for only a fraction of the known cases in our existing institutions, and here is a question of the State's health and prosperity, or of its mental, moral and physical development. The costs have passed it by and shut our eyes because of the cost in dollars and cents. Whatever it costs, the problem must be solved."

Other necessary expenditures recommended are two new prisons (now being built), the up-keep of the State road system, the canals and canal terminals, etc.

"Members of the Legislature at Albany," says Senator Sage, "are supposed to spend a great deal of their time in studying how to get more money for the people's money. A popular notion is that they waste money for all kinds of useless purposes. Another assumption is that while thus extravagantly spending money they do little towards providing means of revenue so that taxes shall bear justly upon the people. These assumptions or accusations are not quite true.

"In fact the most difficult task of the members of the finance committees so far as State expenditures are concerned, is to learn to show economic emphasis when appropriations are asked for.

"It is especially hard to say 'no' when after investigation you believe that the improvement or reason for the appropriation is perfectly justifiable. There are so many things which ought to be done; so many things where the benefit to the people would be far greater than the cost, that it is embarrassing to deny appropriations in order that we may do the things which must be done and the State and people keep our expenses within reasonable limits. We already have an immense investment in insane hospitals, charitable institutions, prisons, normal schools, agricultural schools, roads and canals. The running expenses of these activities increase year by year as our investment increases. These institutions also have to be kept in repair, and we must continually improve, enlarge, rebuild.

Economy Slogan a Sham

"The State is in the same position today as is every municipality and every private business concern with regard to the high cost of living, material and labor. With twenty thousand employees whose average annual salary from the Governor down is approximately one thousand dollars, with necessary repairs of construction of its buildings, roads and canals of millions every year, with many thousands of dependents in its institutions to feed and clothe, with a thousand things which must be done whatever the cost, we have a grave situation to face. The lower State salaries running from $400 to $1,200 must be increased, not only because we can't keep employees unless they are increased, but also because it is right for the State to pay a living wage, and wrong for it not to do so. Food, coal and material must be bought, buildings and roads must be built and repaired. Too long have we waged political campaigns with economy—nearly always a false economy—as our slogan.

"The talk of budgets of forty, fifty, sixty millions is absurd. We appropriated seventy-eight millions this year, and while something over six millions of this is directly attributable to the war, I can assure you that if the State does its simple duty, you will see constantly growing budgets with the one hundred million mark only a few years away."

Senator Sage also discusses interestingly and illuminatingly in the same article future sources of revenue for the State to meet its necessary needs.
MR. FOLKS DIRECTING VAST RELIEF WORK IN FRANCE; OPERATING TEN BUREAUS WITH STAFF OF 200

AID FOR CHILDREN, CRIPPLES, HOMELESS, TUBERCULOUS AND REFUGEES

Reports recently received in this country reveal the magnitude of the work of civilian relief and rehabilitation which the American Red Cross is doing in France.

Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, is in charge of the work there as Director of the Red Cross Department of Civil Affairs. He has organized the work under ten bureaus and now has a staff of 201 persons, nearly all of whom are experts in their line.

Takes His Hat Off to France

"The American Red Cross in France," Mr. Folks said in a recent public statement, "is undertaking lines of work different from those in Denmark, associated with the name Red Cross. It has come to France under circumstances which have no parallel in history. The war which has gone on for three years has drawn into it the entire life of the belligerent nations, every resource, every unit of strength. Every person in France is as a matter of fact engaged in the war, and all of them are suffering from the war. The American Red Cross therefore aims not only to help the sick and wounded soldiers, but it has established a department of Civil Affairs in France just as it has for many years had a department of Civil Affairs in the United States.

"This Department of Civil Affairs has asked the question: What are the present actual immediate needs in view of the three years of war? The Red Cross is by no means entering a virgin soil, for France has done wonders through governmental agencies and through private committees. What are the remaining immediate needs? Wherever and whenever that question is asked one hears of the problem of refugees and 'rapatries,' devastated regions, 'mutiles,' tuberculosis, and children.

"The 'rapatries' are arriving at Evian 500 to 1,000 per day after three years of hardship under alien rule. I take off my hat to the splendid organization worked out by the French Government and the Citizens' Committee of Lyons for their reception."

In all the work which the Red Cross is doing in France the closest cooperation has been maintained between the Department of Civil Affairs and the Rockefeller Foundation. This has been especially true in relation to tuberculosis. Likewise there has been very close sympathy and cooperation with the French Government.

A report from Mr. Folks to Major James H. Perkins, American Red Cross Commissioner for France, under date of November 1, states that within the last few days 38 persons have joined the staff of the Children's Bureau, giving that bureau a total of 103 and the Department of Civil Affairs a total of 201 members as against 107 mentioned in the report of October 1.

A rearrangement of bureaus was effected on October 4th to organize the work of the department more closely.

The Bureau of Refugees and Relief, which was in the preliminary stage of organization a month ago, has now six delegates in various parts of France. In Paris as in the provincial cities the crux of the refugee problem is housing.

On October 1st the work of the American Society for the Relief of French War Orphans was formally assumed by the American Red Cross. The American hostels for refugees which were founded by Mrs. Edith Wharton have also been taken over by the Red Cross.

MR. FOLKS' STAFF IN FRANCE

Following is a partial list of the staff of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross in France:

Director—Homer Folks, Secretary, State Charities Aid Association of New York.
Assistant Director—Walter Abbott.
Chief of Bureau of Reconstruction—L. Cherrillon.
Chief of the Bureau of Tuberculosis—Dr. Wm. Charles White.
Chief of Relief and Economic Rehabilitation—E. E. Hunt.
Chief of the Bureau of the Blind—Charles Carroll.
Chief of Children's Bureau—Dr. William Palmer Lucas.
Chief of Bureau of Refugees and Home Relief in Paris—Miss Margaret Curtis.
Chief of Bureau of Reeducation of "Mutiles," Miss Grace Harper.
Chief of Bureau of Refugees outside Paris—Dr. Edward T. Devine.
Acting Chief of Bureau of "Rapatries," Dr. Wm. Palmer Lucas.
Chief of the Friends' Unit—J. Henry Scattergood.
Chief of the Editorial Bureau—Paul U. Kellogg.
On Staff of Bureau of Tuberculosis—Dr. A. H. Garvin, Supt. of the N. Y. State Hospital for Incipient Pulmonary Tuberculosis, at Raybrook, N. Y., and First Lient. C. L. Belles, of the Medical Reserve Corps.
Recently arrived to aid in the Children's Bureau—Dr. Charles Ulysses Moore, and party of fifteen nurses.
Assistant in the Editorial Bureau—Lewis S. Gannett.
In charge of coordinating the requisitioning of supplies—A. H. Greene, of the Solvay Process Works, Detroit.
Director of the work at Toul with the children forced back by German gas attacks—Dr. J. P. Sedgwick. Assistants: Dr. Alice Barlow Brown and Madame Hortine.
In charge of Children's Dispensary at Nesle—Dr. Baldwin.
Specialist connected with the Friends' Unit—Dr. J. A. Babbitt.
Workers Buy Liberty Bonds

Although far from home and engrossed in stupendous tasks in France, 21 members of the staff of the Department of Civil Affairs, led by Dr. Farrand, the American Red Cross. Other members had made provision for subscribing through other channels.

Caring for "Rapatriees"

One great work splendidly organized by the French Government and the Citizens' Committee is that of sending to Belgium by rail each month that no single agency could wholly meet the unprecedented task, that of caring for the "rapatriees" arriving at Evian, on the shore of Lake Geneva, at the rate of 500 to 1,000 each day.

Mr. Folks, with the assistance of Dr. Farrand and Dr. Miller, of the Rockefeller Foundation, made a careful study of the reception, medical examination and care of these French soldiers daily from the rear of the German lines through Switzerland, to Evian. Dr. William Palmer Lucas, Chief of the Children's Bureau and Acting Chief of the Bureau of "Rapatriees," continued this work, and the result was that the Red Cross has undertaken extensive medical care for the "rapatriees" children at Evian, where one of the large hotels is to be opened shortly as a children's reception hospital. Still another hospital is planned for these children near Lyons, and ultimately a tuberculosis sanatorium for the rapatriee children at Evian.

Not only was it necessary for the Red Cross to aid with medical care for the French returning from a stay of two or three years under alien rule, but ambulances were needed to help the sick and the aged from the railway station to the central clearing house and to the hotels and hospitals. The American Red Cross sent ten ambulances and ambulances with a full corps of drivers.

Reconstruction in Devastated Areas

For intensive reconstruction work, four villages have been selected in the Department of the Somme where the soil is suited for cultivation by machinery and where the French Government is making every effort to plough the land, using ten tractors, ploughing at the rate of 30 acres a day. The Red Cross has worked out a complete scheme of cooperation with the French Government, and will especially attend to the repair of houses and general rehabilitation. In this way, the return of the population is being accelerated and the reconstruction bureau is making an important contribution to the serious problem of wheat growing in France.

In the principal agricultural centers in the devastated region, the Red Cross is supplying relief and furnishing portable houses for the use of the families which have returned. It is also providing barracks to assist in the work of training disabled soldiers, and it is planned to establish experimental agricultural stations.

Aiding Queen of Belgium

The Red Cross is aiding the Queen of Belgium in her work for the children and assistance of hospitals in their work for relief of Belgian soldiers. A certain number of children are being brought from occupied Belgium into France where they may be cared for.

In anticipation of the freeing of part of the territory, warehouses are being established near the Belgian front in order that the Red Cross may be ready to assist the Belgians who may then be liberated.

The devastated areas of France, outside the villages the Red Cross is helping to repair, has been divided into six districts. In each one there will be a permanent delegate and in four there are warehouses for the distribution of supplies.

Fighting the White Scourge

The Department of Civil Affairs working with the Tuberculosis Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation and in the closest cooperation with public charities and private organizations, has undertaken an extensive program to decrease the prevalence of tuberculosis. It has taken over and is carrying on and developing an extensive tuberculosis work formerly in charge of Mrs. Edith Wharton. An unfinished tuberculosis sanatorium at Xyres, near Evian, at last reports, was to be completed for the French on November 15. In addition, the hospital at Biligny was to have been completed by October 15 and over half of them were at that time working with the English Friends at office work, relief, repair work, erection of portable houses, in convalescent hospitals, in fact, in every manner possible. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Gannett of the Friends are assisting Mr. Paul Kellogg of the Survey in an Editorial Bureau which he has organized to take in hand the public interest and historical service of the Department of Civil Affairs.

Committee

To facilitate the work of the department, committees have been formed, one on medical matters headed by Dr. James Alexander Miller as chairman and with Dr. Wm. Palmer Lucas and Dr. Charles White as members. A committee on Medical Social Service was formed composed of Mr. Folks as chairman, Mr. E. T. Devine, Miss Margaret Curtis, Dr. Charles White, Dr. William Palmer Lucas and Dr. James Alexander Miller. Another committee was formed to consider any matters relating to nursing problems consisting of Miss Russell, Miss Ashe, Miss Leete of the Children's Bureau, and the Red Cross.

Since the list of members of the staff appearing on the front page was compiled a report received from Mr. Folks states that the Bureau of Provisional Reconstruction and Rehabilitation, L. Chevryllon, chief, and the Bureau of Relief and Economic Rehabilitation in the Devastated Areas, E. E. Hunt, chief, were consolidated to form the Bureau of Reconstruction and Relief, with E. E. Hunt, chief, and L. Chevryllon, associate chief; similarly the Bureau of Refugees and Home Relief in Paris, Miss Margaret Curtis, chief; the Bureau of Refugees and Dr. Charles White, chief Outside Paris, E. T. Devine, chief, and the work for the blind have been united as the Bureau of Refugees and Relief, with Mr. Devine as chief and Miss Curtis as associate chief; Miss Grace Harper, formerly chief of the Bureau for Reconstruction of Mutilés, has been made chief of that bureau. No separate bureaus will be organized for Reformés or for the American Organizations for Civil Relief, and the titles will not be retained for budget purposes after November 1.
MAKING THE FEEBLEMINDED SELF-SUPPORTING

BY DR. CHARLES BERNEST, Superintendent Rome State Custodial Asylum, Rome, N. Y.

"What shall we do with the feebleminded?" is the cry which is going up all over the country. How can we provide institutions enough to provide for them all? And aside from the enormity of the task, how can we face calmly the idea of shutting up for life, young boys and girls, many of whom are but little removed from ordinary dullness?

At the Rome State Custodial Asylum, the answer to these questions is being worked out practically in the colony system. The colony plan is the parcel idea applied to the high grade feebleminded. It is a cross between the institution and complete freedom, a means whereby the more intelligent feebleminded are saved from lifelong isolation and uselessness within the walls of an institution and at the same time are protected from the evil influences of the world outside. Society is clamoring for workers. Within the walls of the institutions for the feebleminded potential labor is stored. The State is maintaining at tremendous expense numbers of individuals whose work it needs and who would be infinitely happier if allowed to share in normal occupations. The colony system sets free the potential labor in the institutions and places it at the disposal of the State. At the same time it provides supervision for the defective individual who cannot be trusted to stand alone and tries out gradually the individual who is able to live in society without institution supervision.

Feebleminded Boys Increasing Food Supply

The Rome institution now has nine farm colonies with twenty boys each and these boys are supporting themselves, supplying the institution with vegetables and dairy products, providing a labor supply for the farmers of the neighborhood and keeping 1,400 acres of land under cultivation. Far from being a burden, they are an economic asset to the State and they are able to live in a way which approximates normal family life—in an ordinary farmhouse, with a farmer and his wife in charge. When work is light, a boy may hire out to a neighboring farmer at 15 cents an hour, earning a little money for spending and for his savings account. At the same time he is being gradually tested out and trained for life in the world, if his character and habits make this possible.

Boys Reclaim Waste Land for the State

In 1915, the State allowed us to place a colony of our boys at Indian Lake in the Adirondacks on State preserves which were in need of reforestation. We had had experience in forestry work the year before when we reforested 40 acres of reverted State land near Rome, under the supervision of the State Forestry Department. The boys, twenty-five in number, accompanied by two attendants and a representative of the Conservation Commission, set out for camp October 1, 1915. In one month they had planted 150,000 trees covering 150 acres and the work was done better than it had ever been done by paid or convict labor.

Indian Lake is a permanent colony for about twenty boys and a summer camp for about forty more. These boys can not only plant about 500,000 trees a year besides caring for the nurseries, but they can also produce all the vegetables, butter, milk, eggs, beef, mutton and pork which they need for their own maintenance and have some excess products to sell.

Girls Make Equally Good Colonists

Knowing the demand for domestic service and the difficulty of obtaining trained workers, we started a colony for fourteen girls in the city of Rome, October, 1914.

These girls, trained to do all kinds of simple domestic work, were established in an ordinary dwelling house with homelike surroundings under the care of a matron and a social visitor to supervise recreation and work. It is also charged to the house wives of Rome that by telephoning to this home they could secure the services of a girl for domestic work at the rate of fifty cents a day. It was understood of course that the girls would be sent only to good homes and would return to the colony at night. Out of the week's earnings each girl would receive 25 cents for spending money and 50 cents for a savings bank. During the first year, 87 girls served 226 families, earning a total of $3,278.91. This meant that the colony was entirely self-supporting and had money in the bank at the end of the year in addition to paying for the clothing of each girl and giving her an individual savings account.

Four such colonies for girls are now maintained, one of which is at Staten Island, and in every case the demand for their services exceeds the supply.

Doing Their Bit in the Knitting Mills

Last fall the knitting mill at Oriakany Falls was unable to fill its Government orders because of the scarcity of labor. We had the supply to answer this demand and on September 1, 1917, we opened a colony there for our girls to work in the mill at $1.25 a day, or more if they were able to make it by piece work. The girls have been so successful at this work that the management of the mill has bought and equipped a new home to accommodate 25 girls.

In factory work we find an outlet for the superabundant energy of a certain type of feebleminded girl who does not take so kindly to domestic service. They are happy in the work, they are leading a normal though protected life, they are entirely self-supporting, and they are serving their country to the best of their ability.

NEW TUBERCULOSIS COMMITTEE IS ORGANIZED IN ROCHESTER

To promote tuberculosis work in Rochester and to assist in co-ordinating and unifying the varied tuberculosis activities of public and private agencies that have points of contact with the tuberculosis problem, a committee of representative men and women was organized by the staff of the Association’s tuberculosis department on Wednesday, November 21, at a luncheon given by Dr. Henry T. Williams, at the Genesee Valley Club.

The new committee begins its work with the active support of the officials of three public agencies: Dr. George W. Goler, Health Officer; Mrs. E. H. Wolfe and John J. Lloyd, respectively president and medical superintendent of the county tuberculosis sanatorium, and J. Warrant Castleman, president of the Board of Education. It also has the sympathetic support of a number of social welfare agencies. Following are the officers and members of the executive committee: Chairman, Isaac Adler; vice-chairman, Dr. Howard L. Prince; secretary, Rev. L. Howard Denny; treasurer, Percy R. McPhail; executive committee: the officers and Mrs. Edward Bausch, Mrs. Fannie R. Bigelow, Mrs. Dewitt B. Macomber, Joseph P. MacSweeney, Robert C. Shumway, Dr. Henry T. Williams and Rabbi Horace J. Wolf.

Program of Work

The immediate program of work of the new committee will be to co-operate with the health officer of Rochester and the board of managers of the county tuberculosis sanatorium in the establishment of a series of consultation stations to give medical advice and treatment to men rejected from military service because of tuberculosis as well as to civilians; and to provide additional visiting nurses to instruct and aid the tuberculous in their homes; to assist the Board of Education in the extension of a system of fresh air classes in the public schools for the special care and instruction of children coming from homes in which there are open cases of tuberculosis; and to keep the public informed as to the nature, transmission, treatment and prevention of the disease.

A Patriotic Duty

Mr. Adler, on being inducted into the office of chairman, said: "War is fought not only by the armies in the field, but by the organized nations standing back of them. It is said that it takes five people back home to keep a soldier in fighting trim at the front. It is important, therefore, that organized efforts be made to conserve the health, vitality and physical vigor of the people back home. I am further interested in this tuberculosis cause because of its care with the children, concentrating to no small degree its efforts as it does on the one hand to the prevention of their infection and to building them up to resist the disease on the other. I came to the view a deep appreciation of the value of these things while a member of the Board of Education and while chairman of the public health committee of the Chamber of Commerce."

Isaac Adler Heads
New Rochester Committee

Immediately after the meeting the executive committee entered into a contract for the sale of the Christmas Seals with the State tuberculosis committee and made arrangements for an intensified selling campaign of the Seals. Miss Emily W. Smith, one of the field agents of the State committee, was taken over by the new organization to manage the sale of the Seals.

The Mental Hygiene Committee and the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness have nineteen mental health lectures scheduled during the next three months. Seven of them are in the courses of the New York City Board of Education.

Miss Julia F. Wells has been given a leave of absence from the Social Service Department of the Association’s Mental Hygiene Committee to join the staff of Homer Folks, Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France. Miss Wells has reached France.

Miss Gertrude Bruyn, the Association’s Ulster County Agent for Dependent Children, has been granted a leave of absence for three months to act as instructor in charities and corrections at Mt. Holyoke College, of which she is a graduate.

Dr. R. R. Reeder, Superintendent of the New York Orphanage at Hastings-on-Hudson, has joined the Red Cross forces in France to assist in supervising and standardizing institutions for war orphans. During his absence his place at Hastings is filled by his son, Edwin H. Reeder.
PUSHING CONSTRUCTION WORK ON STATE INSTITUTIONS

$569,000 IN CONTRACTS AWARDED AT LETCHWORTH VILLAGE

In spite of the scarcity and high prices of building materials and the shortage in the available supply of labor, commendable progress is being made in the State institutional construction work provided for by the appropriations granted by the 1917 Legislature and approved by Governor Whitman. This is especially true in relation to the institutions for the feebleminded, of which the State stands in such great need.

One of the largest and most important construction undertakings at present is at Letchworth Village, in Rockland County, where contracts amounting to $569,199 have been awarded against authorized appropriations in 1917 of $568,600. Work is now in progress. Other construction work there under appropriations totaling $135,000 has been temporarily delayed because the bids received aggregated $179,963.52, or $46,963.52 in excess of money appropriated or authorized. This will necessitate a revision of plans, to be decided upon by the Board of Managers and State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher.

The progress that is being made is especially noteworthy and commendable in view of the great need of additional buildings and in view of delays that have occurred in other years. The Board of Managers of Letchworth Village has shown its appreciation of the progress under the 1917 appropriations by expressing its thanks, through its secretary, to State Architect Pilcher for the satisfactory completion of the work entrusted to him.

Letchworth Village Contracts

At Letchworth Village, Governor Whitman approved appropriations in 1917 for an additional $55,000; industrial building, $40,600; service building, $58,000; attendants' home, $54,000; eight cottages, $335,000; underground connections, telephone, sewer, etc., $21,000; underground piping, $100,000; bridge, $15,000; central heating plant, $40,000. The value of the work, as represented by the Legislative appropriations, was approximately $726,000.

State Architect Pilcher began the work of preparing plans and specifications, detail drawings and other work preliminary to advancing the work to contract on April 19. The plans were approved by the Board of Managers of Letchworth Village on August 31, and proposals were asked on September 28 for the eight cottages, located in the female group, and the central heating plant, the assembly hall and industrial building; and on October 6, the attendants' home, service building, female group, underground electric connections, underground sewer and water connections, underground heating connections and the bridge across the creek near the laundry.

Contracts for the work on the eight cottages, the assembly hall and industrial building, heating plant, underground piping and the bridge were awarded at a total of $594,800, and it was decided to do some of the underground piping work by special fund estimate, at a cost of $34,899, making the total contract figure $669,199 as against the total authorized appropriations of $569,000. This work will proceed at once and it will be fairly well under way by January 1st.

The proposals for the attendants' home and service building and underground sewer and water connections exceeded the available appropriations for the work by about $46,000, the bids received totaling $179,963.52 while the appropriations authorized amounted to $135,000. The managers of Letchworth Village will confer with State Architect Pilcher and the plans will be revised to bring future bids within the amounts appropriated by the State.

Progress at Newark and Albion

Appropriations totaling $36,000 were made in 1917 for improvements at the State Custodial Asylum for Feeble-Minded Women at Newark. The installation of two new boilers and stokers for boilers, repairs and improvements to boiler and heating plants, for which $33,000 was appropriated is well under way, the plans for the work having been approved by the managers within a short time after the appropriation bill was signed. The plans for a new cottage for which $3,000 was appropriated have gone to the institution managers for approval.

Plans and specifications for new boilers and repairs to steam lines at the Western House of Refuge at Albion have been completed in the expectation that bids will be received on December 19 and work will be once placed under contract. The appropriation was $21,000. The plans for a new cottage for which $30,000 was authorized and $2,000 appropriated will go to the managers for approval this month.

Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the County Agencies Department of the State Charities Aid Association, and Mr. James H. Foster, Director of the Child Welfare Division of the State Board of Charities, appointed before the Sullivan County Board of Supervisors last month jointly to urge an appropriation for an agency for dependent children.

The Hospital Development Commission held public hearings at the Academy of Medicine in New York City for two days last month regarding this year's legislative program to increase capacity of State institutions for the insane, feebleminded, and epileptic. The Commission has been busy engaged for several months in an investigation of the needs of these institutions and will submit a report, with recommendations at the coming session of the Legislature.
COUNTIES SPEED UP TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL WORK

SEEKING SITES, LETTING CONTRACTS AND ERECTING THE BUILDINGS

The boards of supervisors about the State are holding their annual sessions during November and December in the twenty-one counties affected by the new mandatory tuberculosis hospital statute enacted at the session of the Legislature last May. This law requires all counties having upwards of 35,000 population to provide tuberculosis hospitals if not already thus equipped and to have the institutions ready for the reception of patients by July 1st, 1918. The progress made toward the establishment of the institutions by the majority of the counties is quite encouraging.

Four Hospitals Under Construction

Construction is well advanced on the hospitals in Rensselaer, Niagra, Steuben and Otsego Counties. The hospital in Rensselaer will be managed by the capable, experienced and efficient board of managers of Lake View Sanitarium, the old county hospital which because of its unfortunate location on the grounds of the county almshouse is to be supplanted by the new institution which the county has wisely located on a site a mile beyond and removed from the almshouse property. It is expected that the boards of managers of the hospitals in Niagara, Steuben and Otsego will be appointed before the close of the year.

Three Counties to Let Contracts

Bids for construction are being advertised in Rockland, Broome and Chautauqua Counties, the plans having been approved by the State Commissioner of Health, as provided by the county hospital statute. The Rockland County Hospital will have sixty beds and is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $90,000. Broome County's hospital will have seventy-five beds, and will, it is estimated, cost $100,000. The major portion of the site has been purchased but several parcels are being condemned by the Board of Highway Commissioners. The Chautauqua supervisors several weeks ago appropriated $36,000 for the hospital in addition to the $175,000 made available for the institution by the will of the late Mrs. E. M. Newton, of Fredonia.

Plans Being Drawn in Three Counties

Architects have been appointed and plans are being prepared for hospitals in Columbia, Herkimer and Livingston Counties. The site for the Columbia County Hospital is well suited for the purpose and is located in the town of Philmont. It was approved by the auditor, county commissioner of health and the town health officer on November 10th, and was purchased by the Board of Supervisors several days later at a cost of $4,000.

Sites Approved in Wayne and Nassau

Sites have been selected and very recently formally approved by the State and local health authorities in Nassau and Wayne Counties. The county commissioners of both counties and the preparation of plans are pending.

Four Counties Select Sites

The Allegany County Supervisors, on November 20th selected a site on the outskirts of Belmont, the county seat. The property was the most suitable one under consideration and will undoubtedly be approved by the State and local health authorities. The sum of $29,000 was appropriated for the project and a committee of three was appointed to take charge of the enterprise. The St. Lawrence, Madison and Delaware County supervisors have also selected sites. The Delaware Board has also appointed a builder. But the site in Delaware has been disapproved by the State and local health authorities on the ground of remoteness and inaccessibility. The one in St. Lawrence unfortunately is also far removed from the centers of population. Its approval is doubtful. The property selected by the Madison County supervisors is objectionable because it adjoins the almshouse.

Clinton and Genesee Counties are expected to select sites very shortly. A number of properties are under consideration in each county, most of which have been informally inspected by representatives of the State Department of Health.

Very little action of an affirmative nature has been taken by the supervisors in Franklin and Sullivan Counties. The Washington County Board has failed, as described in another column of this issue, to take any affirmative action, but has questioned the constitutionality of the statute. Recently its counsel gave an opinion that the law is constitutional. The judge did not pass there is ground for the belief that the board will decide to go ahead with the hospital project.

NEW TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL LAW IS CONSTITUTIONAL!

Readers of the S. C. A. A. News—particularly members of county boards of supervisors and those who are engaged in the campaign for the prevention of tuberculosis—will be interested to learn that the mandatory tuberculosis hospital statute enacted by the Legislature last May is considered constitutional by an attorney engaged by the Washington County Board of Supervisors.

That county is one of the 21 affected by the new statute, which provides that every county having upwards of 35,000 population and not already equipped with a tuberculosis hospital shall establish such an institution and have it ready for the reception of patients by July 1, 1918.

The Washington County Board of Supervisors has shown a disinclination to act affirmatively under the provisions of the new statute, and at its October session voted to engage counsel to render an opinion as to the constitutionality of the statute. John W. Sawyer, of Hudson, was engaged by the Board for this purpose, and he recently filed an opinion with the Board in which he held that the law is constitutional.

Interesting and pertinent extracts from the opinion are quoted below:

"But, although the legislature had the right to authorize the establishment of the hospitals by the counties, did it have the right to require their establishment?"

"In considering this question it is important not to lose sight of the dual nature of a municipality. A municipality has a private capacity and it has a public capacity. In its private capacity it decides and administers matters of purely local concern within prescribed limits, and in so doing has the constitutional right to be free from dictation or interference by the legislature. In its public capacity, however, a municipality is but an agent of the state by which it was created, and its functions as such are the exercise of authority conferred by the legislature and obedience of the mandates of the state, expressed through the legislature, in matters affecting the general public welfare."

"The establishment generally throughout the state of the tuberculosis hospitals is a matter of general public concern seems obvious. Any county in which a hospital is erected will derive special benefit from that hospital; but that hospital, in conjunction with the other hospitals established or to be established in the other counties, presumably will give or aid in giving the entire state the desired relief and protection."

"The special benefits, separately to be derived by each county, blending into the general public benefit of the state, does not necessarily characterize the statute either as one relating to a matter of purely local concern or as one not primarily for the benefit of the municipality."

"In Sun Printing Association v. Mayor of New York, 5 App. Div. 230 (affirmed by the court of appeals), the court held that the power of the city to control over municipalities by the legislature, the court said: 'They may also be required by the sovereign power to furnish their citizens with schools, hospitals, dispensaries, parks, libraries and museums, with zoological, botanical, and other gardens.' The placing upon the state commissioner of health the duty of establishing and putting in operation the hospital, in case of the failure of a board of supervisors so to do, I do not consider violative of the so-called home rule provisions of the constitution. The privilege of performing acts was given as a part of the power of the supervisors by the original act, and the duty of performing them has now been imposed upon the board."

"The question in question of the constitution was intended to preclude the state from performing, through its officials, a function which the legislature and the people of the state have the right to perform by a voluntary act of the public health upon the failure of performance by local officials upon whom the state had imposed that duty."
Women For Commissioners of Charities in Schenectady and Amsterdam

Mrs. P. H. Valentine and Miss Sarah Mc Cleary Are Former Children's Agents of State Charities Aid Association

Two women who have been State Charities Aid Association's county agents for dependent children, have recently been appointed Commissioners of Charities in up-State cities.

Mrs. Phoebe H. Valentine has been appointed by Mayor-elect Simon of Schenectady as Commissioner of Charities in that city at a salary of $2,000 a year. She succeeds Dr. Robert T. Hill, Professor of Economics and Sociology in Union College. Mrs. Valentine has recently been in the employ of the county as its agent for dependent children. Previously she was county agent there working for the Schenectady County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association. This is the first time in the history of Schenectady that a woman has been selected as a member of the Mayor's cabinet. Mrs. Valentine has been active in charitable, civic and suffrage affairs in Schenectady for several years. She is a graduate of Syracuse University.

Miss Sarah Mc Cleary has been appointed by Mayor-elect Conover as Commissioner of Charities in Amsterdam at a salary of $1,200 a year. Before becoming the State Charities Aid Association's county agent for dependent children in Montgomery County, Miss Mc Cleary was assistant to the Commissioner of Charities in Amsterdam.

A Merry Christmas and a Hopeful New Year

Christmas snows, if they come this year, will fall upon an America more serious than our country has been for many years past. Christmas is for the children, and, of course, will be as merry, as full of realization of childish anticipations, as full of the satisfactions of childhood desires as it has ever been. Conservation of food, war taxes, transportation problems, and all the other problems of the war will dampen but little the spirit of Christmas time.

But the element that made so many homes the happiest will be lessened in thousands of cases. There will be many remembrances of family gatherings that were happy which will bring a pang of sorrow now, because of a vacant chair.

Yet there will be deep contentment that will make Christmas “merry” in a real sense, for America will realize on its first war Christmas new values and will see more clearly some of the deeper relations. Family ties will be the stronger because some members of the households will be in places of present or future danger. Country and community will mean more to those who are serious-minded. The thought of disorganized Russia will bring home to us a deeper appreciation of the benefits of our country which, after all, is the happiest in the world to live in.

The thought of France whose strength is being so generously expended in the terrific struggle will make us determine our plans for fighting the war to a successful conclusion. It will also bring a feeling of exaltation that now we have thrown aside some of the frivolities, some of the unnecessary things, and are engaged in fundamental, if soul-racking activity.

As part of the sense of new values or a new sense of the old values, the nation at war will come to appreciate the importance of social activities that have received but little emphasis. Among these activities are surely those in which our own Association has striven for so many years. The welfare of children, care and prevention of mental disease and defect, the care of the health of the community, alleviation of suffering among the less fortunate, and conservation of humanity in general will with us as much as in Europe assume greater significance.

The New Year will break with a new outlook, filled with uncertainties, but also with the firm determination that brings hope in itself. Satisfaction has already come with the vast demonstrations of national strength and resources, and greater national satisfaction will come with further exercise of that strength. Hence the New Year, with all its anticipated sorrows, with all its anticipated horrors of war will break with deeper and greater hopes.

Social agencies dealing with vital questions of public welfare may then take an humble pride in the part that shall be theirs in this new era, in the part they have played to bring it about, and individual members may well take part of the feelings of patriotic strength and hope.

In this sense the State Charities Aid Association wishes for its members and friends a very “Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.”

Women Given Posts on Charities Board and Probation Commission

Governor Charles S. Whitman has recently appointed two women to membership on important State Boards.

He has named Mrs. Eleanor W. Higley, wife of Brodie G. Higley, an attorney of Hudson Falls, as a member of the State Board of Charities. Mrs. Higley succeeds Dr. Frank F. Gow, of Schuylerville, resigned. She will represent the fourth judicial district.

Mrs. Higley is the only woman now on the State Board. She has been active in club and suffrage work and has served as chairman in her district of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. She has long been interested in charitable work, especially prison reform.

The Governor's other appointment is Mrs. John Francis Yawger, of New York City, who has been named as a member of the State Probation Commission.
RED CROSS SEAL CAMPAIGN SWEEPS ON TO VICTORY

250,000 LETTERS PUT TUBERCULOSIS PROBLEM SQUARELY UP TO PEOPLE

An army of 45,000,000 Red Cross Christmas Seals has smashed the first line trenches of pessimism and indifference, and is pushing on to certain victory in a whirlwind campaign that promises to raise $150,000 for the fight against tuberculosis in time of war.

Over half of this vast Red Cross Seal army is being transported by mail in a quarter of a million appeal letters directed to thousands of prospective purchasers in every nook and corner of New York State. The letters explain the seriousness of tuberculosis as a war problem and put squarely up to the people of the State the responsibility of protecting our soldiers and civilians from the ravages of this disease.

"God Speed Your Work"

"God speed your noble work for the conservation of the nation's man-power, and may this small contribution help you," was the inspiring message of the first letter opened in the 1917 campaign. Replies written in the same spirit and indicating the public's determination to fight the battle against disease behind the lines are coming in daily.

A retired captain, U. S. Army, writes: "Any way we can help with your best wishes the enclosed check. They wouldn't let me go 'over there' but it affords me pleasure to keep the others at the front by doing my bit in this way."

A patriotic girl sends this message: "My brother is fighting in France, but I send the contribution I know he would have made to your battle against disease."

These and hundreds of similarly friendly responses indicate that the mail sale not only has great educational value and money raising power, but is an acceptable selling method to the general public.

First Returns Are Promising

That this year's sale by mail will break all previous records is indicated by the initial returns. The first thousand replies to letters sent by the State Charities Aid Association to the rural sections of New York brought back over $700, or 70c. per letter, an increase over last year's rate of approximately 100 per cent. Similar reports come from local committees in all parts of the State. The initial returns indicate that the people of New York State, outside of New York City, will greatly oversubscribe their quota of $150,000 for anti-tuberculosis work.

About 200,000 cases of tuberculosis in the 10,000,000 men registered for the selective draft; thousands of other cases excluded from the regular army, the Federalized National Guard and the officers' training camps; 150,000 tuberculous soldiers invalided from the French armies; the existence of approximately 800,000 cases in France; increased mortality and morbidity rates from tuberculosis in Germany, England, Russia, Serbia, Austria-Hungary, Holland and Italy—these and other facts have created a patriotic public that tuberculosis is one of the worst enemies of national strength and efficiency. The realization of the seriousness of the problem in this country and the magnitude of the measures necessary to meet it, have caused local Red Cross Seal agencies all over the State to organize their campaigns earlier and more efficiently than in any previous year. Seals have been on sale since November 10 in many localities.

New York First Last Year

The American Red Cross has urged thoroughgoing co-operation between its local chapters and the various local anti-tuberculosis associations to increase the total sales of Christmas Seals this year to an unprecedented figure.

"Mutual co-operation between these organizations," says a letter from Red Cross Headquarters to Division Managers, "will work for the immediate benefit of both, for the welfare of the United States as a whole, and for the winning of the war."

Last year, New York State stood first among the larger States for the highest per capita sale of Seals, the ratio being 2.07 per inhabitant. The total 1916 sale was 21,718,388 Seals, 12,076,413 of these being sold in the State outside of New York City.

"See to it," says a letter from Charles M. DeForest, National Sales Manager, to the State Charities Aid Association, "that Wisconsin, New Jersey, or Indiana do not wrest the Red Cross Seal pennant from you. I am sure that you and your co-workers selling Red Cross Seals will strive to keep New York at the top of the list."
MR. FOLKS CABLES NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE FROM FRANCE

"SOCIAL ILLS IN PEACE-TIME BECOME NATIONAL CALAMITIES IN WAR"

COMPLYING with a request from THE S. C. A. A. NEWS for a New Year's message to its readers, Homer Folks, who is on leave of absence from the State Charities Aid Association, has cabled the following based on his five months' experience as Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France:

"You ask a New Year's message for S. C. A. A. NEWS readers after my five months in France.

"There is one—clear, emphatic, unescapable. It is this: Social ills in peace-time become national calamities in war.

"Tuberculosis, infant mortality and venereal diseases deserve attention in peace; but in war they must be met as major offenses.

"In Paris every week one death in every five is from tuberculosis. The number of births is greatly reduced. Infant mortality is relatively favorable, but it could be cut in half. The great refugee population in overcrowded quarters is sowing the seeds of future harvests of tuberculosis and reduced vitality.

"The American Red Cross in France is helping actively in all these lines. In cooperation with French agencies, it is moving hundreds of refugee families from unhealthy into sanitary quarters; finishing unfinished tuberculosis hospitals; helping tuberculosis dispensaries; assisting in organizing training schools for health visitors; and conducting medical examinations.

"Five hundred repatriated children are being received daily at Evian. The Red Cross is conducting several children's hospitals and medical stations; starting a broad infant welfare educational campaign; making grants of money and supplies to hundreds of French and American organizations, officials and individuals doing relief and health work.

"The Department of Civil Affairs aims to help win the war, and help to make it more worth while to win the war, by conserving the life and vitality of those for whom the war is to be won.

"The United States, about to undergo the strain of war, cannot afford to neglect any sound measures for health and social welfare. It is far more important than ever before to eliminate all unnecessary sources of disease and weakness, to make the reserve power of the American people fully adequate to both foreign and home demands."

S. C. A. A. Gets $13,000 From N. Y. Times Appeal

In spite of innumerable wartime demands upon the charity of the public, the holiday appeal for the "100 Neediest Cases," published in The New York Times for New York philanthropic and charitable organizations, enlisted a generous response this year.

The contributions received up to date for the thirty-five cases listed for this Association among the neediest cases amount to $13,028—a few hundred dollars more than last year.

Perhaps of even greater significance than the actual money received, has been the unusual amount of personal interest shown by Times readers in the pathetic stories of these needy and homeless children. Quite a surprising number of people have called at the office of the Association to get more details about the cases which especially appealed to them, or actually to meet the children, thus establishing personal contact, which will undoubtedly lead to continued interest.

Many children were entirely provided for for a year. Several people offered to pay for a child's board for a certain number of months or a year, and others offered to provide clothes. In some cases not only board and clothes have been provided, but extra money to obtain special medical care. There are over seventy names on our "follow up list" of contributors who have generously offered to continue their help and interest in the children toward whose needs they gave so generously.

About twenty youngsters were provided with a real Christmas holiday by several Times readers who opened their homes and hearts to these little people. Six children were the guests of a family living on Riverside Drive. Three little brothers are visiting in a home in South Orange. Two other little boys are in New Rochelle and still others had a jolly Christmas week in homes that may develop into permanent placements.

The Association expresses its sincere appreciation of the generosity and kindly interest which so many have taken in these children under its care.
ENORMOUS PROGRAM OF CIVIL RELIEF WORK IS GOING FORWARD IN FRANCE

Further details of the work which the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross is doing in France have been received in a report from Homer Folks, Director of the department. Extracts follow:

With the aid of A. H. Green, Jr., recently added to the staff, a consolidated purchasing list was completed on October 4th, and the needs of the various hospitals, in the care of the insane, Children, Tuberculosis, Refugees, and Reconstruction, for the six months beginning November last. The purchasing list comprised 478 standardized kinds of articles, many of them with sub-classifications, including drugs, clothing, household furnishings, office supplies, and surgical implements, and food. It ran to over 200 pages, the entire order being shipped in 31 carloads from New York to Paris.

The Red Cross will continue for a period of six months from October last the assistance which it has given through the several organizations in French war orphans, such aid not to exceed the total of the last month's grant. The society, which has refused the aid of the American Red Cross' mission, and of Mrs. Wharton, has been taken over by the Red Cross. The Red Cross assumes financial responsibility for the various activities of the eight depots for the relief of war orphans, offering meals at moderate prices, free lodgings, employment, dispensary service, and creches. The work will continue under the direction of the several responsible officials of the society, with the aid of the French government, the American Red Cross, and various other bodies.

The plan is to open a hospital in Paris for the treatment of venereal diseases, and to provide facilities for the care of patients suffering from syphilis.

The Children's Bureau

Joseph J. Weber, Executive Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association's Commission on Hospitals, has completed a study of the facilities now provided in dispensaries in New York State, outside of New York City, for the diagnosis and treatment of venereal diseases, especially syphilis, which is the chief preventable cause of insanity.

This study is supplementary to a similar study made of the facilities of hospitals. Mr. Weber finds, in general, that the dispensaries, like the hospitals, apparently do not appreciate the significance of the problem and that the facilities, for dealing with it, are, for the most part, inadequate and ineffective.

Mr. Weber found by means of a questionnaire that six out of the twenty-seven general dispensaries studied in New York State, outside New York City, maintain clinics for the treatment of syphilis. From these six clinics more or less detailed information was furnished by five.

Nine out of the twenty-seven dispensary maintained clinics for the treatment of gonorrhea.

"From the large number of dispensaries throughout the State that do not maintain clinics for the treatment of syphilis and gonorrhea," Mr. Weber reports, "and from the information received from those that do, we must conclude that the same criticism made of the hospital service for the treatment of these diseases applies with equal, if not with greater force, to the dispensaries also. Like the hospitals, they apparently do not appreciate the importance of this problem and the necessity for providing facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of these diseases. Consequently, many of them give no treatment whatever, and where treatment is given it is not as thorough-going and as effective as it might be. Follow up work especially in syphilitic cases where it is most needed is sadly neglected, and there is no adequate record keeping."

Mr. Weber recommends, as he did in his report on the hospital service, that systematic effort be undertaken to secure a more extensive and more thorough treatment of these diseases by the dispensaries, and that the Committee on Mental Hygiene and the Committee on Hospitals, in cooperation and concerted action with the New York Social Hygiene Association and the New York State Department of Health bring before the hospitals and dispensaries the facts about the relation of these diseases to public health and endeavor to have them undertake definite steps to provide adequate diagnosis and treatment.
WHERE THERE'S A WILL
THERE'S A WAY

How Dunkirk Secured an Open-Air School

The Dunkirk Board of Education and the local Tuberculosis Committee opened early in November a fresh-air class for 25 children. There were no rooms available for the class in any school building. But, unlike some boards of education elsewhere in the State, that did not inhibit the initiative of the Dunkirk board. It went ahead and purchased a one-story frame portable house for $600. This has been placed on a small plot of land in the rear of one of the regular school buildings and just a few steps from it. The new building is of pine timber, painted yellow to harmonize with the other school building near it. Each of the two long sides of the school room has three windows opening outward on ratchets, lengthwise of the window space. One end of the room has a large window, the other opens on to an extension which serves as a vestibule for hats, coats, rubbers, etc.

At present the school room is comfortably equipped with 25 Moulthrop chairs, a desk and chair for the teacher, and a stove (in which wood only is to be burned). The plan is to have a fire in the stove only in the morning, giving the children a chance to get warm, and then letting them get into their warm outdoor wraps and opening the windows and letting the fire die out. Each child is equipped with an Eskimo suit and a woolen blanket.

Children and Parents Approve

The teacher of the open-air class was selected from the regular teaching force for her interest and enthusiasm in open-air work. The pupils have been taken from the first, second and third grades in the various local schools. The teacher visited the class teachers of those grades and with their help selected about sixty who seemed in great need of open-air school treatment. These sixty children were examined by the school physician, who designated which 25 of them were in most need of the open-air treatment. The teacher then visited the homes of these 25 children to secure the consent of their parents to have the children enter this new school. She found that the parents were not only willing, once they had had the plan explained to them, to have their children attend the open-air school, but they were eager to have them do so. And the children themselves—those chosen, and many who have not been—are clamoring to get into it.

The class is to have sessions each school day from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Across the lawn from the school is a club house, and the woman in charge has agreed to serve hot lunches to the members of the fresh-air class. The teacher and the school nurse plan the menus.

S. C. A. A. Managers
Elect Mr. Canfield

Mr. George F. Canfield passed the great war, it is to be hoped, will be over and the world will have been made safe for the State Charities Aid Association.

"There is inspiration also in the thought of our noble traditions, and of the great opportunity for service which lies before us. The State Charities Aid Association is a great organization for preventive philanthropy, and in consequence of the havoc and devastation of the world war there will be greater need than ever of preventive philanthropy during the generations to come."

Mr. Canfield is a graduate of Harvard College and the Harvard law school. He is a member of the law firm of Satterlee, Canfield & Stone in Manhattan, and Professor of Law in the law School of Columbia University. Besides a number of important connections with commercial enterprises, he is a Trustee of the Society of St. Johnland and the Five Points House of Industry, and is a member of various bar associations, the Civil Service Reform Association and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

In accepting the Board's unanimous election as President, Mr. Canfield said:

"I thank you for the high honor you have conferred upon me and for this expression of your confidence. I have always considered it a great honor, as it has been one of my greatest satisfactions, to serve as one of your Vice Presidents under Mr. Choate as President, and I wish that this arrangement might have continued indefinitely. For to be selected a successor to Mr. Choate gives me a sense of duty and responsibility which it is very difficult to discharge."

"But there is much in our position and prospects to make the work of directing our affairs appear to be an attractive opportunity rather than an irksome task. Our financial condition, considering existing circumstances, is most satisfactory. And with the pledges to the fund which we have raised in commemoration of the services of our honored Vice President, Mrs. William H. Rice, added to the contributions from our supporters which we may reasonably count upon, the work of our Association seems to be assured, at least for the next five years. And before that time has
JUST A MOMENT

The St. Lawrence State Hospital at Ogdensburg raised 16,000 bushels of potatoes and over 7,000 bushels of turnips on its farm this year.

LeRoy E. Baumann, assistant secretary of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, is giving a course of five educational lectures on mental health, at the Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A. in New York City.

Mr. Joseph J. Weber, Executive Secretary of the Association's Committee on Hospitals, recently visited Toronto, Canada, with Dr. S. S. Goldwater to study Canadian military hospitals.

Miss Rachel Ford has been appointed social worker at the Willard State Hospital. Miss Ford has been at the institution as a nurse and supervisor for twenty years. All of the State hospitals now have social workers for field work and home visitation.

Franklin B. Kirkbridge, acting chairman of the Executive Committee of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, has returned from France, where he spent several weeks in organizing Y. M. C. A. activities among the American military forces.

The Mental Hygiene Committee and the Public Education Association of New York City are formulating a plan for special clinic and social service work with problematical children. The experiment is designed to demonstrate the need of mental hygiene work in the schools and to show what can be done for psychopathic children.

Porter R. Lee has been appointed director of the New York School of Philanthropy to succeed Dr. Edward T. Devine, who has resigned. Dr. Devine is now chief of the Bureau of Refugees and Home Relief of the American Red Cross in France and expects to remain there indefinitely, probably for the duration of the war.

CARE FOR CHILDREN AND WOUNDED

(EDITORIAL FROM THE JAMESTOWN POST)

The war will not be fully decided with the adoption of a peace treaty; but twenty years after, the nation that has recuperated most fully from the terrible struggle may be considered to be the winner. There are two great movements now under way that will have an important bearing on the rapidity of recuperation and rehabilitation in the United States. One is the conservation of child life, which is not only a humanitarian problem but a vital question of national stability and supremacy. The other is the work of the Government in providing hospitals for the purpose of making wounded soldiers able to sustain themselves in remunerative occupations during the remainder of their lives.

For the dependent and homeless children, the State Charities Aid Association is doing a great work through private contributions in providing proper housing, care and training for the neglected, destitute and forlorn. In view of the future needs of the country this is one of the most pressing problems of today. It should have the support of every philanthropic person. War kills off the best of the nation's manpower and every nation feels now the need more than ever of redoubling its energies in saving those that remain.

For the wounded who will return from the battlefields incapacitated for further military service, the Government considers itself under an obligation to provide every means both by medical treatment and by industrial education to prepare them to resume private life in such vocations as they may be able to enter with regard to their physical limitations and the training that may be given them in schools established by the Government. The first step in this direction has been the choosing of sites for hospitals in nineteen cities where the men can be made useful to themselves and to the community.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS S. C. A. A. CHILDREN

On Christmas afternoon the State Charities Aid Association gave a party in the Association rooms for about 75 children who are in boarding homes under the supervision of its Placing-Out Agency.

A member of the Children's Committee had provided a tree which was gaily decorated and laden with gifts. A magician entertained the children delightfully. In the course of the afternoon Santa Claus appeared in full regalia and distributed to each child a toy, some useful article and a box of candy. The older girls helped serve ice cream and cake.
THIS CRIPPLED TOT WANTS HOME AND MOTHER’S LOVE

Little Grace was discovered in an almshouse where she was born on August 19, 1915. Although she was thought to be a cripple from infantile paralysis, the trouble was found to be club feet. She has no mother who can give her loving care.

The After-Care Committee of the Association brought her to the Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled in New York. Treatment by the application of plaster casts has made a great improvement in Grace’s feet.

Since the middle of July she has been in a boarding home where she has grown and improved wonderfully. She is now an attractive, healthy, and happy little girl of two who needs only a real home and a mother to make her little lot of happiness quite complete. This the State Charities Aid Association is asked to supply.

Urges Special Provision for Voluntary Patients in the State Hospitals

The Board of Managers of the St. Lawrence State Hospital, in its thirtieth annual report, calls attention to the need of special accommodations for convalescent, timid, and voluntary patients. The report says:

“At the present time this class of cases is cared for in the regular hospital wards. In these wards they come in contact with disturbed and actively depressed cases and find themselves in an environment which is not likely to produce the best results, or results such as we would like to have occur in cases of this kind. A large number of the voluntary cases that come to the hospital are found to be in the early stages of mental disease, and suitable treatment and environment is most likely to bring about improvement and recovery.

“Owing to the fact that voluntary cases, of necessity, have come to the general wards of the hospital, our experience has been that they do not, under these circumstances, stay at the hospital a sufficient time to enable us to bring about permanent improvement. If brought to a hospital such as the Board recommends, we believe that decidedly better results might be obtained, and in the end, in addition to increasing the recovery rate, there would be a decided financial saving to the State.”

EXPERT MEDICAL CARE FOR CHILDREN IN BOARDING HOMES

While the principal work of the S. C. A. Child Placing Agency is finding homes in which children will be taken for adoption, or as members of the family without the actual legal adoption, the Agency finds that there are always a few children who need special boarding before they are placed, or who for one reason or another do not fit in the home which was selected for them, and have to be boarded until a more suitable home is found. Many of these children need special medical care.

There is on the staff of the Agency Dr. Eleanor Bertine, who gives special attention to the physical supervision of the children in the boarding homes.

During the past year she examined 257 cases—4 under 1 year of age, 122 between 1 and 10 years, and 111 over 10 years. The number of cases re-examined during year was 153; cases needing only ordinary hygiene, 8; cases needing hygiene plus other recommendations, 72; cases needing treatment in office, 17; cases referred to clinics, 171; cases referred to hospitals, 16; miscellaneous cases, 9.

INCORPORATION FOR WORK OF COUNTY AGENCIES

Recognition of the value and practicality of the work done in various counties of the State by the State Charities Aid Association’s County Agents for Dependent Children is shown in new or increased appropriations granted by public authorities in various counties recently for the support of agencies.

New Agency Established

A new county agency has just been established in Sullivan County. The Board of Supervisors has made an appropriation of $1,200 toward its expenses for 1918. Private funds have supported an agency in this county for the past three months.

A request has also been made to the Board of Supervisors in Franklin County for an agency in that county, and the application is pending.

The Columbia County Board of Supervisors has increased the appropriation toward the support of the agency in that county from $1,600 for the current year to $1,700 for the year to come. In Washington County the appropriation was raised from $1,000 to $1,200, and $2,000 additional was set aside as a special fund to pay the board of children in private families. Heretofore, as there was no arrangement to pay board, except at the annual meeting of the Board of Supervisors, it has been impossible to develop a boarding system in that county.

In Yates County the appropriation was increased from $500 to $700, and a generous member of the community had loaned the use of a Ford car for the work. In Tioga County the committee asked for an increase from $960 to $1,200 a year. The Board of Supervisors refused to grant the increase, but appropriated $960 for the coming year.

Orange County committee has obtained an increase from $1,600 to $2,000. Ulster County asked an increase from $900 to $1,080, but the amount was left the same as last year.

Adopted Walter Adopts a Pet

Eight years ago Sidney was left an orphan, and for two years after that he was a forlorn little boy in one of the big orphan asylums in New York City. At that time he was the most desolate, delicate, unresponsive little lad imaginable. Now that he has been placed in a good home by the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association he attends one of the best private schools in New York City, is well mannered, sturdy, and a very responsible little boy. Last summer he spent all of his vacation in the country. This picture was taken then.
Mayors Move to Help Get Accommodations for the Feebleminded

Many replies have been received to the letter which Cornelius F. Burns, Mayor of Troy and President of the Conference of Mayors and Other Officials of New York State, sent some time ago to each of the mayors of the State, asking them to furnish information and to cooperate in the movement to obtain more adequate State institutions for the segregation of the feebleminded. This data eventually will be given to the Hospital Development Commission.

The executives were asked to aid by gathering accurate data of the number of mentally defective persons in their respective cities who are unprotected in the community or are in orphan asylums, almshouses, jails, schools, or are the recipients of public or private charity. The letter follows:

The care of the feebleminded is and ought to be a State function. In this respect we find the State of New York has fallen far short of its duty in providing custodial accommodations for the dangerous classes of the mentally deficient, and the resulting evil falls heavily upon the municipalities.

No doubt you will find in your local orphan asylums, as we have found in ours, many defective children whom the managers have been repeatedly directed by State inspectors to have transferred to State institutions.

Applications for such transfers have been made by the managers of our asylums, but as there were no vacancies in the State institutions no changes have been made. Many of them are more than sixteen years of age and as this is the age limit, under the law these institutions cannot receive public moneys.

The result is they must either be cared for by the asylums without pay, sent to an almshouse, where they cannot be properly cared for, or turned into the streets to become later a menace to the community.

As for your local situation, you undoubtedly will be able to secure information regarding unneeded or cases of feeblemindedness and the results which hamper the operation of your city government, from any or all of the following sources:

1. Superintendent of Schools
2. Physician
3. Probation Officer
4. County Attorney
5. City Treasurer
6. City Clerk

The superintendent of schools—Whether or not you have special classes for the mentally deficient, it is absolutely certain that you have mental defectsives in your public schools who hinder the efficient operation of the schools.

The city judge (by whatever title he may be known) and the probation officers and other persons working with the local court.

A substantial majority of all offenses against law and order are committed by the mentally deficient.

The commissioner of charities. A large amount of poverty, neglect of children, sickness and all the evils producing pauperism are directly traceable to feeblemindedness.

Under these circumstances as a precautionary measure and means of safeguarding these defective in after life, ought not the mayors of this State, as a matter of duty, join hands in calling upon the State authorities to take the necessary steps to cope with the situation? We ask you to cooperate in the following manner and in any other way which might suggest itself to you:

Suggest to your commissioner of charities, the superintendent of schools and the city judges of your city that each of them prepare lists of the feebleminded not in institutions who have come to their knowledge, with names, ages and the important facts concerning each of them. Have these departments and officials send a copy of this data to the secretary, William F. Capes, at Albany.

I will appreciate it very much if you will notify me what action you take in this matter after you have given it due consideration.

ASSOCIATION “BABY” BUSY AND HAPPY ON WESTERN RANCH

Evidence that the Mothers’ and Babies’ Department does more than merely “tie over” cases referred to it is contained in a letter received by the department recently from a mother who, seventeen years ago, was brought to them with a baby of five months and a little girl of five years. Now, years later, comes a letter from the girl who was then a baby, showing that she is taking part in society as the result of the new start given her mother and a friendly interest maintained through the years.

The letter indicates that the girl in question, with healthy desires and ambitions for schooling, is an asset to any state that she may live in. And the work of food production in which she is taking part is vital to the welfare of society, especially at the present time of national need. Writing from a ranch in the Far West she says:

I received your letter a few days ago and certainly was glad to hear from you.

I worked quite hard last summer, we had a bunch of sheep to take care of, so I had to tend them quite a lot. I didn’t have very much time of my own.

Beatrice (the older sister) is at home this winter. It is her second winter out here on the ranch. She is teaching the school that I go to. I never had a good chance to go to school, but I want to go away to school in February, if I can, but if I can’t I will go next fall.

We have over a thousand acres of land, 12 horses and 20 head of cattle. Of my own I have one milk cow and a calf, a two year old steer, also a pony, which I rode a lot last summer. Next fall I expect to sell the steer so I will have some of my own money to help me go away to school.

With best wishes to you from us all, your loving friend.

DUTCHESS COUNTY FINANCES CHILD WELFARE BOARD

The Dutchess County Board of Supervisors has recently appropriated $15,888 to carry on the work of the Dutchess County Board of Child Welfare, which took over the work for dependent children in that county during the past year under a new law proposed and advocated by the State Charities Aid Association.

Its budget provides for an increase in the salaries of the two agents here fore. It proposes for the hire of an additional assistant agent, and an additional stenographer. It also provides for the purchase of a new automobile, and for a fund of $10,000 for the relief of mothers in their homes, and for the board of children in family homes.

Last year, the Dutchess County agents collected $1,270 from parents and relatives of children toward their support. The Board of Supervisors voted to place the money collected at the disposal of the board for its operating expenses, and provided that all money collected from such sources during the coming year should be at the disposal of the board for disbursement.
RED CROSS SEAL GOAL IN SIGHT

Preliminary Reports Indicate Total Sale of Fifteen Million—President Wilson Endorses Campaign

A total sale of 15,000,000 Red Cross seals in New York State, outside New York City, is indicated by the preliminary reports received by the State Charities Aid Association up to December 16 from 71 out of 118 local committees.

On the basis of these reports, the total is estimated at 11,042,592 seals, as against 8,426,320 in 1916. This is an estimated gain of 2,797,272 seals, or an increase of 33.9 per cent.

Inasmuch as the 71 reports come from agencies in every part of the State—from the very small, the medium and the very large communities—they seem to constitute a fair sample and to warrant the conclusion that the 1917 goal of fifteen million in the State, outside the city of New York, will be reached and perhaps passed. It should be noted, of course, that the preliminary reports, as far as they relate to final totals, are only estimates. In other words, on December 15 the 1917 campaign was 80 per cent ahead of the 1916 campaign on the corresponding date.

The last two weeks of the sale is often the period for the biggest drive of the campaign. As a basis for effective publicity during these two weeks, local agents are using a letter from President Wilson to Dr. C. J. Hatfield, Executive Secretary of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. In his letter the President said:

RED CROSS SEAL

“At this time, when we are all called upon to do our utmost to make the fighting forces of the United States the most efficient that human agency can produce, I cannot too strongly urge upon you and your associates, as well as upon the people of the United States, the increasing necessity for pressing still further the progress which has been made in the prevention of tuberculosis and other diseases.

“I am in thorough sympathy with the efforts which you are making to raise $3,000,000 from the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals, and I hope that it will be possible for the people of the country to render support to this cause as generously as they have rendered it to other causes.”

Brother and Sister Want Home

The last two children of this group have a romantic pedigree and are descended from an aristocratic old family from the North of Ireland. The children, Stuart, 10 years old, and Eileen, 12, were born in this country and were left orphans only recently. There are no relatives here who can care for them and the relatives in Ireland are not interested in these little orphans in faraway America. The children show their good lineage in their straightforward courteous manners, their delicate Irish coloring and in their well-shaped heads. Both have Irish grey eyes, fair hair, and charming, regular features. Stuart has a few freckles and Eileen has dimples. They are very wide awake, bright children and so devoted to each other that it would be tragic not to place them in a home together.

All the children are Protestant, all full orphans and entirely free of any claim upon them. Cannot homes of adoption be found for them where the brothers and sisters can be kept together? When there is no one in the world for them to turn to, a brother and sister clinging to each other with affectional Surely among child lovers there are families ready to take two such children into their homes.

We will be glad to give any further information about any of these children.

Adopted Boy Has First Real Christmas

The Child Placing Department receives many expressions of gratitude, but few containing more of the pure enjoyment of “having a boy” than the following description of a youngster’s Christmas.

The foster parents of a nine-year-old boy whom they had taken for adoption a short time before Christmas last year, wrote to the Department:

“We want you to know our appreciation of the help that you have done to help us have a BOY which we can call our own. We have had a genuine old-fashioned Christmas, and A—— helped make it so. It was a pleasure and a great source of gratification to see him, Christmas morning, when he came down and found his stockings had been filled by Santa Claus, and words fail to describe the scene. In the evening we had a Christmas tree for him, and it was interesting to see him and the friends who had gathered at the house.

“I cannot begin to enumerate the gifts he received, nor can I tell you the many expressions of delight which he uttered when each one was handed to him. There was one thing which touched us very much, when he told us this was the first Christmas that he had ever had, and that he did not know what to do or say, for he had never had so many things before on Christmas Day, or any other day.

“He took some of his money from his bank and bought us all a gift, and a very sensible one too, his own selection and bought himself, when he was taken to the city by us. Tonight he ‘attends’ the Christmas exercises of the Sunday school which he is attending and is all excitement over this event. He is ‘making good’, as the expression is, and is changing and growing every day.”

Wanted: Homes for American Orphans!

American as Well as Belgian and French Children Are Destitute and Desolate—Here Are Six That Would Tug at Your Heart Strings if You Knew Them

While you are giving money to help Belgian orphans and French orphans and children of all the warring European nations, stop a moment and ask yourself: “What am I doing for American orphans, destitute children in my own country, my own State?”

These children need help urgently and are as much in need of the generosity and devotion of lovers of children as foreign children are. There are six such children at this moment known to the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association—all orphans, without families and friends.

Are there not childless homes where these children could be given the care and the love they crave? There are three sets of brothers and sisters. Two of the children, Barbara and Alice, aged 13 and 9, come from sound American farming stock, self-respecting, hard-working, intelligent people. The girls are exceptionally promising and intelligent.

Are We Going to Get a Home Soon?

Barbara is very ambitious in a quiet way, and has already planned several careers for herself, "when she is grown up." She thinks that perhaps being a trained nurse and helping sick people is best of all. Meanwhile she looks after her little sister in a devoted and motherly way, sacrificing her own wishes to Alice. Alice is an attractive, brown-eyed, plump youngster, who makes friends everywhere and is full of life and happiness in spite of the vicissitudes of her young life. Both children ask pathetically, "Are we going to get a home soon? Are we going to live together?"

Then there are a brother and sister, David, 9 years old, and Edith, 8—children of Belgian and English ancestry, of talented, artistic parents. They have been carefully trained, are well mannered, sensitive, and exceptionally bright and leaders in school. They look very much alike, with blue-grey eyes, small features, clear skin and fine, fair hair. David has recently had an operation for a slight lameness and feels more than ever the sadness of being a homeless child in a big hospital ward.
"Stamp Out Tuberculosis" Is Imperative War Duty

Need of More Hospitals, Dispensaries and Other Preventive Measures Becomes Clearer Every Day as Struggle Goes on

The entry of this country into the world war is having a marked effect upon the tuberculosis movement.

The recital of the tragic situation as to tuberculosis in the warring countries of continental Europe, and the rejection of thousands of American young men from military service because of tuberculosis are making a profound impression upon the public. It is appreciating as never before the real magnitude of the problem. The call for remedial and preventive measures is receiving a more responsive hearing. This is indicated by the enactment of the mandatory county tuberculosis hospital statute last spring by the affirmative action taken since then by boards of supervisors under its provisions and by the current sale of the Red Cross Christmas seals which promises to surpass all previous records despite the many money-raising campaigns which have been and now are making their appeals to the American public.

Locates the Cases

Hitherto one of the chief difficulties in tuberculosis work has been to find who and where the cases were. The mobilization of our military forces promises to do more than any other factor in diminishing that difficulty. Millions of young men are being examined into fitness for service. Under the selective service act alone approximately ten and a half million of men between 21 and 31 years of age are being subjected to examination.

Indications at the present moment are that the army medical corps will be substantially successful in keeping tuberculosis out of the military forces. Boards of tuberculosis specialists, including some of our most distinguished diagnosticians of tuberculosis, who have volunteered for the purpose, are making clinical examinations of the men in the various camps and cantonments. The deliberate mobilization of our troops is making it possible for these boards of specialists to make reasonably adequate examinations of the men. This is indeed fortunate, for leaders in the tuberculosis campaign believe that thousands of active and suspicious cases have been accepted for military service under the voluntary system of enlistment on the one hand and under the administration of the selective service act on the other, by reason of inadequate examination at the hands of general practitioners untrained in the diagnosis of tuberculosis.

A working plan is now in operation under which the names and addresses of men rejected because of tuberculosis in the various camps and cantonments are sent by the Surgeon General's office to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis whence they are sent to state departments of health and state tuberculosis associations, to be in turn transmitted by them to local public and private tuberculosis agencies.

Stricter Medical Examination

Happily, under the revised rules and regulations of the selective service act a great many more of the tuberculosis registrants, it is believed, will be rejected by the local exemption boards than has been the case heretofore. The questionnaire which each man under the new regulations is obliged to fill out contains questions as to physical fitness which give him opportunity to bring his particular physical disability to the attention of the local exemption board and at the same time give such board opportunity for investigation through physicians or institutions, or both, that have treated or cared for the tuberculosis registrants.

Unfortunately it has not been possible up to this time for the tuberculosis agencies of the State to make their help and service available to the tuberculous man rejected by the local exemption boards. A ruling was made on September 29th by the Provost Marshal General that the records of these tuberculous men in the hands of the exemption boards and containing their names, addresses and other pertinent information could, with the approval of the Governor of the State, be opened to the inspection of the State department of health. The very day that an order was secured from Governor Whitman directing the local exemption boards to open their records to the inspection of agents from our State Department of Health in the Provost Marshal General annulled his ruling, and made the further announcement that the records of the men under the new selective service regulations would also be kept confidential. A concerted effort is now being made, with considerable promise of favorable result, to obtain a modification of the ruling so as to permit the inspection of the medical records by approved bodies such as state departments of health.

Need More Hospitals and Dispensaries

From the foregoing it is obvious that the great increase in the number of known cases calls for increased hospital, dispensary and visiting nurse provision. Very substantial progress in obtaining increased hospital provision has already been made. A cooperative campaign for additional dispensary and visiting nurse provision is now being conducted by the State Department of Health and the State Charities Aid Association's Committee on Tuberculosis, to be set in motion early in the new year.

Dr. Richard C. Cabot, in his recent book, "A Layman's Handbook of Medicine" (Houghton, Mifflin Company), presents his subject somewhat in the nature of a sugar-coated pill. To the layman, the average medical book is something to be avoided. With Dr. Cabot's book, however, it is different. The layman sees at once from the title that it is meant for him and so presumes to look inside. Once inside, all prejudices are put to flight and he is held spellbound by the charming simplicity of style and the entertaining presentation of the subject matter.

After describing the skeleton, muscles and organs of the body with delightful familiarity, the author enumerates the various diseases to which the body is heir. The final chapters are devoted to methods of dealing with emergencies, personal hygiene and miscellaneous ailments. This section is especially helpful to the social worker, for whom the book is mainly intended. One is impressed throughout with the feeling that Dr. Cabot is "on the side of the reader," that he recognizes the difficulties of the layman to the point of even confessing his own ignorance of the uses of various obscure organs.

The author breaks away from many traditions of medical science and destroys with a stroke of his pen many old theories in regard to disease and its causes. Following are a few examples of his iconoclastic statements:

Poor dentition is not the cause of indigestion or malnutrition in the child, nor is very cold water bad for digestion. The vast majority of people are better for drinking with their meals. There is no danger in eating lobster and milk at the same time if one is in a good condition; an indigestible mixture of two digestible things does not exist. The Lord has definite ideas about some people who ought to be thin and others who ought to be fat and we should not worry, but eat enough to feel well and weigh what we ought to weigh. Torpid liver exists only in the mind of the patient and simple cystitis usually represents simplicity on the part of the doctor rather than on the part of the disease.

Although there are many humorous passages throughout, and the book is written in a light, pleasing style, it nevertheless has serious intent and is full of practical advice and value to the layman. Dr. Cabot apologizes for the length of his book, but states in the preface that he could not make it shorter without making it duller.
Must Build for Insane and Feebleminded in Spite of War, Says Governor

In a public statement about his executive State budget submitted at the opening of the Legislature, Governor Charles S. Whitman declared that the policy of the State should be to do as little new construction as possible this year on account of the war, but he made it plain that a substantial amount of building to house the insane and the feebleminded must be done, war or no war.

Facilities for the care of the insane and feebleminded "will be more than ever in demand in the wake of the war," he said.

The Governor's statement in regard to the construction program follows:

"I have been requested by the Council of National Defense to defer construction and use of labor and materials where possible until after the war. In accordance with that policy I have recommended a reduction in the construction account of the State for the next fiscal year approximately $1,000,000 below the figure for construction in last year's appropriation act.

"This reduced construction program, however, makes provision for the rehabilitation of the insane hospital properties of the State as outlined in the preliminary report of the Hospital Development Commission. It includes also provision for the necessary progress in the construction work for the care of the feebleminded. The reports of investigators in Europe make it clear that these developments will be more than ever in demand in the wake of the war."

"The construction program also includes provisions for progressing the prison reform construction begun at Sing Sing and Wingdale last year."

The largest single item in the Governor's $78,000,000 budget is for the care of the insane. This item is $13,540,000. It is larger than usual because of the tremendous increase in the cost of fuel, food, equipment and supplies due to the war.

HENRY C. WRIGHT
SECRETARY OF S. C. A. A.

Appointed for a Year While Homer Folks Is on Leave with Red Cross in France

Henry C. Wright, who has a wide reputation as an investigator and administrator in public and private charitable work, has been appointed by the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association as Secretary pro tem. of the Association for a year.

He takes the place of Homer Folks, who is on a year's leave of absence from the Association, acting as Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France. Mr. Wright assumed his new duties on January 1.

The Association feels very fortunate to have secured Mr. Wright's services as its chief executive during the interim.

WAR SHOULD NOT HALT EFFORTS TO DEAL WITH FEEBLEMINDED

Mr. Kirkbride Says That This Problem So Vital to Nation’s Effective Man Power Should Be Tackled with Renewed Vigor

"I feel strongly that the constructive efforts which we have organized in peace-time to deal with the problems of mental defect should not be abandoned at this time. Rather should they be increased! Allowing the feebleminded to wander aimlessly through the community, increasing the burden of crime, pauperism and disease, and multiplying their kind will not contribute to the effective man power of the nation. We should redouble our efforts—doing our work as economically as possible—to aid the duly constituted authorities in dealing with the very pressing problem of feeblemindedness."

The need of vigorously prosecuting a war-time program in this State to deal with the problem of feeblemindedness is thus emphasized in a letter which Franklin B. Kirkbride, acting chairman of the executive committee of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, has recently sent to the 150 members of the committee throughout the state. Mr. Kirkbride recently returned from Europe after spending several weeks in organizing Y. M. C. A. activities. Extracts from his letter to the members of the Committee on Feeblemindedness follow:

"Since my return from Europe I find, on taking up the threads of the work of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, that the committee and staff have had a busy summer and fall. As most of the members of the executive committee are engaged in war work of one kind or another, no meetings have been held since May 31. So it occurs to me that you might like a brief letter summarizing the more important recent activities.

"The committee’s joining hands with the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association so that they use the same officers and operate their staff as a unit, has already proved a wise and economical arrangement, avoiding duplication of work and expense in these war times. George A. Hastings is secretary of both committees, and LeRoy E. Baumann is assistant secretary of the committee on Feeblemindedness.

"Most of the time and effort of the staff during recent months has been devoted to aiding the Hospital Development Commission in its study of the needs of the feebleminded, preliminary to adopting a systematic plan to increase institutional facilities and otherwise to improve the State’s system of dealing with the feebleminded and epileptic.

"In cooperation with the Mental Hygiene Committee, two important studies were made, and the data submitted to the Hospital Development Commission. One was a memorandum on the number of the feebleminded in New York State, based on existing studies and estimates. The other memorandum contained facts about defective delinquency, its prevalence, and institutional and legislative needs in New York State. A thorough study of the field of defective delinquency was made to complete this data.

"The material and various definite recommendations from the committee, in line with the policies adopted at last winter’s conferences of the committee, were submitted to the Hospital Development Commission at public hearings held in New York in November. A formal argument was made by Mr. Baumann. Mr. Hastings, appearing also for the Mental Hygiene Committee, submitted arguments on the needs of the feebleminded, as well as the insane.

"A preliminary report of the Development Commission will be submitted at the forthcoming session of the legislature, and it is expected to recommend substantial sums for new construction.

"During the summer a study of the budget needs of the Department of Ungraded Classes in New York City was made and submitted to the Board of Estimate with recommendations for substantial increases, an increase in the number of classes, etc. The recommendations were adopted practically in their entirety.

"The committee has been asked by the State Department of Education to advise and assist in establishing its new system of ungraded classes, provided for in the Lockwood Bill passed by the last Legislature.

"The secretary and assistant secretary have addressed thirty-one public meetings on various phases of the problem of mental defect since June 1.

"The first annual report of the committee has been issued. Revisions of two of the committee’s pamphlets of information are in proof. A list of private institutions has been compiled. An increasing volume of inquiries for advice and assistance in dealing with cases of feeblemindedness is being dealt with by the office.

"We earnestly ask your continued interest. Financial help is also needed. I am glad to report that the finances of the committee are in a satisfactory condition and that the organization is being administered with the utmost economy."

NEWS AND NOTES

IN DUTCHESS COUNTY

The Dutchess County Health Association is endeavoring to establish at the Highland Hospital, Beacon, a series of clinics including eye and ear and dental clinics.

Through the Dutchess County Health Association and the New York State Association for Social Hygiene Society has placed a circulating library on sex hygiene in Dutchess County to be used by the various local public health nursing associations.

J. J. Weber, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association Committee on Hospitals, is engaged in the preparation of a statement on the work of the Dutchess County Health Association during its first sixteen months. It will be published in the course of the next month in pamphlet form.

Health centers are becoming centers of increasing public interest. Recently two students in the nursing and health course at Teachers College of Columbia University, visited Dutchess County for the purpose of learning about the work of two of the local health centers affiliated with the Dutchess County Health Association.

Miss Edith M. Ambrose, Superintendent of the Dutchess County Health Association, is a frequent speaker in Dutchess County on health topics. Recently she talked before the Tuesday Club of Poughkeepsie on "The Duties and Opportunities for Women in the Nursing Profession"; before the Poughkeepsie High School Mothers’ Club on "The Health of the Child"; and at the Pine Plains and Hyde Park Nursing Associations on “The New Public Health.”

MAJOR PERKINS IS NOW

Major Grayson M. P. Murphy has resigned as head of the American Red Cross Commission to Europe to return to the United States Military Service. Major Murphy is a graduate of West Point. His successor in the Red Cross work is Major James H. Perkins, who is vice president of the National City Bank of New York, and is now in France with the commission.
Governor Asks for Funds to Build Up Institutions for Insane and Feebleminded

Executive Budget Recommends $1,034,000 for New Construction at Former and $684,000 at Latter

Reflects Program of Hospital Development Commission

In spite of retrenchment in the general construction program of the State on account of the war, substantial sums are being asked for the exceedingly necessary purpose of building up the overcrowded and inadequate institutions for the insane, feebleminded and epileptic.

The institutions for the insane are overcrowded to the extent of about 6,900 patients, and there are thousands of feebleminded in the community who need institutional protection or supervision.

There seems to be a disposition at Albany to face this situation frankly and to recognize that more facilities for these classes must be provided, war or no war. Failure to do so would not only be a reflection on the good name of the State but a source of added expense in the long run.

Governor Whitman and the Hospital Development Commission are working together to provide as generously as possible, under war exigencies for these purposes.

The Governor’s tentative appropriation act, which, he states, reflects the program of the Development Commission for its first year, has been transmitted to the Legislature. It carries total appropriations of $1,034,920 for new construction or permanent betterments at State hospitals for the insane, and additional authorizations of $679,000 are asked, making a total of $1,713,920 of appropriation and authorization.

(Last year the Legislature passed and the Governor approved appropriations for new construction at the State hospitals totaling $1,297,724 and additional authorizations of $1,636,745, making a total of $2,934,470 of appropriation and authorization.)

For the institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic, the total appropriations suggested in the Governor’s appropriation act this year amount to $684,000. Additional authorizations of $225,000 make a total of $909,000 of appropriation and authorization.

(Last year the Legislature granted and the Governor approved appropriations of $614,600 for new construction at this group of institutions, with additional authorizations of $529,600, making a total of $1,144,100 of appropriation and authorization.)

The Governor’s budget recommendations are now in the hands of the legislative budget makers.

Items for Insane Hospitals

The Governor’s tentative appropriation act carries the following amounts for new construction or permanent betterments at State hospitals for the insane:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Institution</th>
<th>Appropriation and Authorization</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Letchworth Village</td>
<td>$605,500</td>

For Feebleminded and Epileptic

For new construction or permanent betterments at State institutions for the feebleminded and epileptic, the Governor’s tentative appropriation act carries the following amounts:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Institution</th>
<th>Appropriation and Authorization</th>
</tr>

Besides the amounts asked for new construction or permanent betterments, substantial funds are provided in the Governor’s appropriation act for repairs to institutions to “restore the existing structures to a decent condition for safe and sanitary use.”

Vassar Interested in Civic Improvement

The local public health nurse of Hyde Park, Dutchess County, with the cooperation of the Dutchess County Health Association, recently organized the Civic Club of Hyde Park. Its purpose is to study community problems and their relation to health. Prof. Herbert Mills, of the Department of Sociology of Vassar College, generously assisted in the preparation of the program of talks. Several Vassar College professors are on the program. This move is in line with the desire of Vassar College to take a part in public activities outside of the college walls.

First Step Taken to Establish State Psychopathic Hospital

A State psychopathic hospital, long advocated as an urgent need in this State to round out the system of State care of the insane, now seems assured.

Governor Whitman has included in his tentative Appropriation Act an item of $10,000 for the development of plans and studies for such an institution by the State Architect, the State Engineer, and special committees of the Hospital Development Commission.

The need of such an institution to treat incipient, acute and short-term cases of mental disorders and to serve as a teaching and research center has long been urged upon the State authorities. Its establishment was recently recommended to the Hospital Development Commission by the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association. It is expected that the institution will be located in New York City.
JUST A MOMENT

The State Department of Health has recently supplied newspapers throughout the State with a series of six articles on social hygiene.

A letter from Miss Julia F. Wells, of the staff of the Association’s Mental Hygiene Committee, states that she is now on the staff of the Department of Refugees and Home Relief of the Red Cross in France.

There is a homeless child for every childless home in the State. If you cannot yourself take a homeless child into your home you can help us in another way. Tell the childless families of your acquaintance about the work of the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association. Send us the names of such families so that we can directly solicit their interest.

Miss Ethel R. Evans, who was an assistant superintendent of the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association, has gone to France as a member of the staff of Homer Folks in the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross. Miss Anna C. Haskins was appointed to succeed Miss Evans in the Child Placing Agency.

In 1905 Mr. Wright came to this State as Assistant Secretary of the City Club of New York and a year later became its secretary, serving until the end of 1908. During the next two years he made an exhaustive inquiry for the Russell Sage Foundation into the different forms of fiscal control of State institutions in various States. The inquiry was the most thorough of its kind which has been made in this country. The data was printed in a report of about 400 pages.

For some time Mr. Wright was Executive Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association’s Committee on Provision for the Feebleminded.

In 1912 and 1913 he conducted an inquiry into the Departments of Health, Charities, and Bellevue and Allied Hospitals of New York City. This inquiry was made for the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York City. During 1913 Mr. Wright wrote a book entitled “The American City.”

In 1914 Mr. Wright was appointed First Deputy Commissioner of Public Charities of New York City by Commissioner Kingsbury and served for a four year term.

Mr. Wright is chairman of the Transit Committee of the City Club of New York and a former trustee of the club. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the National City Planning Conference and the Home Economics Association, and is a member of the American Civic Federation and the National Conference of Charities and Correction.

The annual conference of the State Charities Aid Association’s County Agents for Dependent Children will be held in New York City, Tuesday and Wednesday, February 5 and 6.

John A. Kingsbury, former Commissioner of Charities of New York City, has gone to France to join the staff of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross, of which Homer Folks is Director.

Miss Julia C. Ford, formerly with the Union Relief Association of Springfield, Mass., has been appointed S. C. A. County Agent in Seneca County, and has begun work.

The Chautauqua County Board of Supervisors showed their appreciation of the work done by the county children’s agents by increasing the appropriation from $2,500 to $3,500 to carry on the work this year.

Lawson Purdy, for eleven years President of the Tax Board of New York City, has been made General Director and Secretary of the New York Charity Organization Society, succeeding to the executive functions previously exercised by Edward T. Devine and W. Frank Persons, who are now in the service of the Red Cross.

MAYOR’S COMMITTEE BUSY AT WAR WORK

Announcement has just been made that Mayor Hylan of New York City has decided to continue the Committee on Hospital and Medical Facilities, with its present personnel and leadership. J. J. Weber, of the S. C. A. Committee on Hospitals, continues to act as its Secretary.

Recently the committee held a meeting at which Mr. Weber, whose services as secretary have been loaned to the Mayor’s Committee, reported that the committee had:

- Secured physicians for the examination of recruits for the Ordnance Department; arranged with several hospitals for the care of French soldiers and sailors in need of hospital treatment.
- Made arrangements for the transfer of a number of cases from the Navy Yard Hospital in Brooklyn to several private hospitals.
- Arranged for ambulance service to transfer general medical, surgical and contagious disease cases from Camp Mills to Willard Parker, Rockefeller and other hospitals.
- Made arrangements for the transfer of about 180 cases from Base Hospital No. 1 to various civil hospitals in order to make room for cases transferred from Camp Mills which the private hospitals could not accept.
PRESIDENT OF FRANCE THANKS U.S. TUBERCULOSIS COMMISSION

The commission of American experts who went abroad several months ago to help France grapple with its tremendous tuberculosis problem recently was formally received by M. Raymond Poincaré, President of France, at the Palais des Champs Elysées, and most cordially thanked for the work which it is doing.

The members of the commission include Dr. Livingston Farrand, President of the University of Colorado; Homer Folk, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who is now Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross in France; Dr. James Alexander Miller, Professor of Clinical Medicine in Columbia University, and Prof. Selakar M. Gunn, of Boston.

President Poincaré declared that the sending of this commission was a “particularly precious and opportune testimony of affection” from the American people to his country. He declared that the great white plague has already cost the French nation nearly 200,000 soldiers, and has wrought untold havoc in prison camps and among the civilian population of the invaded districts.

Much Tuberculosis Before War

“Tuberculosis played great havoc in our country before the war,” President Poincaré said. “This has unfortunately increased in frightful proportions through the fault of our common enemies. Photographs which wives and mothers receive from sons and husbands who are prisoners show how much these loved ones have become emaciated and almost unrecognizable. Many of these become tuberculous. The hostages which the enemy gathers in the invaded regions and forcibly transfers into Germany also fall a prey to the disease. Finally, even the brave populations who have remained in northern France under the yoke of the German army suffer terribly today from privation and waste away to such a degree that they become more and more susceptible to the contagion of tuberculosis.

Disease Follows Privation

“It is America which organized the relief for these unfortunate populations as long as she remained neutral. Today this relief has become very much more difficult and starvation increases daily in our northern towns and villages, and disease follows in the steps of starvation. Your work is consequently immense and I shall never thank you enough for your having undertaken it. I beg you to accept the expression of all my gratitude to you gentlemen who are devoting yourselves to the cause of humanity, to all your countrymen who are today our friends and allies, and to your eminent President, Mr. Woodrow Wilson.”

COUNTY ALLOWANCE GIVES FAMILIES A NEW START

A certain family in Westchester County was noticed to have “spruced up” remarkably. Each member had improved in physical appearance, in dress and in attitude toward his companions and the community. A member of the church attended by this family noticing the difference, wondered why the apparently slothful habits of years had been so quickly changed. On making inquiries she learned that they were one of the Westchester County Allowance Families.

Nearly all counties in the State have Boards of Child Welfare to administer the Widows’ Pension Law. When this law was passed two years ago the Westchester County Commissioner of Charities already had a fund at his disposal for the relief of needy mothers or families. To carry out the intent of the law this fund was increased and from it is taken money for the allowances granted to families approved by the Department of Child Welfare of the county.

The change in the family above referred to was one of the evidences of results that have come from granting mothers’ allowances in Westchester County. The practice means more than merely sending a check each month and asking the woman to keep track of just what, she spends. It means rehabilitation of the family in the best sense of the term, a new feeling of responsibility, a new outlook on life, and a greater ability on the part of the mother to take her rightful place in the family.

In many cases the failure to care adequately for the family has been caused by the struggle of bringing up the fatherless children and by the worry of not knowing just where the rent is coming from, nor whether the mother will be able to continue her daily task. Not only has the worry and its consequent deterioration been removed, but gratifying evidences of finer and nobler impulses have developed under the stimulus and help of the allowances.

Worked Extra Day to Join Red Cross

One Italian mother of a pensioned family gave her eldest son of seventeen years to the service of his country. At the time he was just beginning to help her. Both mother and son felt that this country had done a great deal for them, and they in return were proud to serve the country. For this reason the mother had worked an extra day to earn money to join the Red Cross.

Ambition to “get on one’s feet,” and later to be able to meet the family bill and help support many a mother to efforts beyond her strength. One mother secured more work than she could do and asked the children’s agent if there were any of the other mothers who needed a day’s “easy” work. That evening she went a long distance to call on the other needy woman the agent had spoken of and took her to the “easy” place to work, retaining for herself the harder tasks. The same mother asked that an overcoat for her boy that was too large for him be given to one of the other boys.

No Wonder That He Was Adopted!

SCHOOL FOR DISABLED MEN ESTABLISHED BY RED CROSS

For the training of crippled men in trades or occupations in which they can engage in spite of their handicaps, the American Red Cross has established in New York City a school of re-education known as the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men. The organization of this institution has been made possible by a gift of over $50,000 by Jeremiah Milbank, of New York. The facilities of the Institute will also be at the disposal of the Government for the rehabilitation of crippled soldiers and sailors.

The activities of the Institute, which is already under operation, include an employment bureau for cripples; industrial and commercial training classes for disabled men, and departments of scientific research and popular education. Members of the Institute's staff have been engaged for the past six months in studying the experience of the European countries in reconstructing their disabled soldiers.

The Institute is at 311 Fourth avenue. Douglas C. McMurtrie, of New York, has been appointed Director.
CIVIL LIFE OF FRANCE IS SCARRED WITH DISEASE AND DEVASTATION IN WAKE OF WAR

Recent reports from abroad indicate that the work of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross in France, of which Homer Folks is Director, continues to increase in scope, variety, intensiveness and number of workers.

The latest monthly report of Mr. Folks to Major Perkins, the new Red Cross Commissioner for France, states that the staff of the department now numbers 278, as compared with 201 on November 1. Recent additions to it include Dr. Richard C. Cabot and Dr. Wade S. Wright, detailed from the United States army temporarily for duty with the Red Cross.

The activities of the department include organized efforts to provide for tuberculous patients and to inaugurate preventive measures; the supplying of general hospital facilities to the civil population; providing for the welfare of children through an extensive Children's Bureau; rehabilitating refugees, re-educating cripples, etc.

Increased Hospital Facilities

During November the Department of Civil Affairs took over three important properties to be used for hospitals with a total proposed capacity of 800 beds, and put one of these, as well as two previously acquired hospital properties, into operation. It made a grant of money to enable an existing hospital to provide 125 additional beds. It made arrangements which are expected to provide in a few weeks housing facilities in Paris for 465 refugee families.

The department's Medical Committee, appointed in September (Dr. James Alexander Miller, chairman, Dr. William Palmer Lucas, and Dr. William Charles White) has been enlarged by the appointments of Dr. Richard C. Cabot and Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, and charged with the duty of coordinating the medical activities of the various bureaus.

In response to Major Murphy's appeal for workers to meet the situation following the recent retreat of the Italian armies, nine members of the staff of the department have been sent temporarily to Italy.

More Beds for the Tuberculous

Another link has been added to the Red Cross system for the medical examination and care of the repatriates arriving daily from occupied France and Belgium, by the acquisition of the Hospital Ste. Eugenie, at Lyons, to which tuberculous repatriates will be sent.

The use of the property, including a building originally presented to the City of Lyons by the Empress Eugenie, and five newly constructed barracks, capable of providing hospitalization for 200 patients, has been obtained by the Red Cross by agreement with the General Hospital Board of Lyons.

Arrangements for taking over the Chateau Hachette, offered to the American Red Cross for a tuberculosis hospital, have been completed.

By vote of the Finance Committee, the sum of 285,000 francs has been granted for the St. Joseph Hospital at Paris to complete the sum needed to convert buildings on an adjoining property into a tuberculosis hospital for 125 patients.

Completion of the sanitarium at Bligny, unfinished since the beginning of the war, and conversion of the chateau at Yerres into the Edith Wharton Sanitarium are going forward as rapidly as war conditions permit.

Work for Repatriates at Evian

The hospital for acutely ill children in the Hotel Chatelet, now known as the American Children's Hospital, is in operation. The hospital now cares for 149 children.

A dispensary opened on November 20 in the former garage of the hotel has treated 186 children. In the former kitchen of the hotel an American dentist is at work, with an improvised dentist's chair until equipment can arrive. At the general dispensary for repatriates, doctors and nurses of the Children's Bureau, co-operating with French authorities, examined 8,479 children during November, sending those acutely ill to the Chatelet Hospital.

The Chateau des Halles, which was left by bequest to the General Hospital Board of Lyons for the use of children, was lent by that board to the Red Cross. The Chateau eventually will accommodate 200 convalescent children. At Caserne Asile du Luxembourg there are now 450 children and 50 mothers.

In Paris an agreement has been made between members of the Rockefeller Commission for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in France and the Children's Bureau, whereby the two organizations will co-operate in model dispensary work.

An edition of 50,000 copies of an illustrated pamphlet called "Meres Francaises" has been printed and is being widely distributed through public health and child welfare organizations.

Bureau of Refugees and Relief

The Chief of the Bureau, Edward T. Devine, has been in Italy since November 17, aiding in the emergent refugee situation. The medical work of the Bureau has been put under the direction of Dr. Cabot.

The staff of the Bureau has been increased by the arrival from America of a delegation of thirteen trained social workers, specialists in various lines of work called for in the Bureau's program. These delegates have been assigned to their departments. When they have received their credentials and taken their places the Bureau will have in all 22 representatives in 10 departments of France in which there are 262,000 refugees.

Bureau of Re-education of Mutilees

This Bureau has obtained for its assistant chief M. Georges Robin, now an interpreter in the French army, who has been released by the French Government for work with the Red Cross. Walter E. Wildman, an expert agriculturist, has been assigned to the Bureau by the American Friends' Unit. Negotiations for the selection of a farm to be used as an agricultural re-educational center are being carried on with representatives of the French Government.

Bureau of Reconstruction and Relief

The Chief of this Bureau, Edward Eyre Hunt, has been in Italy since November 3. Stoves, soap, wheels, barrows, putty, kitchen utensils, brooms, shoes, roofing, window glass, beans, rice and pumps to clean polluted wells are a few of the items on the list of articles ordered shipped to the devastated regions for distribution through local organizations and officials.

Construction is going forward in the villages of Croix, Matigny and Y-Molineux, where the Red Cross has undertaken the work of repair of houses and barns necessary to enable the owners to return to cultivate their land, which is an important grain region, evacuated by the Germans in last spring's retreat.

Bureau of Friends Unit

Additional arrivals from America have increased the number of Americans in the work of the Friends from 101 to 132. (This number is not included in the total of 278 for the department.)

The arrival of the planing mill machinery from America will make it possible to double the output of portable houses made for erection in a devastated area. It is now possible to turn out and erect 12 houses a week.
State Hospitals for Insane
Active in Efforts to Prevent Mental and Nervous Disorders

Over Six Thousand Visits Paid to Free Clinics Last Year
—Thirty Dispensaries Now in Operation

As soon as statistics, tables and annual reports put in an appearance it is evident that something real has taken place. Figures deal with facts, not fancies.

For many years the State Charities Aid Association has been hoping for and working for an adequate, wideawake system of prevention and after-care for the mentally sick. This is steadily coming about. Figures which have just been compiled by Dr. Horatio M. Pollock, Statistician of the State Hospital Commission, show how active and extensive the system is already.

During the past fiscal year a total of 6,105 visits were paid to the free clinics established by the State hospitals for the early treatment of nervous and mental disorders. Unquestionably the early advice, diagnosis and treatment obtained from the specialists at these clinics prevent a substantial number of persons from developing serious or hopeless forms of mental disorder.

Many of the visits were made by the paroled and discharged patients, who derived great benefit from seeing the hospital physicians at intervals and getting advice and treatment to prevent a recurrence of their trouble.

There are now thirty free clinics in connection with the State hospitals. About 500 persons a month attend these clinics. Many of the patients come rather frequently to them.

A Remarkable Growth

The development and growth of the outpatient work of the State hospitals has been interesting. After the State Charities Aid Association saw its plan for State care of the insane realized, it soon was devoting considerable effort to bringing the State to a clearer realization of the importance of the mental health problem in the community, outside of the hospital walls.

Seven years ago the State organized a Mental Hygiene Committee, which has been conducting an increasingly active campaign of education to make the problem of mental health live an issue as physical health is. In 1915 the committee suggested a law which authorized the State hospitals to go beyond their walls in dealing with mental health. Each hospital was authorized to establish one or more mental clinics, assign a physician to them and employ a social worker or field agent for preventive and after-care work.

Not all of the hospitals took advantage of the new law at once, and sufficient funds were not immediately available, but several of the hospitals did get the work under way and were soon securing excellent results. In the autumn of 1915 Governor Whitman and the State Hospital Commission initiated the real drive for active outpatient service and asked this committee to aid in popularizing clinic work, opening new dispensaries and supervising their operation.

System Is Statewide

Now a system of mental clinics and social service reaching out into almost every section of the State is in effective operation. In 1914 only four State hospitals had recognized their social responsibility sufficiently to employ a trained field agent, and two of the hospitals, the two largest in the State, thought one worker between them adequate. Now every one of the thirteen hospitals for the insane in this State employs a full-time social worker, and the larger hospitals are feeling the need of more.

In 1915 only eight dispensaries for the mentally ill were held at stated times and places. Now there are thirty mental clinics in operation under a regular schedule.

When it is considered that it has been possible during the past year for the hospitals to reach two or three thousand individuals with intelligent help for their mental condition, the institutions are realizing that in establishing the outpatient work they built better than they knew.

State Hospitals Centers of Prevention

The State hospitals for the insane are indeed becoming active centers for the prevention of mental disease and the promotion of mental health in the community. The Great War is shocking the public into a realization of the necessity for the conservation of minds as well as bodies. The clinic system of the State is unquestionably one of the most important and promising of the measures now in operation to prevent mental disorders and to help lighten the State's enormous burden of caring for the insane.

TO HOLD INSTITUTES FOR TUBERCULOSIS WORKERS

In conjunction with the State Department of Health, the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association is arranging a series of three-day institutes for tuberculosis workers throughout the State. The first of the series will be held at the Woman's Institute in Yonkers on February 6, 7 and 8. The second will be in the old Court House at White Plains on February 13, 14 and 15.

The institutes are intensive courses in the principles and methods of tuberculosis work in war times. Special emphasis will be laid on the problem of local programs. Ample time is being allowed by those arranging the institutes for questioning the speakers. A question box will also be a feature of the courses.

TUBERCULOSIS COMMITTEE ENLARGES ITS PROGRAM TO MEET WAR-TIME DEMANDS

The Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis of the State Charities Aid Association is enlarging its program of work in order to deal with the tuberculosis problem, which has been so greatly intensified and increased in magnitude in this State by the entry of this country into the war.

The large increase in the number of known cases of tuberculosis, already and soon to be disclosed through medical examination of registrants under the selective service law, and of the men in the camps and cantonments, together with the threatened increase in the number of civilian cases growing out of the shortage of food and fuel and other dislocations following in the train of war, makes the provision of more dispensaries, more visiting nurses and more hospitals matters of imperative and immediate urgency.

To make increased dispensary and nursing provision, the State Department of Health and the committee are about to send out two traveling tuberculosis clinics (organized along lines so successfully developed last year in the campaign for the after care of infantile paralysis). It is expected that these will demonstrate clearly to local authorities and unofficial bodies the need for dispensaries and nurses where the same is not being done, and for increased provision where the same is inadequate. The committee expects to employ a physician to follow in the train of these clinics and crystallize the interest aroused by them into decisive affirmative action for the establishment of dispensaries and for the employment of visiting nurses.

The committee is also employing two nurses to assist in this work and to superintend the work as far as possible. The work of the visiting nurses already employed by the various counties, cities and villages.

Next month will witness the employment of fifteen additional visiting nurses by county tuberculosis hospitals under a mandatory provision of the statute enacted last May. They will be appointed from a civil service list. An unusually well equipped group of nurses took the examination. The committee has devised a system of record-keeping for these new appointees and one of the nurses on the staff is at present engaged in demonstrating it to the various hospital superintendents, with every indication of its adoption by them.
OVER FIFTEEN MILLION RED CROSS SEALS SOLD!

PRELIMINARY REPORTS SHOW 4 MILLION GAIN OVER 1916, OR 38%

Fifteen Million Red Cross Christmas Seals!

This was the goal set in this State for the 1917 holiday sale.

The goal, according to the reports now in, has been reached—and passed!

Preliminary reports from 82 out of 118 local tuberculosis committees show an actual sale in the territories covered, as of January 10th, of 11,758,191, seals, and an estimated final total of 13,681,154. The total sale last year in these territories was 9,536,692 seals.

The goal for 1917 is therefore 3,144,502 seals, or a percentage gain of 37 per cent. Assuming that this increase of 37 per cent, will apply to the sale by the 36 local committees which have not reported, the total sale for 1917 by local tuberculosis committees will be 15,875,109 seals. Adding to this total the sale by mail from the central office to the rural sections of the State, and a conservatively-estimated sale by Grange and volunteer agents, the total sale for 1917 by all agencies and methods in New York State, outside of New York City, will be 16,754,425 seals, as against a total sale of 12,076,415 seals in 1916. This represents a gain for 1917 of 4,678,010 seals, or a percentage gain of 37.5 per cent.

Even if local agents have overestimated their final totals to the extent of one and a half million, the 1917 goal of 15,000,000 seals sold in New York State, outside of New York City, will still have been exceeded.

Sale by Mail Again Successful

As in former years, the sale by mail has again proved to be the most effective selling plan in the Red Cross Seal campaign. This method was used more extensively by local committees than ever before, and the rate of return was higher than in any year since the method was first adopted.

The results of the sale by mail from the central office to the rural sections of the committees, were remarkable. The 20,000 the central office have already resulted in the sale of over one million seals, and returns are still coming in. It can be safely estimated that the number will reach 1,050,000.

It is impossible at this time to announce the winners of the National inter-state and inter-city competitions for pennants awarded to the highest per capita sales, or the winners of the inter-city and inter-town competitions conducted by the State Charities Aid Association. Troy, which for three successive years has held first place among the cities in the population class 50,000 to 150,000, is fighting hard to capture the pennant for the fourth successive year. Other cities of the size of Troy, however, both in New York State and the other cities of the country, have conducted their campaigns with unprecedented thoroughness and vigor. Vague rumors come from Butte, Montana, and Oklahoma City, to the effect that Troy's supremacy is a thing of the past.

The results of the competition among the larger States are still in doubt. Pennsylvania, Indiana, and New Jersey have confidently declared their intentions of capturing first place, which has been held for the last two years by New York. It is probable, however, that if seals have been sold in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Bronx, and Queens at the same rate as they seem to have been sold in the rest of the State, the boasted of Pennsylvania, Indiana, and New Jersey will prove, as in former years, to be "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

SISTERS TO TRAIN FEEBLEMINDED

A private school for retarded children will be opened by the Benedictine Sisters at St. Gertrude's Convent, Richmond, Va., next September. Two Sisters with experience in teaching have been under training in New York since the fall of 1917, making a special study of the modern methods of education the backward child. The school will be under the direct supervision of the Department of Psychology of the Catholic University of America.

COUNTY AGENTS TO PLAN WAR WORK

The eighth annual conference of the State Charities Aid Association's Agents for Dependent Children will be held in New York on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 5 and 6. More than 20 agents are planning to attend.

An hour of the opening session on Tuesday morning will be devoted to a conference of the entire staff of the association. Cooperation with war relief agencies and social welfare organizations, standards of investigation in case work, successful and unsuccessful placing out, and the legal procedure to be followed in certain cases, will be some of the topics on the program.

A unique feature of this year's conference will be a joint session Tuesday afternoon with the inspectors of the Child Welfare Department of the State Board of Charities. Charles H. Johnson, secretary of the board, will give an introductory talk on "Public Care for Children." This will be followed by a general discussion of those phases of children's work in which the county agents and the State Board of Charities are mutually interested.

The visiting agents will be entertained at a war dinner at the National Arts Club, Tuesday evening.

MORE COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

Good Progress Being Made Under New Mandatory Law

Commendable progress is being made toward securing additional county tuberculosis hospitals, under the mandatory statute passed last May which requires all counties of over 35,000 population to provide such institutions if not already thus equipped.

Broome and Rockland Counties have let contracts for buildings totaling $117,295 and $56,737 respectively.

Wayne has purchased its site and made provision in the 1918 budget for the cost of construction.

Delaware has selected a second site, the first one having been disapproved by the local and State health officials because of inaccessibility. The new site is very well located and well adapted for hospital purposes and undoubted will be selected.

Otsego, Niagara and Steuben supervisors have appointed the boards of managers of their hospitals.

The Situation in Brief

Summarized, the situation with reference to compliance with the statute by the twenty-one counties affected is as follows:

Four counties have their institutions under construction.

Three have let contracts for buildings.

Five others have purchased the sites and have plans in preparation for building.

Four others have selected sites but have not yet secured the formal approval of their boards of health and local health officials as required by law.

The two health resort counties, Franklin and Sullivan, will probably be permitted by the State Commissioner of Health under authority given him by law to contract for the care of their patients in existing private sanatoria within their borders instead of being required to build institutions of their own.

The three remaining counties, Washington, Clinton and Genesee, have not taken affirmative action under the statute. However, Genesee is urging the enactment of a special statute that will enable it to combine with Allegany and Wyoming in the establishment of a union hospital and Clinton is asking similar authority for a combination with Essex.

The committee is helping medical superintendents secure increasingly effective standards of administration in the existing hospitals and will for this purpose secure, for the balance of the year, the services of a physician with training and experience in tuberculosis institutional work.
HOSPITAL DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION SUBMITS ITS REPORT TO THE LEGISLATURE

FIRST STEPS IN TEN-YEAR PLAN FOR INSANE AND FEEBLEMINDED

End Congestion in State Hospitals, Chief Recommendation About the Insane

The Hospital Development Commission, created by the last Legislature to find out why the State has fallen behind in the big and serious job of caring adequately for the insane and feebleminded and to suggest an orderly plan for catching up with the problem, has submitted its preliminary report to the Legislature.

After several months' careful study of the State's system of caring for these classes, involving visits to all the institutions in this State, several in Massachusetts, and one in Canada, the Commission suggests an improved State policy, certain administrative changes, and the first steps in a plan of systematic rebuilding of the institutions over a term of years.

The Commission, composed of both experts and practical men, has gone thoroughly into both the medical problems involved in the care and treatment of the insane and the defective and practical questions of institutional construction and administration. Overcrowding of the State hospitals for the insane, the lack of needed accommodations for the feebleminded now at large in the community, and methods of administration, treatment, and building construction, have been gone into thoroughly as a basis for the report and its corrective recommendations.

A Painstaking Inquiry

Even a cursory reading of the report indicates that the study by the Commission has been painstaking and fair-minded. It seems to have had but one purpose in view—to learn the facts and act accordingly in the best interests of the patient and of the taxpayers in the long run.

The Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association and the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, which were interested in the creation of the Commission, aided it somewhat by collecting data and offering suggestions on various phases of the problem. The findings and recommendations of the Commission are now being studied by these committees. Many suggestions of the committees found favor with the Commission, and courteous acknowledgment is made in the report of the aid given.

State's False Economy Blamed

The Commission says in its report that adequate and proper care of the insane has lagged behind because of false economy due to unsystematic and unscientific methods of appropriating for the institutions, and this parsimony, which has been falsely labeled

What the Commission Urges for the Insane

New State hospital at Creedmoor.
Enlarging hospitals in and near New York City.
Completion of State hospital at Marcy.
Psychopathic hospital in New York City.
More orderly method of making appropriations.
Better planning of institutions.
More preventive and research work.

SENATOR HENRY M. SAGE,
Author of the bill creating the Hospital Development Commission and Chairman of the Commission.

Recommendations as to the Feebleminded

Establishment of a definite State policy.
A new State board to administer institutions.
A Statewide census of the feebleminded.
A uniform commitment law.
Provision for defective delinquents.
The Commission takes the view that here is a problem which is constantly increasing in volume and seriousness and that it must be met; for the State to shut its eyes to the problem or to put off doing something about it only makes matters worse, and a day of reckoning will come—in fact, has come.

The inquiry and the recommendations of the Commission represent an honest, earnest and determined effort to face the situation frankly, to take the public candidly into the State's confidence, and to deal with the situation courageously, farsightedly and on a financial basis aimed to represent true economy and not a bogus temporary saving to the State.

System OK, but State Parsimonious

The general policy of the State's care of the insane is found to be sound, but the Commission finds that "during the past twenty years the increase in the number of insane in the State has outstripped the new provisions which the State has made from time to time for their housing and treatment. In 1897 the population of the State was 7,015,749; the number of inmates of the hospitals for the insane was 20,211."

"In 1917 the population of the State is 9,917,438; the number of inmates of the hospitals is 36,138. The certified capacity of these institutions is 28,997. No new State hospital for the insane has been provided since 1898."

The report says that the State's failure to keep pace with its needs along this line "rests with a so-called economy (unwise, inhuman and ignorant, for which a better name is parsimony), in needed appropriations."

Metropolitan Situation Key to Problem

The most rapid increase in the State's population has occurred in the metropolitan district, the Commission reports, "Consequently the greatest increase in the number of insane has taken place there, and as the provision made by the State for their housing has not been adequate, we now find that the greatest overcrowding and the most urgent needs for new space exist in the State hospitals in this district. This overcrowding affects not only the metropolitan State hospitals, but indirectly also is responsible for whatever overcrowding exists in the remaining hospitals on account of the necessity for constant transfer from the metropolitan State hospitals to the others."

"In fact, the Commission believes that the overcrowding of the whole State hospital system "originates in the metropolitan area, and a study of the estimated changes in population for the next ten years leads also to the conclusion that the increase in the number of the population and the number of the insane in the upstate districts will be comparatively small and can be readily met by minor additions from time to time in these hospitals, and that relief for the present and future must be found chiefly by increasing the capacity of the hospitals of the metropolitan district."

Based on the rate of increase of the insane during the past ten years, the Commission estimates that additional accommodations for 19,618 patients should be provided during the next ten years, giving the State total accommodations of 48,815 for its insane by that date.
HOW THE COMMISSION WOULD DEAL WITH INSANITY PROBLEM

In regard to the insanity problem, the Commission makes the following recommendations:

1. Prompt increase of facilities in the metropolitan district by the erection of additional buildings at the Manhattan, Kings Park, Central Islip, and Brooklyn State Hospitals, and the construction of a new State hospital for 3,000 patients at Creedmoor in the outskirts of Brooklyn.

2. Pushing to completion the upstate developments already planned at Marcy near Utica, and at Middletown, for part of which funds have already been authorized.

3. Pursuing an orderly, continuous and sensible method of making appropriations for upbuilding the State hospitals.

The early establishment of a 200-bed psychiatric hospital in New York City for incurable, acute, or recent mental disorders, in order to return as many as possible short-term cases to their homes without the necessity of long treatment in a State institution, and for intensive study of obscure cases before they are committed to a State institution. Study to see whether similar psychiatric hospitals are needed upstate and whether the present planning of State institutions so that the maximum capacity is determined in advance and the institution planned and built to accommodate that number of patients in suitable buildings without crowding and with adequate facilities for modern treatment which will effect a maximum cure.

4. Greater emphasis on measures to prevent insanity through popular education of free clinics for nervous disorders connected with all State hospitals to aid preventive and convalescent cases in the community.

5. Continued and adequate emphasis upon research work into the causes and prevention of mental disorders and the education of hospital staffs (and the most improved methods of treating mental disorders).

Details of Metropolitan Plans

The Commission recommends that Manhattan State Hospital be developed to a capacity of 4,500 patients (at present it has over 6,400 patients crowded into its inadequate accommodations); that buildings now being erected at Brooklyn be pushed to completion, that some of the existing old buildings there be torn down and replaced with new ones, and that the institution eventually be developed to a capacity of 2,100; that a new State hospital at Creedmoor, to be a department of the Brooklyn State Hospital, be developed to a capacity of 3,000; that Kings Park State Hospital be developed to a capacity of 5,000; and that Central Islip be developed to a capacity of 5,650.

"HOSPITAL SPIRIT SHOULD DOMINATE"

The Commission recommends that "the hospital spirit of cure should dominate in every building and ward. It is not only a humane obligation to the patients themselves, but a distinct source of economy to the State. It is the only hope that many patients can possibly be cured or improved at the earliest date and returned to their friends."

The Commission recommends that this standard of hospital care be maintained even for incurable cases. It points out that the application of such treatment to them raises the level of their mental condition, and "This has not only humane but an economic value, for it is the disturbed and deteriorated patients who are requiring constant care and having destructive tendencies that are the most costly to maintain and from whose labor the State receives nothing. The condition of mental patients is not a factor only to those who today may be quiet and easily controllable, and therefore apparently in need only of custodial care, may within a few days or weeks be violent and in urgent need of hospital care, and under this can be made quiet and a useful worker."

INSTITUTIONS ARE FOUND TO BE WELL RUN

The Commission's impression of the excellence of the management of the State hospitals for the insane will be gratifying both to taxpayers and to the friends and relatives of patients.

"It is a pity," says the report, "that every taxpayer in the State cannot visit these great institutions and see how his money is being expended." We believe that he would receive from such an inspection with pride in his State and with a lively sense of gratitude toward those who are spending their lives in an endeavor to improve the mental health and alleviate the sufferings of the helpless wards of the State.

'The defects in our system and in our individual institutions are not due either to our very efficient Hospital Commission or to the management of the separate institutions. Rather are they due to an unawakened public conscience, a lack of knowledge both in the medical profession and in the State Legislature, and a lack of system in our method of making appropriations.

Institutions and philosophies have no political value, little if any social value, and few friends outside of their own family circles, who have already suffered the terrible calamity of having one or more such relatives. It is now known that feeblemindedness in adults is nowhere more serious than in the insane and insanity has been regarded as so nearly incurable that our plain duty in attempting to cure the incipient cases has been sadly neglected. And yet the visiting of these institutions, after talking with the men who are devoting their lives to the cure or alleviation of mental disease, this Commission feels positive that a considerable percentage of these sufferers can be cured, that nearly all of them can be helped, so that the responsibility for an apparent lack of results rests almost solely with those outside of the institutions.

Hospitals Clean and Well Kept

"Every insane hospital in the State is spotlessly clean and well kept. In every hospital the facilities at hand are used to the utmost, and every room and every street and every corridor and every sleeping room is properly lighted and ventilated over kitchens or in the midst of buildings. For such conditions neither the Hospital Commission nor the superintendent are in any way responsible. The responsibility rests with a so-called economy (sneaks, inhuman and ignorant, of which a better name is parsimony) in needed appropriations. But even under these adverse conditions the superintendents have managed to keep up their courage and to a large extent their enthusiasm, and have done the best they could and have given the best that was in them to humanity and the State."

Commission Continuing Its Study

The Commission reports that there are many important phases of the problem yet requiring intensive and full study and that its work will continue. The probable cost of a comprehensive State plan of adequate institutions requires further investigation.

In order, however, that a start should be made at once toward relieving the worst conditions which are found in the metropolitan district, the Commission recommends appropriations this year for construction in that area.

THE STATE HOSPITAL

The report of the Hospital Development Commission contained the following poem (sent to the superintendent of the Buffalo State Hospital) as "expressing the effect of the spirit which we believe exists throughout the State Hospital service on one whose daily life is touched by its influence":

Against the warm, wide, wholesome blue,
Two red-capped torrents pass my view,
And birds, bleak spaces and distanced green
Of meadows only intervene,
And ever in a cloudy sky
The red roofs gleam against the gray;
And ever in the wildest night
The hundred windows flash with light.
Nor does it fear me, this to me,
That home of misery.
For I am a gentle care
And anxious thought are lavished there,
And all that underneath the sun,
Still keep up their courage.
And every morn I northward send,
A hope that ere the day shall end,
Some peace will on his soul descend.
A gleam of the Light may find,
Some touch and tortured soul may win
Relief from cruel strife within;
Some soldier fallen to the rest
A thrilling hope, a tender cheer.
Resume among the ranks of men
His place and forward march again.

FIRST STEPS TOWARD SOLVING PROBLEM OF THE FEEBLEMinded

The first steps toward the solution of the perplexing problems arising from the enormous prevalence of uncare'd-for feeblemindedness in the community are suggested in the Commission's report.

Fatal Defects in Present System

While the Commission reported that it had been unable in the time at its disposal to reach a solution of the entire problem of the feebleminded, "it has in the course of its investigations already carried out arrived at certain definite conclusions, which, if put into effect, will certainly help to clarify the situation."

In brief, the Commission finds that the chief defects in the present system of dealing with the feebleminded are the lack of a definite State policy with responsibility for handling defectives definitely outlined and placed; the lack of a uniform commitment law; and the presence of so many non-reformable defectives in the State's reformatory institutions. The extent and character of the additional accommodations needed can only be determined by a careful census, the Commission believes.

Chief Recommendations About Defectives

"With these preliminaries understood we believe that the solution of the feebleminded problem can only be accomplished by first taking certain essential preliminary steps which we give in what we regard as the order of their importance."

"First: Establish a definite State policy by creating a board or commission which shall have the same powers over the feebleminded as the State Hospital Commission has over the insane. The make-up of such a board is difficult to determine both on account of present overlapping laws and also on account of certain constitutional provisions which must be considered."

"Second: Adopt a Statewide commitment law."

"Third: Make a census as complete as possible of all the feebleminded in the State, obtaining all possible light on their family histories and surrounding circumstances. This is a task which at first glance seems almost hopeless on account of the indicated labor and expense, but these difficulties are more apparent than real. We already have established classes for the mentally defective in our public schools, and through these classes we can determine the number of the feebleminded among the backward children. Also a great deal of the study of surroundings and heredity can come through the schools. Through the courts (especially the juvenile courts), if the necessary facilities are granted, we can get a great deal more light. In our prisons and reformatory, which today are full of feebleminded persons (the proportion in some cases being estimated as high as 60 per cent.), the number of this class can be easily determined."

"Fourth: After these steps have been taken, we can determine, or rather the proposed commission can determine, the number of persons needing institutional care, the kind or kinds of institutions needed for care for these persons and the extent to which the State should go in dealing with the problem. Until these steps are taken, we can never solve the problem and will remain in the same muddle in which we now find ourselves."

New Commission Not Expensive

As to the establishing of a new Commission, the report says: "We do not wish that we are suggesting another large and expensive commission which will add to the financial burden of the State, nor are we suggesting any change in the system of local boards of managers for all these institutions. While we are not at present prepared to suggest the personnel of such a commission, there is no question but that it should be recruited from those already holding office in the State, or the result can be accomplished by the addition of powers to State bodies already existing. In any event, the additional cost to the State will be negligible."

"The Hospital Development Commission does not feel that at this time it should attempt a decision as to the manner in which the State should care for its feebleminded persons. From what we have been able to learn we judge that the best opinion in this matter is in a state of flux. We have little doubt that the tendency is less toward the building of enormous and expensive institutions and more toward the establishment of colonies under State supervision, which colonies can be made largely self-supporting."

"The State of Massachusetts through Dr. Fernald has been for some time trying out this method with considerable success. In our own State Dr. Bernstein of the Rome Custodial Asylum is making experiments on these lines which perhaps advance somewhat beyond the approval of the more conservative. Yet if these experiments are successful, they will go far toward the solution of the entire problem."

Present Institutions Uncoordinated

The report shows that the State's four present institutions for the feebleminded differ widely in size, character and methods, and all operate independently. All of them are crowded and have long waiting lists. The report on this subject says: "The situation is this: We have four distinct institutions for the feebleminded. 1st. At Syracuse, originally intended for those of this class who are susceptible of education. 2nd. The Rome Custodial Asylum, intended originally only for the very lowest grade. 3rd. The institution at Newark for women of childbearing age. 4th. Letchworth Village, originally intended as an epileptic institution, is definitely a feebleminded institution for all degrees of mental defect."

"Each of these institutions is operating under the separate law which created it, its policy entirely shaped by its superintendents and board of managers, subject only to the fiscal control of the fiscal supervisor and visitation and inspection by the State Board of Charities."

"There is no State policy as applied to all of these institutions. There is no State control except fiscal control, and there is no responsible body in the State which can say authoritatively, 'This institution is developing a long commitment or unscientific line. Let us change it.'"

"These four institutions, when Letchworth Village is completed, will accommodate approximately 6,000 persons.

Probably Over 30,000 Defective

"It is estimated that we have 30,000 feebleminded persons in the State, but this estimate is based only on the results of surveys of certain subdivisions of the State applied proportionately to the rest of the State."

"We have today cared for practically all our idiots and a large proportion of our known imbeciles, but we still have to adopt some policy and then provide for such of our 'morons' or higher type feebleminded, as need institutional care. If we have 30,000 or more feebleminded in the State, the problem is not to build institutions to care for them as is done for the insane; the problem is at once less expensive and more complex. Apart from the idiots, we have imbeciles who of course need institutional accommodation. There is a large class ranging from just above the imbecile to just below the normal who must be considered and who really constitute our problem."

"It is now known that feeblemindedness is caused by a positive defect in the brain, that this defect is incurable because it is not a disease but a lack, and that a feebleminded person of the mental age of ten to twelve can never grow mentally older. But this person through training can become mentally a very efficient child of ten or twelve and can often be made a self-supporting, self-respecting member of the community.

Segregate Prepotent Families

"We have learned that there are certain families which show an important if not a prominent tendency to delinquency and that they are undoubtedly many other families of like character not yet discovered. It is the judgment of all who have knowledge on this subject with whom we have talked, that the feebleminded children of such families should be confined in institutions and kept held, because if left at large in the community their life histories are those of crime, immorality and drunkenness, and their illegitimate children increase and intensify our burden indefinitely. On the other hand, many of these unfortuites need only a few years of institutional training to enable them to go out into the world and earn a living, perhaps not of the best, but sufficient to prevent their becoming a charge on the community or State. Apart from these are a very large number who, if their home surroundings are decent, need no institutional care and will never become a burden on the public."

The Menace of Feebleminded Women

The report emphasizes the serious results arising from the State's failure to segregate feebleminded women of childbearing age.

"Feebleminded women of childbearing age who have already had sex experience," says the report, "should not be allowed at large without careful supervision, for it goes without saying that the State for its own protection must as nearly as possible shut off at its source the alarming increase of those who inherit a lack of mentality."

Types of Institutions

The Commission is not in favor of building more institutions as expensive as Letchworth Village, at Thiells, Rockland County. This institution when finished "will be the most complete of its kind in the country. It should be completed as rapidly as the exigencies of the times will permit. But we are not prepared to say that any other expensive institution should be authorized until we have more light on this subject. There are many questions to be considered. First as to the character of existing institutions. The Commission is unanimous in the belief, that the institution at Newark should not be, as it is now, connected to the care of one class of women, and the experts consulted are of the same opinion. It is questionable whether the Syracuse institution should be continued solely for the education of such feebleminded persons as can be educated, the purpose for which it was originally intended. The institution at Rome was originally founded for the care of idiots alone, but today it contains idiots, imbeciles and morons. The institution at Letchworth, as before stated, was originally intended for epileptics. Today this original purpose has been lost sight of and perhaps properly so. The Craig Colony for Epileptics is another phase of the same problem. This institution contains both insane and epileptics. Today the question whether the insane hospitals should care for insane epileptics or whether the institution itself should be regarded as one of the charitable institutions, or should continue under control of existing commission or a commission to be formed in the future."

SPECIAL FACILITIES FOR DEFECTIVE DELINQUENTS

The Commission believes that special provision should be made for defective delinquents who are viciously or criminally inclined, whose presence at large in the community is a constant source of crime and expense and who are so turbulent and disorderly that they cannot be treated effectively in an ordinary institution for the feebleminded.

Reformatories Have Many Defectives

The Commission is not prepared to make definite recommendations as to the details of a plan to provide for such feebleminded offenders against the law. It points out that the present reformatory of the State contain a very high percentage of feebleminded persons. The population of the State's reformatory and prisons is decreasing on account of war, on account of industrial prosperity, and the operation of the parole and probation systems. The Commission raises the question whether it will not be feasible and feasible to reclassify and redistribute the population of all the existing reformatory, so that that part of them may be used for defective delinquents who are susceptible of reform and the other reformatory institutions kept for their original purpose, namely, for reform of normal offenders.

The Commission thinks that this plan is worth study as perhaps offering the most prompt relief from the present intolerable situation. It does not feel that separate institutions should be established for defective delinquents until a careful census of the feebleminded is completed and it is definitely and accurately determined how many defective delinquents there are who need permanent custodial care and special disciplinary treatment. The Commission also believes that it might be possible for the present State institutions for the feebleminded to set aside special departments, for the care of defective delinquents until such time as a permanent plan can be fixed upon.

COMMISSION'S EXPERT URGES CAREFUL CENSUS AND COLONY PLAN

Brief extracts from the able report of Herbert F. Prescott, engaged by the Commission as an expert to study the problem of the feebleminded, are as follows:

The number of feebleminded in the State is variously estimated at from 34,000 to 71,000. There never has been an actual census taken of the feebleminded in the State and the important information that would be furnished by a census cannot be furnished by an estimate. The State has 118 members and 58 relatives, all feebleminded, in penal institutions, and cost the State over $2,000,000.

A census of the feebleminded with careful inquiry into family histories and environment would make possible a classification that would greatly facilitate the solving of the problem. There are many feebleminded children in proper home surroundings that may never require State care.

How many there are of this class and how many of the class whose tendencies and environment make them dangerous to society can only be determined by a census which can be taken, in large part, with the machinery now available. The ungraded classes for backward children in the public schools, the courts, homes and institutions for defectives, delinquents and dependents can be utilized to reach all classes, but the taking of the census should be directed by some central State agency qualified to prescribe the character of the information desired and to analyze and classify the results of the inquiry.

Feeblemindedness and Delinquency

Once the State is in possession of the information that could be secured through a census of the feebleminded it will be possible to determine how many require institutional care and the character of the institution needed.

HERBERT F. PRESCOTT, directed at New York City to study the problem of feeblemindedness.
Glens Falls, with a population of only 16,748, is the first third-class city of New York State to appoint a full-time health officer. It has recently named Dr. Virgil D. Selleck at $3,000 a year.

The budget of the Rockefeller Foundation for the current year contains an item of $37,000 for the National Committee for Mental Hygiene to use for surveys of public care of mental diseases and studies in psychopathology and crime.

Major Richard H. Hutchings, who is on leave of absence from the St. Lawrence State Hospital, has been promoted to the staff of Surgeon-General Gorgas, with headquarters in Washington. Major Hutchings is directing important hospital work for the army.

The saving of the lives of 100,000 of the nation’s children is the object of a child welfare drive which the Federal Children’s Bureau will begin on April 6th, one year from the day the United States declared war on Germany. Public health authorities agree that half the deaths of young children are preventable. Each State will be assigned a definite quota of lives to save.

County Agents for Dependent Children of the State Charities Aid Association held a stimulating conference in New York on February 5th and 6th. A feature of the meeting was a joint session with inspectors of the State Board of Charities. War needs and problems were also discussed. A message of greeting was sent to Mr. Homer Folks, now in France. Miss Miner, who is the first woman to be appointed on the commission, is remarkably well qualified for the position. She has a national reputation in probation work and is an authority on protective work for girls and women. Miss Miner is now chairman of the Committee on Training Camp Activities. The Governor has also announced some other members of the central office staff were entertained at a dinner at the National Arts Club on the first evening of the conference.

Assemblyman Meyer has introduced bills designed to carry out the recommendations of the State Charities Aid Association, and which failed of passage. The bills provide for the reorganization of the State Board of Charities, and the abolishment of the office of fiscal supervisor and of several minor boards and commissions.

The commission created by the last Legislature to investigate the methods of purchasing for State departments and institutions has submitted its report to the present Legislature and recommends that the State’s purchasing be centralized under a central supply committee, consisting of a representative from each department. The proposed plan is modeled after the Federal purchasing system for bills to carry out the commission’s recommendations has been introduced into the Legislature.

Miss Maude E. Miner, secretary of the New York Probation and Protective Association, was chosen by Governor Whitman as a member of the State Probation Commission to succeed Homer Folks, who is now in France. Miss Miner, who is the first woman to be appointed on the commission, is remarkably well qualified for the position. She has a national reputation in probation work and is an authority on protective work for girls and women. Miss Miner is now chairman of the Committee on Training Camp Activities. The Governor has also announced some other members of the central office staff were entertained at a dinner at the National Arts Club on the first evening of the conference.

Colleges for Feebleminded

Within the last eleven years the Rome State Custodial Asylum has established fifteen colonies, nine farm colonies for boys and six industrial colonies for girls. The farm colonies average about twenty boys and the industrial colonies contain from ten to twenty-five girls each. From a financial standpoint one of the girls’ colonies is more than self-supporting and all of the colonies have produced a marked improvement in the inmates.

At Templeton, Mass., a farm colony is conducted in connection with the Massachusetts School for the Feebleminded located at Waverley. This colony was established eighteen years ago on a tract of 2,000 acres comprising several abandoned farms, with houses and farm buildings. Its population to-day is 315 inmates and 52 employees and its maximum practical capacity is between 1,000 and 1,500. The boys till the ground, cultivate the crops and care for the stock, supplying the colony and the parent institution at Waverley with farm and dairy products. This colony has been a success from the start in the marked improvement shown by the boys, about 200 of whom have been given their liberty. This is the largest and oldest colony and the boys are sent there only after receiving a thorough preliminary training at the Waverley institution.

The Question of Accommodations

To just what extent the total requirements for institutional accommodations will be increased when an enumeration of the feebleminded has been made is the result analyzed and classified is entirely a matter of speculation. * * * Whether the number as finally determined is large or small the State will have definite information as to its obligation in the matter of caring for the feebleminded and will be in position to enlarge existing institutions, adapt institutions now used for other purposes to care for the feebleminded, or establish new institutions. Decision as to what institutions might be adapted or created to receive those who are not feebleminded, or those who are not capable of caring for themselves in a separate and segregated or cottage, the most practicable size, provision for colonies in connection with institutions and other details in connection with the question of institutional accommodations is postponed until the gathering of necessary information has been completed, making possible the perfecting of a State-wide policy of housing and caring for this class.
GREATER EFFORT BY STATE TO PREVENT INSANITY

INCREASE IN MENTAL DISORDERS SPURS HOSPITAL COMMISSION

With the State hospitals for mental diseases crowded 20 per cent. beyond their rated capacity and with the insanity rate apparently mounting upward, the State Hospital Commission in its annual report recently submitted to the Legislature recommends more vigorous Statewide efforts to prevent mental diseases.

The thirteen civil State hospitals contain 37,069 patients, or 5,807 more than they are built to accommodate. The care of the insane in the State last year cost $5,382,616, but the Commission estimates that the total yearly economic loss to the State on account of mental disease is more than $35,000,000.

Expressing the belief that nearly one-half of all the cases of insanity are preventable, the Commission recommends five definite steps to prevent mental disease. They are:

1. Checking the excessive use of alcoholic liquors.
2. Checking the ravages of syphilis.
3. Informing the public more fully about mental diseases and teaching mental hygiene.
4. Steps to eliminate extreme poverty.

Extension of the outpatient departments of the State Hospitals with more free clinics for mental and nervous disorders and field agents to look after incapacitated and convalescent cases.

Hope for Relief from Congestion

The most serious problem which the State Hospital Commission faces is to provide enough accommodations for the insane. The overcrowding has been steadily increasing year by year and is now the most serious in the history of the institutions. Relief has been afforded through the recommendations of the Hospital Development Commission and Governor Whitman's budget requests.

More Employees Needed

At the close of the fiscal year there were 6,504 employees on the payrolls of the civil State hospitals. Of these 3,799 were nurses and attendants. Owing to the war and the high wages offered in commercial industries and the increasing demand for labor, it has been exceedingly difficult for the hospitals to secure enough employees. Their work has been extremely hard during the past year.

Hospitals Doing Much Preventive Work

The State hospitals are already doing a very active work to prevent insanity, and the results achieved along this line in the past year or two are the basis for their recommendation of increased activity by the State as a whole.

The State hospitals are now operating thirty free clinics, where anyone can come for free advice, diagnosis and treatment in cases of mental and nervous disorders. During the last fiscal year, 2,654 preventives came to these clinics, that is, persons who had no connection with the hospitals. Paroled patients to the number of 2,952 came for advice and suggestion to prevent a recurrence of their trouble; 529 patients were seen. In all, a total of 6,105 visits were made to the clinics during the year.

An efficient system of supervision of paroled patients is in operation in all of the State hospitals. Each institution employs a trained field worker to help such patients in their efforts to re-establish themselves as independent members in their home community. As a result of the employment of these social workers the average daily number of patients on parole increased from 1,290 in 1915 to 1,974 in 1917. The saving in maintenance charges by the operation of the parole system is a large amount.

Field workers also attend the clinics and do excellent preventive work in various communities. The Commission recommends the establishment of more clinics in the larger centers of population and points out the need of increased central supervision of the out-patient activities to increase the effectiveness of this important preventive work.

Recommendations to Prevent Insanity

Five definite steps based on careful study of the causes of mental diseases in the hospitals are recommended by the Commission as follows:

1. The prevention of the excessive use of alcoholic liquors. While the number of alcoholic admissions to the State hospitals is steadily and substantially decreasing, there is still room for further improvement. This is shown by the fact that there was a total of 684 patients with alcoholic psychoses admitted to the civil State hospitals during the fiscal year. These constituted 11.4 per cent.

2. The checking of syphilis. The Commission believes that there is no reason why syphilis should not be attacked with all the weapons known to the health authorities.

3. The teaching of mental hygiene. The Commission states that the knowledge that mental health is subject to control in large measure, but the extension of the work is greatly needed.

4. Elimination of extreme poverty. The privation, mental anguish, and physical diseases caused by extreme poverty is a prolific cause of mental disease. It is recognized that the problem is a difficult one, but the Commission believes that some relief may be afforded by an adequate system of supervision of poor families, which would operate to prevent pauperism as well as to relieve distress.

5. The extension of social work in behalf of the mentally afflicted. Every city and every large village in the State should be provided with means to treat incipient cases of nervous and mental disease. The hospitals are doing all they can along these lines with their present staff, but the extension of the work is greatly needed.
DR. LEE K. FRANKEL NAMED ON STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES

Succeeds Venerable Dr. Stephen Smith, Who Resigns at Ninety-five

Governor Whitman has appointed Dr. Lee K. Frankel, of New York, as a member of the State Board of Charities to succeed the venerable Dr. Stephen Smith, who has just resigned at the age of 95 years.
Dr. Frankel is third vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and has been in charge of the welfare and health work of the company for a number of years. He is widely known in social and philanthropic work. He was president of the 1917 New York State Conference of Charities and Correction.

The resignation of Dr. Smith brings to a close a notable public career. He was first appointed as a Commissioner of the State Board of Charities by Governor Cornell on June 17, 1881. He was originally named to fill the unexpired term of Theodore B. Bronson. In 1882 Governor Cornell appointed Dr. Smith State Commissioner in Lunacy. He resigned from the State Board to accept that position, and held it for six years. It was while he was Commissioner that the State Care act removing the insane from the county hospitals was passed, training schools for attendants established, and the law creating the State Commission in Lunacy passed. He always retained a deep interest in the work of the Lunacy Commission, now known as the State Hospital Commission.

At the end of his term as Lunacy Commissioner, Dr. Smith was re-appointed a Commissioner on the State Board of Charities and was subsequently re-appointed by Governor Grover Cleveland and Sulzer.

Dr. Smith's connection with the State Board of Charities, officially and semi-officially, extended over more than a third of a century. During this period the charitable activities of the State grew into a large and important system.

In spite of his advanced years Dr. Smith has continued to take an active interest in the duties of his position and the plans of the Board. His interests in life at 96 are still keen and varied. He still attends important public gatherings.

BROWN BILL IS INTRODUCED AGAIN;
S. C. A. A. OPPOSES

Measure to Suspend Provisions of Labor Law Unwise and Unnecessary

The Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association has adopted a resolution disapproving the bill introduced in the Legislature by Senator Elton R. Brown to suspend the provisions of the labor law during the war and for a period afterwar.

The resolution was proposed by Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler. The Association also opposed this bill last year, when it was passed by the Legislature and vetoed by Governor Whitman.

The Board is convinced that war conditions do not necessitate such an extreme measure, and that the law is calculated to break down the safeguards to public health and to the welfare of women and children in industry, which have been built up carefully through a period of years. The war experience of other countries and the principles and standards adopted by the United States Government, all opposed to the breaking down of health laws and labor standards.

In the pressure produced by the war to secure labor the last relation, the exceptional conditions of the provisions now in force governing such labor, is the field of women and children. It has taken many years of education and agitation to place on the statute books laws protecting this class of labor. These laws are suspended only in the most extreme conditions. In the opinion of the Board such conditions have not yet arisen, nor will they arise this year, owing to the fact that we have not been called upon to use our reserve labor resources in any marked degree or as we can do as the pressure becomes greater. Every effort should be made looking toward a readjustment of labor conditions, first among the men and not among females of adult age; lastly and only if the situation becomes desperate, turn to the labor of children. Such a condition will surely not arise within the period of this year, and it is devoutly to be hoped that it will not arise under any circumstances during the period of this war.

Health Officers Are Needed at Their Posts

Under the caption, "The Health Officer and Patriotism," the February Health News of the Association of Health Officers says:

"The health officer who remains at his post, faithfully and intelligently performing his duties, is serving his country in no less measure than he who goes to the front.

"War conditions are adding stress and strain in all walks of life. Overwork, overcrowding of public conveyances, insufficient food and fuel and many other unusual circumstances brought about by the war are all having their influence in rendering the individual more or less helpless to do the right thing.

"The result will inevitably be a much higher mortality and morbidity unless these conditions are met by a corresponding activity on the part of the local health authorities."

Nearly all the State hospitals for mental diseases have difficulty to get enough attendants to care for the patients. This is largely on account of war conditions. Any person who can accept employment at the State hospital would only find a good position but would be doing a patriotic service. Following are statements about the help wanted at various hospitals:

UTICA STATE HOSPITAL
Wanted: young men and women as attendants at the Utica State Hospital. Apply to Dr. H. L. Palmer, Supt., Utica, N. Y.

CENTRAL ISLIP STATE HOSPITAL
Women attendants wanted; salary from $21 to $30 per month with full maintenance. Address: Dr. George A. Smith, Supt., Central Islip, L. I.

BINGHAMTON STATE HOSPITAL
Wanted at the Binghamton State Hospital, Binghamton, men and women between the ages of 20 and 40 as attendants. Registered school of nursing for those with a junior year of education. Address Dr. Charles G. Wagner, Supt., Binghamton, N. Y.

MIDDLETOWN STATE HOSPITAL
Men not of military age and women under 30 are needed as attendants at the Middletown State Homopathic Hospital. The hospital is 67 miles from New York, located at a city of 18,000 people, and has the advantages of city and country. Employment regular and accommodations for nurses good. For particulars address Dr. M. C. Ashby, Supt., Middletown, N. Y.

BROOKLYN STATE HOSPITAL
Men and women attendants of good moral character wanted at the Brooklyn State Hospital, Brooklyn. Wages: Men, $25 to $30 per month; women $19 to $25 and maintenance. Opportunity for advancement. Appointment subject to medical examination. Address Dr. I. M. Harris, Supt., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ST. LAWRENCE STATE HOSPITAL
Men and women attendants—men 18 to 55, $20 to $25 per month, $25 to $30 per month, including full maintenance and board; women $19 to $22 per month, including full maintenance and board. Address Dr. George A. Smith, Supt., Central Islip, L. I.

HUDSON RIVER STATE HOSPITAL
There are a number of vacancies on the staff of women employees in the Hudson River State Hospital, Poughkeepsie, mainly of attendants on the medical wards. The hospital will entertain the applications of young women of good physical health and moral and mental attainments. Application blanks and full information will be sent upon written or personal application to the Superintendent, Dr. Walter G. Byron, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

KINGS PARK STATE HOSPITAL
Men and women attendants are wanted at Kings Park State Hospital, Kings Park, Long Island. Men and women over 18 years of age, with an increase of $2 per month for each six months of service, up to $30 per month is reached; male attendants receive $25 per month and maintenance, with a corresponding increase up to $30 per month. Attendants adapted to tramp and shift courses. On receipt of a trained nurse's diploma, nurses, if they remain in the hospital, are placed in various courses. Ordinary attendants are given the course for the general hospital; nurses and attendants increase at the rate of $2 per month to a maximum of $40 and the men to $42. Twelve hours of duty per day; four days' leave of absence allowed each month, in addition to the six months' leave during the year. There is a club, any employee may join for a small fee for each month, containing a library, and pool, billiard and reading rooms. Church services are held each Sunday by the various denominations in the hospital chapel. Moving pictures are a weekly attraction. The hospital is located 45 miles from New York City, and the north shore of Long Island. Address Dr. William Austin Macy, Supt., Kings Park, N. Y.
PASS BILL TO ESTABLISH STATE COMMISSION ON FEEBLEMINDED

New Body Urged by Hospital Development Commission Will Formulate Definite State Policy Toward Defectives

A bill to carry out an important recommendation of the Hospital Development Commission contained in their recent report has been passed by both houses in the Legislature and is now before Gov. Whitman for approval.

The bill amends the State Charities Law by establishing a new State commission for the care of the feebleminded. The bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Hospital Development Commission, and in the Assembly by Assemblyman Simon L. Adler of Rochester, majority leader of the Assembly.

The proposed commission is to consist of the Director of the State Board of Charities (Frank R. Utter), the Secretary of the State Board of Charities (Charles H. Johnson) and one other member who must be a physician, to be appointed by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate. The medical member is to be Chairman and receive $5,000 a year.

The commission is to:
1. Take a census of the feebleminded within the State.
2. Provide accommodations for such as require care and treatment in suitable institutions.
3. Recommend to the Legislature by February 1, 1919, a general commitment law for the feebleminded.
4. Establish farm and industrial colonies.
5. Administer the law relative to the care and treatment of feebleminded.

The law is designed to be the first step toward the establishment of a definite state policy for dealing with the feebleminded in the hope of coordinating the State’s present machinery and securing the systematic enlargement of existing institutions and the erection of new ones as the need of them is shown by a State-wide census.

New Buildings for 550 Patients Nearly Ready at Brooklyn State Hospital

State Architect Pilcher Takes Over Work After Contractor Defaults and Pushes Needed Structures to Completion

The most immediate promise of relief from the serious overcrowding in the State hospitals for the insane, particularly in the metropolis, is seen in the new buildings which are being rushed to completion at the Brooklyn State Hospital.

A new reception building to accommodate 156 patients, and a new chronic building with accommodations for 400 are rapidly nearing completion. It is expected that they will be furnished and ready for occupancy by May 1.

Construction of these buildings has proceeded under difficulties, and the progress on them, taking these difficulties into account, has been remarkable. The success of pushing the work forward is due to State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher, to the State Hospital Commission, and to the Superintendent of the hospital, Dr. Isaham G. Harris.

Some six months ago the contractor on the reception building defaulted, the bonding company failed, and the work came to a standstill. The State authorities acted promptly, and State Architect Pilcher on behalf of the State, assumed the burden of completing the work, he and State Hospital Commissioner Frederick A. Higgins becoming the contractors of record.

Promptly straightening out the tangles which had arisen with the sub-contractors and overcoming the obstacles imposed by bad weather, and the shortage of labor, fuel and materials, they pushed the work forward until the construction is now practically completed and the buildings ready to be furnished and equipped.

When occupied, these buildings, with a rated capacity of 556, will offer considerable relief. The patients in the old and unsatisfactory buildings will be transferred to the new buildings, where they can be properly housed and treated.

Other buildings at the Brooklyn institution which are nearing completion are the new modern storage and refrigerating plant and the power house. The contract soon will be let for a new laundry, plans for which are now ready.

In addition to the buildings mentioned above, ground has recently been broken for another chronic building to accommodate 400 patients.

This new construction at the Brooklyn State Hospital is in line with the recommendations of the Hospital Development Commission to increase the capacity of this institution from about 650 to an ultimate capacity of 2,100. In addition, the Development Commission is recommending the erection of a hospital at Creedmoor as a division of the Brooklyn institution, to accommodate 3,000 patients eventually.

The old, ramshackle and unsatisfactory buildings of the Brooklyn State Hospital, taken over years ago from the city, have long been an eyesore and a disgrace, and only the most careful administration of the institution and extraordinary precautions to provide for the safety and welfare of the patients whom it was necessary to house in them, has made possible their use at all. As soon as sufficient new accommodations are available, these old buildings will be razed and new and modern structures erected on the site.

Will Adopt a Son To Aid in the War

Couple Already Have One But “He Will Be Flying in Two Years”

Recently a college professor and wife, who already have a family of four girls and a boy, applied to the Child Placing Department of the State Charities Aid Association for a boy to adopt.

“We are liberally supplied with daughters,” the professor wrote, “but have only one son and he will probably be flying in about two years. We feel that we can do our most effective war work by bringing up another son.”
JUVENILE COURT FOR COUNTY OF CHAUTAUQUA

There has been introduced in the Legislature by Senator Powel and Assemblyman McGuigan a bill to create a county juvenile court for Chautauqua County as a separate session of the county court. The bill is modeled on a similar bill passed for Monroe County in 1910 and is nearly identical with the bill for Ontario County passed in 1913. Its passage is very desirable.

When this bill is enacted the Chautauqua county court will have exclusive jurisdiction in all cases of delinquent, neglected and dependent children, jurisdiction in the handling of these cases being taken away from the hundreds or more local magistrates throughout the State.

The bill provides that:
1. Place the child on probation.
2. Commit the child to the custody of a relative or other fit person under the supervision of the court.
3. Commit the child to the superintendent of the poor of the county to be dealt with as a dependent child.
4. Commit the child to any suitable institution or agency, public or private, authorized to deal with or place delinquent children.

New Features in the Bill
One section of the bill provides for the appointment by the county judge of lawyers or other suitable persons as referees to give preliminary hearings and report to the county court upon cases assigned. The appointment of such referees has been practised in Colorado for some years and is considered a wise provision by the best students of juvenile matters.

The bill also gives the juvenile court jurisdiction in dealing with adults responsible for, or contributing to the delinquency or the neglect of children. This provision is followed by most of the juvenile courts in the country although neither the Monroe nor the Ontario County bills gave such jurisdiction to the juvenile courts in those counties.

The pending bill has the endorsement of officials in Chautauqua County and of the Chautauqua County Agency for Dependent Children which is conducted by the County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association.

TO SIFT OUT FEEBLEMinded INMATES OF INSTITUTIONS

Governor Whitman has signed the Sage Medal bill adressing the problem of the Insane and Feebleminded, which is the work of the Hospital Development Commission, which was created by the last Legislature to formulate a systematic plan for more adequate facilities for the insane and feebleminded.

The bill authorizes the Commission to make recommendations for a reclassification of the inmates of State institutions, except the prisons and the hospitals for the insane, with a view to the segregation of the feebleminded. This will enable the Development Commission to make inquiry into whether the various State institutions, a large percentage of whom are feebleminded, should be reclassified and one or more of the institutions be set aside for defective delinquents. The need of accommodations for the criminally inclined among the feebleminded is one of the most pressing phases of the problem.

STATE CONFERENCE OF MAYORS URGES MORE TUBERCULOSIS DISPENSARIES

The conference of Mayors urges the establishment of more tuberculosis dispensaries in the military establishment of the nation is discloses a substantial increase in the number of known cases of tuberculosis as a result of the medical examination of the million and a half men of our State who have volunteered or who are registered under the selective draft law, which tuberculosis men are being excluded by the draft boards and discharged and sent home from the camps, cantonments and naval training stations; and

Whereas, The privation suffered by the poor in our civilian population growing out of the high cost of food stuffs and the lack of fuel threatens to increase the prevalence of this dread disease among the folks at home; and

Whereas, The State Commissioner of Health has set forth before our Conference the immediate and imperative urgency of establishing tuberculosis dispensaries in the cities not yet equipped in order that the men excluded or rejected from military service and others in the civilian population may be kept under medical over- sight and sanitary supervision.

Therefore, Be it resolved, That the State Conference of Mayors and Other City Officials, in meeting assembled to discuss and take action with reference to matters pertaining to the war, earnestly endorse the movement for the establishment of such dispensaries and request the municipal authorities of the thirty-three cities not yet thus equipped to take affirmative action in relation to this matter; and the secretary is hereby authorized and directed to send copies of this resolution to the officials of such cities.

STATE CONFERENCES OF MAYORS URGE MORE TUBERCULOSIS DISPENSARIES

(Resolution adopted by War Meeting of Conference of Mayors, held at Albany, March 6, 1918)

WHEREAS, The mobilization of the man power of New York State for service in the military establishment of the nation is disclosing a substantial increase in the number of known cases of tuberculosis as a result of the medical examination of the million and a half men of our State who have volunteered or who are registered under the selective draft law, which tuberculosis men are being excluded by the draft boards and discharged and sent home from the camps, cantonments and naval training stations; and

WHEREAS, The privation suffered by the poor in our civilian population growing out of the high cost of food stuffs and the lack of fuel threatens to increase the prevalence of this dread disease among the folks at home; and

WHEREAS, The State Commissioner of Health has set forth before our Conference the immediate and imperative urgency of establishing tuberculosis dispensaries in the cities not yet equipped in order that the men excluded or rejected from military service and others in the civilian population may be kept under medical oversight and sanitary supervision.

Therefore, Be it resolved, That the State Conference of Mayors and Other City Officials, in meeting assembled to discuss and take action with reference to matters pertaining to the war, earnestly endorse the movement for the establishment of such dispensaries and request the municipal authorities of the thirty-three cities not yet thus equipped to take affirmative action in relation to this matter; and the secretary is hereby authorized and directed to send copies of this resolution to the officials of such cities.
More Dispensaries Will Be Weapon To Fight War-Time Increase in Tuberculosis

State Charities Aid Committee Will Push Campaign for Clinics in 33 Cities Not Yet Supplied

The disclosure of a substantial increase in the number of known cases of tuberculosis resulting from the medical examination of a million and a half men in this State for military service, makes the provision of tuberculosis dispensaries a vital need in thirty-three cities of the State not yet thus equipped.

This need is intensified by the probability that the high cost of food, the shortage of fuel, and other dislocations brought about by the great war, will result in an increased prevalence of the disease among the civilian population, especially among the poor. Such has been the experience in the other warring countries.

At the suggestion of Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, has engaged two physicians with wide experience in tuberculosis work, to assist the local public and private health and tuberculosis agencies in these localities in their efforts to provide the necessary facilities for the home supervision and medical oversight of their local cases.

Dr. C. S. Prest of Waterford, one of the district sanitary supervisors in the State Department of Health, has been loaned to the Committee for this purpose, the Department having no funds for this particular work in its budget for the fiscal year beginning last July. The Committee has also secured the services of Dr. Elliott Washburn, formerly medical superintendent of the State Sanatorium at Rutland, Mass., and previous to that, a district health officer in the Massachusetts State Health Department.

What Places Now Have Dispensaries

The table below shows the tuberculosis dispensary provision in New York State outside of New York City.

TWO MORE TUBERCULOSIS VISITING NURSES NAMED

The Tuberculosis Committee of the Associated Charities of Eastchester, Westchester County, has engaged a trained and experienced tuberculosis visiting nurse to work in the district covered by that organization, namely, the villages of Bronxville and Tuckahoe.

One resident of the Board of Supervisors has selected a nurse from the Civil Service list to take up her duties on April 1st as county visiting nurse, to discharge her new cases, to promote their admission to institutions, and to do follow-up work with the discharged cases in the county.

RESOLUTIONS ON STRONG BILLS

The recommendations of Commissioner Charles H. Strong for legislation to reorganize the administration of State charitable institutions are again called to the attention of the Legislature in resolutions which were adopted by the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association at its March meeting. Bills to carry out Commissioner Strong's recommendations are pending in the Legislature.

The resolutions follow:

Whereas, The State Charities Aid Association has heretofore endorsed in general the recommendations of Commissioner Charles H. Strong for a simple, direct and unified plan of the administration of the State charitable institutions, and recognizes that his thorough and impartial investigation has already resulted in improvements in many institutions and has given an impetus to the commendable development of the work and co-operative spirit of the State Board of Charities.

Therefore, Be it Resolved, That the Board again commends to the Legislature Commissioner Strong's admirable report which made clear the need for a reorganization of our administrative system of public charity upon modern, broad and permanent lines, and urges, that as soon as there seems to be an opportunity for adequate consideration of his recommendations, legislation be enacted designed to bring about these reforms.

WANT SUPERINTENDENTS FOR COUNTY HOSPITALS

The Niagara and Steuben County Tuberculosis Hospitals' Boards of Managers have recently announced their organization as follows:

Niagara County—Chairman, Dr. Harry C. Dunville; Niagara Falls; Vice Chairman, Charles J. Miller, Lockport; Secretary, Mrs. W. W. Brim, Lockport; Dr. Charles T. Crane, North Tonawanda, and Max M. Oppenheim, Niagara Falls.

Steuben County—President, Dr. B. C. Wake- man, Hornell; Vice President, Mrs. Alanon B. Houghton, Corning; Secretary, Mrs. Thomas Shannon, Bath; Henry V. Pratt of Wayland and Dr. E. E. Webster of Woodhull.

Civil Service examinations for resident medical superintendents in these two county hos- pitals were held during the first week of April. The superintendent's salary in the Niagara County institution (capacity 100 beds) will be $5,000 and maintenance if married, and $3,000 and maintenance if single; while the one in Steuben (capacity 30) will be $1,200 and maintenance if married, and $1,500 and maintenance if sin- gle. The examinations for these positions have been opened to physicians throughout the State.
JUST A MOMENT

Major Thomas W. Salmon, Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, who recently arrived in France, has been appointed Director General of Psychiatry for the American Expeditionary Forces.

The United States Employment Agency at 29 East Thirty Street, New York City, would like to correspond with institutions requiring matrons, assistant matrons, linen room workers, etc.

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature repealing the anti-butterine section of the agricultural law. It would authorize public institutions to buy substitutes for dairy products without breaking the law. The bill is approved by the State Charities Aid Association. It would save State institutions thousands of dollars annually.

Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities of New York City, recently addressed the New York City Visiting Committee of the State Charities Aid Association on "Early Impressions of the Charities Department and Its Needs."

John M. Bowers, the well-known lawyer, who was counsel for the State Board of Charities in the investigation conducted by Commissioner Strong, died on March 6th. Mr. Bowers was 68 years old.

A bill has been introduced in both houses of the Legislature to establish a bureau of venereal diseases in the State Department of Health. If this bill becomes law, the bureau would be authorized to buy, manufacture, and dispense remedies for the treatment of venereal diseases, to make tests, distribute literature, and use other desirable means for the instruction of the public and the suppression and cure of venereal diseases.

In military hospitals, in the reconstruction of the convalescent and the permanently crippled, in forty districts of rural and urban areas, and in public health nursing in the United States, there are big opportunities for patriotic, ambitious, capable nurses. The training camp for nurses at Vassar College this summer offers training for just such service.

SPECIAL CLASSES FOR LAGGARDS AND DEFECTIVES ALL OVER STATE NEXT FALL

The State Department of Education is developing plans to put into effect next fall the Lockwood law, passed last year, which will provide for special classes for backward and defective children in public schools throughout the State. The law extends to all parts of the State a system already thoroughly established in New York City and in several of the larger cities of the State.

The law provides for a census within the present year of all school children who are three years or more retarded in mental development, and orders the organization of special classes of not more than fifteen pupils. The special class teacher is a supervisor of Education, recently called a conference of educators and mental hygiene workers in New York City to discuss plans for taking the census. These plans are now developing.

The department has asked the Legislature for an appropriation to secure a man of the right caliber to supervise the enumeration of children needing special instruction, and to direct the organization of the classes.

The importance of such special classes and the extension of the work to all parts of the State has become generally recognized. The Lockwood bill making the system state-wide was supported by a large number of organizations including the National Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, the National Committee on Mental Hygiene, and the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness.

It has become increasingly evident that the place in which feeblemindedness should be recognized is the public school. The establishment of facilities there for identifying backward and feebleminded children, and establishing separate classes for them is an integral step in the provision of the proposed law. The law states that the State shall have no moral responsibility for the care of the feebleminded by the State—such a matter which has aroused such widespread public interest, and is being so carefully studied by the Hospital Development Commission.

NEW COUNTY AGENTS IN ULSTER AND NIAGARA

Miss Margaret C. Kaason of Gloversville has been appointed as the Association's Ulster County Agent for Dependent Children. She is a Wellesley graduate, one of the organizers of the Charity Organization Society in Gloversville. She had charge of the relief work with the Active Auxiliary Service of the New York National Guard. Miss Kaason succeeds Miss Grace Hallock, who resigned to take a position with the United States Labor Department.

Miss Leora Field has been appointed agent in Niagara County. She is a graduate of Oberlin and was formerly agent in Seneca County and later was employed as social worker by the Nassau County Association. Miss Field succeeds Miss Frances Richardson who resigned to accept a position with the Connecticut Children's Aid Society.

A cable message received in New York announces the safe arrival in France of Mrs. Homer Folks and daughter, Miss Evelyn Folks, who have joined Mr. Folks at Paris. Miss Grace Folks has been working in war work with her father in France for several months.

Dr. James Alexander Miller, who went to France last July as a member of the Tuberculosis Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation, has returned to New York City.

At the request of Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, the State Charities Aid Association Committee on Hospitals has prepared a schedule of data to be included in a directory of hospitals in New York State. The State Board will publish the directory.

A bill has been introduced at Albany amending the Public Health Law to make it legal for a physician, druggist, pharmacist or other person to possess, sell, offer for sale, or give in any manner or form to any person a drug or device which is known or believed to be of use in the treatment of any disease.

The plan of using buildings and grounds of various Shaker communities for convalescent soldiers, which was suggested by the State Charities Aid Association, is now being considered by the Surgeon General's office in Washington. This matter is of interest to the Association not only because of its war service in convalescent care but also on account of the fact that after the war it is thought these properties might be adapted to the use of the State in caring for the feebleminded or epileptic.

Miss Edith M. Ambrose, superintendent of field work for the Dutchess County Health Association, has resigned to join the staff of the Red Cross in France.

Miss Margarette Stitt has been employed to give psychological examinations of children under the supervision of the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association. Miss Stitt is a graduate of Wellesley College and has done work with Dr. Healey.
BIG PROGRAM FOR INSANE AND FEEBLEMINDED

S. C. A. A. Urges Adoption of Development Commission's Forward-Looking Plan

NEED IS GREATEST EVER

Legislation proposed by the Hospital Development Commission to provide more adequately for the insane and feebleminded is urged in a resolution adopted by the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association.

This has been passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor to provide for two new State hospitals for the insane in the metropolitan district, one in the County near Brooklyn, the other on a site yet to be selected; the enlargement of existing State hospitals in the New York City and neighboring counties; the provision of facilities for the treatment of mental and nervous conditions and in the over-seas service; the establishment of a State board to deal with the problem, the taking of a State-wide census, recommending a uniform commitment law, providing for protective facilities, and the reorganization and redistribution of feebleminded persons now confined in large numbers in reformatories and other institutions as is now normal in the State.

These bills have been introduced by Senator Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Hospital Development Commission, Assemblyman H. Edmund Machold, Vice-Chairman, and Assemblyman Simon L. Adler, Majority Leader of the Assembly.

The appropriation bill, approved by the Governor on April 4th, provides a total of $1,955,655 in authorizations and appropriations to construct new buildings for the insane and feebleminded.

The resolutions adopted by the Board follow:

WHEREAS, The need of additional accommodation to care for the insane and feebleminded is more pressing than at any time in the history of the State and the bills have been introduced in the Legislature by the Board of Hospital Development Commission, Senate Print 876, Assembly 1045; Senate 1085, Assembly 1269; and Assembly Introductory 1025, Senate Introductory 857, providing for two new State hospitals, a psychopathic hospital and about $1,015,653 for the construction of buildings for the insane, for establishing a definite State policy in regard to the feebleminded, for a redistribution of feebleminded inmates of various State institutions, for the granting of about $883,000 for the construction of institutions for the feebleminded and for a new State Commission to administer the laws with respect to the feebleminded, and

WHEREAS, The foregoing legislation, as proposed by the Hospital Development Commission, appears as a whole to be the specifed and most practicable way of meeting the present urgent need of making immediate provision for the insane and feebleminded.

THEORETICAL vs. REAL. That the Board expresses its appreciation of the thorough study made by the Hospital Development Commission in its comprehensive five (5) year program and that

(1) The Board heartily endorses all of the Commission's recommendations as to the insane.

(2) That it favors a definite State policy in regard to the feebleminded and the making of appropriations to carry such policy into effect.

(3) That it endorses the proposed plan to reclassify and redistribute the feebleminded inmates of various State institutions.

(4) That it endorses the mandatory measure, pending the passage of legislation to reorganize our administrtive system of public charities following the Commission's recommendation in regard to a separate administrative agency for the care of the feebleminded.

MR. HASTINGS TO ASSIST
NATIONAL MENTAL HYGIENE COMMITTEE IN WAR WORK

George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Mental Hygiene of the State Charities Aid Association, has been granted a leave of absence on half-time by the Board of Managers to assist in the war work of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. Mr. Hastings' services were requested by the National Committee to carry out its growing program of war activities.

The National Committee is aiding the United States Government in its work of educating, mentally and nervously unfit from the army, and to provide facilities for the proper care of cases of nervous and mental disorder developing among soldiers in the field, and in the overseas service. The committee is also aiding in the establishment of special schools for reserve officers, and helping to formulate plans for the rehabilitation of disabled men.

In granting the leave of absence to Mr. Hastings, the State Charities Aid Association is true to the traditions of the organization, which grew out of a war work committee in the '60's. By 1914 the Association offered its services to the nation in the present conflict and since then has loaned several members of its staff for war work here and abroad, including Homer Folks, who is now Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross in France.

The New York Committee on Feeblemindedness of which Mr. Hastings is also Secretary, granted him similar leave.

VASSAR SUMMER CAMP TO TRAIN WAR NURSES

A training camp for nurses—"The College Woman's Plattsburg"—will be held at Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from June 25 to September 13 under the auspices of the Council of National Defence and the American Red Cross.

Its purpose is to prepare college women to fill the many administrative and executive positions that have arisen. It is sponsored by the present abnormal demand both at home and abroad. The Vassar Board of Trustees has offered to the Government for use during the summer, the grounds, buildings and equipment of the college for this purpose. The Red Cross has provided a guarantee fund of $75,000 for operating expenses.

A short course of study, which has been arranged by experts appointed by the National Emergency Nursing Committee, by council of National Defence, will be followed at once by practical hospital experience. The immediate military effect of it will probably be the release of registered nurses for service abroad. Nurses in training are likely also to complete their training by the usual course. Almost with long continuance of war, all-class first hospitals are expected to supply nurses in training to local base hospitals.

The faculty of the camp includes the foremost specialists in the medical and nursing professions, and the equipment and facilities for instruction conform to the highest standards of professional schools.

Graduates of approved colleges of high standing, numbering at least out of the class of 1911, or belonging to the classes of the last ten years including 1909, are eligible for this course. The age requirement therefore is approximately 21 to 31 years. All candidates for admission must be in sound health. The student fee for the course is $95. This provides for registration, instruction, housing, food, and actual cost of tuition and maintenance. Each student will provide her uniform.

BILL FOR A NEW STATE HOSPITAL NEAR NEW YORK

Provides Funds to Secure an Option on a Site to Replace Mohansic, Now Abandoned

A new and additional State hospital for the insane near New York City at last seems assured.

After the years of delay resulting from the opposition to the sites selected at Yorktown-in-Westchester County for the Mohansic State Hospital and the Yorktown Training School for Boys, these sites have been definitely abandoned for their original purposes, and at the recommendation of the Hospital Development Commission a bill has been passed by the Legislature appropriating $10,000 to secure an option on another site elsewhere in the metropolitan district, and to investigate the question of water supply and sewage disposal, in order to avoid any such snags and delays that have occurred in connection with the Mohansic institution.

The final settlement of the question will be governed by the recommendation of the insane who are crowded into the New York City institutions. The establishment of such a new institution is in line with the recommendations which have been made every year for years by organizations and individuals seeking to relieve the congestion in the State hospitals and to provide proper housing and treatment of patients from New York and vicinity.

The Mohansic property will become a State park, if recommendations made by the special commission appointed by the last Legislature to consider the disposition of the property are carried out. This commission has reported to the Legislature in favor of devoting the property to park purposes, with the exception of a hospital portion of it on the southern end, which will be used for a farm adjunct to the House of Refuge, to accommodate not more than 100 boys. The bill enacting these recommendations has passed in both houses.

It is not clear just how the water supply system of New York City is to be better safeguarded by the new hospital with a well-constructed plan of sewage disposal, and instead, devoting the property to park purposes with amusement concessions and other features which will attract large numbers of recreation seekers to the reservation.
THE PASSING OF ‘LUNATIC ASYLUMS’

War Work Marks the Last Step of Their Transition to “Hospitals”

By GEORGE A. HASTINGS

It isn’t so many years ago that nearly everyone spoke of mentally sick people as “lunatics,” and of the places where they are cared for and treated as “lunatic asylums.” And generally one shivered and shuddered at the thought or sight of an “asylum” and its “helpless and demonized inmates.”

Remember, even in your day, the old “asylum”—a gloomy stone or brick pile set back from the road in a lonely section some distance from town and half hidden by the trees that grew behind its tall iron picket fence! You pointed it out to visitors as “the place where they locked up old John Jones after he tried to kill himself with a bread knife” or where “they took the peddler who hitched his horse to his cart wrong end to,” and where “Foolish Frank,” who wore a straw hat in January and a fur coat in July, was put in a padded cell and “raved” day and night.

Remember that “Creepy” Feeling

If you were a child you were afraid to go past the place after dark, and if you dared to stop a minute to peer into the prison-like enclosure, you had a creepy feeling up and down your spine, and the slightest sound from the dark buildings sent you scampering from the neighborhood.

Even if you were a grown-up, perhaps you never got inside that iron fence and saw just what the place was like, what kind of people it housed, and how they were treated. But there was no lack of tales in the neighborhood about “strait-jackets,” “padded cells,” cruel keepers, et cetera, et cetera.

They Are Real Hospitals Now

Fortunately the intervening years have changed both the institutions and the public attitude toward them and their patients. People know more about mental diseases and their causes and treatment than they used to. One does not hear nowadays about “lunatic asylums,” because there are no more “lunatic asylums” in this State. They are now State hospitals for mental diseases, and the patients (not “inmates”) are treated as humanly and scientifically as they would be if they had some physical disease and were in a general hospital. Even the “State Lunacy Commission” has given way to the “State Hospital Commission.”

Not only do the thirteen civil State hospitals give the best of medical care, nursing and treatment amid pleasant, comfortable surroundings—with suitable recreations and occupations—but the institutions have gone out into the community and established clinics where the treatment is provided free by specialists to anyone with a nervous or mental disorder, and where information about the causes, nature, cure and prevention of mental disease is given out.

Old-Time Isolation Disappears

Nothing was more remote from the healthy interest of the community than the old-time “asylum,” and if anyone had suggested that the “keepers” and the “inmates” of it had any interest in the affairs of the community or any part in the life and activities of the world outside of the institution’s iron fence, he would have stood a chance of finding himself long before inside of that very fence.

Today the hospitals have almost entirely abandoned the artificial and needless isolation from the community and every-day life. Better standards of care and treatment, the abolition of mechanical restraint of patients, better buildings and more attractive grounds, a parole system which sends hundreds of patients back to their homes to complete the final stages of convalescence, the substitution of trained nurses and attendants for the old-time keepers, the employment of thoroughly competent medical superintendents and staffs, the establishment of out-patient clinics, the employment of field agents for after-care and preventive work—all these have finally removed most of the pickets from the fence of ignorance and misunderstanding which used to surround and stigmatize institutions for mental diseases as things apart from the community and from its life and wholesome interest.

Last Picket Taken from Fence

However, it seems to have remained for the world war to wrench loose the last picket! Can you imagine the “asylum” of old, and its “inmates” and “keepers” doing anything patriotic or helpful to the nation? Yet that is exactly what the New York State hospitals are doing today. The “inmates” are actually helping to make the world safe—and sane—for democracy. The State hospitals— their superintendents, staffs, doctors, nurses, attendants, employees, and patients—are doing their bit to help win the war. And it is a very substantial bit, for the patients number about 37,000, and the staffs and employees of the State hospital system, about 6,000.

245 Stars on Service Flag

The other day a Service Flag of the hospitals was unfurled and it contained 245 stars for the physicians, nurses and attendants who have entered military service. Many members of the staffs and employees who remained at their peace-time posts have subscribed to Liberty Bonds, bought war savings stamps, joined the Red Cross, and given benefit entertainments or donated a day’s pay to it. Patients and employees are knitting, sewing, and rolling bandages to help Uncle Sam—just the same as other individuals and organizations in the community. The details, by hospitals, are interesting. The extent to which the hospitals are helping is truly remarkable. But perhaps of even greater importance, is how their aid symbolizes and brings to more general public notice the close connection between these institutions and normal community life which has been achieved by the State in the organization and administration of its system of caring for the mentally sick.

291 Cased Day’s Pay to Red Cross

At the Manhattan State Hospital, Ward’s Island, 291 of the employees contributed a day’s pay to the Red Cross, making a total of $333.26. Two hundred and eighteen officers and employees subscribed to the first Liberty Loan, making a total of $24,850, and to the second Liberty Loan 247 persons subscribed $24,700, making a gross total of $49,500. Two hundred and eight persons subscribed to membership in the Red Cross, the amount of their subscriptions totaling $296. Seventeen purchasers have bought $290.10 worth of war saving stamps. In addition to the subscriptions to the Liberty Loans taken by the employees the following amounts were subscribed at the stewards’ office: First loan, $6,000; second loan, $2,500; total, $8,500. Many of the employees and patients are knitting sweaters and scarfs and preparing supplies for the Red Cross. The showing by this large hospital is remarkable for the large number partici- pating, and enthusiasm is still running high. ‘‘We expect to get into the third Liberty Loan with both feet,’’ comes word from Somewhere on Ward’s Island.

Half Middletown’s Force in Red Cross

Two hundred of the officers and employees of the Middletown State Hospital—about half of their force—have subscribed to the Liberty Loan, and the present membership in the Red Cross is more than half of the total. It is an indication of the feeling of patriotism and of personal sacrifice that has been shown by the employees on all the State hospitals in the State. of the total force—are members of the Red Cross; patients and employees have worked enthusiastically for the organization. They have knitted 74 sweaters, 35 scarfs, 68 pairs of wristlets, and 11 helmet caps. Subscriptions to the second Liberty Loan from this hospital aggregated $21,050.

34 Gone to War from Buffalo

Four physicians and 30 male employees have enlisted from the Buffalo State Hospital. Officers and employees purchased $20,050 worth of the first issue of Liberty Bonds and $18,500 of the second issue. The following articles have been made at the hospital for the Red Cross: Dresses 252, pajamas 652, skirts 62, shirts 3, socks (pairs) 29, sweaters 42, mufflers 30, wristlets 17, helmets 5, baby blankets 13, abdominal bandages 221, slings 198, surgical dressing bags 2,115, various garments cut but not made 360.

397 in Red Cross at Poughkeepsie

Since its organization in June the Red Cross Auxiliary at the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie has acquired a local membership of 397 and has turned into the treasury of the local chapter a total of $1,455. In the Liberty Loan campaign the hospital people subscribed $35,800 for the first loan and $80,000 for the second loan, a total of $116,800. The sale of war savings certificates and thrift stamps at the sub-station located at this hospital has totaled $1,712.85.

49 Kings Park Employees Enlist

Forty-nine of the employees of the Kings Park State Hospital enlisted and five were drafted. The officers and employees subscribed a total of $25,000 to the second Liberty Loan. An auxiliary of the Red Cross was organized at the hospital and has become a branch of the North Suffolk County Chapter.

Three hundred and twenty-six of the hospital employees belong to the Red Cross, and $1,021.17 has been raised.

The hospital has established three workrooms, one in a ward sitting room where employees and patients work five evenings a week making surgical dressings, one in the Nurses' Home two mornings a week for night nurses and two evenings a week for day nurses, making Red Cross garments and surgical dressings; in Cottage No. 20 three evenings a week for numerous small orders for surgical dressings. In the patients' school and patients' occupation classes time is devoted to cutting and folding gauze for surgical dressings. The following items were made at the hospital: Roller bandages, muslim binders and slings, 4,205; gauze dressings, sponges, etc., 6,456; knitted woolen articles 360; knitted bath cloths, 152; garments, 160. In addition, 554 articles have been knitted for the Red Cross.

Utica Patient Buys a Bond

Through the Utica State Hospital, Liberty Bonds to the amount of $27,000 were sold. One of the bonds was bought by a patient. War saving stamps have also been purchased. Many of the patients are knitting. They have completed 35 pairs of socks, 12 sweaters, 4 scarfs and 2 pairs of wristlets. The Ivy Club, a second class of female employees, have completed one sweater and three scarfs. Wives of members of the staff are contributing generously to the time to the Red Cross and the local registration boards.

Binghamton Boosts Liberty Loans

Members of the staff and employees of the Binghamton State Hospital subscribed $13,000 to the first loan and $20,000 to the second loan. Subscriptions to the Red Cross have been many and in varying amounts according to the ability of the donors. Many war saving stamps have also been purchased. Many of the employees and some of the patients are making articles of apparel which are being assembled at the Red Cross headquarters at Binghamton.

STATE HOSPITAL PATIENTS KNITTING FOR THE SOLDIERS and forwarded for the use of the soldier boys at camp or at the front. The hospital is represented by 23 men in the army either through enlistment or the draft. The principal of the nurses' training school is ready for a call to France with the Albany Hospital Unit.

Raised $100 at Red Cross Dance

An auxiliary of the Red Cross was established at the Willard State Hospital, composed of officers and their wives, employees and residents of the village of Willard (chiefly wives and sisters) and turned over a considerable amount of money; a dance was held in the amusement hall by which over $100 was raised. Cut garments have been received from the chapter of the Red Cross at Seneca Falls and made up here; also surgical supplies, including both gauze and muslin and yarn for knitting sweaters, helmets, wristlets and socks. The quota of comfort kits and Christmas bags for the auxiliary was completed. The officers and employees of the hospital subscribed $12,000 to the first Liberty Loan and $30,800 to the second.

Collected $400 for Camp Work

Officers and employees at Central Islip Hospital subscribed $14,000 to the first Liberty Loan, and to the second issue there was subscribed by 263 people connected with the hospital the sum of $25,000. There is an auxiliary of the Red Cross with a membership of 255. These members are actively engaged in knitting and sewing for the Red Cross. About $400 was collected for camp work by the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus.

Rochester Buys War Stamps

Officers and employees of the Rochester State Hospital subscribed $13,550 to the first Liberty Loan and $20,000 to the second loan. War saving stamps are being purchased. The officers, employees and patients have made many articles for the Red Cross. The officers and many of the employees are members of the Red Cross.

Superintendent a Red Cross General

The officers and employees of the Brooklyn State Hospital subscribed generously to Liberty Bonds and also purchased a quantity of war saving stamps. During the last few months, through subscriptions and donations, $201 has been donated to the Red Cross. In November Dr. Isham G. Harris, superintendent of the hospital, was elected a general in the Red Cross Campaign, and with the aid of his captains and workers collected $350 to add to the Red Cross campaign fund. An auxiliary chapter of the Red Cross was formed at the hospital, and the officers are making bandages, dressings and other medical supplies. An occupation class of patients has taken up Red Cross work and under the guidance of an instructor are knitting and making musical instruments.

Knitters Busy at St. Lawrence

Subscriptions to the first Liberty Loan among the employees, staff and officers at the St. Lawrence State Hospital totaled $27,500 and to the second Liberty Loan $13,750. The hospital employees contributed a total of 11 scarfs, 171 pairs of socks, 75 pairs of wristlets and 24 caps. In addition many of the hospital people visit the Red Cross rooms in Ogdensburg and assist in the work of making surgical dressings, etc.

Gowanda a Hive of Red Cross Work

Officers, employees and patients are all doing their bit at Gowanda. Subscriptions to the Liberty Loan at this hospital totaled $17,450. One of the physicians has a commission as Captain in the Medical Officers Reserve Corps, and one as Lieutenant. The principal of the Training School has volunteered for Red Cross service. Three attendants who entered the service under the draft law are serving as hospital attendants; one assistant baker is serving as cook, and one attendant is in the lines. Members of the medical staff, and clerks in the office have been assisting the local examining board of Collins, in the examination of drafted men. One employee is a member of the Four Minute Men. The following have been made for the Red Cross: Knitted articles—Sweaters 76, scarfs 34, wristlets 111 pairs, socks 31 pairs, wash cloths 3. Articles sewed—Pajamas 64 pairs, bed shirts 56, children's kimono dresses 15, towels hemmed 145, sheets surgical hemmed 64.

MISS BYRNE GOES TO FRANCE

Miss Harriet Byrne, Westchester County agent for dependent children for the district of New Rochelle, has sailed for France to assist in the reconstruction work under the direction of the American Red Cross.

Miss Byrne has been setting as agent for dependent children for the past nine years, having been one of the two agents in the field at the time V. Everit Macy became superintendent of the poor and reorganized the work in that county. She has been particularly successful in rehabilitating families in her territory especially through the administration of pensions to the mothers.
War Against Tuberculosis Along Wide Front

TUBERCULOSIS COMMITTEE ADDS THREE PHYSICIANS TO ITS STAFF

R. G. Smith Enters Military Service—Miss Street and Miss Haliburton in War Work

Dr. Charles S. Prest, one of the District Sanitary Supervisors in the State Department of Health, has been given a leave of absence to come on the Tuberculosis Committee’s staff and aid in securing the establishment of tuberculosis dispensaries.

Dr. Elliott Washburn joined the staff early in March and is assisting and advising with local public and private tuberculosis agencies in the establishment, equipment and organization of tuberculosis dispensaries. Dr. Washburn is a graduate of the Medical College of Harvard University and has had extensive experience in tuberculosis work as a district health officer in the Massachusetts State Department of Health, and for the last five years as superintendent of the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Rutland, Mass.

Dr. Stanley L. Wang has been engaged to visit all local tuberculosis hospitals in the State with a view to helping the medical superintendents establish increasingly effective methods of administration. Dr. Wang is a graduate of the Medical College of the University of Oregon, has made a study of facilities for dealing with tuberculosis patients in Chicago and in New York, and immediately preceding his coming to this Association was acting medical superintendent of the Sea View Tuberculosis Hospital on Staten Island.

Miss Mildred Street, the Office Manager of the Tuberculosis Department, has resigned to accept a secretarial position in the Y. M. C. A. organization in France. Her position here has been filled by the appointment of Mrs. Louise K. Harris, formerly of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

Miss Suzanne Halliburton, R. N., has resigned her duties as supervising nurse, to answer a call from the Halifax Relief Commission to become the superintendent of the medical social service work in the area affected by the disaster of last January.

Russell G. Austin, field secretary and sales manager of the Red Cross Christmas Seals for the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Tuberculosis Association during the past two seasons, has resigned to enter the Sanitary Corps of the United States Army. The position has been filled by the appointment of Lester L. Lewis. Mr. Lewis is a graduate of Tufts College, was at one time president of the Associated Charities of Taunton, Mass.; financial secretary and manager of the Central Maine Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis; resident manager of the Fairchild (Me.) Sanatorium; public health lecturer for the Vermont State Board of Health, and member of the 1917 Tuberculosis Institute conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association and New York School of Philanthropy.

INSTITUTES FOR TUBERCULOSIS WORKERS

Sectional Meetings in Place of State Convention Stimulate Widespread Interest

Instead of holding a State convention of tuberculosis workers this year, the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Health Association and the State Department of Health are jointly organizing a series of tuberculosis institutes in a number of the cities in the State. It is believed that the aggregate attendance at a series of such sectional meetings would be much larger than that of a State convention, such as has been organized heretofore. The purpose of these institutes are:

First: To give to members of tuberculosis committees, hospital managers and superintendents, dispensary physicians, visiting nurses, secretaries of relief societies, open air school workers, and others a detailed statement of tuberculosis problems under war conditions and of effective measures for dealing with them.

Second: To aid in the standardization of methods and programs of anti-tuberculosis work.

Third: To give to volunteer workers a more comprehensive knowledge of the administrative problems involved in the work; and to assist those already in executive positions in the anti-tuberculosis field to fit themselves for greater responsibilities.

The sessions of each institute take up the mornings and afternoons of three days and specialists in the various aspects of tuberculosis work have been secured for speakers.

Four institutes have already been held— at Yonkers, White Plains, Albany, Syracuse and Utica. The attendance and interest shown have exceeded expectations. Others are to be held as follows:

Rochester, April 24, 25 and 26.
Buffalo, May 8, 9 and 10.
Elmira, May 22, 23 and 24.

Broome’s Bonds Sell Well; Will Build Tuberculosis Hospital Now

Broome County’s Tuberculosis Hospital bond issue of $150,000 has been entirely disposed of. Early this year there was a disposition on the part of some members of the Board of Supervisors to request the State Department of Health to allow the board to postpone building the new hospital until after the war, for fear that there would be no market for the bonds. Contrary to expectations, however, there were over 100 bids and much spirited competition was shown at the auction.
"DO-NOTHING LEGISLATURE" NOT SO IN FACT

1918 SESSION MARKED BY NUMEROUS CONSTRUCTIVE SOCIAL MEASURES

By and large, the war-time session of the Legislature which closed on April 13 was not an important one. In fact it was referred to at Albany as a "do-nothing-and-get-home-quick" session. And when it was over the newspapers referred to it as "marked by its negative results."

To be sure, the number of bills introduced and passed was considerably less than usual. A total of 2,576 bills were introduced, of which 658 became law, as against 3,381 introduced a year ago and 809 enacted into law.

But from the standpoint of constructive legislation in the field of public health, providing for the welfare of children, safeguarding women and children in industry, and providing for the insane and the feebleminded, the 1918 Legislature was not a do-nothing session.

There were numerous positive results. And one of the "negative results" was a distinct boon to social welfare, namely, the defeat of Senator Brown's bill which would have relaxed the safeguards that have been built up around women and children in industry by long and persistent effort.

In addition to the various special bills passed, the Appropriation Bill, which was practically in accord with Governor Whitman's Tentative Appropriation Act, carried substantial appropriations for new construction at State institutions for the insane and the feebleminded. The Legislature and the Governor were both courageous enough to provide these sums in war-time because of the extremely urgent need of more housing accommodations for the insane and the feebleminded now and after the war.

The bills introduced by Assemblyman Meyer for a reorganization of the administration of the State's charitable institutions, according to the plan proposed by Commissioner Charles H. Strong, did not receive attention and consideration enough to result in their enactment into law this year.

Some of the constructive measures which were passed may be set down as follows:

INSANE AND FEEBLEMINDED

1. The Legislature passed and the Governor signed the Sage-Adler Bill creating a new State Commission on the Feebleminded to consist of the Secretary of the State Board of Charities, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities and a medical chairman.

2. The Sage-Machold Bill enlarging the duties of the Hospital Development Commission became a law. This provides for a reclassification and redistribution of the inmates of the various State institutions, with a view to segregating and providing for the feebleminded wards in separate institutions.

3. A new law was enacted giving the magistrates of inferior courts in New York City the power to remand feebleminded female delinquents for determination of their mental condition pending disposition of their cases.

4. The Appropriation Bill and special laws enacted carried appropriations of $1,526,635 and additional authorizations of $1,264,500 for new construction at institutions for the insane and feebleminded, making a grand total of $4,801,155.

Two State Hospitals to Be Built

These appropriations will eventually make possible:

(a) The erection of a new State hospital at Creedmoor on the outskirts of Brooklyn.

(b) The securing of an option on a site for another new State hospital in the metropolitan district to take the place of the abandoned Mohonk institution.

(c) The preparation of plans for a psychopathic hospital in New York City.

(d) The completion of the State hospital at Marcy near Utica.

The measures to provide greater accommodations for the insane, and the beginning of a program that promises to reduce the long-standing overcrowding in these institutions mark a distinct advance in this field. During the summer and fall of 1917 the Hospital Development Commission, composed of competent officials and medical men, headed by Senator Henry M. Sage, went carefully into the question of the overcrowding in State hospitals and the pressing need for relief, especially in the metropolitan district. On their recommendations, this year's building program of the Governor and the Legislature was based.

Hospital for Incipient Mental Diseases

There is special public interest in the urgent necessity of providing accommodations for incipient cases of insanity and for the observation and short-term treatment of cases of slight and curable mental derangement. This long-standing need has been met by appropriations to make possible the first step toward the establishment of a 200-bed psychopathic hospital in New York City; an appropriation of $10,000 for plans was provided. No greater economy could be effected for the State than to provide adequate care for those cases which, when cured become social assets, but which if neglected often become permanent wards of the State.

New State Commission on Defectives

Legislators and social workers have for years been vexed by the problem of the feebleminded. For the first time the Legislature has decided on a program which not only promises relief, but bids fair to establish a definite State policy and provide accommodations adequate to the need.

The creation of a State Commission on the Feebleminded is the outstanding accomplishment in this direction. This Commission, composed of the Secretary of the State Board of Charities, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities and a man of ten years' standing in medical practice is to administer the law in relation to the custody, care and treatment of the feebleminded; establish clinics for the examination and observation of feebleminded persons; provide for the establishment of farm and industrial colonies in connection with the State institutions for the mentally defective; plan a continuing census of the feebleminded persons in the State; and finally recommend to the Legislature next year a general and comprehensive commitment law. By co-ordinating the State's present machinery it is expected that the new commission can accomplish results without a large additional outlay of money.

To Sift Defectives from Normals

The terms of the bill giving the Hospital Development Commission power to plan a reclassification of the inmates of the various charitable institutions of the State with a view to a redistribution of the defective inmates supports the hope that the feebleminded in reformatories may finally be segregated. Since the time of Dugdale and his treatise on the "Jukes," students of prison and reformatory measures have urged specialized treatment for the various groups of offenders, particularly those mentally defective.

Then, too, the first rays of light seem to be breaking through the long shrouded determination of the mental status of offenders before the courts. One evidence of this is the inclusion just this session of giving magnates of inferior courts in New York City power to remand feebled-minded female prisoners to certain hospitals and reformatories. This provision was made for mental examinations for a maximum period of fourteen days, in order to secure a diagnosis of the mentality of the accused.

PUBLIC HEALTH

In the field of public health additional progress was made at this session in the organized campaign against tuberculosis.

The effort of agencies interested in the control and prevention of tuberculosis was devoted largely to establishing the notable gain made in 1917 through the enactment of the law making the establishment of tuberculosis hospitals mandatory in counties having upwards of 35,000 population.

County Hospital Law Upheld

An effort was made to draft the teeth of this law as far as possible through a bill enacting a law governing from one of the counties which had not complied with the law. This bill would have made the four-county law permissive instead of mandatory. The measure was generally opposed by public health and tuberculosis workers and did not become law.

A bill was passed, however, enabling some adjoining counties with the approval of the State Commissioner of Health to combine in erecting a new hospital. This bill took the form of an amendment to the Tuberculosis Hospital Law of 1917. Another provision allows counties the option of entering into contracts for the care of patients with counties having hospitals, instead of building institutions themselves, or boarding out their patients in private sanatoria located within their borders. This measure was passed largely for the benefit of two health resort counties, Franklin and Sullivan.

The appointment of a county nurse or additional nurses for the discovery of tuberculosis cases, and for the visitation of all patients discharged from sanatoria was given to the board of supervisors in those counties where it is not mandatory to establish a county tuberculosis hospital and where no board of managers has been provided.

A Bureau of Venereal Diseases

The 1917 Legislature carried another trench in the fight against venereal diseases. In the case of measures for more vigorous efforts to control tuberculosis, the war is lending impetus to the organized movement to check venereal diseases.

Renders of THE S. C. A. A. News will recall that three hard blows were struck at the venereal disease evil in this State a year ago when (1) a law was enacted requiring all applicants for marriage licenses to certify that they have not been afflicted with venereal disease, or if they have had, that they are now free; (2) the passage of a law prohibiting the publication of quack advertisements concerning the treatment of communicable diseases and highly dangerous to the public health, and (3) compelling treatment and precautions to prevent the spread of infection.

This year an additional step of far-reaching importance was taken when a law was enacted creating a Bureau of Venereal Diseases in the State Health Department and making an appropriation for it. The new Bureau of Venereal Diseases is charged with the responsibility of taking all reasonable steps to prevent venereal diseases; to plan for facilities for diagnosis and treatment and for a campaign aimed at the importance of venereal disease control.

Another bill which became law provides that persons suspected of having any venereal disease must submit to a medical examination by the health officer or by a licensed physician approved by the health officer. An appropriation is provided for it. The need of regulation and control is, of course, well known. Some health workers have felt, however, that such a law required a great deal of skill to be made. A method was being carried for the volume of work to be done and that it might have been done through a bureau in the Department of Health.

A Public Health Demonstration

A law was enacted creating a model health district for the purpose of demonstrating what can be accomplished in a given area by intensive health work. This district includes the territory of Lake George and its watershed and is to be known as the Lake George Health District. The new law provides that the supervisor of each of the towns and the president of the villages included in the district shall meet and elect a Board of Health of three members for the district with all the rights, powers and duties that are now conferred upon the board of health of any consolidated health districts. The result of the tuberculosis demonstration now being carried on in Framingham, Mass., that the Lake George demonstration will take all matters of public health control. The experiment will be watched with widespread interest and its advocates are confident that it will point the way to better health district organization throughout the State.

CHILD WELFARE

Children's Court for Chautauqua County

A Children's Court was created in Chautauqua County as a part of the County Court on the basis of similar courts in Monroe and Onondaga Counties, to try the cases working very satisfactorily. In preparing the bill special reference was had to the Juvenile Court Bill for the District of Columbia, and to the Juvenile and Lachryphyl Law for the State of Minnesota, and it is expected that the new law will work as a model for other counties in this State.

The particular features of the bill include: (1) Exclusive jurisdiction of all cases of delinquency, neglected and dependent children requiring court action under 16 years of age, in counties to the court established for the county. Jurisdiction is thus taken away from 100 or more justices of the peace and village and city magistrates. (2) Children are to be dealt with as wards of the State, not as criminals. (3) The court is empowered to place the child in the care of a parent, guardian or other person of a relative, superintendent of the poor or any other suitable agency or institution. (4) Investigation is made for detention of the children awaiting trial in homes. (5) Both a man and a woman probation officer are required for the carrying out of the work of investigation and of a system of central purchasing.

The matter of central purchasing of supplies for the various State bureaus, departments and agencies was again considered and is to be made an office of the State Charities Commission, as required by the 1917 Legislature to study the question. The commission reported in favor of a system of central purchasing. A law was accordingly enacted creating a Central Supply Committee to consist of the State Commissioners of Education, of Finance, of the Superintendents of Public Works, of Trustees of Public Buildings, of the Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, of the Fiscal and Superintendent of State Charities, and the Superintendent of State Prisons.

Some efforts were made to secure an amendment to the bill by exempting the institutions from the necessity of purchasing any particular article under joint contract if, in the opinion of the representative on the Supply Committee, joint purchase would not be advisable. This amendment, however, was not included.

The State Charities Aid Association has always been opposed to a system of central purchases as far as institutions are concerned because it believes the purchase would not control institutional policies. It feels that central purchasing is perhaps well adapted to boards and bureaus at Albany, but that when applied to institutions caring for thousands of sick and helpless human beings it might very easily become so enmeshed in red tape and its petty operation be too much a substitute in an office far from the institutions that delays and policies dangerous to the health and welfare of patients would creep in.

The bill does not go into effect until July 1, 1919.

GOVERNOR NAMES ANOTHER WOMAN ON CHARITIES BOARD

Mrs. Lillie Boller Werner of Rochester has been appointed by Governor Whitman as a member of the State Board of Charities to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mortimer R. Miller of Rochester. Her appointment was confirmed by the Senate. She is the third woman on the State Board. Mrs. Werner is president of the Board of Managers of the Rochester State Hospital.
JOSEPH J. WEBER RESIGNS TO ACCEPT IMPORTANT POSITION IN BOSTON

Will Be Assistant Director of Boston Dispensary and Eastern Representative of “Modern Hospital”

Joseph J. Weber, who has been the efficient Secretary of the Committee on Hospitals of the State Charities Aid Association for the past three and a half years, has resigned to accept the position of Assistant Director of the Boston Dispensary, and eastern representative of the magazine The Modern Hospital. His resignation is received with regret by the Association.

Mr. Weber brings to his new position a splendid equipment of training and experience. He is a graduate of Hamilton College from which he holds the degrees of B.A. and M.A. He prepared for social work at the New York School of Philanthropy. After graduating from the School he became director of the Civic Association of Englewood, N. J., and came from there to New York as financial secretary of the Charity Organization Society, a position which he held for two years. Since then he has been with the State Charities Aid Association.

Among the more important activities of the Hospitals Committee while he was its executive officer have been the following:

The formulation of a report of a survey on sickness in Dutchess County and the organization of a comprehensive public health association in that county which is likely to serve as a model for other counties.

Making community surveys of hospitals in Westchester and Washington counties to aid in the increase of hospital facilities in both counties.

An extensive study of the facilities in general hospitals and dispensaries of New York State outside of New York City for the diagnosis and treatment of venereal diseases.

A critical study of plans of various new hospitals in New York City and elsewhere. Compiling a handbook on the care and treatment of alcoholism and drug addicts.

During the past year Mr. Weber’s services have been loaned on part time to other organizations for important pieces of work. He acted as Secretary of the Committee on Planning and Financing of Municipal and Non-Municipal Hospitals of the 1917 annual meeting of the American Medical Association and as such had charge of the organization and preparation of its first extensive exhibition of hospital plans.

Since April of last year he has acted as Secretary of the New York Mayor’s Committee on Hospital and Medical Facilities, a position which he now relinquishes. This Committee has assisted in important war work in connection with the organization of adequate hospital, medical and nursing facilities for military needs in and near New York.

Mr. Weber has delivered addresses on health topics at public hearings before boards of supervisors, committees of the Legislature, county medical societies, and has also been one of the outside lecturers before students of Teachers’ College at Columbia. He has written numerous articles for hospital and health periodicals.

STATE HOSPITAL MEN IN CONFERENCE AT BROOKLYN

The quarterly conference of the State Hospital Commission with the managers and superintendents of the State hospitals for mental diseases will be held at the Brooklyn State Hospital on May 15th.

At the morning session Lewis F. Pilcher, State Architect, will speak on “Proposed Plans for the Completion of the Brooklyn State Hospital and Creedmoor.” Dr. Isham G. Harris, Superintendent of the Brooklyn State Hospital, will speak on “Some Psychiatric Problems of the Metropolitan District.” Dr. Walter B. James, a member of the Hospital Development Commission, will discuss these points.

The session will be followed by an inspection of the new hospital buildings; a reception building to accommodate 150 patients and a new chronic building with accommodations for 400, have just been completed.

At the afternoon session Dr. George H. Kingsley, Director of the Psychiatric Institute, will read a paper on “The Future Work of the Psychiatric Institute.” Dr. Irving Holley, of the Brooklyn State Hospital, is soon to enter the military service, will speak on “Constitutional Types of Reaction in Cases of Syphilis of the Nervous System.” Dr. Clarence O. Cheney, of the staff of the Psychiatric Institute, will speak on “Responsibilities of the State Hospitals in the Treatment of Neurosyphilis in Both Its Latent and Active Forms.” Dr. Frank R. Haviland of the Manhattan State Hospital will speak on “Remissions in Cases of Paranoia and Subsequent History of Paralytics Discharged from State Hospitals.” Dr. R. C. Woodman of the Middletown State Hospital will speak on “An Experience in the Feeding and Management of Patients in a Disturbed Ward.”

The papers at the evening session will be as follows: Dr. Walter Timms on “A Critique of Some Endocrinopathies.” Dr. Horatio M. Pollock, Statistician of the State Hospital Commission, on “Dementia Praecox as a Social Problem,” and Dr. Joseph Smith on “Work in the Psychiatric Clinic.”

S. C. A. A. STAFF MEMBERS ON KANSAS CITY PROGRAM

Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the County Agencies Department of the State Charities Aid Association, and George A. Hastings and Miss Jessie Taft of the Mental Hygiene Committee have gone to Kansas City to attend the forty-fifth annual meeting of the National Conference of Social Work (formerly the National Conference of Charities and Correction), in session May 20th. Miss Mary Vida Clark is also in attendance.

Miss Curry will participate in a discussion on “The County as a Unit in Charity Administration” as part of the program of the section on Public Agencies and Institutions. She will also give a talk on “Social Work in Rural Communities in the United States” to the joint section of the children’s section and the National Probation Association.

Mr. Hastings and Miss Taft will address the mental hygiene meeting on “The Progressive Steps in Community Control of the Feebleminded.” Mr. Hastings will speak on “Registration” and Miss Taft on “Supervision.”

NEW LAW PROVIDES FOR MENTAL EXAMINATION OF FEMALE OFFENDERS

Henceforth there is to be mental examination of female offenders against certain provisions of the criminal code in New York City, according to the provisions of a bill which has just been signed by Governor Whitman. The new law places the power in the magistrates before whom these women come, of remanding them for examination and observation to some suitable public hospital, or to any institution in the city carrying on reformatory work for women, in which there are facilities for physical and mental examination.

This procedure is put into operation at the discretion of the magistrates and is intended to do away with the injustice of committing women of defective mentality to penal institutions when their offense has been occasioned by reason of mental defect, rather than of criminal intent. It will further provide the magistrate with the expert knowledge that will enable him to decide upon an institution that can deal effectively with mental defect.

Rochester Tuberculosis Institute Scores Big Success; Workers Stirred To New Enthusiasm

Widespread Interest in Control of Disease Aroused in Livingston, Monroe, Ontario, Orleans, Wayne and Yates Counties

The sixth of the series of the institutes for volunteer and professional workers in tuberculosis that are being conducted by the State Department of Health and the State Charities Aid Association’s Committee on Tuberculosis, was held in Rochester on April 24, 25 and 26 and was one of the most successful thus far held.

Physicians, visiting tuberculosis nurses, social workers and members of anti-tuberculosis committees in Livingston, Monroe, Ontario, Orleans, Wayne and Yates Counties were in attendance throughout the three days of the institute.

The opening session was held at the Monroe County Sanatorium on Wednesday afternoon, April 24. George J. Nebbach, executive secretary of the Association’s Tuberculosis Committee, was the first speaker and described the increased problems growing out of America’s participation in the great world war, emphasizing the need of an enlarged program to meet the additional burdens.

Dr. Lawson Brown, of Saranac Lake, chief of the medical staff of the Trudeau Sanatorium, delivered a most informing address on “Our present Day Knowledge as to Tuberculous Infection.”

In the evening Dr. Brown was the principal speaker before a joint meeting of the various local medical societies held under the leadership of the Monroe County Medical Society. The auditorium of the Physicians’ Building was filled to capacity, and a number of doctors stood throughout the meeting to hear Dr. Brown speak on “Some Improved Methods of Diagnosing Pulmonary Tuberculosis.” A number of x-ray plates of lung conditions were shown and a demonstration of the methods of clinical diagnosis was given. Not a heart was won by patients from the county sanatorium.

Hugo A. Brown, executive secretary of the Buffalo Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis, was the first speaker at the Thursday morning session, his subject being “Campaign Methods. After his formal talk, Mr. Brown showed a series of pictures of the work being done in Buffalo and moving pictures demonstrating the sun treatment of bone and joint tuberculosis at the J. N. Adam Memorial Hospital, Ferrysburg, N. Y. The latter pictures were so enthusiastically received that in response to a demand from the audience they were again shown at the afternoon session.

Mrs. Ethel McCormick Hendrickson, the newly appointed executive secretary of the Rochester Tuberculosis Committee, also spoke at the morning session on “Newspaper Publicity.”

Thursday a luncheon was given to the speakers and others attending the institute at the Chamber of Commerce. The public health commissioner of the City of Rochester, the Rochester Tuberculosis Committee were the hosts. Isaac Adler, Chairman of the latter, presided. Brief talks were given by Mr. Nebbach, Dr. Joseph Roby, Acting Health Officer of Rochester, Dr. John L. Lloyd, and Frank Kierman.

At the afternoon session on Thursday, Mr. Nebbach spoke on “Programs of Local Work,” and Dr. Roby led in the discussion of this topic. Frank Kierman, Field Secretary of the Tuberculosis Committee, suggested lines of work for rural communities, and the discussion of his address was led by Dr. B. R. Watkins, a District Sanitary Supervisor in the State Department of Health.

Dr. M. E. Roser, Supervisor of Tuberculosis in the State Department of Health, spoke at the Friday morning session on “Visiting as Applied to Tuberculosis.” He showed how the whole machinery of the fight against the disease rests to a large extent upon the shoulders of the nurse, and declared that she is the most important factor in the public health campaign. Mrs. Ethel McCormick Hendrickson led in the discussion of Dr. Rose’s address. At the afternoon session, tuberculosis dispensaries were described by Dr. Rose, who said that they were the heart of the anti-tuberculosis movement and should be power houses of educational propaganda for the prevention of the disease.

The large attendance at the meetings, the animated discussion, and the widespread publicity the institute received were indicative of the importance and success in stimulating interest in the counties concerned. An institute is being held at Buffalo on May 8, 9 and 10.

AUTO FOR MADISON COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS NURSE

At a luncheon served in the home of Mrs. A. H. Campbell of Canastota, on April 26, the Madison County Tuberculosis Committee proved that it was very much alive to the importance of extending the work of its tuberculosis nurse, Miss Mary E. Ashley, R. N., by quickly raising money for the purchase of an automobile for her use. This will enable the nurse to increase the volume of her work and to penetrate districts remote from the County. Dr. Otto Paff, President of the Committee, presided, and introduced the following speakers: Dr. W. L. Carpenter, Dr. R. L. Crockett, and Dr. N. O. Brooks of Oneida, Dr. William Taylor, Dr. J. J. Rommel, Dr. H. G. Germer, Prof. E. H. Wiser, Mr. J. E. Sperry, Miss Ashley, and Mrs. L. L. Lewis of the State Charities Aid Association. Much interest and enthusiasm were manifested.

GRATIFYING RESULTS OBTAINED IN WORK WITH INFANTILE PARALYSIS CASES

A recent report of the Rockefeller Foundation covers after-work with victims of the 1916 infantile paralysis epidemic, done by the special Committee on After-Care of Infantile Paralysis of the State Charities Aid Association in cooperation with the Foundation.

"To the after-care of the New York children who in an epidemic of 1916 were victims of infantile paralysis, the Foundation has made contributions through a special committee for New York and through the State Charities Aid Association associations and knowledge. A large number of children have been supplied with braces, the use of which in most cases is only temporarily necessary. By systematic massage and special exercises, gratifying results have been secured; hundreds have been wholly restored or are on the way to complete recovery; in the case of many others disabilities are being minimized."

"Plans have been made to continue during 1918 the clinics and the brace treatments which have proved so successful. Not only have hundreds of individual children been cured or greatly improved by this after-care, but valuable knowledge has been gathered which will prove of great value in dealing with the problem of infantile paralysis in the future."
PAUL KELLOGG TELLS S. C. A. A. STAFF ABOUT MR. FOLKS’ WORK IN FRANCE

The work which Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, has been doing in France for several months past as Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross was interestingly described to the Association staff recently in an informal talk by Paul U. Kellogg, editor of The Survey. Mr. Kellogg recently returned from France where he was in intimate touch with the activities of Mr. Folks’ department.

Mr. Kellogg said that when Mr. Folks reached France last July, instead of taking charge only of the tuberculosis work, as he had expected, he was asked to become administrative head of the Department of Civil Affairs. After considering the matter, he decided to accept the position, partly because of the opportunity it would give him to accomplish important results in tuberculosis work, but also because of the opportunity to work out some of the social problems of the country that had always stood for and worked for in social work in this country.

Mr. Folks’ first task was to organize assistance for French people living in the army camps. His previous experience in making up budgets for the State Charities Aid Association and the New York City Department of Charities enabled him to prepare a budget for the Department of Civil Affairs which carried such conviction that it was adopted with the administration’s instant approval. He visualized the work as dealing with various groups in the community, and this gave the budget a human appeal. The groups included the crippled, the tuberculous, the homeless, and the children of the country. He succeeded in bringing about cooperative action among hundreds of organizations doing public health and welfare work for the civilian population.

The offices of the Department are located on the third floor of No. 4 Place du Concorde which looks out on the square where the guillotine was operated in the French Revolution. The building in its day was an old palace and is an imposing structure in the center of Paris. This has gradually been rearranged to meet the practical needs of a busy business office.

Mr. Kellogg said that the Civil Affairs Department is making France feel that America is really interested that Mr. Folks’ work among the civilian sufferers is having many beneficial and far-reaching results.

ROCHESTER PLANS HARD FIGHT AGAINST ‘T. B.’

The Rochester Tuberculosis Committee, organized last fall, plans an intensive campaign in that city this year and has engaged as its executive secretary, Mrs. Ethel McCormick Hendriksen, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Mrs. Hendriksen leaves the post of executive secretary of the Grand Rapids Anti-Tuberculosis Society where she rendered eight years of valuable service.

The Rochester Committee reports an excellent sale of the Red Cross Christmas Seals, the total number disposed of being 1,406,732, or an increase of almost 400,000 sold over last year.

At the committee’s annual meeting the following officers and executive committee were elected: Isaac Adler, Chairman; Dr. Howard L. Prince, Vice-Chairman; Rev. Howard L. Denny, Secretary; Percy R. McPhail, Treasurer; and Mrs. Anna J. Falls, Anna J. Falls, Mrs. Vivian R. Bigelow, Mrs. DeWitt B. Macomber, Joseph P. Stein, Sweeney, Robert C. Schumway, Dr. Henry T. Williams, and Rabbi Horace J. Wolf.

“WE ALWAYS EXPECT AMERICA TO BE FIRST”

A high tribute to American promptness and efficiency was paid to the American Red Cross in France recently by a French official who was impressed by the prompt arrival of Red Cross workers only a few minutes after the explosion of a munitions factory had wrecked the town of La Courneuve and suburbs, outside Paris.

When Homer Folks, Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross, and others called to offer their services the Mayor said: “We knew you would come. We always expect America to be first!”

JUST A MOMENT

The ninth New York City Conference of Charities and Correction was held May 7-9. Almon H. Butler was president of the conference.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association (formerly the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis) will be held in Boston June 6-8.

New York State has adopted a policy of providing maintenance for families of the physicians and other officers of its State hospitals for mental diseases while the men are in the military service.

Miss Mildred Penrose Stewart of Brooklyn has been appointed Director of the Dutchess County Health Association to succeed Miss Edith Ambrose, who resigned to join the staff of the Red Cross in France.

Fifty-six of the one hundred and forty-two cases admitted to the Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminal Insane last year were foreign-born—39 per cent; 33, or 27 per cent, were foreign born and alien.

“A NEW AND BETTER ERA FOR THE FEEBLEMINDED”

“WE * * * believe that the dark ages of legislative inactivity, court delays, and social apathy are past and that a combination of alert public officials and influential and enlightened private organizations must result in the ushering in of a new and better era for the feebleminded of the State.”—From the annual report of State Board of Charities.

BUY BONDS AND STAMPS

Members of the staff of the State Charities Aid Association and its various departments have done a substantial bit by subscribing to Liberty Loans and by purchasing War Savings and Thrift Stamps. To date a total of $20,876.75 has been subscribed, representing 84 individuals who have either subscribed to the loans or purchased stamps.

SUPTS. OF POOR MEET AT ALEXANDRIA BAY, JUNE 25

The Annual Convention of Superintendents of Poor and Poor Law Officers of the State of New York will be held at the Crossmon House, Alexandria Bay, June 23-28. The program is now being made up. Leon D. Dexter, Commissioner of Charities of Syracuse, is chairman of the Program Committee. Among the speakers whom he has scheduled so far are the following:

Senator Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Hospital Development Commission, who will speak on “The New State Program for the Feebleminded.”

Hon. Thaddeus G. Sweet, Speaker of the Assembly.

Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities.

Mrs. Elmer Blair of the Women’s Committee of the Council of National Defense, who will speak on “The Year’s Program in Child Welfare.”

Almus Oliver, Secretary of the Associated Churches and Charities, and the Moral Survey Committee of Syracuse, on “Co-operation.”

Mrs. Honore Haylock Whitney, Secretary of the Child Welfare Board of Oswego, on “The Administration of Pensions to Widows.”

Mrs. Willis G. Mitchell of Hudson Falls on “Program of the Committee on Rural Problems of the New York Woman Suffrage Party.”

Dr. Robert W. Hill of the State Board of Charities on “Old Wine and New Bottles.”

Miss Sophie Van S. Theis, Superintendent of the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association, on “Successful and Unsuccessful Placing Out of Children.”

Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the County Agencies Department of the State Charities Aid Association, on “The Children’s Year—An Announcement of the Program of the Federal Children’s Bureau, and the Woman’s Committee of the Council of National Defense.”

BUFFALO STATE HOSPITAL

Dr. Paul G. Taddiken has been nominated as superintendent of the Buffalo State Hospital to succeed Dr. Arthur W. Hard, resigned. Dr. Taddiken has recently been acting superintendent of the St. Lawrence State Hospital at Ogdensburg in place of Dr. Richard H. Hutchings who is in the military service.
WAR SERVICE OF STATE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

By MISS MARY VIDA CLARK

The April issue of the S. C. A. A. News contained an account of the patriotic work of the State hospitals. But the insane are not the only wards of the State who are helping to win the war. The delinquent, the feebleminded and the epileptic, and all the other classes of inmates of the sixteen so-called State charitable institutions are equally busy. There are nearly 9,300 men, women and children in these sixteen institutions, of whom about 2,400 are in the five State reformatories for women and children, about 5,000 in the five schools, asylums, villages and colonies for the feebleminded and epileptic, about 1,300 in the two homes for war veterans and their wives and widows, and 800 in the schools for the blind and Indian children and the hospitals for injeecctable tuberculosis and crippled children.

What the Albion Girls Are Doing

A letter received from the Superintendent of the Western House of Refuge for Women at Albion, an institution receiving delinquent girls between fifteen and thirty years of age, expresses in a form that is more interesting than statistics what has happened there. Here is the letter in part:--

"As soon as war was declared and we saw the needs, we decided first, to make more than ever before out of the garden produce. The athletic field was plowed and planted entirely to potatoes. There were many vegetables raised in the various cottage gardens. Much rivalry was produced by giving a garden to each cottage as a challenge to see which produced the best results. A friend in Buffalo, who was interested in this undertaking, and who observed the splendid spirit with which the girls entered upon it, contributed money to purchase the seeds.

"In addition to the work in gardens, which continued all summer, the girls did a good deal of volunteer work unloading coal. We endeavored to get in for the winter as much coal as possible, and so it happened that several cars of coal accumulated which must be unloaded all at the same time, if we would save a large demurrage bill.

Girls Eager to Shovel Coal

"The amount of coal unloaded by the girls was 650 tons, and so happy were they in this work that when it was all over they regretted that there was no more to do. Four girls each half day, were allowed to do this work, and even though a girl often asked to work the full day, we did not grant the request. There were many more requests to help with this work than we were able to grant.

"Another experiment we tried as a war measure was placing our girls out to do service on a nearby farm, picking peaches and gathering tomatoes. They were paid at the rate of 20c an hour. There was earned in all $122. The girls became very much interested in this project, and had many plans for the use of the money. At a meeting of all of the girls it was voted that this money, together with a fund they already had, should be spent as follows: $50 for a Liberty Bond, $84 for a large steel flag pole, and $20 for a flag.

"It would be impossible to describe the enthusiasm with which the girls entered upon and carried through this project, and the spirit de corps that it established. Later on, after the pole had been purchased and in place, a day was set apart for the flag raising ceremonies which were very impressive.

They had a very pleasant Christmas celebration without the candy."

Bedford and Hudson Girls Busy

The girls in reformatories in the eastern part of the State are equally patriotic. Since last July about 200 girls at Bedford have been employed at odd times knitting and sewing for the Red Cross and turning out an average of about 100 pieces a month. Many of the officers also are engaged in knitting and sewing for the Red Cross. Eighty-five girls and thirty-three officers are enrolled as members of the Red Cross each paying a dollar fee.

At the State Training School for Girls at Hudson, where unruly girls under sixteen are sent, a large amount of Red Cross supplies have been turned out and a fund in the bank made up of small sums which the girls had in their possession when they were admitted to the school has been disposed of in accordance with the following motion which was adopted at one of their meetings:--"Resolved, That the interest money which has accrued on the girls' funds deposited in the Hudson City Savings Bank be used to obtain a Junior Red Cross membership for the school."

How the Boys at Industry Help

The State Agricultural and Industrial School at Industry near Rochester, where boys are sent from the courts, has a Red Cross Branch of 72 members whose work has been repeatedly commended by the Rochester Chapter. The sum of $534 was raised for the purchase of material and more than two thousand pieces were made and turned in. The Branch also raised $47 for the purchase of Christmas packages sent to boys paroled from the institution and now in the Army and Navy; two boxes of clothing, much of it new, with pillows, bandages, etc., were sent to France for the refugees. Altogether nearly $1,600 has been raised for the work of the various war relief activities by the employees of the institution. Some ninety employees have joined the Red Cross and $29,400 has been subscribed to Liberty Loans, $215 to the Rochester Red Cross fund, of which $55 was given by the boys, $151 to the Y. M. C. A. work of which $33 was given by the boys, and $540 to the Knights of Columbus of which $311 was given by the Catholic Chaplain.

"Feed a Soldier," Rome Slogan

The Rome State Custodial Asylum, the State's largest institution for the feebleminded, with more than 1,600 inmates, is very patriotic. "Feed a soldier" is a slogan that inspires many a husky boy to work long hours on the farm. The Superintendent writes: "We have carried on a number of activities among the inmates in the line of war relief such as sending a number of boys out on farms to help farmers produce a larger amount of agricultural produce and also girls to work principally in a knitting mill where government supplies are being made, and a number of girls at the various colonies are knitting and making other supplies for the Red Cross during their leisure hours. The teaching force of the institution have supervised a very active Red Cross unit at the institution and both employees and inmates have done a great deal of knitting, sewing and bandage making. A special economy in food has been instituted such as three mealless days per week, one meal per day without butter, one meal per day without sugar and a considerable substitution of corn and other cereals in the place of wheat. A large number of the employees and inmates have subscribed to Liberty Bonds as well as joined the Cross and a very large portion of the employees and inmates joined the Rome War Chest Association, the proceeds of which are used for general relief purposes." The pictures on this page show the Rome boys doing their bit to increase the nation's food supply.

BOYS AT ROME CUSTODIAL ASYLUM HELPING TO INCREASE THE NATION'S FOOD SUPPLY. THIS IS A 20-ACRE POTATO PATCH

The feebleminded girls and women at the Newark State Custodial Asylum and the boys and girls at Letchworth Village and at the Syracuse State Institution for Feebleminded the wives and widows of veterans at the New York State Woman's Relief Corps Home at Oxford have helped too. About 70% have contributed from one to five dollars to the Red Cross, and as many as eight of such work are knitting industriously for the soldiers while those who are able to have saved a little money from their pensions and have bought Liberty Bonds. Perhaps the greatest sacrifice that these old people have made is the giving up of many of their best officers and employees who have enlisted for active service.

The Little Indians and the War
At the Thomas Indian School on the Cayuga Reservation in the western part of the State nearly all the employees and older pupils are members of the Red Cross society, about 45 people are knitting and 36 girls are making garments just as fast as they can get the material to make them from. The boys are doing their utmost on the farm and last year helped all they could, many of them working during their play time. This year they hope to make the farm produce even more, if that is a possible thing.

The Contribution of the Blind
At the New York State School for the Blind at Batavia both staff and pupils have subscribed or contributed quite liberally to the Liberty Bonds and to the calls for assistance from the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., etc. The members of the Camp Fire group of girls have met and sewed, principally for the French and Belgian babies, and the older girls have done a large amount of knitting, mostly sweaters for the Navy League. The staff sent to soldiers at the front quite a number of Christmas boxes and some garments to personal friends in the service.

War Service of Crippled Children
The 150 little patients at the State Hospital for the Care of Crippled and Deformed Children at West Havenstraw are hard at work. The older girls have been making surgical dressings for the West Side Branch of the American Red Cross, and last winter they dressed three dozen dolls obtained from a New York newspaper which were later distributed to the children of enlisted men in the different armories. The staff have been doing a large amount of knitting for war purposes and have bought the yarn from their own money. Twenty of them belong to the Red Cross. Many of the most valued members of the staff have entered the military service.

Veterans of Other Wars Help
The thousand veterans of the Civil and Spanish Wars at the New York State Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Bath have purchased about $20,000 worth of Liberty Bonds, and have contributed generously to the local Red Cross and have also produced many articles for the use of the soldiers. The old soldiers and

R. B. CUTTING DIES IN PARIS
Was Chairman and One of Organizers of N. Y. Committee on Feeblemindedness

Mr. Robert Bayard Cutting, Chairman and one of the organizers of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, and active in various lines of social and philanthropic work, died at an American base hospital in Paris, April 1st, following an operation. Mr. Cutting had been associate organizing secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in France for several months. He was 42 years old.

The following minute on his death was adopted by the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness:

"In the death of Mr. Robert Bayard Cutting of New York, which occurred in Paris on April 1, 1918, the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness was deprived of its Chairman and one of its organizers, and the public suffered the loss of an earnest worker in the cause of social betterment and a leader in the organization of enterprises for public good.

"Mr. Cutting had varied interests and connections in social work, but the question of mental defect was one which enlisted his deepest interest and most active efforts. In order to cope with the problem in this State in an organized way he assisted in the organization of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness in October, 1916, and from the beginning he was a leader in its councils and its activities. He acted as temporary chairman of the executive committee, and because permanent chairman of the committee when its organization was perfected. He formulated the initial program of the committee, the execution of which has had a marked effect in stimulating interest throughout the State and in securing definite results in the way of increased institutional provision, an improved system of administration of institutions and steps for better mental hygiene. Mr. Cutting served as chairman of the finance committee and was active in securing financial support for the committee's varied activities.

"Mr. Cutting had been in France for eight months as associate organizing secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, giving to that work the same zeal and devotion which characterized all his activities for social betterment.

"In his death the committee sustains a heavy loss. The results obtained thus far and hoped for in the future will be due in no small measure to his vision, zeal and labors.

"The executive committee on behalf of the general committee, by formal vote, orders this minute spread upon its records and directs that a copy be sent to the family of Mr. Cutting."

MONROE COUNTY SANATORIUM TO HAVE A NURSES' HOME

A home for the nursing staff of the Monroe County Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Rochester has been developed by the original administrative and service building. The remodeling is going forward rapidly and the total cost of the alterations will be approximately $14,900.
EIGHT MORE CITIES TO HAVE TUBERCULOSIS DISPENSARIES

The State Charities Aid Association has been meeting with encouraging progress in its work of assisting local public and private tuberculosis organizations to establish dispensaries for the medical oversight, assistance and sanitary supervision of tuberculous soldiers rejected from military service, as well as for civilians. Dr. Elliott Washburn and Dr. Charles S. Prest, whose extensive experience in tuberculosis work has been placed at the disposal of those local organizations by the Association, report that arrangements have gone far enough to practically assure the opening of such dispensaries in Hudson, Newburgh, Kingston, Binghamton, Auburn, and Mt. Vernon within a month, and that plans have been perfected in Cohoes and Little Falls for the reopening of dispensaries in those cities.

A great deal of work has to be done in each locality before the dispensaries are ready for patients. A suitable place has to be secured, proper equipment purchased, experienced nurse’s service obtained, skilled medical service arranged for and necessary funds obtained. Approximately $2,500 a year is needed to secure a medical and nursing staff and to equip and operate a dispensary in the smaller cities of the State.

In a series of villages and towns of Westchester County arrangements are under way for occasional clinic service to be given by tuberculosis specialists of New York City. The local tuberculosis organizations in White Plains, Ossining, Port Chester, Harrison and Tarrytown have voted to try out the plan, and it is believed that several other communities will be added to the number after the plan has been fully explained and understood.

THREE MORE COUNTIES START WORK ON TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

Ground has been broken for the new tuberculosis hospitals in Broome, Rockland and Nassau Counties.

The contracts for the Broome County institution total $117,233. The hospital is being constructed on an excellent site at Chenango Bridge, several miles from Binghamton, and is to have, at the outset, seventy-five beds.

The Rockland County Hospital will be located near Summit Park and two and a half miles northeast of New City, and is to cost approximately $90,000. The board of managers for this institution has recently been appointed by the board of supervisors, as follows: Dr. G. A. Leitner of Orangeburg, Frank R. Crumbie of Clarkstown, Dr. John Seegstucken of Stony Point, Rev. George H. Bonsall of Haverstraw, and Dr. M. J. Sanford of Suffern.

The contracts for the new county hospital in Nassau County, totaling $108,259, were let by the board of supervisors on April 10. The institution is being erected on a beautiful site of 97 acres near Farmingdale.

STERILIZATION LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Supreme Court Justice Rudd has declared unconstitutional the law enacted in this State in 1912 creating a State board of examiners with power to sterilize through an operation, “feebled-minded criminals and other defectives.” Justice Rudd in his opinion contended that under the Federal Constitution, no State had a right to deny to any individual equal rights under the law. He said that subjecting feebleminded persons to an operation as provided under this law was a violation.

It is thought that the case will be appealed to the higher courts for a final ruling on the question.

This board consisted of three members. Appropriations for its work have totaled more than $16,000, but the board never performed a single operation. It examined about 200 persons and listed them as proper subjects for operation, but proceedings testing the constitutionality of the law prevented the operations.

The board has been a dead letter for some time as no funds have been provided for it in the appropriation bills during the last two or three years.

DOCTORS’ DUTY TO HELP SOLVE PROBLEM OF MENTAL DEFECT

Need of more knowledge of and interest in the problems of mental defect on the part of general medical profession was brought out in a letter to the editor of the New York Medical Journal by LeRoy E. Bowman, Assistant Secretary of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness. He wrote in part:

"Physicians in general are all too unaware of the problem in its entirety and in its personal and individual aspects. The physician, before all others, comes into intimate personal and family contact with all the afflicted, including those afflicted mentally. It is therefore, to the physician that we must first look for keen appreciation of the bearings of subnormality and feeblemindedness on medical and community problems. One of the chief efforts of private and public organizations now endeavoring to study the feebleminded is to get an accurate estimate of how many there are, who they are, and where they are. Surely the physician is the one to give this information as soon as he is aroused to the pressing need of securing and divulging it.

"Organized movements, such as that which the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness represents, can accomplish a certain amount in advocating better legislation, in securing more and better equipped institutions for the feebleminded, and in educating the public to a certain extent; but, as you very correctly remarked, the solution of the problem of the feebleminded depends not so much on the accomplishment of the first two objects, which are more or less static, but depends largely on a thorough appreciation of what feeblemindedness is and how it should be dealt with by representative people in a community. The community attitude toward the feebleminded is one of the most important questions with which we are forced to deal. Any institution, organization, or publication that can aid in giving the physician a better appreciation of this pressing problem and can influence him to demand of the medical schools more and better training in psychology will be aiding at the most important point."
Association Aids War Work

Staff Members Supervised Collection of $4,000 for Red Cross

MR. WRIGHT HELPING HOOVER

From the beginning of the war the State Charities Aid Association has felt that the most effective war service it could do was to push vigorously the various lines of activity in which it was already engaged. But it has done more than this.

In addition to its constructive work in public health, in the prevention of insanity, tuberculosis and feeblemindedness, providing for destitute and dependent children, and aiding public authorities who are responsible for thousands of inmates in State and municipal institutions, the Association engages in special pieces of war work as opportunity offers.

$4,000 RAISED FOR RED CROSS

The most recent was in connection with the Second Red Cross Drive. At the request of the Red Cross, Mr. Wright, the Secretary pro tem of the Association, designated Miss Constance Eustis and Miss Ruth Spencer of the Association’s staff to take charge of the collections in the Greenwich Village district. The collections were made by 150 volunteer workers who worked early and late; the workers included many members of the Association’s staff. The section allotted to the Association’s leadership included the homes of many of the working classes, yet the total subscriptions amounted to over $4,000. Members of the staff soliciting contributions were greatly impressed by their generosity. Members of the staff also contributed to the fund.

Many of those visited said that members of their family were soldiers or sailors in the country’s service and gave of their small income most liberally, willingly and with a spirit which inspired others more prosperous to give more.

Churches, schools and stores in the district co-operated actively, either giving as individuals or by contributing a certain percentage of their sales.

Everybody Shares in Sacrifice

The collectors came across many incidents of strong human interest. Following are a few of them:

A very small newsboy “came to the front” and deposited fifty cents as his share to help the injured big brothers in France.

An aged couple, with an allotment of one day’s pay a week as their sole support, contributed 25 cents and expressed their desire to do more.

A working girl living in one small room where she does her own cooking and laundry work pledged $1 a week for the duration of the war.

One woman said she wished to give but that it would be necessary for her to sell thrift stamps before it would be possible. She was visited the following day and had turned her savings into a gift for the war sufferers.

One of the social workers who was assisting in securing subscriptions approached a man who said he would willingly give but had been out of work for some time and had no money. Through the efforts of the workers a position was secured for him.

Numerous members of the Board of Managers are serving on important war committees and are engaged in important war activities.

MR. WRIGHT HEADS A HOOVER COMMITTEE

Henry C. Wright, Secretary pro tem, has recently been appointed by Mr. Hoover as Chairman of the Committee on Institutional Food Conservation. This Committee is sending to institutions and college dormitories throughout the United States matter containing recipes adapted for institutional use, dietary methods of reducing waste, rules for safe feeding of patients within food conservation requirements, and other helpful suggestions.

In outlining the program of work to Mr. Hoover, Mr. Wright estimated that if the institutions throughout the country could reduce their consumption of four articles of food, viz., meat, flour, sugar and fats, by ten percent the aggregate saving in a year would amount to fully $10,000,000. New York State institutions should greatly benefit by the work of this Committee.

The Association has also aided in war work by loaning whole or part-time services of executives from its staff.

Homer Folk, Secretary of the Association, is Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France, and several members of the staff are with him in that work.

George A. Hastings, an Assistant Secretary of the Association, is loaned on half time to the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, in charge of its war work department.

Joseph J. Weber, until recently the Executive Secretary of the Association’s Committee on Hospitals, was recently re-elected for the past year of the New York Mayor’s Committee on Hospital and Medical Facilities.

Buffalo Tuberculosis Institute Hits High Water Mark of Interest

Seventh Series of Meetings for Tuberculosis Workers Gives New Impetus to Campaign in Western New York

The seventh of the series of institutes for volunteers and professional tuberculosis workers which the State Department of Health and Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association have been conducting in some of the larger cities of the State, was held at the Iroquois Hotel in Buffalo on May 8, 9, and 10 for the physicians, nurses, social workers and members of local tuberculosis committees, in the counties of Allegany, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Erie, Genesee, Livingston, Niagara, Orleans and Wyoming.

Dr. Nicoll on Tuberculosis Infection

Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., Deputy Commissioner of the State Department of Health, opened the institute with a paper on “Our Present Knowledge as to Tuberculous Infection,” dwelling particularly on the remarkable discovery of the tubercle bacillus by Robert Koch in 1884 and what it has meant in successfully combating the disease. George J. Neubach, Executive Secretary of the Association’s Tuberculosis Committee, followed Dr.
Nicoll with an address on "Tuberculosis and the War." On the second day, Hugo A. Brown, Executive Secretary of the Buffalo Anti-Tuberculosis Association, spoke on "Campaign Methods" and showed some interesting motion pictures of the sun treatment being administered at the J. N. Adams Memorial Sanatorium at Perrysburg, to children suffering tuberculosis of the bones and joints. "Programs of Local Tuberculosis Work" were discussed by Dr. Franklin C. Gram, Acting Health Commissioner of Buffalo and Chief of the Division of Communicable Diseases; by Frederick Almy, Secretary of the Buffalo Charity Organization Society; Dr. John H. Pryor, President of the Buffalo Anti-Tuberculosis Association, George J. Nelbach and Frank Kiernan of the Association.

WORK OF TUBERCULOSIS NURSES

The work and activities of tuberculosis nurses and tuberculosis work were presented on the third day by Dr. M. E. Rose, Supervisor of Tuberculosis in the State Department of Health, Miss M. S. Kahlman, Supervising Nurse in the State Department of Health, and Miss Lennie B. Arthur, Supervising Nurse of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee, in their discussion of Dr. Bose's remarks, gave public health authorities and the Osman from their own experiences, to the many nurses attending the session.

On the day following the institute, fifty or more of those in attendance enjoyed a pleasant and instructive trip to Buffalo's Municipal Sanatorium, the J. N. Adam Memorial Hospital at Perrysburg.

The final institute of this series was held in Elmira, in the Social Service Federation Building, May 27-29.

OCCASIONAL TUBERCULOSIS CLINIC SERVICE FOR WESTCHESTER COUNTY

Harrison and Port Chester Clinics
Mark Beginning of Valuable Series

In Harrison and Port Chester, on May 15 and May 22, the first two clinics under the "occasional tuberculosis clinic" service being offered to Westchester County through the County Tuberculosis Committee, were held with marked success. Dr. Edward S. McSweeney, one-time superintendent of New York City's largest institution for tuberculosis patients (Ottisville Sanatorium and Sea View Hospital on Staten Island), who had had special training and experience in the diagnosis and treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis, has been secured at a nominal cost as clinic physician.

Free Facilities Greatly Needed

The need for free expert medical diagnosis and advice has become urgent, first for men rejected or returned from the camps, camps and naval training stations and from military service because of tuberculosis; second, for those civilians who may be unable to pay for such expert care and treatment among whom tuberculosis is likely to increase because of the privation and want growing out of the high cost of food stuffs, the shortage of fuel and other conditions of war; and third, for the suspected cases of lung disease whom private physicians may wish to refer to the clinic for consultation.

As dispensaries with frequent sessions would not be expedient in many communities of Westchester County, an occasional tuberculosis clinic service has been placed at the disposal of the towns in the county desiring it through the county tuberculosis committee. Under this plan the local health authorities or private public health agencies through physicians, nurses, social workers, members of the clergy and lady gather together on a selected date in some room where the necessary equipment has been placed, all of the cases which need this service and Dr. McSweeney, assisted by local workers, examines the patient and suggests care and treatment.

Resourcefulness in Providing Quarters

Thus far, makeshift quarters have had to be resorted to for the clinics. In Harrison where the District Nursing Association held the clinic, the visiting nurse's rooms where thrown open for the purpose, the nurse's office being used by the physician as an examining room, the hall as the waiting room, the living room for the patients who were too ill to sit up and the dining room for the dressing room. Under the thorough examination given the patients only fourteen of the twenty seeking help were able to be examined. The diagnoses were as follows: Five pulmonary tuberculosis, three bone tuberculosis (of the hip), one both bone and pulmonary, five observation cases. Suggestions for the care and treatment of each case were made and the six who were not examined will return for the next clinic, which will probably be held within a week or so.

In Port Chester the only available spot for the clinic (which was conducted under the auspices of the Philanthropic Section of the Woman's Civic League) was found to be the court room in the Municipal Building. Through the ingenuity of the workers who were present to help, this room was successfully screened off by means of clothes- horses and bed spread so that a waiting room, dressing room and an examining room were provided. Thirty patients were on hand for examination but only the first nine were reached.

Similar clinics were scheduled in Ossining, Tarrytown and White Plains under the local public health authorities and the District Visiting Nurse Association, the Civic League of Tarrytown and North Tarrytown and the White Plains Nursing Association, on May 28, May 29 and June 5. It is hoped that other villages in the county will see the need and value of these clinics and participate in the series which has been begun.
LE ROY E. BOWMAN RESIGNS TO TAKE POSITION WITH FOSDICK COMMISSION

La Succeeded as Assistant Secretary of N. Y. Committee on Feeblemindedness by Miss Ethel A. Price

LeRoy E. Bowman, who for the past year has been Assistant Secretary of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, has resigned to accept a position with the War Camp Community Service of the Army and Navy Department.

Before coming to the New York Committee Mr. Bowman was executive secretary of a large civic organization in Brooklyn which had organized a district of 100,000 population to study the needs of the district and administer measures for its betterment. His work in that field gave him training in surveying a district and planning many and varied activities for its social improvement, organizing support and carrying the measures into effect.

Because of his training in district organizing, Mr. Bowman has been asked to assist the War Camp Community Service in its activities for the welfare of soldiers and sailors in the communities adjacent to camps throughout the country. For the present, he is helping to organize the activities in New York City and in the personnel work of the Associate Director.

Mr. Bowman has made a careful study, both theoretical and practical, of community problems, is now teaching in practical sociology at Columbia University, and is scheduled to give the first course at that institution in "The Community." His experience in social service work began eight years ago, when he became director of a summer school at Halsted street, Chicago. Shortly afterward he organized a men and boys' settlement in South Chicago, and later came to New York to finish his Ph. D. work in sociology. Soon afterward he undertook the direction of a large settlement to work for men and boys in Greenpoint, Brooklyn, and while there took over the larger enterprizes of the community and organized them into the Greenpoint Neighborhood Association, whose work demanded all of his time until he came to the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness.

Mr. Bowman has assisted in the educational work of the New York Committee in the studies made by the organization, and their dissemination through pamphlets, lectures and newspaper publicity.

Mr. Bowman is succeeded by Miss Ethel Anderson Prince, of Yonkers, who is a graduate of Vassar, and during the past year a member of the faculty of Barnard College at Columbia University, where she was in charge of the experimental laboratory of psychology. She has done much clinical work at Vanderbilt Clinic and Bellevue Hospital, and was psychologist to the Psychopathic Laboratory at Police Headquarters in New York City. At one time she was a member of the staff of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association.

"A great lesson has come in this mobilization as to the function of American medical men. Never before have they had to exercise so largely the powers of executives, never before have they been called upon to apply to such large groups of human beings the principles of medicine. They have had forced upon their attention the absolutely imperative necessity of medicine being recognized and accepted as an indispensable instrument in the establishment and in the maintaining of the national welfare.

"They are now in full possession of this knowledge and it becomes their important duty to spare no efforts not only to make this knowledge useful, but to make it acted upon. In the past it has seemed that medical men have acted too much in an advisory capacity. They have kept apart as a sect by themselves, solemnly made their recommendations to civil authorities and then passed on; and only in the cases of the most threatening and devastating diseases have they attained executive power.

"The time has come now for the medical profession to organize a definite propaganda committee which will constantly keep the importance of medicine in the eyes of the public. Physicians must mix more in political and civic affairs and relinquish more than they ever have done their predilections for study on their part and take on actual public service in the application of the principles of their art."

WAR WORK SPURS PHYSICIANS TO MORE PRACTICAL PUBLIC SERVICE

Colonel Bailey Declares Medical Men "Must Mix More in Political and Civic Affairs"

One of the compensations of the war is the impetus which it is giving to organized public health work in civil life and to the socializing of medicine and medical men.

In a recent notable address at the Academy of Medicine, Col. Pierce Bailey, Director of the Division of Neurology and Psychiatry in the Surgeon General's office, who was a well known specialist in New York before the war, touched upon public health and the place of the medical man in it, as follows:

"The general reconstructive program of the country will have to be carried out by some agency which, while not interfering too much with individual states, will still be able to influence them into the adoption of a common health program. The Federal Government must be put in possession of facts concerning its birth rate, its death rate, the diseases of the different localities. It further must have power to so influence individual states to take care of these problems that the results will be serviceable to the nation as a whole. We possess the beginning of this in our Federal Public Health Service, but its powers and functions must be greatly enlarged in order to obtain the end in view.
The annual meeting of the American Association for the Study of the Feebleminded was held in Buffalo, May 31 and June 1.

Provision has been made in the budget of the Gloversville health department for a sanitary patrolman who will work under the supervision of the health officer.

Miss Harriet G. Byrne, formerly of the staff of the County Agencies Department, has been appointed a delegate of the Red Cross Department of Refugees in France.

Miss Gertrude Spaulding, who has been an Agent in the Child Placing Department of the State Charities Aid Association for three years, has gone to France to work under the Red Cross.

At the request of the Secretary of the Navy, and with the approval of Governor Whitman, the State Hospital Commission has leased to the Navy Department 20 acres of land at the Manhattan State Hospital on Ward's Island for a hospital for sick and wounded soldiers.

Dr. Frankwood E. Williams, who has been acting medical director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene for several months past, has been commissioned a Captain in the Medical Officers Reserve Corps and is now on duty in the Surgeon General's office in Washington. Captain Williams is in the Division of Neurology and Psychiatry.

A recent letter from France stated that Miss Julia F. Wells was at Aix les Bains for a few days. The whole town was prepared to receive the Americans from the front. Miss Wells has been appointed Red Cross Delegate for the two departments of Isere and la Lavoise and is assisting in work among those made homeless by the German invasion.

Miss Nellie Gates of Gouverneur has been appointed Tioga County Agent for Dependent Children. Miss Gates is the daughter of a former Superintendent of the Poor of St. Lawrence County and acted as her father's assistant during his term of office. She has also worked for the New England Home for Little Wanderers in Boston. Miss Gates succeeds Mrs. Harriet F. Lockhart who has been Tioga County agent for three years and who was very successful in popularizing the work and putting it on a better financial basis.

Thanks to the enthusiasm of a former Yates County Children's Agent, Miss Molly Anderson, now Mrs. F. L. Haley of Mobile, the influence of the State Charities Aid Association's work for dependent children has extended to the southern portion of Alabama.

In January 1917 Mrs. Haley was the only one "of the general public" to accept an invitation to a meeting of the representatives of Mobile Women's Clubs. During the meeting she was asked to speak, and so enthusiastic was her report of the work which the State Charities Aid Association is doing for children in some of the counties of New York State that before the evening was over the Child Welfare Bureau of Mobile County was formed.

At first the executive force consisted of three volunteer workers and the funds raised were entirely from private sources. Within a year, however, the county authorities assumed responsibility for the work and placed two paid, trained workers in the field.

The first step toward the new bureau was a survey of Mobile County made by means of questionnaires sent to rural school teachers. The returns from many districts showed an appalling number of children who were in extreme need, lacking proper guardianship, and suffering from defective speech and sight. In fact, some districts reported that the majority of children were subnormal, physically and mentally.

During the three months during which the new workers have been employed many individual cases of need and neglect have been investigated and provided for.

The agents have also assisted in enforcing the new compulsory school law as well as the child labor law. In every way, this transplanted county experiment is proving a success.

"PUBLIC SERVICE IN TIME OF WAR"

Professor Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia University, who was formerly a member of the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association, delivered a stirring address on "Public Service in Time of War" before the Association's New York City Visiting Committee on May 24.
Medical Examinations of S. C. A. A. Staff Increase Efficiency

The value of having an office and field staff selected after medical examinations and of having them undergo periodical examinations to safeguard their health and maintain their efficiency has been clearly demonstrated by the experience of the State Charities Aid Association with its staff during the past year.

The engagement of new employees of the Association is now contingent upon their passing a careful medical examination, and all members of the staff are required to undergo annual or bi-annual examinations afterward.

During the year, 46 members of the staff underwent such examinations. While no serious defects or ailments were discovered, numerous conditions were found requiring medical attention and were amenable to treatment. Their prompt discovery and treatment unquestionably contributed to the efficiency of the staff as well as to their personal well-being.

The results of the examinations are confidential with the secretary of the association. Significant findings and recommendations are passed on by him to heads of departments for their guidance, thus enabling executives occasionally to adjust the work of employees to their health and the interests of the association.

The findings of the medical examiner among the 46 members of the staff examined are interesting. Ten members had some form of heart ailment, but in no case was the difficulty so marked as to interfere with efficient service. All, however, were given appropriate medical advice.

No positive cases of tuberculosis or predisposition to tuberculosis were discovered. Two employees who had a slight cough at the time they were examined were advised to consult their family physician if the cough did not clear up. Dis eased tonsils were found in eight instances and inflammation or congestion of the pharynx in three. One employee suffered from influenza.

Abnormal nasal conditions, usually of comparatively slight moment, were present in three instances; operations were advised in three instances. Ten employees were advised to have prompt attention given to their teeth. One employee who complained of chronic headache was urged to have her eyes examined, while another was advised to wear glasses constantly while at work. Three employees were found to be under weight and were advised as to rest, exercise and diet.

NEW NURSES FOR COHOES AND MEDINA

The Cohoes Anti-Tuberculosis Committee has employed Miss Helen L. Tooley, R. N., of Cohoes, as tuberculosis visiting nurse to be attached to the Committee’s tuberculosis dispensary, which has recently been reopened at the City Hospital.

Miss Elizabeth Franklin, R. N., of Liverpool, N. Y., has been appointed by the Public Health Association of Jamaica as local public health nurse to succeed Miss Kate Baker who has been called to service by the American Red Cross.

Two Letters From a Happy Foster Home

The foster mother of a little girl and boy, aged 1 1/2 and 4 years respectively, placed by the State Charities Aid Association on Foster Adoption: It is really remarkable how both children have fitted in. A friend who was visiting me this spring made very merry over Ruth’s likeness to me. She insists that Ruth has many of my ways and characteristics and I can really see that she is right. Ruth says, ‘God meant that I should be your little girl.’ . . . . Bobby’s hot, wild nature is coming nicely under control and there can be no question of his devotion to mother. Daddy is a person whom he loves and infinitely respects, but he protects and helps me with admirable gravity and gallantry. We think him unusually bright. He has picked up nearly the entire alphabet, knows Stevenson’s ‘My Shadow,’ and ‘Bed in Summer’ by heart, from just hearing me say them to him.’ RUTH herself writes: ‘You do not know how happy and glad I am in my new home with a dear daddy, mother and brother, and I have reason to be happy, have I not?’

PLANS ARE APPROVED FOR COLUMBIA COUNTY HOSPITAL

Plans for the new forty-nine bed tuberculosis hospital to be erected near Philmont, Columbia County, have been approved by the State Commissioner of Health, as required by law, and the building committee (formerly the tuberculosis hospital committee, consisting of Wessel Ten Broeck, Greenport; R. Stanley Haner, Livingston; Harrison E. Pratt, Chatham; George A. Hodge, Hudson; Carl Fischer, Acrand; and Ransom Gillette, New Lebanon Center), has advertised for bids on construction. The bids will be opened about the middle of June.

The Willard State Hospital Committee on Mental Hygiene held its annual meeting at the hospital on May 10th; listened to an address by Dr. Ethan A. Newin, superintendent of the State Custodial Asylum at Newark; heard reports from Miss Rachel Ford, social worker, who has had 71 patients under her care during the past six months; and elected officers as follows: Mrs. C. H. P. Vary of Newark, chairman, succeeding Mrs. Milo M. Acker of Hornell; and James M. Dougherty of Canandaigua, secretary-treasurer, succeeding Fred J. Manro of Auburn.

NATIONAL TUBERCULOSIS INSTITUTE, JUNE 10-29

The third annual session of the National Institute for Tuberculosis Workers will be held at the New York School of Philanthropy, June 10-29. As in former years, the institute will be held under the joint auspices of the School of Philanthropy and the National Tuberculosis Association. The four main objects are: (1) To train workers who are already in executive positions in the anti-tuberculosis field to assume positions of greater responsibility, or add to their knowledge of other fields of work. (2) To train workers who have not had experience in the anti-tuberculosis field, but who wish to equip themselves so that they can assume positions of executive responsibility in this field. (3) To a limited extent, to give to volunteer workers in the tuberculosis field, a more comprehensive knowledge of the administrative work involved in the work. (4) To aid in the standardization of methods and programs of anti-tuberculosis work.

CORTLAND COUNTY TO HAVE VISITING TUBERCULOSIS NURSE

The Cortland County Board of Supervisors has appropriated $1,500 for a county tuberculosis visiting nurse which it hopes to have in the field by June 1st. E. J. Warfield, Lester Parker and Frank R. Young have been appointed a committee to select a nurse from the civil service list of eligibles. In taking this step the board has acted under the provisions of an amendment to the county hospital law enacted at the last session of the Legislature providing that where it is not necessary to establish a county tuberculosis hospital, boards of supervisors shall have power to appoint and employ a county nurse or nurses for the discovery of tuberculosis cases, for the care and treatment of such cases, and for other duties as may seem appropriate.

The Public Health Committee of the Twentieth Century Club will co-operate with the Board of Supervisors in the effort of providing an office for the nurse and paying her traveling expenses while engaged in the work away from headquarters.

SECOND VISITING NURSE FOR COUNTY T. B.'S HOSPITAL

The Monroe County Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Rochester will add another county visiting nurse to its staff. The institution already has one field nurse but the board of managers, at its recent meeting, authorized the employment of another nurse to enable the hospital more adequately to meet the increased demands upon it for field service, including the visitation of patients waiting to be admitted to the hospital for care and treatment, and follow-up work with discharged patients.
A County at Work on Its Health Problems

By Joseph J. Weber
Former Executive Secretary, Committee on Hospitals, State Charities Aid Association

An organization, like a building, if it is to endure must be built upon a firm foundation. Recognizing this principle, those responsible for the Dutchess County Health Association and its work have centered their thought and energy almost entirely, during the Association's first sixteen months, on foundation building. Much, though by no means all, that has gone into this foundation building is interestingly set forth in a twenty-eight page illustrated pamphlet which has just been issued by the Committee on Hospitals of the State Charities Aid Association. It is entitled "A County at Work on Its Health Problems."

Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, President of Vassar College, is President of the Health Association.

One of the fundamental things which the Association has been attempting to do is to provide adequate nursing service throughout the county and so to organize that service as to make sure that the sick receives the nursing they need. Graduate resident nursing service, it was found, can be met from existing sources in the county. The number of public health nurses, however, is inadequate. Prior to August 1916, the date when the Association began its activities, three townships had organized public health nursing committees and had placed four nurses in the field, viz.: Rhinebeck, 2; Millbrook, 1; Poughkeepsie, 1. Since that time seven additional public health nurses have been placed in the county. Altogether eleven public health nurses are now at work in the county outside of the city of Poughkeepsie. They are located at Amenia, Arlington, Beacon (2), Hyde Park, Millbrook, Pine Plains, Red Hook, Rhinebeck (2), and Wappingers Falls.

Work of Public Health Nurses

A few figures will show the extent and diversified character of the work of these public health nurses. They cover a year's work:

- Patients attended for bedside nursing care ........................................ 160
- Maternity cases (included above) ........................................ 39
- Nursing and social service visits ........................................ 1,850
- Medical inspection of school children ........................................ 480
- Patients taken to clinics ........................................ 28
- Patients taken to hospitals in Dutchess County ........................................ 30
- Patients taken to hospitals outside of Dutchess County ........................................ 2
- Inoculations for whooping cough (done largely by the public health nurse) ........................................ 148
- Clinics held with the tuberculosis nurse ........................................ 1
- Incipient tuberculosis cases found and sent to hospital ........................................ 4

A Nurses' Advisory Committee, made up of representatives from each agency supporting a local public health nurse, unites these committees, which retain their local autonomy, in a loose federation. This advisory committee has devoted itself to a standardization of the work of the public health nurses, including method of procedure, fees for visits, record keeping, hours of work, reports and statistics on sickness. The committee, moreover, stands ready at all times to send a representative to speak on the subject of the public health nurse in the townships where the Association is endeavoring to stimulate an interest in this subject.

Training Nurses' Aids

It has long been felt that if the nursing needs of the people of moderate means in the county are to be met, the work of the resident graduate nurse and the public health nurse will have to be supplemented by a type of trained nursing attendant working under the supervision of graduate nurses, whose services will not cost more than fifteen dollars a week. In an effort to secure an adequate supply of trained nursing attendants, the Association established a one-year's course of training in co-operation with Montefiore Home, New York City, in the technique and practice of bedside nursing. Several of the graduates of this course are now at work in the county. More recently the work of training these attendants has been taken over by the Thompson House, Rhinebeck. The Health Association will act in close co-operation with this school in the training of its pupils. Already the Association has more calls than it can fill for trained nursing attendants. How to get more women to enter this field of work is one of its problems.

By adding a like amount to $600 realized from the sale of Red Cross Seals by the S. C. A. A. Dutchess County Committee on Dependent Children, the Association was able to employ a tuberculosis nurse for one year. This nurse, in addition to meeting the nursing needs of individual tuberculosis patients, made a thorough-going survey of the tuberculosis situation in the county. She also did the social service follow-up work of the Bewne Memorial Tuberculosis Hospital in Poughkeepsie. There were 185 patients directly or indirectly under her care, and in this connection she made about 3,500 visits.

After-Care of Infantile Paralysis

The 1910 poliomyelitis epidemic presented an opportunity for service which the Dutchess County Health Association was quick to seize. Dr. Lovett, who was placed by the State in charge of the after-care work, strongly advised that in addition to the State nurse another nurse be employed to do intensive work among the Dutchess County cases. The Dutchess County Chapter of the American Red Cross agreed to pay $600 toward the salary of such a nurse, and the Dutchess County Health Association agreed to pay the rest of her salary and the expense of her training in muscle exercises. A graduate of the Children's Hospital, Boston, was employed and specially trained for this work. In co-operation with the State nurse she supervised and gave special exercises to 74 children, making 980 visits during a period of ten and one-half months. She also attended the three State clinics held in Dutchess County.

The Association maintains a bureau of advice and information on matters of health and sickness. As time goes on, the importance of this will grow with the ever increasing amount of data being sent in by the public health nurses and new contacts being formed with other health agencies, State and national.

Classes for the study of personal hygiene, the care of the sick and allied subjects are being organized throughout the county. Already classes in first aid to the injured are being conducted by physicians throughout the county, assisted by the public health nurses. Numerous talks and lectures have been given at various points in the county,—at churches, granges, schools, teachers' conventions, women's clubs, mothers' clubs, nurses, associations, and Vassar College classes. Many of them were illustrated by stereopticon slides and moving pictures. Among the subjects covered were the public health nurse and her duties, the health of the child, the new public health duties and opportunities for women in the nursing profession, farm sanitation, treatment of contagious diseases, and oral hygiene.

Child-Saving an Important Part of Fight For Liberty: Folks Tells French People

Fifty Thousand People Visit Remarkable Exhibit Held By American Red Cross in Lyons, France

Announcement is made of the establishment of a training school of psychiatric social work to be conducted by Smith College at Northampton, Massachusetts, under the auspices of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, through a gift of $200,000 from Clark D. Smeltzer, of San Diego, California. The school will be the fourth of its kind to be sent to other cities of France, should result at once in the establishment of an adequate number of such agencies wherever they go.

Smith College Will Train Mental Hygiene Social Workers

A library on sex hygiene, loaned by the New York Social Hygiene Society, is being circulated among the various public health nursing associations throughout the country. It is hoped that by the timely and sympathetic aid it can be given, the minds of children’s books on health for the use of the public health nurses will be placed in circulation, and a movement for the development of a circulatory system of voluntary and supplementary aid to nurses engaged in teaching children the rudiments of sex hygiene will be started.

The Child Mortality A Grave Menace

The question may arise in the mind of some: Is it fitting that, when this great battle at the front is reaching its climax, we should be engaged here as we are? I reply: It would be impossible to be more appropriately engaged. The soldiers at the front and our women here are engaged in two sides of the same task. They are fighting for the survival of liberty and democracy; you are working for the maintenance of the health of all nations. Our cooperation in our work is a fact, not a sentiment. Of the sinister by-products of the war, none threaten more seriously the future than the falling birth-rate or the rising infantile death-rate. It is not necessary to give figures. They are more or less the same in all belligerent countries—a quick and extreme reduction in the number of births and a moderate increase in the proportion of deaths among those born. These two facts together constitute a menace of extreme gravity.

Speaking in all seriousness and with no exaggeration, I am convinced that, after the great issue which is being decided at the front, there is no more pressing and emergent task than the one in which you are engaged. It is not necessary to appeal to sentiment or sympathy. If the human resources of any country are lost, all is lost!

Child Saving An Easy Task

Fortunately, this task is a relatively easy one. In fact, of all the problems of public health, no other one can be dealt with so successfully, so certainly, so inexpensively as infant mortality. Tuberculosis can be prevented, but it takes a long time and is a good deal of money. Infant mortality, however, can be reduced greatly, quickly, certainly and inexpensively. It is not necessary to build and operate many large institutions. It is only necessary, in the main, to teach the mother how to take care of her baby, and to give her a fair chance to do it.

Educational measures, home visiting by trained health visitors and, as needed, expert medical advice freely given, are the great factors in combating infant mortality. Fortunately, all of them can be quickly placed in operation. The nurses needed to be sent to other cities of France, should result at once in the establishment of an adequate number of such agencies wherever they go.

17,748,000 SEALS SOLD; 5,000,000 MORE THAN YEAR AGO

PRIZE WINNERS IN STATE AND NATIONAL COMPETITIONS ARE ANNOUNCED

The sale of seals throughout New York State outside of New York City, far exceeded all expectations. Five million more seals were sold this year than last and the goal of 15,000,000 seals of the State Charities Aid Association and its local tuberculosis committees was surpassed, a total of 17,748,316 having been disposed of.

Buffalo, Troy, Elmira, Ithaca, Larchmont, Delhi, Cherry Valley and Cold Spring have been declared the winners of the Red Cross Seal pennants awarded by the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association for the highest per capita sale of seals in eight classes of localities in New York State, outside of Greater New York, grouped as to population.

In the pennant race Buffalo and Rochester in Class 1 (population 150,000 to 500,000), had a close race, Buffalo finally winning, with an average of 5.67 seals per capita. Its total sale was 2,650,000 seals.

For the third successive time, Troy carried off the honors in Class 2 (population 50,000 to 150,000), with a total sale of 323,522 seals an average of 7.15 seals per capita. Albany came in second and Schenectady and Syracuse followed in the order named.

In Class 3, population 25,000 to 50,000, Elmira with a per capita sale of 8.82 seals easily won first place and Watertown, Oswego and Poughkeepsie followed in turn. In Class 4 (population 8,000 to 25,000), Ithaca again took first place, with the splendid average of 14.14 seals per capita. Olean came in second, and White Plains won third place.

Leaders in the four other classes were as follows:

Class 5: Larchmont with a per capita sale of 19.45, first; Bronxville, second, and Saranac Lake, third.

Class 6: Delhi, first; Montour Falls, second; Pultusk, third.

Class 7: Cherry Valley, first; Margaretville, second; Stamford, third.

Class 8, Cold Spring, first; Boxbury, second; Franklin, third.

In the national competition, Buffalo also won first place in Class 9 (population 400,000 to 1,000,000), the nearest competitor being Milwaukee, Wisconsin, with a per capita sale of 4.46.

AMERICAN EXPERTS FIGHTING TUBERCULOSIS IN FRANCE

From the beginning of the war, tuberculosis has been one of the worst enemies of national strength and stamina in France.

Vigorous and well-organized efforts are being made to combat its ravages among both the civilian and military populations.

In this campaign an American Commission on the Prevention of Tuberculosis is playing an important part. The above is a photograph of the Commission. Seated, from left to right, they are: Homer Folks of New York, Dr. Livingston Farrand of Boulder, Col., and Dr. James Alexander Miller of New York. Standing, from left to right, are Herman G. Place of New York, Prof. Selskar M. Gunn of Boston, Dr. William Charles White of Pittsburgh, and Dr. Alexander Bruno of New York.
THE FRANCO-AMERICAN FIGHT ON TUBERCULOSIS

By GEORGE E. VINCENT
President of the Rockefeller Foundation

Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation, who recently returned from a trip of inspection of war work in France, has written for the S. C. A. A. News, an illuminating article on the Franco-American fight against tuberculosis. He shows how the American “invasion” against the disease is not only needed but welcomed. The Foundation and the Red Cross are carrying out a program which means much to the land of Pasteur—which will make available to the whole nation the scientific knowledge of French specialists and institutions.

The crusade against tuberculosis in France is to a considerable extent, an American application of French knowledge.

A WELL-INFORMED Frenchman might honestly ask why American physicians and nurses should go crusading against consumption in the land of Louis Pasteur, a country that has created the Sanatorium at Bilgny, the Leon Bourgeois Dispensary in Paris, and that has produced recognized authorities in the tuberculosis field. For these institutions and men, judged by world standards, are of the first rank. It is a question whether more than one or two sanatoria in the United States can be rated equal to the splendid hospital at Bilgny, thirty miles south of Paris. Spacious and beautiful grounds, handsome fire-proof buildings, commodious solariums, adequate furnishings, modern laboratory equipment, a well-trained staff, an experienced and devoted Director, combine to give to six hundred patients the best of care at a per capita cost in war times of 5.83 francs.

The Leon Bourgeois Dispensary too is a model of its kind. The building is attractive and complete. Reception rooms, examining rooms, laboratories, offices, lecture hall are all that could be desired. The Director is a distinguished specialist in his field. Well-trained, competent nurses for both dispensary and visiting service are in constant attendance. The routine of diagnosis, treatment, advice as to home conditions, public conferences on tuberculosis, distribution of literature, out-patient visiting goes on smoothly and well. Why, pray, should an American Commission and the American Red Cross feel called upon to instruct a nation which can show going concerns of this kind? Isn’t it a little presumptuous and unnecessary?

Brilliant Isolated Successes

The answer that France, engaged in a life-and-death struggle, cannot spare the men and money to maintain the fight against tuberculosis which war conditions have made more menacing is convincing enough to justify the effort. But it does not tell the whole story. The fact is the French people have achieved a few brilliant, isolated successes but these are not widely known in France and are not parts of either a local or a national system. The military hospitals and sanitary stations for tuberculous soldiers discharged from the army have been too recently organized to constitute a refutation of this statement. It is further true that many different groups which have been interested in various phases of the problem have failed to cooperate, so that the whole movement in France has been fragmentary and feeble.

It is easy for Americans to understand individualistic and unco-ordinated efforts of this kind, because we have had similar experiences. Only because in a few fields we have fortunately advanced beyond the earlier stages of go-it-alone toward a measure of team-work, are we in a position to be of service to our French allies. This is true of public health administration, especially in relation to certain communicable diseases among which tuberculosis takes a prominent place. So far as scientific knowledge of this disease goes, Americans in working with the French can learn perhaps rather than teach, but when it comes to organizing and administering an anti-tuberculosis campaign which shall result in establishing a public health system, the United States can make a contribution.

Foundation and Red Cross Co-Operate

For such good reasons and because, too, of the pressing need of relief for the refugees and other civilian population, the Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation and the Tuberculosis Bureau of the American Red Cross are together carrying out a combined program of demonstration, relief, public education, and special training for nurses. Fortunately the

OTSEGO COUNTY OPENS ITS TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

SETS RECORD FOR ESTABLISHING INSTITUTION UNDER NEW LAW

Otsego County has set a record in establishing a county tuberculosis hospital. To Otsego goes the honor of being the first county in the state acting under the provisions of the mandatory hospital law to build, complete and open its institution.

With the threatened increase in the tuberculosis problem of the state and nation, as a result of conditions superinduced by the active participation of our country in the war, more hospitals for tuberculosis cases are imperatively needed. A law was accordingly passed in 1917 making mandatory upon every county in the state having upwards of 35,000 population the provision of a tuberculosis hospital if not already provided therewith.

Governor Urged Prompt Action

Upon an appeal from Governor Whitman for immediate action the Otsego County Board of Supervisors convened on June 26th, 1917, to consider the matter. Ursil A. Ferguson, of Oneonta, Chairman, Charles J. Armstrong of Milford, and John J. Hopkins of Unadilla, were appointed a tuberculosis hospital committee and, after consulting with the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, made a tour of visitation to other hospitals similar in size to that proposed for Otsego. Twenty-two sites for the county hospital were considered between that time and July 18, when the site at Mt. Vision, shown in the accompanying illustration, was definitely selected, subject to approval by the State Commissioner of Health and the local health officer. This was subsequently secured, and by fall, even in the face of difficulties with quicksand, the foundation of the hospital had been put in and part of the superstructure erected. Much credit in this connection is due the contractor and builder, William C. Bayard, of Milford, and the superintendent of construction, Samuel Borst, of Oneonta. Some work was carried on during the winter months and with the opening of spring weather full building operations were renewed. Meanwhile the board of supervisors appointed the board of managers for the hospital as follows: Hon. Charles Smith, Oneonta, President; Dr. Julian C. Smith, Oneonta, Vice-President; Dr. Milton C. Wright, Mt. Vision, Vice-President; Harris L. Cooke, Cooperstown; and John D. Cary, Richfield Springs.

Rushed as War Emergency

Three of the members of the board of managers were appointed from the membership of the War Emergency Committee on Tuberculosis of Otsego County organized last July by the Association. This committee, realizing the need for someone to locate the cases of tuberculosis and help them secure hospital care as soon as it was available, had raised funds, and on November 1st, 1917, employed a county visiting nurse, Miss Anna M. Sweeney, R. N., a graduate of Bellevue Hospital, New York City.

Dr. Frank L. Winsor of Laurens was early in the year appointed medical superintendent of the hospital by the board of managers. There followed a period of hearty cooperation between the board of supervisors through its hospital committee, a number of the members of the board individually, and the board of

NEW COMMISSION ON FEEBLEMINDED STARTS WORK

GOVERNOR APPOINTS DR. WALTER B. JAMES AS CHAIRMAN

The new State Commission on the Feebleminded came into existence officially with the beginning of the new fiscal year on July 1, and on that day Governor Whitman announced that he had appointed Dr. Walter B. James of New York as chairman of the commission.

Dr. James is president of the New York Academy of Medicine and a member of the Hospital Development Commission. He has accepted the appointment. His designation is regarded with widespread satisfaction.

Johnson and Utter Members

The other members of the commission, designated in the act creating it, are Charles H. Johnson of Albany, Secretary of the State Board of Health, and Frank R. Utter of Friendship, Allegany County, who is Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities. They also are members of the Hospital Development Commission and admirably qualified for their new responsibilities.

The new commission was created by the Stage-Adler Bill passed by the last Legislature and signed by the Governor. The creation of such a body was recommended by the Hospital Development Commission in order to establish a definite State policy for dealing with the feebleminded. It is the function of the commission to coordinate the State’s present facilities for dealing with defectives and to secure the systematic enlargement of existing institutions and the erection of new ones as the need for them is shown by a State-wide census.

Duties of New Commission

The specific duties and responsibilities with which the statute charges the commission are:

1. Administer the law in relation to the care, custody and treatment of the feebleminded, and make rules for the reception, care, training, paroles and discharge of inmates of institutions for the feebleminded.

2. Immediately on its organization a census of all feebleminded persons in the State.

3. Provide accommodations for such as require care and treatment in suitable institutions.

4. Prepare and recommend to the Legislature by February 1, 1919, a general, State-wide commitment law for the feebleminded.

5. Establish clinics for the examination and observation of the feebleminded.

6. Establish farm and industrial colonies in connection with institutions for defectives.

Will Start Work at Once

The new commission is prepared to begin work as soon as its organization is completed.

One of the first matters which it will consider will be the matter of a uniform commitment law. It is likely that a thorough study of the whole question of colony care of the feebleminded will be made in order to determine to what extent this method of institutional provision is desirable and feasible.

DR. WALTER B. JAMES
Chairman of New State Commission on the Feebleminded

For a System of Registration

The task of taking a census of all the feebleminded in the State presents obvious difficulties. Private organizations dealing with the problem of mental defect have suggested a system of State-wide registration as the basis of what would eventually become a substantial census of the defectives. It is felt by these organizations that if all the defectives coming to the notice of public authorities, courts, schools, and so forth, were listed by a central agency like the new commission it would constitute a good start toward a full census. Such a registry would undoubtedly disclose the whereabouts and degree of defect of as many feebleminded as the State could provide for in the immediate future.

Some help on the job of taking a census will undoubtedly be furnished by the State Department of Education, which is already planning an enumeration of all backward and defective children in the public schools with a view to establishing ungraded classes like those which have been so successful in New York, Rochester and some other cities. The Lockwood bill passed by the 1917 Legislature requires each public school having ten or more children retarded three years or more to provide a special class with instruction suited to their needs. Co-operation between the State Department of Education and the State Commission on the Feebleminded will simplify the task of a census.

Purpose and Plan of Commission

The make-up of the new commission gives the State a body definitely charged with administering the law in relation to the feebleminded without establishing new and expensive administrative machinery. The Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities already has fiscal control over the institutions; the State Board of Charities, whose secretary is a member of the Commission, has powers of visitation and inspection over the institutions. Thus the facilities of those two departments can be utilized on the job instead of creating new machinery at large expense. At the same time, the new commission composed of the representatives of these two departments and a medical chairman can co-ordinate the State’s facilities and establish a uniform State policy instead of allowing the various institutions to exist and operate as separate administrative entities. In short, the aim of the new Commission on the Feebleminded is to do for the institutions for defectives what the State Hospital Commission has successfully accomplished for the State hospitals for the insane.

Minimum of Expense

Only $25,000 is appropriated this year for the expenses of the new Commission. The chairman, Dr. James, is a man with a large practice, and in announcing his appointment Governor Whitman said he appreciated the sacrifice he had made in accepting a place which pays a salary of only $5,000, but opens a field for substantial service to the State.

The other members of the Commission receive $15 a day for attendance at meetings, not to exceed $1,000 a year.

The Commission will also have a secretary, who has not yet been appointed. The position of secretary will be a very important one because of the heavy executive responsibility which will devolve upon him. It is hoped that the Commission will be able to obtain a man who has had experience in the field of mental defect.

Dr. James an Excellent Chairman

On every hand is heard comment that Dr. James is admirably qualified for the important post of chairman, and in his appointment Governor Whitman is credited with having chosen the strongest man available for the position. Dr. James stands in the forefront of his profession and is widely known and respected. His counsels are much sought in public questions. In addition to his splendid personal and professional qualifications, he has developed the keenest interest in the State’s efforts to deal with the problem and the best practices in vogue through his work on the Hospital Development Commission.

Big Job Ahead of Commission

Mr. Johnson and Mr. Utter, the other members of the Commission, are also exceptionally qualified to be of great usefulness on it. The new Commission ought to get results. The public will be disposed to give it time to study its many-sided problem with care before it acts, but it does not seem too much to expect of the new body that before long it will lead the State out of the wilderness of delay and neglect of the pressing problem of the feebleminded and do something definite and adequate toward controlling this menace to the State and the efficiency and health of the community.

managers and superintendent. The board of managers, and hospital committee and superintendent likewise gave every assistance to the county nurse in her pioneer work. It is no wonder, therefore, that rapid and substantial progress was made on the hospital during the spring, so that in the face of many difficulties incidental to war conditions, Otsego County is opening on July 3rd its attractive hospital building overlooking the beautiful valley at Mt. Vision. The cost of site, construction and equipment was approximately $50,000. Congratulations on the event have been received from Commissioner Biggs and the Tuberculosis Committee of this Association. The promptness and effectiveness of the Otsego County enterprise may well prove a source of inspiration to other counties in their efforts to establish tuberculosis hospitals.

enterprise is under the general direction of those experienced men, Dr. Livingston Farrand and Mr. Homer Folks, whose long association in social work ensures complete understanding and hearty co-operation. Each man has a staff of workers who by training and experience are peculiarly fitted to represent the best American standards and methods.

A Demonstration in Typical Areas

The Nineteenth Arrondissement in Paris and the Department of Eure et Loire have been chosen as typical urban and provincial areas in which to conduct intensive demonstrations of anti-tuberculosis organization. In the former district four dispensaries are now equipped and in operation. An unfinished apartment building is being completed by the American Red Cross as a "home hospital." The same organization has provided additional hospital wards in Paris, and in a suburb has opened a sanatorium for tuberculosis women, and a preventorium for children. It has also defrayed the expense of completing a large building which the war had left unfinished at Bilgy

Thus all the elements of a modern public health agency are available. By means of an American controlled staff of both American and of French doctors and nurses, the dispensaries are being developed as centers of diagnosis, treatment, public conferences, and as headquarters for visiting nurses. Through arrangements with the institutions mentioned above, children and adults are in many cases being sent into the country or to hospitals. The American Red Cross through its Tuberculosis Bureau of the Department of Civil Affairs is providing relief, special food, etc., for large numbers of refugees and other needy civilians. In connection with each dispensary the Red Cross under its Children's Bureau maintains a Child Welfare Station.

In similar fashion a system is being organized for Eure et Loire. At Dreux and Chartres dispensaries are housed in municipal hospitals. At San Remy Mr. Charles Waddington has granted the use of a building which he is refitting at his own expense. In villages the Mairies are made available as headquarters for clinics. At Chartres two hospital wards have been put at the disposal of the Commission. Owners of country estates have offered these for use as preventoriums. A private society which has maintained a kind of industrial school has signified a willingness to grant the use of its plant for a tuberculosis sanatorium. With these opportunities and the cordial co-operation of officials, the medical profession and voluntary societies, the Americans are rapidly organizing a system for the department. Here too, as in Paris, the Red Cross grants relief funds and assists in hospital development.

An Instance of American Aid

One instance of American co-operation may be cited: At Chartres a French soldier returning from the front for a few days' leave after many months of absence found his young wife fatally ill with tuberculosis. She was living with her year-old child in one small room. The poli was quite at a loss and, when because of the "drive" his leave was suddenly cut short, he was well-nigh distracted. Someone told him of the Americans to whom he immediately appealed. Assurances were given that the wife would be cared for. Action was promptly taken. The baby was placed with a neighboring family and is brought daily to its mother for a few minutes that she may be assured of its welfare. A woman has been engaged to look after the invalid for whom medical care, visiting nurse supervision, and proper food are provided. The pathetically grateful letters of the soldier husband bear eloquent testimony to the significance of the American "invasion."

At first it was assumed that a good many American doctors and nurses would be needed to organize and carry on this work in France. It was hoped that gradually a French personnel would be developed. Happily this result is coming rapidly rather than slowly. In spite of the war demands upon physicians, men are being found well-trained and quite ready to take up and to apply American methods sympathetically and effectively. Nurses too are coming forward in encouraging quality and numbers. Four training centers in Paris have already enrolled sixty pupil nurses. The Commission grants to these students bursaries or scholarships of 150 francs per month. It has also induced the various societies which employ nurses to adopt common standards and to raise the level of salaries. The Commission has carefully avoided using its funds to bribe nurses away from other service, or to establish a salary scale which later on the French could not maintain.

Educational Campaign Big Success

The campaign of public education has been brilliantly successful. Dr. B. M. Gunn of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who is in charge of this, has shown genuine genius for the work. Posters, pamphlets, postcards, newspaper articles have been prepared by French artists and writers for the French public. The mere unimaginative translation of American material has been avoided. Exhibits, too, have been organized and are being sent through the provinces with groups of lecturers who hold conferences and public meetings to which people flock eagerly. For example, at a morning meeting at the town of Montfort in Brittany a population of 2,400 furnished an audience of 1,350 people who seemed deeply interested and who dispersed with cries of "Vive l'Amerique!" The American Red Cross is represented in this campaign by speakers who present the interests of child welfare.

Will Withdraw After War

Just as American troops, once the war is over, will leave for home as soon as may be, so the Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation looks forward to withdrawing from France as quickly as the work can be transferred to wholly French auspices. There is good reason to believe that when peace comes attention will be turned to public health organization as absolutely essential to the solution of the very grave population problem which is confronting the French Republic. These American demonstrations, it is hoped, may be of service in guiding the policies of the early future. The fact that Bordeaux after a careful study of the American methods has within a few weeks decided to adopt the system and to put it into effect at local expense is full of encouragement and promise.
3 NEW TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS OPENED

FOURTH NEARLY READY, PROGRESS AND IMPROVEMENTS ON OTHERS

The accompanying photographs of tuberculosis hospitals recently opened in Niagara, Chemung and Steuben Counties and soon to be in Rensselaer, represent monuments to the fidelity and perseverance of the boards of supervisors, tuberculosis committees and other interested citizens of those counties who have devoted their time and energies for several years to securing proper hospital care for their counties' tuberculosis cases.

All of these counties, with the exception of Chemung, were in the group of counties to which last year's amendment to the county hospital law applied, the amendment which made mandatory upon every county having upwards of 35,000 population, the establishment of a tuberculosis hospital unless already provided therewith. GLOVERSVILLE SUMMER CAMP FOR DEBILITATED CHILDREN

With an appropriation from the Gloversville War and Home Fund and through the efforts of Health Officer Dr. A. L. Johnson and members of the local tuberculosis committee, a summer camp has been opened for anemic, debilitated children who have been rendered susceptible to tuberculosis and who, in the main, from homes where there has been or is a case of the disease.

The camp is in charge of a trained nurse. It accommodates twenty and is already crowded with youngsters who are welcoming this opportunity to enjoy and be benefited by the great outdoors.

“OCCASIONAL TUBERCULOSIS CLINICS” ARE INCREASING IN POPULARITY

The tuberculosis committees of Columbia, Saratoga and Washington Counties are enthusiastically taking up the “occasional tuberculosis clinic” plan recently initiated in Westchester County, and physicians, nurses and members of tuberculosis committees are arranging a series in each county of such clinics where examinations for tuberculosis may be made by specialists in the medical profession.

Columbia County held its first clinic in Hudson on July 31, with Dr. F. L. S. Reynolds, Superintendent of the Rensselaer County Sanatorium, Troy, N. Y., as examining physician, and with Miss Mary B. Cornell, the county tuberculosis visiting nurse, assisting.

Saratoga County has held sessions at Ballston Spa, Mechanicville, Saratoga Springs, South Glens Falls and Waterford with marked success, Dr. Horace J. Howk, physician in charge of the Metropolitan Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Mt. McGregor, making the examinations, assisted by Drs. Alva B. Credlock, A. Kerr and William E. Lawhi of his staff.

Washington County held its first clinic in Greenwich with Dr. Howk and Drs. Richard T. Morgan and A. B. Chenopop of Dr. Howk’s staff assisting.

As indicated in the last issue of The S. C. A. A. News, tuberculosis and nursing organization, physicians and public health authorities are adopting this occasional clinic scheme enthusiastically. The first of these clinics in New York State was held in Harrison, Westchester County, on May 15. During that month three clinics were held in Ossining, Port Chester and Tarrytown; during July four were held in White Plains, Port Chester, Yorktown and Tarrytown, and five in Harrison, Mt. Kisco, Ossining, Tarrytown and White Plains, all in Westchester County.

War Increases Need of Clinics

While the hospital bed provision in New York State is constantly increasing, it is yet far from adequate to meet the need. The recent draft examinations have disclosed many thousands of heretofore unknown cases of tuberculosis while hundreds of new cases have been returned from camps and training stations. With this increased number of new cases together with the threatened increase of the disease throughout the entire population of the State as a result of want and the more frequent and finer conditions, the need becomes urgent for some immediate means of securing expert diagnosis, examination, advice and treatment. The occasional clinic offers just this help. Each case is examined by a specialist and the report of his condition is made to his family physician if he has one. If the patient is unable to take care of himself, is advised how to prevent the spread of his disease to others with whom he may come in contact and is kept in touch with by the public health nurse who advises him when the next clinic will be held so that he may present himself for further examination and care.
HOSPITAL DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION PUSHES AHEAD ON PLANS FOR INSANE AND FEEBLEMINDED

Starts on Second Year's Work of Enlarging State's Accommodations for Defectives

WAR MAKES NEED OF INSTITUTIONS GREATER THAN EVER BEFORE

The Hospital Development Commission is well started on its second year's work. This commission, created in 1917 to plan for systematic development of State institutions for the insane and feebleminded, made a good start on the job last year. Its first annual report, submitted to the last Legislature, recommended the first steps in a comprehensive plan, and the appropriation bill and special acts passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Whitman made it possible to start carrying out the recommendations based on the first year's study of the situation.

To Sift Out Feebleminded

Plans for the second year's work were outlined at a recent meeting of the commission held in Albany with the Chairman, Senator Henry M. Sage, presiding. It will be recalled that the 1917 Legislature enlarged the duties of the commission to include an investigation of the wisdom of reclassifying the inmates of various charitable institutions and reformatories with a view to sifting out the feebleminded therein and placing them in one or more separate institutions to be set aside for them. The commission named a sub-committee of its members for this important work; it consists of Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities; Frank H. Utter, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, Dr. Walter B. James, and Assemblyman H. Edmond MacAbol. This sub-committee is about to begin its work.

New Commission on Feebleminded

Other steps to provide more wisely and adequately for the feebleminded will devolve upon the new State Commission on the Feebleminded, created by the Legislature and Governor upon the recommendation of the Development Commission. The new commission, which officially came into existence with the beginning of the new fiscal year on July 1, marks the establishment of a definite State policy of dealing with the problem of mental defect.

The chief new construction at institutions for the feebleminded, is that authorized by the last Legislature and now in progress at Letchworth Village.

These are the main points in the program for the feebleminded.

More Accommodations for Insane

As to the insane, the commission will continue to work along the lines started last year. The ground work of the plan, which is to extend over ten years, was laid a year ago, and a start on carrying out the details is now being made. The Development Commission has approved the preliminary drawings for buildings in the new developments at Creedmoor, on the outskirts of Brooklyn, and at Manhattan. At Creedmoor, these points will be erected new and large divisions of the Brooklyn State Hospital and the Utica State Hospital, respectively. Additional buildings also will be erected at Midtown State Hospital. Detailed sketches and specifications for these three projects will now be prepared by the State Architect.

It had been planned also to enlarge the Manhattan State Hospital on Ward's Island, New York City, but the fact that the United States Government has acquired a site there for a large naval hospital has temporarily interfered with the project.

Psychopathic Hospital in New York

Progress is being made toward a psychopathic hospital for New York City, to accommodate incipient and short-term cases and to serve as a research and teaching center. An appropriation was made by the last Legislature to provide plans and specifications. The Commission's sub-committee on metropolitan district has visited institutions in Baltimore, Boston, Ann Arbor and Grosse Ile to get ideas for a model institution. This sub-committee consists of Dr. James, Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, and Senator Thomas H. Cullen. State Archi-yteet Lewis F. Pichler is aiding the committee in its study of plans.

Attention to Up-State Needs

Last year the Commission stressed the need of prompt increase of institutional facilities in and near New York City, where the overcrowding is greatest. This year its planning will be directed toward meeting the need of all the state institutions. Overcrowding of the hospitals is serious in all parts of the State.

War Increases Need of Institutions

While the war, of course, slows up progress on institutional development, it at the same time increases the demand for hospital accommodations, and new construction will be pushed as rapidly as war exigencies will allow. The State hospitals have already received over 50 cases of military insane.

WAR CAUSES MANY CHANGES IN STAFF OF S. C. A. A. COUNTY AGENCIES

With the insistent call which is being made for trained social workers to assist with the Red Cross and W. M. C. A. work in France, and with the Home Service Department of the Red Cross and the War Camp Community activities in this country, there is an increasing difficulty in finding social workers to fill the positions in various home organizations. This situation prevails not only throughout the United States, but in Canada.

The State Charities Aid Association has had its full share of difficulty in keeping positions filled in the County Children's Agencies Department. This department has been asked to recommend agents for appointment in half a dozen counties, and has been successful, after much difficulty, in securing well qualified persons for each vacancy as it has occurred. The following changes in the personnel of county agents for dependent children are noted:

The position in Niagara County, which has been temporarily held by Miss Leora Field, has been filled by the appointment of Miss Julia Coffin, who has also been agent for dependent children in Seneca County.

Seneca County has appointed Miss Florence Hutchings of Auburn to succeed Miss Ford.

Miss Fisher, who has been in Columbia County for five years, has resigned to become the Supervisor of Case Work for the Home Service Section of the Westchester County Red Cross. Columbia County has appointed as her successor Miss Antoinette Mitchell, formerly with the C. O. S. of Buffalo.

Miss Alma Lyman has resigned as agent for dependent children and as Secretary of the County Board of Child Welfare in Nassau County. Miss Elsie Macauley, who recently completed a course at the New York School of Philanthropy, has been appointed to fill the vacancies.

Miss Morris, Assistant Director of the field work of the Committee on Infantile Paralysis of the State Charities Aid Association, has resigned, and Miss Elsie H. Smith has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

Miss Eleanor H. Hubbard, who was a successful in her field work with the Infantile Paralysis Committee of the Association, has been appointed a special Assistant Supervisor in the State Charities Aid Association for a period of six months. Miss Hubbard is visiting a number of counties from which she has come inquiries concerning the establishment of county agencies.

Boy "Quadrapled" For Ten Years; Can Walk Now

"Now I Can Walk and Go To School"

When this little chap, six months old, had infantile paralysis which so affected his muscles that he could walk only on his hands and feel like a quadruped. He was in this condition and had reached the age of ten years when a social worker of the Committee on After Care of Infantile Paralysis found him. A physician of the State Department of Health corrected his deformities with plasters, without even resorting to a surgical operation, so that the boy now walks with the aid of crutches and braces and is able to attend school for the first time. What a pity if he had been permanently neglected! He is not a war cripple, but it is just as important to fit him for a useful self supporting life as if he were one. About 100 other patients crippled by the disease have been helped by this Committee of the State Charities Aid Association. Some needed only corrective plaster, but many required the surgeon's knife.
DELaware drafts
Miss Reeder to direct children's bureau

Once more a trained worker from the staff of the State Charities Aid Association has been called to another State to take charge of important work. Miss Grace A. Reeder, who has been an assistant superintendent of the Association's department of county agencies for dependent children for the past three years, has just accepted the position of Director of the Delaware State Children's Bureau, and will assume her duties there on September 1.
Miss Reeder is admirably qualified for the position. She is a graduate of Barnard College of Columbia University, and holds a degree of M.A. from that institution. Before coming to her responsible position in the central office of the State Charities Aid she was county agent for dependent children in Orange County for two years and later was an investigator in the Child Welfare Department of Westchester County.

While the Association regrets to lose Miss Reeder, it is gratified to have her experience in the organization of children's work by its county agencies department. It is brought to bear on the important task in Delaware. The Bureau has been turned over a program which seems likely to mean substantial progress in dealing with the dependent, delinquent and defective children of the State.

JUST A MOMENT

Strong public sentiment is developing in Westchester County for the establishment of a county children's court.

Dr. Charles Bernstein, Superintendent of the Rome State Custodial Home, has been granted a leave of absence by the Board of Managers, to attend the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburgh.

An extremely serious situation exists now in regard to shortage of employees in State institutions. The institutions for the insane and feebleminded with over 40,000 patients, are the hard hit. The State seems plain to be confronted with the necessity of taking prompt action to make the wages and hours of the employees conform more nearly to those in other employments.

Dr. Charles S. Little, Superintendent of Letchworth Village, has been granted a leave of absence by the Board of Managers to enter military service. He has been commissioned a captain in the Medical Officers' Reserve Corps for duty in a neuro-psychiatric unit. His place at Letchworth will be filled during the war by Dr. Frederick Russell, now superintendent of the Vermont State School for the Feebleminded at Brandon, Vt., and for eight years an assistant of Dr. Fernald in the Massachusetts School at Waverley. Dr. Russell is designated as acting superintendent of Letchworth.

$80,000 Bond issue for tuberculosis hospital in Rockland county

A bond issue of $80,000 has recently been authorized by the board of supervisors for the New Rockland County Tuberculosis Hospital, which was authorized by a referendum vote of the people in 1915, and a site for which has been secured at Pomona, New York.

New home for nurses and employees of Cattaraugus county tuberculosis hospital

An appropriation of $13,000 for a residence for the nurses and employees of Rocky Crest Sanatorium, the Cattaraugus County Tuberculosis Hospital, was made by the board of supervisors at its meeting in July.

This institution was opened in September, 1916, with a capacity of 22 beds. The management has recently added two tents to meet the growing demand for beds. At present the institution is filled to capacity and has a waiting list. The recent action of the board of supervisors, authorizing the erection of a structure for this purpose, will enable the hospital to meet the needs of better quarters for the employees and, at the same time, will make available more hospital beds for patients.

Rabbi wise now day laborer for uncle Sam

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, the well-known religious and civic leader, has set a patriotic precedent by spending his vacation as a day laborer in a government shipbuilding plant in Connecticut. He and his son are doing heavy manual labor. Rabbi Wise is now "Laborer No. 186." A caller found him carrying heavy planks about the plant.

Jefferson county hospital board is reorganized

With the departure of two of its members for service in France, the Board of Managers of the Jefferson County Tuberculosis Hospital has added two new members and has been reorganized. John J. Barron of Three Mile Bay is the board's new chairman succeeding William A. Mather of Adams who will remain a member of the Board until called to service; and Charles J. Dean of Watertown has been elected to the vice-presidency to succeed Mr. Barron. The remaining members are Dr. E. E. Babcock of Adam's Center, and Dr. C. J. Hull of West Carthage.

Four more S. C. A. A. workers go to France

Four more members of the staff of the State Charities Aid Association have gone to France to engage in war work. Miss Gertrude Spalding, an agent in the child placing department, will join the staff of Red Cross workers. Miss Elizabeth Marshall, supervisor, and Miss Edith Fosdick and Miss Irene Dayton, agents from the same department, will do work under the Y. M. C. A.

State commission on feebleminded names Miss Prince as aid

The new State Commission on the Feebleminded will open its main office in New York on September 1. The commission has selected Miss Ethel A. Prince as its acting secretary. Miss Prince is at present assistant secretary of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness and as such has had an opportunity to get in close touch with the problems of the discovery, training and segregation of defectives in this State. She is a graduate of Vassar College and formerly a member of the faculty of Barnard College at Columbia University, where she was in charge of the experimental laboratory of psychology. She has done much clinical work at Vanderbilt Clinic and Bellevue Hospital, and was psychologist to the Psychopathic Laboratory at Police Headquarters in New York City. Miss Prince brings a splendid equipment of knowledge and experience to her new task.

The commission, which is composed of Dr. Walter B. James, Dr. Charles H. Johnstone and Frank R. Utter, is already busily at work on various phases of its problem and mapping out a progressive program for dealing with it.

Oswego health center opened

Mayor John Fitzgibbons of Oswego, Dr. J. E. Mansfield, health officer, and Mayor McDonough have been appointed by the board of health to have charge of a health center to be opened in the Robinson Mansion, a building owned by the City of Oswego. Seven hundred dollars for alterations, repairs and equipment has been appropriated.

Child Welfare and tuberculosis clinics will be held in the center during the balance of the summer under the supervision of Dr. Charles Healey assisted by the local school nurse and the tuberculosis visiting nurse. Definite arrangements for the continuance of the work will be made in the fall.

Auto service for county agent

The Montgomery County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association has organized a volunteer automobile service for the agent for dependent children. The plan is to have five or six cars placed at her disposal to be called on when needed.

Columbia county hospital contracts are awarded

Bids for the construction of the Columbia County Tuberculosis Hospital, which was called for by the board of supervisors two years ago, and which will be erected near Philmont, N. Y., were recently opened and contracts totaling $80,000 were awarded.
EVERY YEAR "CHILDREN'S YEAR" WITH THE S. C. A. A.

THREE DEPARTMENTS HELP SALVAGE AND CONSERVE NATION'S CHIEF ASSET

WAR has its compensations.

One of them is the impetus which it is giving to the organized movement for safeguarding the health and welfare of children in this country. A notable contribution to the work is the so-called "Children's Year," a period of intensive education and effort, inaugurated by the Federal Children's Bureau as a war measure.

The movement is nation-wide and is being participated in by public welfare organizations throughout the country. The principal items in the program are the public protection of mothers, infants and young children; better home care; better attention to education and the problem of child labor; facilities for recreation, and the provision of special care for dependant and neglected children who may be physically and mentally handicapped, or delinquent.

President Urges Child-Care

President Wilson has sanctioned and emphasized the importance of the project, as follows:

"Next to the duty of doing everything possible for the soldiers at the front, there could be, it seems to me, no more patriotic duty than that of protecting the children, who constitute one-third of our population."

"The success of the efforts made in England in behalf of the children is evidenced by the fact that the infant death rate in England for the second year of the war was the lowest in her history. Attention is now being given to education and labor conditions for children by the Legislatures of both France and England, showing that the conviction among the allies is that the protection of childhood is essential to winning the war."

S. C. A. A. Pioneer in Work

Doubtless no organization engaged in child welfare is cooperating more enthusiastically in the "Children's Year" than the State Charities Aid Association. This is due partly to the fact that the Association has been conducting Children's Years for many years.

In fact, every year is Children's Year with the Association. Its children's work absorbs a larger portion of its budget than any other activity. It maintains three departments for it—the Department for Providing Situations for Mothers with Babies, the Department of County Agencies for Dependent Children, and the Department of Placing-Out and Supervision of Children in Families. In addition it has maintained for the last year and a half, a Committee on After-Care of Poliomyelitis cases.

Over 13,000 Mothers Helped

The Department for Providing Situations for Mothers with Babies aims to meet the difficult problem of finding situations for mothers with infants or small children who need to have employment and must keep their children with them. By medical examination of both the mother and child to make
CARELESS CARE OF DEPENDENT CHILDREN EXPENSIVE TO TAXPayers

Careless and slipshod methods of looking up and caring for the dependent children in any county is an expensive proposition for the taxpayers as well as bad for the children.

The employment of a State Charities Aid Association County Agent for Dependent Children to assist the public authorities assures proper investigation of the circumstances of the family and supervision of the institutional or home care of the children. It also saves money. For example:

In going over the records of the County Orphan Asylum in a certain county, the County Agent found the names of five children from one family who had been county charges for over eleven years. For nine years the mother had lived in the same town where the youngsters were in an institution, though apparently no county official had ever looked her up.

This family had already cost the county over $7,000. One of the girls would probably have remained a year longer, the next younger two and a half years and another three and a half years, making a total of seven years at $208 per year, or $1,456 a year.

When the county agent got to work she found the mother really capable of caring for the children if somewhat lacking in realization of her duty. Finally three of the children were returned to her. One child was placed in a foster home and satisfactory provision made for the fifth. The saving to the county—and the advantage to the children—are obvious.

A County Agent for Dependent Children "pays" any county!

WESTCHESTER LOSES MR. DERRICK

Calvin Derrick, Warden of the Westchester County Penitentiary, has resigned to become head of the department of parole and education in the State Commission of Charities and Correction in New Jersey. Mr. Derrick has made an enviable record in Westchester.

TWO MORE COUNTIES IMPROVE FACILITIES TO FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS.

Westchester Creates Position of Advisory Nurse—Madison Employs Visiting Nurse.

An advisory tuberculosis nurse has been provided for Westchester County by the Board of Supervisors. On August 5 the board voted to create the position of such a nurse and appropriate funds therefor. The nurse, when appointed, will be expected to help coordinate and unify the tuberculosis visiting nurse work already being carried on in the county, extend visiting nurse service to all communities in the county not yet thus provided, and also to help strengthen it where it is already in existence. The position will be under the civil service and an appointment will probably be made shortly.

Miss Mary Edith Ashby, R. N., tuberculosis visiting nurse employed by the War Emergency Committee on Tuberculosis of Madison County, has been taken over by the county, the Board of Supervisors having appropriated funds for her salary and traveling expenses from now until the annual meeting in November. It is hoped that at that time the Board will vote to continue the work indefinitely.

Both the Westchester and Madison County Boards of Supervisors, in taking this action, are acting under the amendment to the county hospital law passed at the last session of the Legislature authorizing boards of supervisors in counties where there is no hospital for tuberculosis established under the county law, to employ nurses for the discovery and visitation of cases of the disease.

Who Will Give This Boy A Home As Birthday Present?

Roger wants a home. Who is Roger? Well, there aren't many like Roger. He's a cheerful, fun-loving lad who knows how to work hard and play hard. You should see his school reports and how he stood nearly a year above his age level in a mental test!

But for all his cheery disposition, down in his heart Roger is very lonely. He wants a real father and mother. And if ever a lad deserved them he does.

Here's a secret: This very month Roger has a birthday coming and what a wonderful birthday gift it would be to give him a sure enough home. If anyone is interested won't they please communicate quickly with the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association?
MISS TAFT SELECTED FOR IMPORTANT MENTAL HYGIENE WORK IN PHILADELPHIA

Miss Jessie Taft, Director of the Social Service Department of the Mental Hygiene Committee and a former member of the Association’s New York City Visiting Committee’s staff, has accepted a position as psychologist in the Children’s Bureau and Temporary Shelter in Philadelphia, and will begin her new duties on October 1.

During her work in the Mental Hygiene Committee, Miss Taft has emphasized the importance of the problem of mental disorders in children and in her social service and clinical work, and in her writings and addresses has made substantial contributions to progress along this line. Her new position will give her an opportunity to devote all her time and talent to pioneer work in that field.

The Philadelphia Children’s Bureau investigates dependent children for various children’s institutions and agencies, to the number of about 4,000 a year. The children have adequate physical examination. Miss Taft will supplement the physical examinations and intelligence tests by making a study of the mental make-up of difficult children, emotional as well as intellectual, to facilitate proper placement and treatment. She has also been appointed on the consulting staff of the Carson College for Orphan Girls in Philadelphia.

Miss Taft is well equipped by training and experience for this important work. She is a graduate of Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, taught in a Des Moines high school for four years, and was a Fellow in Philosophy at the University of Chicago for three years, receiving the degree of Ph. D. in Philosophy and Psychology in 1913. Before coming to the State Charities Aid Association she was assistant superintendent of the New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford Hills for two years. She has been with the Association for three years.

PROGRESS ON WARREN & LIVINGSTON COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

Messrs. Fred Rogers, Chairman, Stewart MacFarland, Fred S. Smith, Fred F. Hawley and Timothy Healey of the Warren County Board of Supervisors, have been appointed a committee by that board to file a petition with the State Commissioner of Health for a hearing on the site at French Mountain selected for a county tuberculosis hospital, and for which an appropriation of $10,000 has recently been made.

Plans for the Livingston County Tuberculosis hospital, to be erected in the town of Mt. Morris in the Genesee Valley, which was authorized by a referendum vote of the voters in November, 1916, have been approved by the Board of Supervisors and submitted to the State Commissioner of Health, as required by law, for his approval. It is expected this will be given soon and that bids will be advertised for and work begun on the hospital immediately. A committee of the supervisors has been appointed to have in direct charge all matters pertaining to the establishment of the hospital, as follows: Fred L. Willett of Portage, Chairman; John A. Donnan of Leicester, George C. Webster of Conesus, Daniel F. Russell of Mt. Morris, and William A. O’Neill of Lima.

S. C. A. A. BOY KILLED IN ACTION

Some years ago the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association found a boy for a soldier. He gave to his foster father and mother a real son’s devotion and they were very proud and happy. Today they are still proud, while very sorrowful. When the United States went into the war Jim joined the Marines, and now comes word that he has been killed in action.

MISS ELLA MACAULEY HAS BEEN APPOINTED COUNTY AGENT IN NASSAU

Miss Ella Macauley has been appointed County Agent for Dependent Children in Nassau County, to succeed Miss Alman Lyman, who has resigned to be married. Miss Macauley has had long experience as a kindergarten teacher and girls’ club worker. She is a graduate of the New York School of Philanthropy, class of 1916.

FIVE OPERATIONS—AND NOW PARALYSIS VICTIM CAN WALK.

This boy had infantile paralysis when he was three and a half years old and was a cripple since then until this year, when he reached the age of thirteen. His condition was then taken in hand by Dr. Royal Whitman of the State Department of Health. As a result of five operations the boy is able to do away with his wheel chair permanently. He can now walk with the aid of his braces and crutches.

Arrangements for operations on infantile paralysis cases are made through the Committee on After-Care of infantile paralysis.

"Sunshine," I called her and she brought, I vow,
God’s blessed sunshine to this life of mine.

I TELL YOU, LIFE IS A SERIOUS PROPORTION

I HAVE A LITTLE SHADOW
Hospital war problems will be the keynote of the meeting of the American Hospital Association in Atlantic City, N. J., September 24-28.

Major C. W. Berry, of the 106th United States Infantry, formerly a sanitary supervisor in the State Department of Health, has arrived safely overseas.

Clarence E. Ford, Superintendent of the Division of Medical Institutions of the State Board of Charities, was married on August 15 to Miss Alice H. Mitchell of Weedsport, N. Y.

Miss Ina T. Tyler, the State Charities Aid Association's Agent for Dependent Children in Sullivan County, has been designated as Probation Officer by County Judge George H. Smith.

Dr. Theodore I. Townsend, Assistant Superintendent of the Binghamton State Hospital, has been commissioned a captain in the Medical Officers Reserve Corps and assigned to psychiatric duty at Camp Meade, Maryland.

Dr. Wilfred H. Baines has recently become a member of the Middletown State Homeopathic Hospital staff. He was formerly at the Rome State Custodial Asylum. He has seen service in France as a first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps and returned to this country on account of his health.

The War Department has accepted the offer of Edward S. Clark of Cooperstown, N. Y., to use the Mary Imogene Bassett Hospital and Pathological Laboratory at Cooperstown for the period of the war and one year after. It will become a general hospital. Special attention also will be given to nervous conditions among aviators.

MRS. WATERHOUSE IN WAR WORK

Miss Alice J. Waterhouse, who came to the staff of the State Charities Aid Association eight years ago, and who has been secretary to George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Mental Hygiene Committee for the past three and a half years, has resigned to accept an important position in war work with the War Camp Community Service.

On August 14, Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the State Charities Aid Association's department of County Agents for Dependent Children, lectured to the Institute on Child Welfare of the New York School of Philosophy on the subject, "A Community Program for Child Care." Miss Mary Denton, Agent for Chemung county, was a member of the class.

Surgon-General W. C. Gorgas of the United States Army recently said that in the last six months there had occurred at least 13,000 less cases of venereal disease among the males of military age than there would have been had these men not entered the army. This means that the ancient bug-a-boo that venereal disease is far more rampant in the military than is the case, is of comparatively no longer an evil. It means that the control of venereal disease in the army by the army is effective.—Journal of the American Public Health Association.
MAKING CHILDREN READY FOR HOMES.

It isn't always possible to find a home directly for a child who comes to the attention of the Child Placing Agency. Sometimes the youngster is in need of immediate medical attention, but more often what he requires is a "preparatory course for a home,"—which the "instruction" consists of a sojourn in the health-bringing out-doors and general mothering.

At Syosset, L. I., Miss Margaret Whitney has a beautiful white house which she keeps especially for frail, sick babies who need mothering. There they are given great doses of sunshine and fresh air and care and love. Under this treatment they change rapidly from pathetic little waifs to sturdy rosy "cherubs" whom any father or mother would be proud to have.

Dr. Frank, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Rupprecht have a big farm where they make a home for as many as ten children at a time. They take older kittens here.

Technically the children, all kinds, sick and well, boys and girls, are taken by Mr. and Mrs. Rupprecht from the State Charities Aid Association to be "prepared to be placed." In reality they go into a home where they do all the normal things that belong to life in the country. And while they are romping and playing about and growing brown and healthy they are learning things, too. They are taught good manners and old fashioned niceties of life to be ready to go into any kind of a home that may be available for them.

STATE HOSPITALS IN CRITICAL NEED OF MORE NURSES AND ATTENDANTS

War times have so crippled the nursing staffs of the State hospitals for mental diseases that the superintendents are finding it impossible to obtain enough nurses and attendants—male and female—for the proper care of the patients. An urgent appeal to fill the vacancies in this work as a war service is being sent out by the State Hospital Commission and the superintendents of the various institutions.

The condition is critical. The hospitals house more than 37,000 patients and approximately six times as many employees of various kinds, in Army and Navy hospitals here and abroad. Yet with the shortage of attendants the hospitals are facing increased work in that they are caring for mental cases developing in the army and naval forces.

State Has Good Training Schools

In seeking young women of good health and education to replace the trained nurses and attendants called away, the Hospital Commission calls attention to the fact that the State maintains a regular training school for nurses in connection with each of its thirteen hospitals for mental diseases and that the graduates of these schools are qualified to take an examination for the degree of registered nurse at the conclusion of the required course.

In addition to the instruction received in the training schools, the State makes a liberal allowance to the pupil nurses in training, placing them on a self-supporting basis, as board, room, laundry, medical service and an annual vacation with pay, are given. The pupil is required to furnish her own uniforms and text books which, however, are supplied at cost. Hundred of graduate nurses have received their training at these schools and are now in private practice.

The State hospitals also train male nurses and applications are invited from men interested in this work and those who are not available for military duty.

In addition to the above, the State hospitals provide a shorter course of instruction in practical nursing for attendants, covering about six months of instruction and practical work.

REAL War Service

This call affords an opportunity for young women who can meet the requirements to do their "bit" by releasing trained nurses for the Government's need and by assisting in caring for the State's insane, which will include not a few military cases, and at the same time maintain themselves on a self-supporting basis. The work is carried on under discipline but is interesting, and for those who are in earnest, it affords an unequalled opportunity to serve both State and country in this time of need.

Further particulars and application blanks may be obtained from the Superintendent of the nearest State hospital or from the office of the State Hospital Commission, Albany, N. Y. Prompt action is necessary, as the training schools start new classes the first of October.

BOY FOR WHOM COUNTY AGENT FOUND A HOME NOW FIGHTING IN FRANCE

The State Charities Aid Association's County Agent for Dependent Children in a certain county was filled with pride the other day when a postal card announced the safe arrival in France of one of "her boys" whom she had rescued from a miserable home a number of years ago and placed in an excellent foster home. The care and training which he had received in his new home had made both him and his brother fit soldiers for the army of freedom. The brother is also in the United States Army and expecting foreign service.

There were three other children found in the dirty, unkempt home in a despicable neighborhood. Immoral, drunken parents were not giving them any of the essentials of proper care and training. The county agent removed them from the family on account of improper guardianship. Temporarily they were placed in an institution, but eventually good family homes were found for them with foster fathers and mothers who now love the children as though they were their very own. All five children have been saved for the State as well as for themselves.

Staff of the Association's Department for Dependent Children

Superintendent, Miss H. Ida Curry, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City.
Assistant Superintendent, Miss Mary S. Lilacree, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City.
Superintendent of Pothamette Home, Mrs. Mary M. Shaw, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City.

County Agents:
Chahtaqua County: Miss Amy P. Tappin, Post Building, Jamestown, and Miss Elizabeth Mertz, Temple Street, Edmund.
Chesnug County, Miss Mary E. Denton, Federal Building, Elmira.
Columbia County, Miss Antoinette Mitchell, Court House, Hudson.
Herkimer County, Miss Emma C. Brownell, Court House, Herkimer.

Locality, Albany, N. Y. Prompt action is necessary, as the training schools start new classes the first of October.
Serving Country as Nurse
Woman's Greatest Privilege,
Says Louisa Lee Schuyler

Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, the venerable founder of the State Charities Aid Association, whose leadership in the New York Sanitary Commission was responsible for a noble work for soldiers in the Civil War, took an active part in enrolling 25,000 young women as army and navy nurses. In a letter to The New York Times on this subject she said:

Twenty-five thousand young women have been called upon to enlist in the army and navy service of the United States. They have been asked to enroll so that they may be ready to be mustered in at any time before the first of next April.

This call comes from the Surgeon General of the United States Army, from the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, from the American Red Cross, the General Medical Board, and the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense; all uniting in an appeal to more than 30,000 women, between the ages of 19 and 35, to enlist themselves in what is to be called the United States Student Nurse Reserve.

Recently it has been authoritatively stated that among the first to go in this reserve, in one week, 200,000 men were received in army hospitals. The work done in those hospitals, by surgeons and nurses, was so rapid and so remarkable that 85 per cent. of them were returned to the front to fight again. May it not be said that as nurses have done their full share in helping to win the war, so, of course, they too have served. They have been trained in the highest type of ability, and possibly of surgical experience, should be selected for important positions. With them fully trained and certified women nurses only are being used. It is estimated that there are 60,000 registered graduate nurses in this country. This year there were 12,000 in the army and navy service. Of these, more than 4,000 are overseas, and upward of 6,000 are in can-

NEW SUPERINTENDENTS AT TWO STATE HOSPITALS

The appointment of two new superintendents of State hospitals for mental diseases is announced.

Dr. William C. Garvin has been named superintendent of the Kings Park State Hospital to succeed Dr. William Austin Macy, deceased. Dr. Garvin has been resident physician at the institution for several years.

Dr. George W. Gorrell, first assistant physician at the Buffalo State Hospital, has been appointed superintendent of that institution to succeed Dr. Arthur W. Hurdl, resigned.

No Wonder!

The Child Placing Agency lost its heart to Dickie and after that his foster father and mother lost theirs too.

DR. KIRBY IN MILITARY SERVICE.

Dr. George H. Kirby, Director of the Psychiatric Institute of the New York State hospitals, has been granted a leave of absence to enter military service. He has been commissioned a major in the Medical Officers' Reserve Corps and assigned to neuro-psychiatric work.

WESTCHESTER ALMSHOUSE
NOW A WAR HOSPITAL

The recently completed Westchester County Almshouse at Eastview has been taken over by the Federal Government as a war hospital for the reception of wounded American men returned from the overseas forces. It is estimated that the new building will accommodate from fifteen hundred to two thousand patients. The inmates of the almhouse will be housed in the old county buildings.

S. C. A. A. Aids Refugees from Poland

War refugees were the mother and son who, after many months of traveling finally reached the friendly haven of Miss Mason's home in the Association's department for mothers and babies. The boy, whose picture is printed here, is an unusual little musician, whose mother, in spite of untold privation and hardship, incident to their flight from Poland, has managed to give him many opportunities for instruction. Here are parts of a letter written to Miss Mason describing a bit of the dangers through which the mother and son passed fleeing from Poland in war times:

"We were not in Russia many weeks before war broke out and we left as soon as we could via Petrograd, Finland, Sweden and Norway. Poland was simply devastated earth with the exception of Warsaw, the beloved city of the Poles. Seeing that the Germans could not take the city, they used aircraft continuously to destroy those cities that knew this, have chosen to stand beside their brothers at the front in behalf of a cause than which there is none nobler!"
MRS. HITCH PRESENTS SPLENDID PARK AND PLAYGROUND TO NEWBURGH

Mrs. Frederie Delano Hitch of Newburgh, who is a member of the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association, has recently presented a valuable and splendidly located tract of land to the City of Newburgh, to be used as a recreation park and public playground.

This magnificent gift is another evidence of the splendid generosity and broad social interest of Mrs. Hitch, who has been a member of the State Charities Aid Association almost since its organization. She has been interested in all social movements in Newburgh for many years, and particularly in behalf of the work for dependent children. It was her broad social vision which made her see in an abandoned railroad right the possibilities of a recreation and social center and she made her vision a reality by purchasing the property for $30,000 and presenting it to the city.

In her address of presentation, Mrs. Hitch said:

"Shall we not aim to make this park a community center? Let us remember that social exclusions and prejudices separate more effectively than distance and differing languages. This is a community center dedicated for the recreation of every man, woman and child in Newburgh, regardless of race, color or creed."

A member of the staff of the State Charities Aid Association who visited the playground a week after it was opened, tells of the following incident:

Mrs. Hitch drew up to the curb at the side of the playground near the section where there are swings for the little tots. The playground was filled with nearly a thousand men, women and children. A large group of Italians were standing near the baby swings. One of the young Italian women with a bambino in her arms caught sight of Mrs. Hitch in her automobile and her eyes lit up with recognition. She pushed her companions aside and made her way hastily to the side of the car, saying as she approached: "Park all right—park all right." The beneficiary of Newburgh tried to talk to her about the baby, but the only response she could get was: "Me no understand—me no understand—park all right." Having thus expressed her personal gratitude, the Italian mother drew still further on her limited store of English, saying: "Well, good-bye," and, waving her hand, returned to her group of friends.

"I Don't Know What I'd Do If I Had To Leave It."

Hilda, like many little girls in fairy tales, had a cruel step-father. She was so beaten and abused by him that she would sleep in the chicken house or under a stack of straw, rather than go home at night. Men in the neighborhood spent hours at night pleading for her and had seen how she had been whipped. When the officials who came to Hilda's rescue went to the home they found her stepfather beating her with a boot.

There were two beds in two rooms. One of these, smaller beds, belonged to Hilda and all four children—Hilda and her three stepbrothers and sisters. Hilda had only one dress and an old sweater. She wore a piece of bed ticking under the dress to keep her warm.

One would have expected Hilda to be a wretched, apathetic little waif, stunted and emaciated, with not a word to say for herself and scarcely a thought in her head. But the fact is Hilda was perfect physically. She had soft light hair and beautiful skin; in spite of her surroundings and life, refinement was innate. She had been able to go to school only a few hours a day but was a very bright girl.

Through the good offices of the child-placing agency of the State Charities Aid Association, Hilda has lately been placed in a real home. Recently she wrote to the office:

"I have started school and have been knitting for the soldiers. I have just finished a scarf and started another one. I am learning to ride horseback. Mother and I go out together and it is fun. I like it very much. Daddy and I have started to raise chickens and pigeons and I hope we will have plenty of eggs, for they are so expensive, and we hope to sell some, too. I hope that you will come to see me soon and see what a nice home I have got. I am so happy I don't know what I would do if I had to leave it."

FREEPORT OPENS PUBLIC HEALTH STATION

Under the auspices of the Freeport Neighborhood Workers, a public health station has been opened in that village where clinics are held every Friday morning. A volunteer staff from the local medical profession has been secured, the members of which examine without charge those seeking medical advice and treatment. The physicians are assisted in their work by Mrs. Phoebe Schloery, Social Worker of the local association, and Miss Beviss Gassen, the county tuberculosis nurse.

MAKE-BELIEVE BROTHERS AND SISTERS, BUT REAL HOMES.

Here is a letter which shows how a foster father feels about his adopted children—a son and daughter:

"I have never seen two children more responsive and more grateful; everything done for them brings an expression of thanks or a caress. Yesterday they got their first allowance, and when I returned home last night I found that both of them had spent their entire week's allowance on a present for me."

"As to what the children have done for me, I can truly say that there has never been a period of my life so happy and contented as since I have had these children. There is a peculiar tone to the contentment they have brought me, which is a constant source of wonder. Even the rough places have been pleasant, and, though, I might add, very few.

"Daughter is a real girl and son is every inch a boy, which is just the way I should want them."

Father Love.

The Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association brought this father and the children together.

WANTED: A Good Catholic Home.

Helen is a bright, lovable little soul who longs for a father and mother. She has been brought up in the Catholic faith and wants a Catholic home. Won't someone make her happy?

"The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings."

Major Homer Folks Directing Vast Red Cross Relief and Reconstruction Work Abroad

MAJOR HOMER FOLKS
DIRECTOR OF THE DEPARTMENT OF CIVIL AFFAIRS OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IN FRANCE

Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who is in Europe on leave as Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross, is directing a vast work of reconstruction of devastated areas. Above is a photograph of him in the uniform of the Red Cross. He holds the rank of Major.

Recent reports indicate the magnitude, variety and importance of the work which the Red Cross is doing to succor and rehabilitate refugees and repatriated citizens returned to France from territory captured by the Germans.

Supplying food, clothing, shelter and medical care to thousands of men, women and children; re-educating war cripples; providing hospitals for sick children; establishing sanatoria for the tuberculous; conducting practical demonstrations and campaigns of public health education—these are some of the lines of effort in which the Civil Affairs Department is engaged. The big organization necessary to carry on this work was built up by Mr. Folks during the past year. His staff now numbers eleven hundred persons, and the expenditures of his department during a recent month were over eight million eight hundred thousand francs,—about one million seven hundred and sixty thousand dollars.

Recent letters state that he has never worked harder, nor longer hours, but that his health continues excellent. Recent military developments have, of course, greatly increased the demands upon his department.

Major Folks’ leave of absence from the Association extends to January 1, 1919.

ORVILLE P. JOHNSON KILLED IN FRANCE

Word has come to Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, that his son, Lieut. Orville P. Johnson, a member of a machine gun battalion, was killed in action on July 18.

Lieut. Johnson was 23 years old, was a graduate of the Albany Boys’ Academy, in the battalion of which he had been an officer. From there he entered Harvard University, but left before completing his course and joined the Massachusetts National Guard. In 1914 he went as a Sergeant with his company to the Mexican border.

In October, 1917, he went overseas with the 2nd New England Division, which was the first National Division to get into action.

Since that time Lieut. Johnson had been much under fire with his machine gun battalion and wrote frequently of the stirring experiences through which he was passing. Only recently he passed second in his class at a bombing school behind the lines in France. Lieut. Ames of Boston, who passed first, went into action with Lieut. Johnson and both were killed in the same engagement.

On July 17, the day before he went “over the top” for the last time, Lieut. Johnson wrote a letter to his father which was to be delivered only in the event of his death. Mr. Johnson received this letter some days before the official announcement from Washington and because no word had come from the War Department hoped against hope that some mistake had been made and that his son had been taken prisoner. But a telegram finally brought the grim tidings.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have the deepest sympathy of a wide circle of friends, and fathers and mothers all over the land whose sons are dedicated to the safety of democracy, join them in the kinship of pride and sorrow.

MRS. LEARN IS NEW ASSISTANT IN COUNTY AGENCIES DEPARTMENT.

Mrs. Jane S. Learn of Newburgh has been appointed Assistant Superintendent of County Agencies of the State Charities Aid Association to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Miss Grace A. Reeder.

Mrs. Learn began her professional social work with the Child Placing Department of the State Charities Aid Association, and the Association is glad to welcome her back to its staff. She left the Association to become the Assistant Superintendent of the Brooklyn Juvenile Probation Association, and later became the Secretary of the Newburgh Charity Organization Society. In Newburgh, she has been the Secretary of the Home Service Department of the American Red Cross. She will assume the duties of her new position October 1.
S. C. A. A. TO JOIN IN COUNTRY-WIDE RED CROSS CHRISTMAS ROLL-CALL

SEAL SALE SUSPENDED, BUT FUNDS ASSURED FOR TUBERCULOSIS WORK

Red Cross Christmas seals will not be sold this year, but will be distributed in connection with the country-wide Red Cross membership campaign to be held December 10-23. This plan is expected to increase the Red Cross membership by millions and at the same time to support the campaign against tuberculosis as well or better than in previous years.

In conformity with this arrangement the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association and all local tuberculosis committees throughout New York State will unite with the local chapters of the American Red Cross in a vigorous joint campaign for membership. In fact the committee is already at work organizing its part of the work.

Although the Christmas seals will not be sold this year, they will still be a prominent feature of the Christmas season, and will be a distinctive part of the Christmas Roll Call Membership Campaign. Arrangements have been made whereby each of the prospective millions of members of the Red Cross will be presented with a special packet containing seals, educational literature on the prevention of tuberculosis, and information indicating that by becoming a member of the Red Cross, one is not only serving the ordinary humanitarian ends of that great organization, but also helping in the fight against tuberculosis.

Endorsed by President Wilson

This joint Red Cross tuberculosis campaign for 1918 was determined upon by the American Red Cross and the National Tuberculosis Association after repeated conferences and a thorough investigation of the conditions affecting the raising of money in these difficult war times, and conforms to the wishes of President Wilson and the Council of National Defense. Because of its constitutional limitations, the American Red Cross cannot use any part of its membership funds for work other than its own, but in order that the interests of the anti-tuberculosis campaign throughout the United States may be insured against loss and may be safeguarded for the future, the War Council has appropriated to the anti-tuberculosis campaign of this country a sum amounting to $2,500,000. The National Tuberculosis Association has been designated as the agency responsible for the distribution of this fund. The plans for its distribution have not yet been worked out in detail, but it can be said that the various state and local tuberculosis committees will receive amounts equaling their receipts from the sale of Christmas seals in 1917, with the possibility of an increase over that amount.

Local Committees to Push Campaign

Every local tuberculosis committee will be urged to put its full energy into the Christmas Roll Call in an effort to make membership in the Red Cross as nearly universal among the adult population of the State as it can possibly be made. The expense of the campaign is to be borne by the American Red Cross. Local tuberculosis committees will, however, be called upon to use their office staffs and machinery as well as the personal efforts of their entire membership to make the campaign a success. They will have a strong inducement to do this, for it is probable that the total amount of funds will find even tuberculosis work for 1919 will depend in part upon the success of the Red Cross membership campaign. Carefully planned budgets and an accurate and detailed accounting of all money appropriated will be required of all committees participating in the arrangement. Forms for the budgets and the accounting will be provided.

A Double Campaign

This arrangement is a favorable one for the tuberculosis work in that it will bring before new groups of people comprising the Red Cross membership the message of tuberculosis. Every person responding to the Christmas Roll Call will thereby enroll in a double campaign on behalf of humanity. He becomes a factor in relieving the suffering caused by this year, but he also enters in the determined fight against the scourge of tuberculosis here at home. The packet of Christmas seals and literature on tuberculosis given to him as he answers this roll call will indicate part of the two-fold service to humanity.

Great Opportunity for Service

The joint appeal of these two movements, both springing from a common impulse of human service, does not indicate any lessening of the great need for either of them, but aims rather to give the greatly augmented needs of both an amplified opportunity for support and fulfillment.

It is anticipated that the fine Christmas seal spirit which in years past has shown itself in practically every home in the State will be extended to the making of more universal manifestation in connection with the joint campaign to be made this year under the name of the Red Cross Christmas Roll Call.
Dr. Reeder, Home From France, Praises Red Cross Work For War-Stricken Children

Says Homer Folks Cannot Be Spared “Except at Great Cost to France”

Dr. R. R. Reeder, Superintendent of the New York Orphanage at Hastings-on-Hudson, who has been engaged in the work of supervising and standardizing inspectional plans for war purposes in France, recently returned from Europe on a ship which has the distinction of being the first to sink a German submarine by direct hit after the war was declared. The Kaiser has offered a reward of a thousand marks to each member of the submarine crew which would send this host to the bottom. Consequently, most of the passengers are on the alert while on this steamer.

Speaking of the work which the Red Cross is doing in France, Dr. Reeder said: “The Red Cross got into action pretty thoroughly about a year ago this month. They were in action before the American Army was. France was war weary, war worn. France is jubilant now.”

French Quick to Respond

Dr. Reeder spoke at some length of his own work behind the lines, dealing with what he had seen. He had been left destitute by the killing of their supporters and protectors, and by the destruction of their homes. He described vividly the conditions under which these people had lived in cellars and caves, and of their dire need of care and treatment. He says the French are the most responsive people in the world, and that every time they found that human kindness had not been entirely destroyed by the Huns they seemed to revive immediately and to work eagerly for their own reconstruction and return to clean human life. He spoke affectionately of the appealing love and confidence the French children have in everything American. He told of how they steal their tiny hands into those of soldiers and civilians alike, apparently feeling that anything American means protection, help, love.

Paris Not Worried by Big Gun

Dr. Reeder spoke rather slightly of the bombardment of Paris by the 75-mile gun. He said that the only apprehension felt was when the bombardment began and its source could not be discovered. Once the French and the Americans knew that it was not an aeroplane attack they merely shrugged their shoulders and went about their business, utterly disregarding it. He said that very few of the shots had any effect. Several fell into the Seine or upon vacant lots, and the one which fell nearest to a populous center fell directly upon the only vacant building in several blocks.

Family Relief and Trade Scholarships

In Dr. Reeder’s work in Lorraine he prepared a non-medical program for children, the principal feature of which were family relief, and trade scholarships. Family relief, of course means the immediate supplying of needs, and with the help the mothers require in keeping their little units together. By trade scholarships, Dr. Reeder explained, the oldest or strongest child is given an opportunity to learn a trade in the shortest possible time which will enable him to earn enough to supply the family needs. A boy of 13, 14, 15 or 16, he says, can be trained in two years so that he can go to work, and by reason of his training earn ten francs per day, instead of two, three or four francs per day, which is the wage of unskilled labor. Dr. Reeder stated that no hard and fast budget system had been arranged because the needs of the families vary according to their size and the degree of privation to which they had been subjected. An average of 600 to 700 francs per year per child will maintain a family of four, and will enable the oldest child or older children to take their trade scholarships. This sum includes provision for medical service and all needs.

Major Folks Cannot Be Spared

Dr. Reeder spoke with great enthusiasm of the wonderful work that Homer Folks is doing. He said “I don’t see how he can be spared to come home, except at a very great cost to France.”

To Mrs. Folks he also paid tribute: “She is as busy as Mr. Folks. She does what might be called sublimated social service in the hospital. When the boys are about to ‘go west’, which is their euphemism for dying, Mrs. Folks takes their last messages and is what their own mothers and wives would have a noble woman be in such an hour.”

Paralysis Victim, 10, Now Walks for First Time

This boy had infantile paralysis when he was a baby, and until 1917 the only way he could get around was by sitting on the floor and pushing himself from place to place. Last year, through the State Charities Aid Association Committee on After-Care of Poliomyelitis Cases, Dr. Royal Whitman of the State Department of Health, performed four operations on the boy, and now he really walks with the aid of braces and crutches. He is having his deformed back corrected by plaster jackets, and for the first time in his life has attended school, where he is making a very good record.

ANOTHER S. C. A. A. BOY FIGHTING OVER THERE

Irving Denning, a young man whose very interesting career has been followed by the State Charities Aid Association from his birth, in 1895, to his enlistment in the medical corps, in June, 1917, is now in France, in an aeroplane squadron.

An old friend of his mother writes that she and all his friends are proud of him. He has bought Liberty Bonds, and has taken out the full amount of insurance allowed him, in favor of his half-sisters, and they are receiving an allotment of $15 a month from his pay.

STATE TO TRAIN ITS DEFECTIVE CHILDREN

Dr. Cornell and Miss Gray Named by Education Department to Organize Special Classes

The State Department of Education is making good progress in developing plans for the establishment of special classes in the public schools throughout the State for backward and defective children. These classes are provided by the Lockwood law, passed two years ago, requiring each school with ten or more children retarded three or more years to establish such special classes where instruction suited to the needs of the children can be given. The law provides for a census of all such children.

Dr. Thomas E. Finner, Acting Commissioner of Education, has announced the appointment of two specialists to take charge of the census and the organization of these classes. He has named Dr. William Burgess Cornell of New York as Physical and Mental Diagnos- tician of the department, and Miss Eleanor A. Gray of Owego as Supervisor to Organize the Ungraded Classes.

Dr. Cornell is a well-known psychiatrist and psychologist. He comes to the State Department of Education from the New York City Children’s Hospital and School on Randall’s Island, of which he has been Director. Miss Gray has been head of the department of the Oswego State Normal, devoted to the training of teachers for ungraded classes and has made a record in her field. She has had extensive pedagogical experience with both normal and abnormal children.

Conference Held on Plans

The plans of the department for its census and for the organization of the classes were discussed at a conference held in the office of the Commissioner of Education on September 27. Among those present besides representatives of the Education Department, was Dr. Walter B. James, Chairman of the new State Commission for the Feebleminded. The Education Department will co-operate with the State Commission in plans for registering and dealing with defective children.
WAR WORK KEEPS S. C. A. A. STAFF "ON THE JUMP"

S. C. A. A. Helps Red Cross in Influenza Epidemic and Jersey Explosion Emergency

Rushes Physicians and Hospital Equipment Up-State to Fight Grip and Sends Trained Workers to Help Care for Morgan Munitions Plant Refugees

The State Charities Aid Association has been called upon recently to perform two important pieces of emergency work for the American Red Cross—connection with the explosion in the munitions plant at Morgan, N. J., and in dealing with the epidemic of influenza prevalent in various parts of the State.

The spread of the influenza epidemic has resulted in calls from many quarters to the Red Cross for assistance, and the Red Cross in turn has supplemented its own staff with trained workers from the State Charities Aid Association. The Association gladly availed itself of the opportunity to render all possible assistance.

Physician Sent to Oswego
On October 4 the Red Cross called upon the Association to send a physician to Oswego, N. Y., to take charge of an emergency hospital being set up under Red Cross auspices for influenza patients. Within three hours after the request, Dr. Elliott Waughburn of the staff of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee, was on his way to Oswego. He later reported that he had been on 24-hour duty for some time after his arrival.

Hospital Equipment to Maybrook
On October 5 a call came from the Red Cross to send a physician and hospital equipment to Maybrook, N. Y., for influenza patients. Dr. Charles S. Prest, also of the Tuberculosis Committee staff, was immediately sent to that town, and Henry C. Wright, Secretary pro tem of the Association, purchased, on behalf of the Red Cross, the equipment for a 50-bed hospital and dispatched it by truck which arrived during the early morning hours of October 6. The equipment was immediately installed and all of the beds were soon occupied.

Help House Jersey Refugees
On the night of October 5, while the Jersey countryside over a wide radius from Morgan was still rocking with explosions, and the flight of refugees reminded one of the invasion of Belgium, the Red Cross called upon the Association to send a physician and help for the homeless inhabitants of several towns.

Several members of the staff were aroused from their beds and instructed to report at Staten Island at 9 o'clock the following morning, under the supervision of George J. Nelson, of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee, and Miss Sophie V. Theis, of the Child Placing Agency. The staff members who joined them were Miss Constance Goodrich, Miss Katherine Bushnell and Miss Isabella D. Hoes of the present staff of the Association, and Miss Charlotte Carr and Miss Elizabeth Caldwell, formerly of its staff. The ships almost continuously night and day for several hours, helping the Red Cross to do their work, organization of hospital facilities, finding and helping to provide for lost children, looking up relatives, listing people needing clothes, shelter and food, and in the general measures of relief for the refugees.

Major Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who has been in France since July 1917, and for more than a year has been Director of the Department of Civil Affairs, is now in charge of the Department of General Relief. Under this department will come the Bureau of Refugees, the Bureau of Soldiers' Families, the Bureau of War Orphans, and the Bureau of Agriculture. Major Folks' headquarters continue in Paris.

Major Alexander Lambert, a prominent New York physician, who has been in France for nearly two years, is appointed Director of the Department of Medical Research and Intelligence.

COUNTY AGENTS OF ASSOCIATION AID RED CROSS WORK

During the last few months the State Charities Aid Association has had manifold patriotic services to their usual duties as county social workers. The Red Cross, War Risk Insurance Bureau, and the Council of National Defense have found in them able and willing helpers.

A notable example of this is in Chautauqua County, where the Children's Agency and the Home Service, has been made the Executive Secretary of the Home Service Section of the Red Cross. In order to make the up-to-date the children's work, the Red Cross Committee has furnished her with stenographic help and larger and more adequate offices containing the most up-to-date equipment. It is also hoped that an assistant visitor will be employed who will divide her time between the Children's Agency and the Home Service Work. Interested and competent volunteers are helping Miss Tapping.

In the north of the County, the associate Children's Agent, Miss Mertz, has been asked to act as Home Service Director in the town of Westfield, and has been given an automobile to facilitate her work.

MAJOR FOLKS HEADS NEW RED CROSS DEPT. IN FRANCE

The scheme of organization of the American Red Cross in France has recently been changed so that the activities among both the civilian population and the military are divided into nine zones. The head quarters organization is divided into eight departments, as follows: Department of Requirements, Medical and Surgical Department, Medical Research and Intelligence Department, Department of General Relief, The American Red Cross and Navy Service, Department of French Hospitals, Department of Public Information, Office Manager.

Miss Gertrude Bruyn, who was the State Charities Aid Association agent for dependent children in Ulster County until November 1917, has rendered a notable service at Mt. Holyoke College as Executive Secretary of the Training Course for Health Officers which was conducted by the college during the summer months.

Dr. Kristine Mann who planned the course was called to Washington on special work and in her absence Miss Bruyn has been largely responsible for the details of the administration of the course.

The course was opened to qualified young women and was devised to prepare them to serve as Government Inspectors of the health of women working in war factories. Miss Bruyn was not only fulfilling her duties as executive secretary but herself qualified as a member of the training class. She spent two weeks as an employee in one of the Massachusetts factories and has now accepted a position as Health Inspector in the factories in and near Chicago.

Ex-County Agent in Important War Work
JUST A MOMENT

Dr. Elbert M. Somers, formerly Superintendent of the Brooklyn State Hospital, and more recently in private practice in Brooklyn, has gone to France as a hospital executive in the U. S. Army.

The eleventh annual State Conference of Probation Officers of New York State will be held in connection with the State Conference of Charities, on Correction in Rochester November 11 and 12.

Mason C. Hutchins, clerk of the State Senate Finance Committee of the New York Legislature, has three sons in military service, two in training for the navy at Pelham Bay and the third at Camp Travis, Texas, to train for an artillery corps.

George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Association’s Committee on Mental Hygiene, addressed the State Convention of Sons of the legislatures to make recommendations to Children, in Ithaca, September 25, on “Defective Children a Challenge to the State.”

Major Richard H. Hutchings, formerly Superintendent of the St. Lawrence State Hospital at Ogdensburg, has been transferred from the Surgeon General’s office to Plattsburgh, to become Clinical Director of the Government hospital for war neuroses.

An address on “Supervision of the Feebleminded in the Community,” read before the Mental Hygiene Section of this year’s National Conference on Social Work, in Kansas City, by Miss Jessie Taft, Social Service Director of the Committee on Mental Hygiene, State Charities Aid Association, is published in the current issue of “Mental Hygiene.”

HOPE TO SET ASIDE INSTITUTIONS FOR CARE OF DEFECTIVE DELINQUENTS

Prison Commission and Board of Charities studying inmates to separate defective from normals

The State Prison Commission and the State Board of Charities are working jointly on the problem of reclassifying the mentally defective inmates of various State charitable and penal institutions, with a view to a redistribution of them into institutions to be set aside for the purpose.

It will be recalled that the powers of the Hospital Development Commission were broadened by an amendment made at the last session of the legislature to make recommendations on this problem. The Commission, some little time ago, named a special committee of its members for this important work, consisting of Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, Frank R. Utter, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, Dr. Walter B. James, and Assemblyman H. Edmond Machold. Under its direction a survey of institutions in the charitable group is in progress.

Special Committee appointed

The Prison Commission has also appointed a committee to study the mental diseases and delinquency, consisting of Commissioners

Miss Adelaide Arms has been appointed State Charities Aid Association Agent for Dependent Children in Tioga County, as successor to Miss Nellie Gates, resigned on account of ill health. Miss Arms is a graduate of Smith College and has had experience in various lines of social work. Since January, 1917, she has been placing-out agent for Otsego County.

“The Problem of Tuberculosis in New York State Cities and the New York State Charities Aid Association” will be the special topic of an address delivered before the State Conference of Mayors at Newburgh, by Dr. Ralph G. Wight, Assistant Secretary of the New York State Charities Aid Association, and just published in pamphlet form. Copies may be obtained on application from this office.

Miss Dorothy Hughitt has resigned as State Charities Aid Association Children’s Agent in Yates County, in order to assist in organizing the social service work in the Neighborhood Centre in Detroit. The Yates County Committee has been fortunate in securing, as Miss Hughitt’s successor, Miss Helen Kerr who was for a year and a half assistant matron in the Salvation Army Training School for Girls at Hudson, N. Y., and who more recently has been connected with the New York City Mission Society.

Major Menas S. Gregory, formerly of Belleview Hospital, has been appointed military Director of Psychiatry at the port of debarkation, New York. Soldiers returning from overseas, suffering from nervous or mental disorders, will be examined by Dr. Gregory and his associates and transferred to the hospitals provided for their treatment. Major George H. Kirby, who is on leave as Director of the Psychiatric Institute of the New York State Hospitals, is working with Major Gregory.

OUR SPECIAL HOME GUARD

The safety of our nation depends on community defense against disease at home, as well as on success in the struggle against Prussian autocracy abroad. Through the development and extension and improvement of the public health nursing service we can help to build up the national forces that can win the war, and we can render to our allies through this peculiarly American type of social service, material aid in the reconstruction that must follow afterwards. — C. E. A. Winslow, Professor Public Health, Yale University.
THREE MORE UP-STATE COUNTIES TO HAVE TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

Three more up-state counties are making progress in the establishment of county tuberculosis hospitals under the mandatory law.

The Livingston County Board of Supervisors, at their quarterly meeting in August, approved plans and specifications for the new tuberculosis hospital which is to be built at Mt. Morris upon a beautiful site overlooking the Genesee River. The plans have since been approved by the State Department of Health. A special committee of five has been appointed to look after construction, and contracts for a part of the work have been signed. The institution will care for 28 patients.

The Delaware County Board of Supervisors, on September 10, authorized the signing of contracts for the building of the new tuberculosis hospital which will cost when complete about $50,000. Building operations will begin at once. The site for the new hospital has already been purchased in the village of Delhi. The institution will care for 28 patients.

The Herkimer County Board of Supervisors, at a meeting held September 4, accepted plans and specifications for its new county hospital. The plans provide for an institution having three stories and two wings, constructed along the same lines as the existing hospital in the town of Salisbury.

UNCLE SAM COORDINATES HEALTH WORK

Order of President Wilson Puts all Public Health Activities Under Single Control

Public Health organizations everywhere are greatly interested in the order issued by President Wilson consolidating the Public Health activities of all bureaus, agencies, and offices of the Government under the supervision of the Public Health Service of the Treasury Department. The order issued by the President reads as follows:

"Whereas, in order to avoid confusion in policies, duplication of effort, and to bring about more effective results, unity of control in the administration of the public health activities of the Federal Government is obviously essential, and has been so recognized by acts of Congress creating in the Treasury Department a Public Health Service, and specially authorizing such service to seek the diseases of man and the conditions influencing the propagation and spread thereof, and to cooperate with State and municipal boards of health.

"Now therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Chief Executive, and by the act authorizing the President to co-ordinate or consolidate executive bureaus, agencies, and offices, and for other purposes, in the interest of economy and the more efficient concentration of the Government, approved May 29, 1918, do hereby order that all sanitary or public health activities carried on by any executive bureau, agency, or office, especially created for or concerned in the prosecution of the existing war, shall be exercised under the supervision and control of the Secretary of the Treasury."

"This order shall not be construed as affecting the jurisdiction exercised under authority of existing law by the Surgeon General of the Army, the Surgeon General of the Navy, and the Provost Marshal General in the Executive Branch, or the functions which are military in character as distinguished from civil public health duties, or as prohibiting investigations by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of vocational diseases, shop sanitation, and hygiene."

MR. FOLKS' SUMMER HOME IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Word comes from Tupper Lake in the Adirondacks that the summer home of Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who is now in France, has been destroyed by fire.

UTILITY OF VITAL RECORDS IN CYCLES OF COMMUNITY LIFE

Publicity

"In charitable matters, 'Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth,' is good advice for the individual; but, for a public institution, a better motto would be, 'Do all the good you can, to all the people you can, and let as many as possible know it.' Letting as many as possible know it is publicity."

-Neale D. Greene, in The Modern Hospital.
MAKING OVER DISABLED SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher in the duties of his office and by serving as Secretary of the Hospital Development Commission, has developed keen interest in the problem of housing the insane and the feebleminded. At present he is working on plans for a model psychopathic hospital for New York City. In course of the war, he has devoted some study to the problem of the reconstruction of disabled soldiers and sailors from overseas. In the following article he states his ideas on the subject, devoting special attention to the importance of the right kind of treatment, institutional and otherwise, for the so-called "shell shock" cases.

By State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher

The reconstruction of the disabled soldiers and sailors of our expeditionary forces now returning to this country in ever increasing numbers, is one of the most important problems before the United States Government.

Formerly the disabled man was left to work out his own economic salvation, and if so badly shattered as to make anything but a mendicant success of it, was granted a small pension for his maintenance or sent to live out the remainder of his life in a Soldier's Home. This was humane in theory, but often unintentionally cruel in practice. The government took a young man just at the beginning of his career, used him as he was glad to be used, in the defense of his country. So far, so good. If he returned home in the physical perfection in which he left it, he could resume his work or profession, handicapped perhaps by the year or years of absence, but still able to catch on, and with a little extra labor, make up for the time lost during the interval.

Patients Face a New World

On the other hand, if the conclusion of the war left him incapacitated in any way for the following of his former trade or profession, he was left to the mercy of his own resources, which too often, were no resources at all. Yet in his prime, with the rest of life, love, and ambition still strong in him, he must fit himself to the new conditions and make a success in them, or put him behind, if he could, the things which make life worth living, pass the remainder of his days in unconvivial labor, or in idleness—the wreck of a man, the reproach to a generation.

Conditions are now different. Science has made great advances, old fashioned prejudices are disappearing, and practically all of what we like to think of as humanity, is eager in the solution of problems brought on by the war. The allied countries of whom I speak have done wonderful things towards helping their disabled soldiers. Hardly a day passes but that some new and helpful improvement is made. The best equipped scientists and doctors have devoted their whole time and attention to the ever increasing problems. Reconstruction hospitals have sprung up over night; trade and vocational schools have been allied with them; and all the very seriously incapacitated have been re-educated in the trade which they followed before the war, or if they were impossible, in some new and better adapted trade or vocation.

To Retrain 10,000 a Year

The "Smith Sears Act" providing for the vocational rehabilitation and return to civil employment of disabled persons discharged from the military or naval forces of the United States, was passed in June 1918, and a "Federal Board for Vocational Education" was delegated for the task of education and military reclamation. Dr. C. A. Proser, director of the board, in a paper on "The Problems of the Vocational Re-education of Disabled Men," states that for every million mobilized 10,000 or 1% a year will be proper subjects for vocational retraining, of which each will require individual treatment, individual study of his case, individual training, and individual efforts on his behalf in placement after he has been re-equipped to take up the broken threads of civilian life."

Here is a problem requiring the best and most untiring of our efforts if it be successfully administered. Ten thousand men a year for every million men mobilized will tax our capacities to the utmost, should the war continue for any duration of time. We have studied the institutions devoted to this work both abroad and in Canada, and we are about to form our own plans from them. It is a problem in which all are interested. May I be allowed to present a few ideas concerning it?

Proposed Vocational Rehabilitation Hospital Plan Prepared by State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher for State Hospital Development Commission

Critiques Educational Methods

As you all know from experience, the school systems of the past left a great deal to be desired in the education of all but the normal child. A system of routine was religiously followed in which a child should take such and such studies; advance at a defined rate of progress; and graduate as an average educated individual. But alas for the dignity of mathematics and ordered calculation, the theory has seldom if ever worked out. The subnormal floundered hopelessly in the backwaters of intellectual achievement; the normal took a passive interest in his work as a whole with perhaps an active interest in some part of it, while the brighter children often rebelled against the dull prosaicness and restriction of their tasks, and instead of increasing their natural ability, lost all further interest in learning.

In other words, the whole method of education, if such a bit and nose affair may be dignified by the word "method," was so theoretically, fundamentally, and basically wrong, that it is a wonder that any of us survived it. To the credit of our pedagogical method it may be said that rational individualism is beginning to be introduced into our schools and the pupils not the class admitted to be the dynamic unit of the problem. We are realizing more and more each day that we are not all cut from the same piece of cloth, but are rather such a body of complexities, as to warrant the paying of more attention to us in the susceptible days of our childhood. We are introducing psychology.

FRANCIS D. GALLATIN URGES STATE TO TAKE NEW TACK WITH DEFECTIVE CRIMINALS

The need of reform in the legal procedure for dealing with feebleminded and habitually criminal offenders is urged in a memorandum presented to the New State Commission on Feebleminded by Francis D. Gallatin, a member of the Second District Criminal Courts and Procedure of the New York County Lawyers Association. The memorandum, which is the basis of "Defective Detention. Law," is based on a careful study of the situation.

Mr. Gallatin says his inquiry convinced him that the law is "in need of amendment and that steps should be taken toward recognizing in criminal matters the mitigated responsibility of the defective." He urges that "responsible should be in large measure be based, not on the age of the body, but on that of the mind."

In a letter transmitting the memorandum to Dr. Walter B. James, Chairman of the State Commission, Mr. Gallatin expresses his gratitude to the chairman and the association with broad powers, and the appointment of Dr. James as Chairman. The memorandum is also being distributed by the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness.

Increase in Crime from War

Mr. Gallatin believes that the war is certain to result in an increase in crime and that it is the State that faces the situation, already extremely serious, and deals with it wisely and firmly. He points out that at least one quarter of the inmates of penal and reformatory institutions are mental defectives, and that the bulk of the crimes by defectives are committed by the higher grades known as morons, who are now held legally accountable for their acts, and can only be sent to prison for definite terms. Mr. Gallatin urges that the law be changed so as to take into account that while such offenders may be adults in years, mentally they are children and should be dealt with differently as from normal offenders.

"These unfortunate," he points out, "are unable to adapt themselves to their surroundings and easily fall into the ways of crime. Punishment has no effect. Training and correction can be had only in prison. On the expiration of their prison terms they are turned back into society, free to reproduce themselves and to continue their anti-social careers.

Definite Reforms Proposed

"To remedy this situation, measures should be taken for the establishment of psychopathic clinics in connection with the criminal courts and penitentiary institutions, and legislation should be enacted for the segregation, and detention or the proper supervision of delinquents discovered to be defective."

"The advantage that would redound to the State from the early detection of these individuals and their subsequent special treatment, the delinquency of their arrest, conviction, imprisonment and liberation would cease; they would be kept under supervision or else permanently removed from the community and placed in institutions where the security of the prison would be combined with educational methods. There is no doubt but that such action, if safeguarded by periodic and careful examination, would work no injustice, and would greatly diminish crime."

FORTY-TWO OF ASSOCIATION STAFF SERVED AS DRAFT CLERKS

Fifty-two members of the staff of the State Charities Aid Association volunteered their services and acted as registration clerks at different places in the city, September 12, in the registration for the new draft. The Association office was closed for the day.

The New York School of Philanthropy has announced a course on "Social Work After the War" to be given by Dr. Edward T. Devine, recently returned from Red Cross work in France. The lectures will be given Monday afternoons from 4 to 6. They began September 30.

The Red Cross Commissioner for France has submitted an itemized list of the requirements of the Commission to January 1, 1919, for military and hospital purposes. It will include: 300,000 shirts, 500,000 sheets, 250,000 ward stripers, and 60,000 bath room slippers. The War Council has authorized this purchase and has voted an appropriation of $1,000,000. This purchase has also appropriated $811,139 for the purchase of 500 Ford touring cars, and 1,000 chaises.

The State Hospital Commission and the Hospital Development Commission are going ahead on plans for the new division of the Utica State Hospital to be erected at a few miles from the Utica institution. It is planned eventually to have 37 buildings, comprising, in fact, a small village covering 90 acres. Building will begin as soon as practical. It is planned to house about 3,000 patients. This addition to the State's housing facilities for insane persons for the State institutions are overcrowded by about 6,000 patients.

and psychiatry with a view to weeding out the incurable and improving the prospects of those fitted for special training; we are seeking through the same methods to discover the interests of other children, while normal, who are mentally defective. In a way, we are attempting special and advanced training for the special group our pupils comprise, we are establishing medical clinics in our public schools, and we are working in the field of preventive measures. We are finding that a definite policy in the recognition of "dramatic classification, though yet in its infancy, has worked wonderfully well. Teachers are learning by it that they are being influenced. By its use in a few of the more advanced public schools, and teachers have been able to modify or remedy conditions which in former days resulted in truancy and backwardness. But now the effect of this, it is not taken for granted that he is incapable, but the possibility of his association for his delinquency and that cause may be seer. To fit the pupil for re-education into his former occupation, it may be added that this hypothesis is correct.

A New Method Proposed

It is proposed that this same method of procedure be adopted by the various city and county schools soon to receive men whose injuries have rendered them incapable for anything but the simplest work and who are under the condition of their former trade or profession or in one better adapted to their present physical condition. The loss of a limb or limbs by gun fire or amputation may cause a distinct mental shock but does not render quite as helpless as the soldier suffering from a reduction of one half in his normal power. In these tests the individual chart curve indicates a satisfactory condition which will require only the adjoin- ing psychiatric research division for the actual work of re-education. If the curve indicates a chronic mental condition, the patient is transferred to the schools for invalid, and held there for observation, or until it can be dis- covered that he is incurable or hopeless. If the latter, he is removed to a permanent institution.

For the first time, then, there is the attention on the determination of the pupil's mentality as an essential part of the work of re-education, and the following method of retirement, we shall find it expedient in the majority of cases to re-educate him to his former vocation, and we shall do this in the schools in the educational department of the psychopathic research division, using the schools for the actual work of retraining in the mechanical trades, and the educational department for long period of re-education necessary in the development of efficiency on the vocational course, without applying it to all cases as the pupils will either be unable to sustain their formal training by the reeducation, or because the psychopathic examinations here have classified them with reduced dormant abilities which if developed will raise them to a higher economic level. In other cases their best interests will be consulted, and they will receive the theoretical and practical training necessary to fit them for a new niche in the industrial life of the country.

New light on this matter of re-education would seem to differ little from that of our allies, and this is the subject of less importance in many respects. They too, retrain or re-educate their disabled soldiers, but with this difference, that in their method they dispense with the benefits which may be derived from the use of a psychopathic classification and research division.

In other words, they satisfactorily meet the demands of nearly all cases, but not quite all. They are bound, as is any system not founded upon the but a few work of science, to turn out some failures and cause discontentment and unhappiness in some homes. If this method of investigation is adopted in our re-education units, it will be neces- sary to have a general re-education, who will attempt by outside investigation to discover the amount of each man, the vocational trade, to build his abilities, his ability in the work worked out by him before the war, and any other facts which may be of use to the psychopathic research workers. An employment division will also be required to provide suitable employment for each man before he is discharged.

There is no opinion that this work of re-education should be a state rather than a national undertaking. The insane, for instance, so many of whom have sons at the front, would be on the whole a group who should be found. The leadership, especially did their usefulness bring their boys nearer home. Then too, the spirit and cooperation of the men would be raised to a higher level, could they feel that their work is done for the benefit of them, some being thousands of miles away from all which they held dear. It would relieve an already overcrowded government to provide a means whereby widespread happiness among its peoples, and the strength of a people's character and ability to endure hardships, would save of nothing experimental.

Red Cross Spending $70,000,000 in France

Major Homer Folks Directing Immense Relief Work Among Civilian Population

American Red Cross expenditures in France for work done among the civilian population now the war began, together with appropriations for the supply, transportation, women's hospital service and other bureaus covering the period to next January 1, now total more than $70,000,000. This is disclosed by the fourth instalment of the report concerning the use already made of the Red Cross War Fund, which has just been made public by the war council. Major Homer Folks, on leave as Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, has been director of the Civil Affairs Department of the Red Cross in France until the recent reorganization, when he became Director of the Department of General Relief.

Expenditures to last July 1, totalled $60,613,902, of which more than $21,000,000 was appropriated for relief work among refugees, reclaiming devastated areas, the fight against tuberculosis, operating expenses and other expenses that have to do with the civilian population. The demands for the six months from July 1 for the same purposes are placed at $54,593,000.

For the care of children in France up to July 1 $1,149,000 was expended and for the current six months the appropriation is $2,779,000. For caring for refugees, $6,218,000 has been set aside, and more than $1,000,000 has been allotted for the rehabilitation of villages.

SHELL SHOCK HOSPITAL FROM U. S. MAKING GOOD IN FRANCE

Interesting reports come from France about the work of Base Hospital No. 117, which is the hospital established by the American government for soldiers suffering from nervous and mental disorders, commonly known in military circles as “shell shock.” The physicians in charge of this hospital were recruited from the ranks of some of the best known specialists in this line in America, and the nurses were picked corps from psychiatric hospitals throughout the country. They include Miss Adele Poston, of Bloomingdale Hospital, White Plains, as Chief Nurse. The hospital is in a beautiful old Lorraine chateau, dating back to the sixteenth century.

Reports say that there is nothing about the place that suggests clinic, infirmary, or surgery. Instead, it might be a happy home, where activities of farming, amateur mechanics, and outdoor sports are carried on daily. Between thirty and forty acres of land are under cultivation; piles of stone are being broken for road mending; old tin cans and old packing boxes are being made into all sorts of useful articles and trinkets; and soldiers play base-ball and take long walks through the beautiful forests.

The facilities for psychiatric diagnosis and treatment of the men are as good as could be found in any hospital for mental diseases in civil life in this country. Many of the men are returned to military duty after a course of treatment in the institution. Those who require longer treatment are sent back to this country. The hospital has attracted much attention among the medical corps of other armies.

DR. WANG LEAVES S. C. A. A. FOR ARMY MEDICAL CORPS

Member of Tuberculosis Committee Staff Commissioned as First Lieutenant

Stanley R. Wang, M.D., a member of the staff of the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association since last March, has recently resigned to accept a commission as First Lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps. Lieut. Wang is at present stationed at one of the government hospitals in the vicinity of New York City.

In addition to other important work accomplished while with the Tuberculosis Committee, Dr. Wang made an intensive study of eighteen county tuberculosis hospitals, and the findings and recommendations of this study are at present being used as a basis for improvements in these institutions.

Children to Study Out-Doors

A fresh air class for psychically sub-normal children was opened at the Spring Street School in Amsterdam, on September 11. The equipment of cots, blankets and sweaters was furnished by the American tuberculosis committee, and the Board of Education provides the room and teacher and daily luncheons prepared in the domestic science department of the school. Klondike suits are to be furnished for the winter. The room accommodates 15 children and 14 were present at the opening, several of whom are from homes in which there is tuberculosis. In addition to a teacher who is enthusiastic about open air work, the class will have the supervision of the school physician and nurse.
HOMER FOLKS SURVEYING EUROPE FOR RED CROSS

Secretary of S. C. A. A. Gathering Data as Basis For Reconstruction Program

HOMER FOLKS, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who has been with the American Red Cross abroad since July, 1917, has been promoted from the rank of Major to Lieutenant-Colonel and designated for an important after-the-war job in Europe.

As Chairman of a special Mission of the Red Cross, he will make a survey of the European countries in which the Red Cross is operating, gathering information on which to base a comprehensive program of reconstruction. He will visit England, Italy, Greece, Belgium, Servia, Switzerland, and perhaps Russia.

In fact a cable received just as we go to press states that the mission has already made its investigation in Italy and is leaving for the Balkan States.

The Mission expects to be in Nazareth, in Palestine, on Christmas day.

It is expected that Lt.-Col. Folks will complete the survey and return to America early in the winter.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE

The following cable from Paris made public by the Red Cross in Washington, announces and describes Mr. Folks' commission as follows:

"The American Red Cross Commission for Europe has assigned Homer Folks of New York, to the task of making a survey of the European countries in which the American Red Cross is now or may soon be operating with reference to the work which the Red Cross may be called upon to do in the near future.

"Rapidly changing conditions growing out of the military and political situation may result in an even larger demand upon the American people for the assistance and succour which they can render through the Red Cross.

"Mr. Folks, who for the last fifteen months has been director of Red Cross Civilian relief work in France, will visit the Red Cross commission in England, Italy, Servia, Greece, Palestine, Belgium, Switzerland, and possibly the one in Russia. His staff will include food and health experts, photographers and interpreters.

"In each country Mr. Folks will study the effect of the war on the civilian population and the changes it has wrought in social and family life. In addition to en-

(Facing the problem of housing the returned soldiers)

Mr. Folks brings to his important mission an experience of twenty-five years in charitable and public health work in New York city.

Praise for Italy

Describing his stay in Italy Lt.-Col. Folks said:

"We are leaving Italy with an entirely new conception of Italy's participation in the great war and the magnitude of the civilian problems and other difficulties that faced her. The measure of a country's military effort must be in some degree reflected by the result and effects upon civilian life.

"With her destroyed villages and farms, with half a million refugees scattered throughout the country, with her returning prisoners coming down from Austria through every mountain pass, with the marked increase in her tuberculosis death rate and the inevitable decline in the birth rate, with her many thousands of war orphans and with her extremely complicated food situation, it is not difficult to form an adequate estimate of Italy's part in the struggle against the invader."

Mr. Folks has been abroad since July, 1917. He went to France originally as the representative of the Red Cross in the American Tuberculosis Commission, but shortly after his arrival on the continent was made Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross in France. In that capacity he has directed a vast work of relief and reconstruction among the civilian population. He built up a staff of 1,100 persons, and the enormous demands of the varied activities of his department absorbed as high as $1,700,000 in a month.

Among the various tasks to which the department has devoted itself are: Supplying food, clothing and shelter and medical care to thousands of destitute men, women and children; re-educating war cripples; providing hospitals for sick children; establishing sanatoria for the tuberculous; and conducting practical demonstrations and campaigns of public health education.

When the Red Cross scheme of organization in France was changed, last August, to combine its activities among the civil and military populations, Mr. Folks was made director of the Department of General Relief.

Mr. Folks' wife and daughters, Gertrude and Evelyn, are with him in Paris, and all are engaged in war work.

Saw Foreign Service Before

Even before the war Mr. Folks had an international reputation in public health and charitable work. In the winter of 1899-1900 he was a special agent of the United States Commission to the Paris Exposition, and assisted in securing a comprehensive exhibit of American charities. In April, 1900, at the request of General Leonard Wood, Governor of New York, he went to Cuba, where he spent six weeks in Cuba, studying the public relief of that island. He prepared a report of the situation there in 1900, creating an insular department of charities, establishing State institutions for destitute and delinquent children and the insane, and a bureau for placing children in families.

25 Years with S. C. A. A.

Mr. Folks came to the State Charities Aid Association as Secretary, 25 years ago, succeeding Gen. H. Finley now State Commissioner of Education. He has held the position since then, excepting during his term of office as Commissioner of Charities of New York City, under Mayor Seth Low, in 1902-03. He was a member of the New York City Board of Aldermen in 1888-99.

In Many National Movements

Mr. Folks has long been prominent in the field of American charity and public health, and has been called upon to assume the leadership in many organizations, state and national.

He was the First Vice-President of the White House Conference on Dependent Children of which Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, was presiding officer. He was the first layman to be elected President of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. He was president of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections in 1913, and President of the American Association for the Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality in 1915. He has served as Vice-Chairman of the National Child Labor Committee and is a member of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

Associated with Mr. Choate

As secretary and chief executive officer of the State Charities Aid Association, of which the late Joseph H. Choate was President for many years, Mr. Folks accomplished much toward the improvement of public and charitable institutions and the promotion of public health in the city and State of New York. While he was Commissioner of Charities in New York City he organized the first municipal hospital for consumptives in the United States. During the legislative session of 1905 he was instrumental in securing the passage of a bill creating a special State Probation Commission. Later he was appointed by Governor Hughes as Chairman of the Commission and continued as such until France in 1917. He was secretary of a special Public Health Commission which secured the enactment of a new Federal Public Health Education Act.

The degree of LL.D. was conferred upon Mr. Folks by Albion College (Michigan) and also by Ohio Wesleyan University. Mr. Folks is a graduate of Albion and of Harvard University. He is the author of the book, "The Care of Institute, Neglected, and Delinquent Children."
PARENTS DEAD; 5 CHILDREN WERE STARVING IN HOVEL

S. C. A. A. COUNTY AGENCIES DEPARTMENT RESCUES DYING BABY THAT AUTHORITIES HAD NEGLECTED

Talk about home missionary work!
If the County Agents for Dependent Children of the State Charities Aid Association are not home missionaries, who are?
The photograph reproduced on this page is that of a three-months-old baby, who would undoubtedly have starved to death within a few hours beside the bodies of its dead father and mother in a hovel in Ulster County, if Mrs. Jane S. Learn, of the Association's Department of County Agencies for Dependent Children had not rescued her.
The story is told in a recent issue of the Kingston Freeman. Read it and see if you do not agree that there is need of a county agent for dependent children in every county.
The article was headed "Horror Beyond Belief. Five Children Playing Around Bodies of Dead Father and Mother." The article in full follows:

"On Friday afternoon a Freeman reporter was told of conditions as found by Miss Kasson, the county agent for dependent and defective children, which it seems incredible could exist to-day in any family within the confines of civilization, let alone Christianity.

"The call for help came on Wednesday, from anonymous source from New Paltz to the office of the county agent, stating that a family of five children were in desperate circumstances in the town of Esopus. As Miss Kasson herself is ill, one of the superintendents of county agencies of New York who happened to be in the city immediately took up the case. The Woman's Motor Corps volunteered the use of an auto, and took Miss Oppenheimer, driver, the agent, Mrs. Learn, and Admiral Higginson, chairman of the county committee to investigate the cause of the call.

"The family was located in a wretched two-room shack having but one small window and one door, and being so dark that it was found necessary, in full daylight to light matches to find out who and what was in the two rooms. The discoveries were horrible beyond words, even though the family was found only seven miles from New Paltz.

"The father had died on Tuesday and the mother on Wednesday night, and the bodies were found just where the miserable parents had died. Both had died of pneumonia, and the poorman of the town of Esopus had promised to bury them this afternoon, no reason being given the reporter as to why the burial was so long deferred. There were five children in the family, ranging in age from three months to seven years. These children were almost naked, weak from hunger and in a more than deplorable condition. There was absolutely nothing to eat in the shack.

"The baby was found lying in an improvised crib and evidently had received no attention of any sort for days. In fact the filth in the place which also housed a dog, two cats, pigeons and chickens, was beyond words.

"The baby was too weak to cry and the agent doubted if it would be alive by the time they reached Kingston, where the poor little mite was taken to the Kingston City Hospital, through the commitment of the superintendent of the poor. At the last report the baby seemed to be improving, even though when it was first weighed at the hospital its weight was only six pounds, ten ounces, in spite of its three months' of miserable existence.

"One of the children was found playing alongside the body of the dead father, and all of the children seemed terrified at the sight of the visitors, being more like little wild animals than human children.

"An effort was made to find families in the immediate vicinity, where the father was known as a hard working farm hand, who would give the children temporary care. It seems beyond human belief that not one single such family could be found, just as it is beyond belief that a father and mother of five little children could have died leaving the children in a starving condition without the help of one single neighbor. Talk about missionary work! Here seems to be a prolific field for teaching a little plain Christianity, the following after Him who turned no child away but said, 'Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven!' Thank heaven for the Industrial Home! For there the four older children are now being cared for. Does the county agency for dependent and defective children in this county pay? Are its needs included in the war chest budget? Is it adequately supported considering the work it is doing? What about it, people of Ulster county?"

PLEASANT VALLEY SANATORIUM OPEN

The Pleasant Valley Sanatorium, the new Steuben County Tuberculosis Hospital at Bath, N. Y., was opened to the public on October 8. Over 500 persons from various parts of the county were present. The institution was opened a few days later for the reception of patients.
The hospital building is a concrete structure finished to represent white granite and is imposingly situated one and one-half miles north of Bath, commanding a view of Pleasant Valley, one of the most picturesque and beautiful sections of New York State. The hospital affords accommodations for 28 patients and is well fitted for the treatment of tuberculosis.
WORK OF S. C. A. A. IS PRACTICAL PATRIOTISM

BUSY YEAR OF REGULAR AND SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

Naturally an organization which has been working for nearly half a century to improve certain social conditions throughout the State becomes pretty well known to the general public.

The State Charities Aid Association was established 46 years ago, to help improve the public charitable institutions of New York State.

During these four and a half decades it has come in for a generous share of public acquaintance, recognition, and confidence.

Yet even old friends of the Association sometimes express surprise at learning of the growth of the Association in scope and extent of activities, number of departments, size of staff, cost of maintaining such an important piece of machinery for social improvement, and at the volume of concrete results.

Chief Lines of Work

Although the Association was originally organized to help better the lot of inmates of charitable institutions, its scope has broadened during the intervening years until it now includes important programs for the promotion of public health, the prevention of physical and mental diseases, and the promotion of modern child care. Its more important activities at the present time may be stated as follows:

1. Inspection and improvement of public institutions.
2. Prevention of mental disorders and defects, and helping to secure modern and adequate care for the mentally diseased and deficient.
3. Prevention of tuberculosis, and helping to secure adequate hospital and dispensary facilities.
4. Prevention of various other forms of sickness and disease and helping to secure adequate care of the sick.
5. Placing destitute children in family homes.

6. Maintaining county agents to provide for dependent children.
7. Providing situations for mothers with children and assisting them in various other ways.

Brief Facts About State Charities Aid Association

The object of the State Charities Aid Association is to improve conditions in public institutions and to promote public health and child care.

It is an incorporated body, State-wide, but without State aid.

It has 12,000 members and 2,000 volunteer visitors inspect public institutions.

The Association employs 90 persons in its central office and 20 in the field.

Staffs Comprise 110 People

The Association maintains six departments with clearly defined responsibilities and programs. Normally about ninety persons are employed in the central office, and about twenty more are residents in the counties where they work, making a total of 110.

During the past year the working force has suffered a turn-over of 90 per cent incident to the war. There have been 55 changes in the staff, occasioned by members going into various kinds of war work, here or abroad, or taking positions elsewhere as a result of war conditions.

Budget is Now $214,000 a Year

The expenses of the State Charities Aid Association are now about $214,000 a year.

January 10, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Polson, in Herkimer, an address on "Nervousness in Children" by Dr. Joseph E. Clark of Utica, Sanitary Inspector of the State Department of Health in the counties of Herkimer and Oneida.

March 14, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gilbert, in Little Falls, an address on "Prevention of Dependency and Delinquency in Children" by Dr. Florence Staunton of Utica.

May 9, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Quackenbush in Herkimer, an address on "What Has the Year's Program in National Child Welfare Accomplished?" by Miss H. Ida Curry of New York, Superintendent of the Department of County Agencies for Dependent Children of the State Charities Aid Association.

Has 13,000 Members

The Association has a membership of about 12,000 citizens, and has approximately 2,000 volunteer visitors in 45 counties, who visit institutions having 65,000 inmates, costing about $14,000,000 a year. It has 1,000 local committees in every county and most cities in the State and in many of the large towns. The Association has had effort to better the lot of the poor, the sick, the mentally impaired, and the socially lame generally, and must needs be elevated in the interests of brevity.

Engaged in War Work

During the past year the Association's activities have contributed very substantially to greater war efficiency. The Association has felt from the beginning of the war that it could perform the best service by turning vigorously the lines of work in which it was already engaged, and the wisdom of this policy has been especially justified in the results achieved by its departments working in the fields of public health and of child care. But it has also done numerous pieces of war work. These have included furnishing assistance to the Red Cross in caring for refugees from the Morgan (New Jersey) munitions explosion; helping to open, equip, and man hospitals in various parts of the State during the influenza epidemic; assisting in the Federal food conservation movement, especially in relation to institutions; loaning the services of members of its staff to aid in the military draft registration and in the first Red Cross drive; and in making investigations for the War Risk Insurance Bureau.

Keeping the Home Fires Stoked

While the Association has labored under the handicap of a smaller staff and numerous other difficulties incident to the war during the past year, it is confident that reports of its various departments for the past twelve months will be unusually interesting at this time. The work which it is doing to help keep the home fires stoked, and to strengthen the home lines against poverty, disease, and insecurity, is really a work of the utmost practical patriotism.

Loyal friends of the Association whose interest, confidence, and support have made this organization possible these many years will read the following reports with pride, and, it is hoped, renew their own interest and allegiance, and help to increase the membership and efficiency of the Association.

Finds Situations for Mothers with Children

One of the problems to which the Association turned its attention in the very early days of its existence was to helping mothers with small children whose circumstances made it necessary for them to seek employment where they could have the children with them. Out of its effort to meet this need has grown a department for providing situations for such mothers, and assisting them by medical and nursing attention and friendly interest and counsel, and in numerous other ways.

This important department, with a staff of fourteen persons, has accomplished the following results during the past year:

1. During the year the Committee has been of assistance to 1,637 women with children; 893 of these were new mothers who had not been previously assisted.

2. A total of 1,068 women were under the care of the Committee in situations, the total number of situations found for them being 821; 224 of the women were placed in positions by the Committee for the first time.

3. Provided convalescent care for many mothers leaving the maternity hospitals with very young infants, as well as for mothers already in care, needing rest and building up.

4. Has had two women physicians on its staff in the office during stated hours daily throughout the year to make systematic examinations of women placed in positions and to examine and advise other mothers applying.

5. Employed a nurse to do follow-up work with cases needing special care and attention, and also to assist the physician during office hours.

6. Has kept careful and complete records of the medical work.

7. Has had among its staff three regular visitors, one of whom devotes most of her time to court work and the other two to visiting mothers applying for situations and to making frequent visits to mothers who have already been placed. The court visitor specially looks after the interests of young unmarried mothers in securing support for their children.

8. Has made a special effort during the year to learn of the permanent and significant features of the work of the Committee since its inception in 1899, by getting in touch with the mothers who were placed during the beginning years of the Committee's work and learning of their progress and condition.

Secures Family Homes for Homeless Children

The Association's Child Placing Agency has not only done a good job of finding homes for children—having placed 2,811 children in family homes since 1899—but it is also helping substantially to establish wider public recognition of the wisdom of providing for dependent children in family homes instead of institutions, when possible. During the past year the Agency has placed 214 children in free family homes. At the end of the present fiscal year it had 1,115 children under its care. Its charges comprise orphans, foundlings, and deserted children. This large department of the Association has a staff of 34 workers.

Following is a brief summary of the past year's work:

1. Placed two hundred and fourteen children in free family homes during the year; 76 were transferred from one home to another; 229 were transferred from care; of these 129 were legally adopted. At the beginning of the fiscal year, 1,130 children were under care, at the end of the year, 1115. Of the 214 children placed in free homes during the past year, 137 or 64 per cent were received through the Association's County Agents for Dependent Children; 47 or 22 per cent from the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital; 30 or 14 per cent were received from various other sources.

2. During the year 517 applications were received; 126 of those received during the previous year were still under consideration. Of the 643 applications investigated during the year, 276 were approved, 88 were disapproved, 114 were withdrawn, 7 were suspended and 158 were partially investigated and are still under consideration.

3. Supervision has been maintained over 1,344 children, of whom 214 were placed out during the year and 1,130 were placed in previous years.

4. One hundred and fifty-nine children have been boarded in private families while they were awaiting placement for the first time or were being transferred from one free home to another. Many of these children required special physical, mental or moral treatment before they were suitable for placement in homes where they would be accepted as members of the family. There has been a doctor and psychologist on the staff to give the children the necessary examinations and re-examinations.

Wise and Kindly Care for Dependent Children

One of the most practical and important activities of the Association is aiding the duly constituted authorities in various Counties to provide wisely and well for destitute children, rescuing them from neglect and dependency, returning them to relatives when advisable, and providing family or institutional homes for them as needed. The Association through its Department of County Agencies, has organized agencies for dependent children in 21 counties of the State, and in 16 of these the work is carried on by the County Committees of the Association and in the others various co-operative arrangements have been made with the public authorities, or, the work, when fully organized, turned over to the public authorities. Important activities and accomplishments of this department during the past year were:

1. In 21 counties of the State, agencies for dependent children have been organized by the Association. In 16 of these, the work is carried on by the County Committees of the Association; in one, the County Committee acts as a general aid to the County Commissioner of Charities; in four, the agencies, after being established, have been turned over to public officials for direction.

2. Twenty-three agents are employed in these agencies, exclusive of Westchester County, where the well organized child welfare department of the county employs a staff of 28.

3. The agents employed by County Committees of the Association had under supervision 1,077 children who were dependent during the year and 1,036 who did not become public charges.

4. $8,007.88 was collected from relatives or friends toward the support of children who were in institutions or at board at public expense.

5. 449 children were prevented from becoming public charges, and 378 of these were public charges otherwise provided for by the agents.

6. 4 defective children were transferred from private to State institutions, and 113 were sent directly to State institutions from their homes.

7. A new agency for dependent children was organized in Sullivan County, an appropriation of $1,500 from the Board of Supervisors becoming available Jan. 1, 1918.

8. In a number of the counties, agents have acted as probation officers, as investigators of outdoor relief, and as investigators for the Boards of Child Welfare which grant pensions to needy widows with children. Agents also have served as investigators for Home Service Sections of the Red Cross and for the War Risk Insurance Bureau.

9. At the request of local officials, the Association helped to draft and to secure the passage of a bill creating a Chautauqua County Juvenile Court, for which court the children's agents now act as probation officers.

10. Increases in appropriations for work of county agencies were secured from the Board of Supervisors in Chautauqua, Columbia, Orange, Washington, and Yates Counties. In three counties the local committees have provided the agents with automobiles for whole or part-time use.

11. The Children's Year program of the National Council of De- fense has been actively promoted by the work of our county agents. Most of them have served as members of the committees which carried on weighing and measuring tests of children under five years of age. In Orange and Yates Counties, the agents were the chairman of these county committees; Orange County examined 6,000 children.
State-Wide Effort to Prevent Mental Diseases

The Committee on Mental Hygiene is an outgrowth of the Association's successful efforts to obtain a system of State care for the insane and to help establish modern standards of treatment, preventive work and after-care. The Committee, with a staff of seven persons, conducts an organized, State-wide campaign for the prevention of mental disorders and defects and cooperates with the public authorities in progressive measures for prompt and adequate care of the mentally ill. During the year its more important activities have been:

1. Carried on educational work throughout the State for the prevention and earlier treatment of mental disorders; 72 public meetings and lectures were held; 60 articles were furnished to newspapers; 18,433 pieces of literature distributed.

2. Made studies for and otherwise assisted the Hospital Development Commission which is formulating a comprehensive plan for enlarging the State's institutional facilities for the insane and feebleminded.

3. Continued to assist, as requested by the Governor and the State Hospital Commission, in establishing and supervising the free clinics in connection with State hospitals; 4 new clinics were opened during the year, making a total of 31 established. (Unfortunately the war has interfered with the regular activities of some of these clinics.)

4. Studied all measures before the Legislature relating to the care and treatment of the insane and feebleminded.

5. Successfully urged larger appropriations for buildings to relieve the overcrowding in State hospitals and to provide more adequately for the feebleminded and epileptic.

6. Maintained a Social Service Department which has helped 253 individuals by assisting them to proper medical treatment or toward social readjustment.

7. Conducted a farm school in connection with a psychiatric clinic to demonstrate the possibilities of early treatment with psychopathic children.

8. Kept in touch with conditions at State Hospitals and submitted recommendations to the State Hospital Commission.

9. Assisted the National Committee for Mental Hygiene in its war work program by loaning the services of its Executive Secretary for three months; also assisted in the special course at Smith College for training psychiatric social workers and afforded opportunities to two of its graduates for practical work in this office.

10. Successfully advocated the creation of a State Commission on the Feebleminded to administer the law and plan adequately for the feebleminded in this State.

The Mental Hygiene Committee works in co-operation with the State Hospital Commission, the Hospital Development Commission and the superintendents of the State institutions for mental disease and defect.

Hospitals Committee Promotes Public Health

The prevention of sickness and disease and helping to secure adequate care for the sick is the work of the Association's Committee on Hospitals. It has contributed substantially in the few years of its activity to securing better facilities for the care of the sick and the inauguration of public health measures throughout the State. Following is a brief summary of its work during the past year:

1. Assisted Dutchess County Health Association by making constructive suggestions regarding its work. Prepared and published a pamphlet on the first 100 days of the work of the Association.

2. Prepared for Westchester County a tentative draft of legislation covering the subject of parole, indeterminate sentence and the care and treatment of inmates.

3. Formulated suggestions concerning constitution and by-laws of a small hospital in New York State, covering especially the section on organization and the medical staffs of the training school for nurses. Continued to study the plans of the Westchester County Hospital group and put architect in touch with hospital experts who gave valuable suggestions and criticisms.

4. Prepared suggestive schedules of data to be included in Directory of Hospitals of New York State, to be published, if feasible, by the State Board of Charities.

5. Co-operated with the Association's County Agencies Committee and the Tuberculosis Committee in outlining comprehensive plans of social service activities in a typical county of New York State.

6. Supported a bill abolishing the use of heroin in New York State.

7. Prepared and submitted to the International Health Board a list of community hospitals in New York State.

8. Prepared a memorandum on the work of the Hospital Bureau of Standards and Supplies for the use of the Mental Hygiene Committee in its work with the State Hospital Commission.

9. The Executive Secretary continued to act as Secretary of the Mayor's Committee on Hospital and Medical Facilities up to April 22, 1918, when the work of the Committee, due to political changes, passed into other hands. In this connection he assisted in securing emergency facilities for Navy patients in civilian hospitals; secured physicians for the Mayor's Recruiting Committee; secured for New York City necessary hospital facilities; inspected the hospitals of nearby camps and arranged with various hospitals to place their clinic facilities at the disposal of the medical personnel of the Navy.

Visiting Committee Aids New York City Institutions

The public charitable and hospital institutions of Greater New York are the especial object of solicitude and helpfulness on the part of the Association's New York City Visiting Committee, which maintains a large force of volunteer visitors to inspect these institutions, to help secure and maintain proper standards of care and treatment, and to improve the surroundings and the general lot of their patients. The department cooperates in various ways with the city departments responsible for these large institutions, and aids in interpreting to the public the need of maintaining them well and the importance of securing adequate funds for the purpose. The following is a summary of this Committee's major activities during the past year:
After-Care for Cases of Infantile Paralysis

The epidemic of infantile paralysis which swept New York State in the summer of 1916 left a very large number of children crippled, deformed, and in other ways requiring medical advice and treatment, and medical and social supervision. At the request of the State Department of Health, which provided the medical care and supervision needed, the Association organized a special Committee on After Care of Infantile Paralysis, to assist in the after care work, especially along the lines of social investigation and assistance. This Committee is still carrying on this important work; it is helping to prevent many of the victims of the epidemic from becoming permanent cripples and dependents. Its work during the past year may be summarized as follows:

1. The Committee has worked as a social service department with the State Department of Health in its after-care treatment. There are now 1,789 cases under the State Department's care.

2. The Committee paid in full or in part for 396 braces, 97 corsets, and 520 other appliances; 83 appliances were repaired or modified. 1,323 Corsets or other appliances outgrown have been renovated and retailed to other patients.

3. Transportation of patients to and from clinics, lunches for patients, and the care of those on hospital leave at home has been provided. The Committee has received 5,303 letters and has replied to one-third of them.

4. At the beginning of the year, nine patients were in the New York Hospital for Ruptured and Crippled awaiting operations; 31 additional patients have since been entered by the Committee. Of these, 40 patients there have been 81 operations performed. All patients have been visited at least once a week, reports being made to their families.

5. When necessary, the Committee has brought patients to New York to have special apparatus made, and taken to the outpatient department of the hospital those needing corrective plaster work.

6. It has paid board or arranged for the payment of board for those whom it was necessary to remove to surroundings where recommendations of the orthopedic surgeons could be intelligently carried out. For two homeless crippled children permanent homes have been found, and a special fund has been raised for the care of the third.

Vigorous Campaign to Combat Tuberculosis

The Committee on Prevention of Tuberculosis, in cooperation with the State Department of Health, is engaged in organizing, co-ordinating, unifying, and giving leadership and direction to the tuberculosis movement in this State, exclusive of New York City. The Committee maintains a staff of fifteen people including two physicians. Following is a brief summary of the most important work of the Committee during the past year.

1. Assistance Organized for Discharged Tuberculous Soldiers—A cooperative program for the assistance of men discharged from military service because of tuberculosis was formulated early in 1918 by our Committee and the Bureau of Civilian Relief of the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross. This plan calls for a co-ordinated program of help, instruction and sanitary supervision for such men on the part of local health authorities, tuberculosis societies, and the local home service sections of the American Red Cross.

During the summer four field secretaries of the Committee's staff personally visited 311 of the 308 men who had been discharged from military service for this cause as of July 1 in order to ascertain at first hand how this program was really working out in practice and to initiate steps for the care of the men in cases where the local agencies had not put the plan completely into effect. Improvements in the program were found necessary and it is about to be revised in the light of experience.

2. Erection and Enlargement of Tuberculosis Hospitals.—Six new tuberculosis hospitals with a total capacity of 515 beds have been opened or approved in the counties of Chemung, Chenango, Niagara, Otsego and Steuben. Four counties—Broome, Rensselaer, Rockland, and Otsego—have construction on their hospitals well advanced and will probably be ready to receive patients early in 1919. The other counties of Chautauqua, Delaware, Columbia, and Saratoga have started construction work on their institutions. Allegany has secured a site and has plans prepared. Warren County, the approval of whose site was requested by the Supreme Court on technicalities, has renewed its application for a site hearing.

The marked increase in the cost of construction, the restrictions imposed on the Priorities Committee of War Industries Board, and the price of building materials for enterprises not considered as immediately contributing to the winning of the war, together with the limitation imposed on the flotation of bond issues by the Capital Issues Committee of the War Finance Corporation, have all been factors tending to delay progress in the establishment of hospitals by nine other counties, three of which have sites already approved and purchased, and plans for construction approved by the State Commission of Health.

Enlargement of the capacity and other important improvements have been made in five of the county hospitals.

3. Assisting Hospitals to improve their Medical and Administrative Work.—A physician with intensive training and wide experience in many varied phases of sanatorium work was employed to study how the county hospitals are functioning and to make recommendations as to their improvement. Each of the 18 county hospitals was visited and studied. His report was received by 7 of the county institutions and many of his recommendations are being carried out.

4. Record-breaking Sale of Red Cross Seals.—17,666,628 seals were sold as compared with 12,074,413 in 1916, an increase of 46%. This was the largest gross sale of seals effected in any state in the Union, and the highest percentage sale of seals effected by a state tuberculosis association in any of the states having upwards of one and a quarter million population.

5. Increased Provision for Free Expert Medical Diagnosis and Treatment.—To provide care and treatment for the large number of cases excluded from military service by the board, and for such discharged tuberculous soldiers as do not for one reason or another go to sanatoria, and to cope with the threatened increase in the prevalence of tuberculosis among the civilian population growing out of war conditions, an organization has been created under State-wide provision for free expert medical diagnosis and treatment through the medium of permanent dispensaries in the cities and occasional clinics in the rural districts. To that end, the full-time services of two physicians widely experienced in tuberculosis work were secured. Eight localities have started dispensaries and six additional ones are making the necessary arrangements for their early establishment, while occasional clinics have been held in 24 villages.

6. Twenty-three More Tuberculosis Visiting Nurses were sent into the field during the year.—These of these nurses are directly employed by boards of supervisors; nine by boards of managers of county hospitals under the law, and two by the hospitals to have one visiting nurse and eleven are employed by local or county tuberculosis committees or boards of health. These additional nurses increase to 142 the number of nurses now employed in the State, outside of New York City, who are devoted solely to the time devoted to the care of tuberculosis.

7. Five More Localities Established Open Air Schools.—Amsterdam, Dunkirk, Jamestown, Ithaca, and Letchworth have each provided open air schools for physically abnormal children, particularly for those coming from homes in which there are or have been open cases of tuberculosis. Altogether there are now 35 such schools in the State, outside of New York City.

8. Seven Health Camps Conducted this Summer and Two All Year-round Preventoria Continued.—Ithaca, Olean, Gloversville, Syracuse, Cortland and the Montgomery County Sanatorium conducted camps during the summer for physically abnormal children, while Chelsea maintained its very successful Camp Healthcare for tuberculous adults and children. Elmira and Hornell continued their all-year-round preventoria for children exposed to tuberculosis at home.

9. Co-operation with Local Committees and Other Agencies.—The Committee, in the person of a bureau and clearing house of information and assistance for the local tuberculosis committees, public health organizations, county hospitals, dispensaries and kindred agencies throughout the State, has held in the past, and will continue to hold, conferences and to meet with members of the staff and local committees, hearings have been arranged, and conducted before legislative committees, boards of supervisors, boards of education, boards of health and therapeutic committees. A new tuberculosis committee was organized in Rochester. An executive secretary with wide experience in tuberculosis work was secured under whose leadership a comprehensive anti-tuberculosis program was carried through, and a unique program undertaken to bring into the field a trained social worker to carry on an educational anti-tuberculosis campaign in the country districts. The local committee in Tuberculosis Committees to Aid in Nation-Wide Christmas Roll Call

The Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association is planning its participation in the nation-wide Red Cross Membership Drive December 16-23, which is to take the place of the usual sale of Red Cross seals this year.

The committee urges all the local tuberculosis committees and individuals interested in the sale of seals in previous years to throw even more energy and enthusiasm into making the Roll Call a memorable success.

Committees which have office forces and equipment are asked to put them at the disposal of the Red Cross chapter committees in charge of the Roll Call, and individual committee members are urged to join in pushing this Red Cross membership campaign as a part of their tuberculosis work.

Any committee, large or small, has ample inducement for local tuberculosis committees to do this: While it is expected that the tuberculosis work in New York State will receive from the grant of $2,500,000 made to the National Tuberculosis Association by the American Red Cross an amount equalling the proceeds of the sale of seals in 1917, the exact amount to be allowed to each state will not be determined in advance of the Christmas Roll Call itself.

Each state in the Roll Call will in part depend upon the degree of participation of the tuberculosis forces of that state in the Christmas Roll Call.

A membership in the Red Cross membership in New York State will entitle the tuberculosis work here to a larger appropriation.

The increased work upon tuberculosis forces due to the discovery of new cases in the examinations for the selective military service and to the return to their homes of men rejected from training camps because of tuberculosis, makes it necessary that we should endeavor to secure our full share of the national tuberculosis fund.

For Greater Efficiency

Each local committee is urged to begin at once to increase the efficiency of its organization in the interest of its future work as well as of the Christmas Roll Call. The apportionments made to various local tuberculosis committees, as to the State Committee itself, will be determined in part by the efficiency of their organized work and the budgets submitted for 1919. There must be a general strengthening of local committee organizations, systematic planning and reports, and just estimates of the work done, in order to meet the new conditions of closer financial coordination, and the added responsibility for more efficient work, wise economies and complete unity of effort.

The State organization is already assisting committees in need of help in building up their local organizations and in making plans for the future.

2,000 Women Wanted by Red Cross in France

The American Red Cross has issued an appeal for 2,000 women for summer and hospital work in France. The appeal calls for "women who are strong, cheerful, energetic, self-reliant, and typically American, capable of self-sacrifice and devotion." Applicants must be between 25 and 35 years of age. Further details, inquiry should be made at the Bureau of Personnel, American Red Cross, 44 East 23rd Street, New York City.

CITY VISITING COMMITTEE

Miss Lizzie M. Bell, who has been a member of the staff of the New York City Visiting Committee for nine years, has resigned to accept a position as secretary to Dr. C. L. Goodell, president of the Commission on Evangelism for the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Miss Elizabeth Wallace, who has been with the Visiting Committee for five years, has taken a position in the law department of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Miss Eleanor Halliday, a graduate of the New York Commercial School, has come to the committee to fill one of the vacancies.

Use Country Club for Epidemic Patients

The Caroline Country Club for social workers at Hartsdale is being utilized for the care of women and children convalescing from influenza and pneumonia.

Visiting Nurse in St. Lawrence County

The War Emergency Tuberculosis Committee of St. Lawrence County has employed Mrs. Alma L. Bennett of Sangermeire as county visiting tuberculosis nurse to take up tuberculosis work in St. Lawrence County under the State Department of Health, being engaged for the present in the influenza epidemic work in St. Lawrence County.

STATE CONFERENCE DEC. 10-12

The State Conference of Charities and Correction which was scheduled to be held in Rochester November 12-14 has been postponed on account of the influenza epidemic to December 10-12. The headquarters are at the Hotel Powers.

DR. GORRILL VICTIM OF EPIDEMIC

Dr. George W. Gorrill, who was recently appointed Superintendent of the Buffalo State Hospital to succeed Dr. Arthur W. Hurst, died of pneumonia following influenza on October 27.

Dr. Gorrill was First Assistant Physician at Buffalo at the time of his elevation to the Superintendentcy, and had formerly been on the staff of the Willard State Hospital.

Syracuse is being reorganized. A tuberculosis survey has been made and an intensive program of work is about to be started. The Buffalo Tuberculosis Association extended its work into the county and employed a nurse for the county work. The Yonkers Committee created the position of executive secretary and appointed an experienced worker to the place. A new committee was organized in Mt. Vernon and other organizations were effected in Dunkirk and Madison County.

The system of uniform records for dispensaries widely adopted in the State in 1912 was revised in the light of six years' experience. To promote uniform record keeping on the part of visiting nurses, a set of forms and blanks was prepared by a joint committee composed of representatives of the State Department of Health and our Committee and is being adopted in increasing numbers by public and private agencies employing nurses.

(10) Institutes on War-Time Tuberculosis—A series of institutes for tuberculosis workers was conducted in eight sections of the State, designed primarily to describe war-time tuberculosis problems and to suggest methods for dealing with them. There was an excellent attendance on the part of health officers, hospital managers and superintendents, dispensary physicians, visiting nurses, social workers and members of tuberculosis committees. The sessions were animated and proved an inspiration to our co-workers. Much effective publicity was secured.

(11) Legislation—The outstanding feature of the legislative work was the successful opposition that was organized to a bill proposing to repeal the mandatory clause of the present county hospital law, and to make the establishment of tuberculosis hospitals optional for counties of 35,000 population and upwards, as has been the case up to the spring of 1917. The bill failed to pass either branch of the Legislature.

A bill permitting the combination of two or more counties in the erection and operation of a joint tuberculosis hospital was amended a number of times before its passage at the request of the Department of Health and our Committee, so as not to apply to counties populous enough, and in which the disease is prevalent enough, to warrant the establishment of unit county hospitals.

The enactment of a bill was successfully urged authorizing boards of supervisors to employ county tuberculosis visiting nurses in counties where tuberculosis hospitals have not yet been established.

(12) Publicity—A State-wide press service has been maintained from the office of the Committee and the field secretaries have secured much additional publicity in the press of the localities where their activities have been carried on. The annual observance of National Tuberculosis Sunday was also organized. The formation of health leagues for personal hygiene and preventive work among children in public, parochial and private schools was promoted and fostered widely in the State.
Homer Folks Decorated By Serbian Government

Made Commander of Order of White Eagle For His Aid to Serbian Refugees in France

Word has been received from Paris that Lt.-Col. Homer Folks, who is making a survey of after-the-war conditions in Europe for the American Red Cross, has been decorated by the Serbian Government through a royal decree creating him Commander of the Order of the White Eagle.

The honor is in recognition of Col. Folks' services for Serbian refugees in France while he was Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross there. Following is a translation of the letter informing him of the decoration:

Legation Royale de Serbie en France et en Belgique

Commissaire General de Serbie pour les refugees

Mr. HOMER FOLKS,
Director of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross, Hotel Regina, Paris.

Dear Sir,

I am happy to announce to you, according to an official dispatch which I have just received from Salisbury, His Royal Highness the Prince Regent of Serbia, in deep appreciation of your devotion and the services you have rendered to the Serbian cause, and as a pledge of his gratitude, has signed a decree creating you Commander of the order of the White Eagle.

It is with pleasure that I express to you my hearty congratulations at this time, and as soon as I receive the decree with the signatures I shall have the honor of coming to see you, to present it in person and to repeat my expression of the deep regard I feel for all you have done for the Serbian people.

Please accept my sincere appreciation.

Le Commissaire General de Serbie pour les refugees Serbes en France, (Signed) S. Radovanovic.

IMPORTANT SURVEY OF CIVILIAN NEEDS

Increasing importance is attached to the survey of the conditions and needs of civilian populations in Europe at the end of the war, which is being made on behalf of the American Red Cross by Col. Folks.

It is expected that the data which he gathers in this quick trip through the various countries will be used by the Red Cross War Council in determining its further plans and appropriations for civilian work in Europe. His report also will give the people of America a first-hand picture of present conditions abroad.

With the advent of peace civilian work again becomes of primary importance, and already it is clear that there is an enormous amount to do unless a period of European war is to be succeeded by a period of European anarchy. After all, what will the war mean to the men and women of the allied nations if life is not better worth living for all classes after the war? The well-to-do and the less fortunate have a common interest in making the safe transition from the turmoil of war to the new conditions of peace.

Col. Folks' survey ought to give a most valuable and timely view of conditions among the civilian populations and afford a basis of appraisal of their needs, actual and relative.

It is expected that Col. Folks will finish the survey and report to the War Council of the American Red Cross in Washington about February 1.
ROCHESTER SETS THE PACE IN CARING FOR TUBERCULOUS SOLDIERS

General Hospital in City Opens Emergency Ward For Their Care and Treatment

SETS EXAMPLE FOR OTHER COMMUNITIES

Much interest is centering about the opening of a separate ward in the Rochester General Hospital for the care of men discharged from military service because of tuberculosis, and others rejected by local draft boards for the same reason.

Hitherto it has been the policy of most general hospitals to refuse to care for tuberculosis patients because of the communicable nature of the disease. With the return to Rochester of 24 tuberculous soldiers, and the expectation of additional ones from time to time, the problem arose last spring as to the treatment to be provided for them. The Monroe County Sanitorium was filled to capacity and had a waiting list; almost every other county hospital in the State was in the same position; private hospitals had but few vacant beds and in most instances their rates were high.

The Rochester Tuberculosis Committee placed their quandary before the Rochester General Hospital, urging the necessity for making hospital beds immediately available for these men in order to prevent their going back into their homes taking their disease along with them, ignorant of the care they should take of themselves and of the precautions necessary to prevent infection and the (Continued on page 3)
MISS MARY VIDA CLARK RESIGNS TO ENTER PRISON REFORM FIELD

Asst. Sec'y of S. C. A. A. For 23 Years Active in Improving Institutional Conditions

Miss Mary Vida Clark, who has been an Assistant Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association for 23 years, has resigned to accept the position of Executive Secretary of the Women's Prison Association, with headquarters in New York City.

Miss Clark leaves the Association after a notable career of public service. She became an assistant secretary of the Association October 1, 1895, when the staff (now numbering 110) consisted only of Mr. Homer Folks, Secretary; Miss Elizabeth W. Guy, Miss Mary R. Morse, Mrs. C. L. Cooper, and Miss Jean Loomis, all of whom, with the exception of Mrs. Cooper, are still with the organization. Miss Clark has been a member of the Association continuously since then, and for a period of two years acted as its Secretary, in the absence of Mr. Folks.

Miss Clark was educated in private schools in Springfield, Mass., her birthplace and the home of her family, and after graduating from Vassar in 1889 took a year of graduate work at Radcliffe College in economics, sociology and elementary law.

During the first fifteen years of her work with the Association she spent most of her time in connection with the visitation of State and County institutions. During 1902 and 1903 while Mr. Folks was serving as Commissioner of Public Charities of New York City, and during part of 1911 while he was on leave of absence in Europe, Miss Clark was in general charge of the work of the Association.

For several years subsequently she served as Acting Superintendent of the Association’s Child Placing Agency, and in 1914 she was Chairman of the Committee on Children of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections. Since then Miss Clark has continued her previous work in connection with institutions, as Executive Secretary of the Association’s Committee on State Charitable Institutions.

During the past year her field of work has been so largely that of the State reformatories for women and children as to serve as an incentive to more intensive work for women prisoners, reformatory and court cases, on which she is now entering.

Helped Improve Institutions

Miss Clark’s wide knowledge of public affairs and familiarity with public institutions and their administration enabled her to render very effective service in improving institutional conditions as they prevailed some years ago. She was fearless as a champion of reform, and the State institutions and their inmates. Public authorities who crossed pens with her had reason to remember that her pen was trenchant, that her knowledge of conditions which she undertook to improve was accurate, and that the Association’s efforts to improve conditions were backed by strong public sentiment.

In addition to her work with the State Charities Aid Association, Miss Clark is a member of the Board of Directors of the Board of Directors of the National Social Workers’ Exchange, a member of the Board of Managers of the Women’s University Club, of the Executive Committee of the Civic Club, and the Board of Representatives of the Associate Alumnae of Vassar College. She has been active in the Women’s Municipal League, the Women’s City Club, and other organizations.

$8,000 SAVED FOR COUNTY BY WISER CARE OF CHILDREN

How nearly $8,000 was saved to the taxpayers of Herkimer County last year by the State Charities Aid Association County Agency for Dependent Children is shown in the annual report of the County Agent, Miss Emma C. Brownell, to the Board of Supervisors.

“Someone asks,” the report says, “how was this amount of nearly $8,000 saved to the taxpayers? We are glad to answer the question. Application was made to the officials to care for 80 children during the year. After careful investigation on our part but 40 of this number were accepted for public care, the other 40 being provided for without any expense to the county. Then of the 41 children removed from institutions during the year 30 were removed by the Agency. The 40 kept off the county rolls and the 30 removed by us from institutions make a total of 76 which justly we might take the credit for, but we want to be more than fair in this matter so we will cut that number in half and ask credit for but half the number, namely 38. We are paying $4 or $4.25 per week for each child in the institution. At $4 a week, but the 38 children had bounty in an institution only one year—and they average longer than that—it would have cost the county $7,004.”

The report also shows that the number of dependent children in the county is one less than a year ago in spite of the war and the influenza epidemic that left many children orphans.

Miss Brownell points out that “the duties of the county social worker are limited only by time and strength. Never has the need been greater for the safeguarding of children. The task looms large before us. It is not merely a question of giving financial aid; it is a question of using every agency to place families, and particularly children in a normal condition. Their needs physically, mentally and spiritually should be supplied. The demand may be the opportunity, is to do what Job in the most striking of metaphors said he was: ‘I was an eye to the blind, a foot to the lame, I was the father of the poor.’

“In our last annual report we referred to the increase in delinquency among both boys and girls. This has not abated in the least and will not until parents realize their responsibility in the matter. Within eleven days six boys were sent away by but one out of committing justices. He could have sent as many more without being accused of being overzealous in the matter. There is something wrong with the parents if they can go to sleep at night knowing that their boy of nine or ten years of age is still somewhere on the village streets. Mothers whose young daughters go astray realize too late that they have utterly failed in the sacred trust committed to them. I know that I am saying nothing new, but when are we going to become aroused over existing conditions and demand that parents meet their responsibilities to their children?”

ROCHESTER SETS THE PACE IN CARING FOR TUBERCULOUS SOLDIERS

At first there was some question as to the legibility of admitting tuberculosis patients to general hospitals. However it developed that under the rules of the State Board of Charities, such a procedure is legal provided separate accommodations are made for the cases. Thereupon the Rochester General Hospital met the situation by providing an emergency ward at its institution. The Superintendent of the Monroe County Sanatorium took charge of the medical treatment of the men, and the expenses have been met by the local tuberculosis committee out of a special appropriation made by the War Chest.

The Committee reports excellent gains made in nearly all of the cases. Considerable interest has been taken in the enterprise on the part of the community in general, members of various groups taking it upon themselves to furnish comforts and delicacies to the men, as well as amusements and means of diversion.
NEW COMMISSION PLANS FOR FEEBLEMINDED

DR. JAMES Explains Need; The Future of Randall's Island

With the conclusion of the war, public interest is again being strongly centered on the imperative need of planned and additional accommodations for the feebleminded in New York State. The recently created State Commission for the Feebleminded is lustily engaged in working out a program, some of the preliminary features of which will be laid before the Legislature at the coming session. The task to which this Commission has addressed itself is one of the most important in the State at present.

The urgency of the situation lends special interest to a public statement made by the Chairman of the Commission, Dr. Walter B. James, before the New York Neurological Society. A brief account of the commission and the details of the situation.

Among other interesting suggestions which he makes is that of the possibility of the State taking over the contracts of the institution for the feebleminded on Randall's Island, which is now a New York City institution.

It was found necessary years ago to make the care of the insane a complete State function in order to secure adequate facilities and modern and uniform standards of care. There are many people who believe that provision for the feebleminded is wholly a State job and responsibility, and that the best results will never be secured until the State assumes full and complete responsibility for it. To meet this point may come up at the coming session of the Legislature.

The Present Solution

Extracts from Dr. James' paper, as published in The New York Medical Journal, follow:

"I know how easy it is for busy physicians to fail to follow the many things that are done in Albany, therefore I am going to take the liberty of stating the present situation in the question of the feebleminded as far as its relation to the State government is concerned."

"It is almost two years since the Legislature, impressed with the overcrowded condition of the State hospitals for the insane and by the general incoordinated and more or less unsatisfactory relation of the institutions for the feebleminded to the State government, created the State Hospital Development Commission, whose duty it became to study and report upon all of these institutions and the care of the insane and the feebleminded, with recommendations for such measures as might be needed in the interest of both groups of unfortunate people."

"In the course of its investigations, the commission became convinced that the institutions for the feebleminded suffered in that they lacked an adequate control commission, as in the case with the hospitals for the insane. I had the honor of being the Governor's two appointees on the Development Commission, and I was much impressed with this state of affairs."

"Accordingly the commission recommended that a new, and a new City, Commission be created by act of Legislature. There had been previously many legislative committees to study and report upon this subject, and recommendations had been made and certain voluminous reports had been published, but until this time no concrete action had been taken, looking to the actual removing of this disturbing factor."

"Realizing the inadvisability of creating any new salaried positions that could possibly be dispensed with, it was decided that the makeup of the new commission should consist of a chairman who should be a physician who had had at least ten years of actual practice of his profession, and that the other two members of the commission should consist of the Secretary of the State Board of Charities and the Fiscal Supervisor, both of whom were already receiving salaries in their respective positions, and both of whom were officially in close relation with the four institutions for the feebleminded on Randall's Island, which is now a New York City institution.

"It was found necessary years ago to make the care of the insane a complete State function in order to secure adequate facilities and modern and uniform standards of care. There are many people who believe that provision for the feebleminded is wholly a State job and responsibility, and that the best results will never be secured until the State assumes full and complete responsibility for it."

"The commission was charged with the duty of administering all laws that have to do with the feebleminded, of planning a census, and of some kind of a record of all persons who are feebleminded, of estimating the capacity of the institutions for the feebleminded to the State, and especially teachers for training colonies and clinics in connection with the institutions, making rules for the reception, treatment and training, discharge, and transfer of inmates, and of making recommendations for such new institutions as might be needed. The commission was also commanded to draw up a tentative and frame a commitment law for the feebleminded. The commission is intended to be a permanent one, and to coincide closely in its duties and powers with the State Commission for the Feebleminded on Randall's Island.

"The commission came into existence on July 1, 1918, and began at once to study all of the institutions and other State activities that are maintained for the benefit of the feebleminded.

Facilities Are Inadequate

"As you all know, there are a good many agencies throughout the State which have to do with these patients. There are four asylums in which they are maintained and which are maintained by the State, including the State institutions at Randall's Island. Then there are the ungraded classes in the public schools which are being held in various parts of the State and connected sometimes with universities or with hospitals, and in many cases with the courts, and all individually doing good work. Then there are large numbers of mentally defective persons who are located in jails, penitentiaries, reformatories, training schools, and county almshouses, and one of the most important functions of the commission will be to try to correlate these various groups of persons and to bring their diagnosis, study, and management into close relation, in order especially to avoid the expense of duplicating agencies for doing the same kind of work."

"The commission was charged with the duty of administering all laws that have to do with the feebleminded, of planning a census, and of some kind of a record of all persons who are feebleminded, of estimating the capacity of the institutions for the feebleminded to the State, and especially teachers for training colonies and clinics in connection with the institutions, making rules for the reception, treatment and training, discharge, and transfer of inmates, and of making recommendations for such new institutions as might be needed. The commission was also commanded to draw up a tentative and frame a commitment law for the feebleminded. The commission is intended to be a permanent one, and to coincide closely in its duties and powers with the State Commission for the Feebleminded on Randall's Island.

"This commission is inquiring into the matter of the feebleminded delinquents, and various private committees are doing helpful work by their investigations, so that, altogether, the subject of the feebleminded today is receiving quite a good deal of public attention and offers a fascinating field of inquiry, and probably there are few others in which there is so much to be done in the way of the discovery of new conditions and possibilities from the point of view of modern medical science.

"The work of Doctor Bernstein, of the Rome County Hospital, and of many other investigators gives promise of much more enlightenment in the mental hygiene of our Empire State.

The Prison Commission is inquiring into the matter of the feebleminded delinquents, and various private committees are doing helpful work by their investigations, so that, altogether, the subject of the feebleminded today is receiving quite a good deal of public attention and offers a fascinating field of inquiry, and probably there are few others in which there is so much to be done in the way of the discovery of new conditions and possibilities from the point of view of modern medical science.

"This work, and the imperative need of maintaining a measure of money in our armies, has made it imperative that all mentally affected be weeded out of them. This mental defectiveness and mental disease have become an acute army question, and an immense organization had to be developed to seek out, understand, and treat these cases. Much useful knowledge will doubtless be obtained in this way, and it is to be hoped that more young men will be stimulated to do something to this fascinating and modern branch of medicine. It is likely also that at the conclusion of the war a large number of our soldiers, many of whom will be turned back into civil life to occupy their time, attention and energies with the many problems thus presented.

"There are other and more difficult questions constantly arising, and on these we shall ask the advice of the profession. For instance: What is to be the ultimate fate of the feebleminded of New York City? Are they to be cared for by the city, or on Randall's Island, or should they be brought under State control? Can the city afford to maintain insane a good many years ago? There is no doubt that conditions upon Randall's Island leave much to be desired, but these are questions that can be settled only after careful study and much serious thought."
STATE TUBERCULOSIS ORGANIZATIONS TO SHARE IN RED CROSS GRANT

Amount Will Depend Partly on Their Efforts in Christmas Membership Campaign

The National Tuberculosis Association has announced its plans for the distribution of the various State tuberculosis committees of the grant of $2,500,000 made by the American Red Cross for the support of the nation-wide tuberculosis campaign for 1919.

After setting aside 10 per cent of the appropriation for the support of the National Tuberculosis Association and as a development fund, each State tuberculosis committee will be apportioned an amount equaling that received from the gross sale of Christmas Seals in 1917 in its territory.

In addition to this, each State association will receive for development a further sum depending in amount upon the number of Red Cross members enrolled in its territory during the Red Cross Christmas Roll Call in proportion to the total number enrolled throughout the United States. Approximately $450,000 will be distributed to the various States in this manner. In special cases further appropriations may be made to certain States where the conditions warrant.

The activities of the tuberculosis movement are such as to indicate need for such missionary assistance.

Under this plan the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association will receive for the tuberculosis campaign in New York State (exclusive of New York City) the sum of $33,500, representing the gross sale of seals in its territory in 1917, increased by such a part of the development fund as may be apportioned on the basis of the number of members of the Red Cross enrolled in the Christmas Roll Call.

The sum appropriated for the New York Sealer campaign will be apportioned by the State Charities Aid Association as follows: Twenty per cent of the amount received will be reserved by the Association for the maintenance of its Tuberculosis Committee's State work; the remaining 80 per cent will be apportioned to tuberculosis work in various communities in amounts corresponding as a rule to the number of Red Cross Seals sold in 1917 in those localities. In many places tuberculosis efforts are to be organized on a county basis in order to promote coordination of the activities carried on by the various public and private tuberculosis agencies within the county, to develop needed lines of work in the rural districts, and to enter upon a constructive program against social and economic conditions which make people susceptible to tuberculosis. In a number of places a full time executive secretary will be employed to develop the county work.

The tuberculosis organizations will be required to submit budgets for 1919, to follow systematic methods of accounting, and to render reports at stated intervals. All these requirements are made necessary by the conditions under which the grant made by the American Red Cross for the support of tuberculosis work throughout the country.

“Thank You, Doctor, For Making Me Better”

“Thank you, Doctor, for making me better.”

So spoke a little girl ten years old, who for years has lived in a small home for children somewhere in New York State. For seven years she has hobbled around with a crutch, her foot being badly deformed as a result of infantile paralysis. Her mother was dead, her father on his small wages could make no home for the child, so here she was facing life, seriously crippled.

Through the County Agent for Dependent Children and the Infantile Paralysis Nurse of the State Charities Aid Association, this case came to the attention of the Secretary of the Committee on the After-Care of Infantile Paralysis of the State Charities Aid Association. The father gratefully gave his consent to have the leg operated upon and the little girl was brought to the New York Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled. Dr. Royal Whitman performed two very skillful operations and now the child can get about easily with the help of a simple brace.

One of the field workers of the Infantile Paralysis Committee, who visits the hospital weekly, was with Dr. Whitman when he made a final examination of his little patient before her discharge. Looking up into his face with eyes aglow she said very simply: “Thank you, doctor, for making me better.”

The good doctor turning to the visitor said that in his long experience this was the first child who had so expressed gratitude for treatment which was always painful and often to the little one seemed cruel.

EXTENDING WORK FOR CHILDREN IN WESTCHESTER COUNTY

The Sub-Committee on Children of the Association’s Westchester County Committee has extended its interests beyond the children supported by public funds and has recently reorganized under the name of the Westchester County Children’s Association.

It will still be a sub-committee of the Westchester County Committee, but now has an autonomous form of organization. As reorganized, it will have committees on health, recreation, education, child labor, school attendance, special care and relief, family and community problems, legislation, publicity, and ways and means.

Details of the reorganization were announced at the annual meeting of the Westchester County Committee held at the home of Adolph Lewishohn in Ardsley on November 23. The constitution of the County Committee was amended to put the change in effect.

The officers of the Committee were re-elected. They are: Adolph Lewishohn, president; Rev. Richard O. Hughes, first vice-president; Miss Caroline Choate, second vice-president; George A. Hastings, secretary; James Speyer, treasurer.

THOMAS’S RESIGNATION

A LOSS TO S. C. A. A.

The resignation of J. Franklin Thomas, formerly an Assistant Secretary of the Association, and Secretary of the New York City Visiting Committee, was formally accepted at a meeting of the Board of Managers on November 18, 1918, and is now a member of the faculty of the University of Washington at Seattle. The Board of Managers adopted the following resolution, proposed by Dr. Charles Hitchcock:

“I move that the resignation of Mr. Thomas as Assistant Secretary of the Association and Secretary of the City Visiting Committee be accepted with an expression of distinct loss. Mr. Thomas during a period of about eight years watched over the welfare of the inmates and patients in the public institutions of this city. He had the happy and unusual faculty of getting on with the officials of each political party in power. His broad learning and practical judgment enabled him to make suggestions looking toward distinct improvement of the progressive knowledge of institutions combined with his genial persuasiveness paved the way for many improvements in the care and welfare of the sick and dependent thrown on public support.”

SUFFOLK COUNTY PLEASED WITH COUNTY AGENT

At the recent meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Suffolk County, the County Agent for Dependent Children, Miss Ruth Newman, was commended for her work and reappointed. She had been serving under a temporary appointment. The Board was so pleased with the value of the work done and the kind of services rendered by Miss Newman that an appropriation to carry the work throughout the whole year was made.

When the matter came up, John Clinton Robnett, the Board president, said: “If there is any way for this Board to do it, I think we [Miss Newman] should be given a vote of thanks for her fine work.”

Chairman Tiffany of the Board replied: “One of the best ways to show our approval is to reappoint her for a full year.” This was immediately done.

“We shall be made more generous by the war. It has opened our eyes, deepened our sympathies, cleared our vision, opened the way for people greater social and communal sense. We should start in a much better spirit and a better frame of mind to face our obligations. We have fought for a righteous cause and should be better qualified to exercise righteousness in other causes. We cannot forget the masses of the people, the soldiers, blind or otherwise afflicted. We shall win the war and then build up better civilizations than we have had in the past.”—Lloyd George, 1917.
CITY VISITING COMMITTEE HEAR NURSES HEADS OF BELLEVUE AND PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITALS

At the annual meeting of the New York City Visiting Committee of the State Charities Aid Society, addresses were delivered by Miss Anna C. Maxwell, Director of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital, and Miss Amy Hilliard, General Superintendent of the Bellevue Hospital Training School for Nurses.

Miss Maxwell, recently returned from France, described most interesting conditions she had observed in the war hospitals of that besieged country. During the German advance towards Paris which began in March of this year the French lost 48,000 hospital beds. Naturally, this diminished efficiency, and made the care of the sick and wounded near the front extremely difficult. The hospital units were therefore rushed in overwhelming numbers to Paris and the nearby cities. Base Hospital No. 1, as did other hospitals in and about Paris, enlarged its ward capacity by filling the old buildings with beds and putting up tents to accommodate the wounded. In this sudden enlargement it was impossible to furnish adequate equipment and personnel, so the Volunteer Services of Public Health Nurses, Nurses’ Aids and Canteen Workers from other organizations were recruited.

Miss Maxwell mentioned as being especially interesting, the hospital erected by the La Vallee Hospital of Quebec. This hospital is built of asbestos and cement, and is a model with its equipment for proper sanitation, sterilization, and the quick delivery of hot meals to the wounded. One of the hospitals in Paris at the cost of a munificent sum, this hospital at the end of the war is to be presented to the French Government.

A mobile hospital, consisting of canvas wards and connecting corridors with a capacity of 200 beds, was also described. The personnel numbered three doctors, two nurses, and forty men. The operating, sterilizing and x-ray rooms, with dispensary, kitchen and laundry, are all on motor trucks. One of the race courses near Paris, this hospital was mounted and demounted in preparation for service at the front. At the beginning it required three hours to mount and decommission the hospital. After six weeks practice it was mounted in eight hours and fifty minutes and disembarked in three hours. This hospital was sent to the front early in July and was one of the first mobile units to relieve the situation near the front.

It will be remembered that the first six hospital units sent from America were attached to the British hospitals already established in France. These units were found scattered along the coast of Normandy; their organization and morale was excellent. At Trouville, on a plateau three miles from town, the British were erecting hot hospitals for the accommodation of 40,000 wounded. There they had brought the remains of the hospitals bombed out at Etaples; and already the grounds had been laid out and gardens were in bloom. The British have provided a fund for beautifying their hospital grounds, for the chief joy of the convalescent “Tommy” is to get out-of-doors and work among the flowers. The British have lost many nurses and attendants during air raids, as that symbol of mercy, the Red Cross, which was always plainly in evidence, did not prevent the Huns from attacking those who were carrying on a work of mercy. The Canadians have provided “abris” dug forty feet below the surface for the protection of the wounded and personnel.

The nurses, on the firing line where the wounded were first cared for, were most exposed. In connection with the Third French Army Corps, a unit of women have established canteens, traveling libraries, and a large canteen in the Corps. The women of this unit did remarkably fine work, remaining back of the lines on call, usually for twenty-four hours, ready to carry the wounded from Casualty Clearing Stations to the hospitals. One of the youngest ambulance drivers, who had been in the service over two years, brought down in her ambulance, without aid, 60 wounded German soldiers.

The entertainment given by the canteen workers to maintain the morale of the soldiers in the rear, and furnish comfort to the boys in the hospitals and rest camps, has been one of the most valuable assets. While visiting one of the hospitals in this connection, General Leman, the defender and hero of Liége, came with a Belgian band of seventy-five pieces to entertain the wounded. Although he bore the marks of two and a half years' imprisonment in German camps, he spoke with great spirit and pride of the accomplishments of that small Belgian Army under its wonderful leader, King Albert of Belgium.

Miss Maxwell paid tribute to the work of the various organizations, especially the Salvation Army, whose women in their tin helmets provided hot drinks and fried doughnuts to the soldiers under fire. Needless to say, these angels worked toilingly among the boys.

In conclusion, Miss Maxwell made a strong appeal for the granting of military rank for nurses. Our Government is being requested to give nurses this rank, to improve the efficiency of their work and to offer protection to members of the Army and Navy Corps.

Major Richard Cabot of Boston, now in France, was quoted as saying that the nurses in this war have done a remarkable work. They are brought more closely in touch with the wounded than any other class of workers. Throughout the war, the work of these women has been dominated by enthusiasm and influence of the highest order. Miss Maxwell asked that every member of the Committee appeal to a Congressman to support a bill aimed for military rank for the nurses of the Corps.

The City Visiting Committee was also most interested in having the papers of the Army and Navy Corps. This appeal was invested by Miss Hilliard, Director of the Bellevue Training School for Nurses, the ways in which their visitors might be of service to Bellevue and Allied Hospitals.

Officers for 1919 were elected as follows:

For President, Mr. Homer Folks.
For Treasurer, Mr. M. N. Buckner.
For Elecive Members, Miss Helen Butler, Mrs. Win. K. Draper, Mrs. Arthur Swan.

S. C. A. A. COUNTY AGENT CHANGES GANG INTO CLUB

A State Charities Aid Association County Agent for Dependent Children must be a very versatile person, for she is called upon to be several kinds of social workers. Small rural communities and small villages have most of the social needs of the city in varying degrees, but unlike the city, a country town has not the necessary organizations to supply the needs. The children's agent, therefore, is not only called upon to care for individual cases of dependency and delinquency, but must create the machinery for preventing dependency and delinquency.

Recently a State Charities Aid Association Agent heard that juvenile delinquency was rampant in one of the villages in her county. Upon investigation, the trouble was traced to one gang of small boys, who had probably been inspired in their search for thrilling experiences by the deeds of movie heroes.

An old shanty provided excellent headquarters for the gang's feasts, held after successful raids on the chicken coops, turkey yards and rabbit ranches of the town. It also provided a good place for experiments in electricity, such as the electrocuting of cats and other animals. These experiments proved so interesting that one of the gang put an electric wire on his own back fence, which gave him a jolt and a neighbor a shock the next time they leaned on the fence for their usual peaceful gossip.

The boys had been once before the police justice, but they had not for some time been very alarming, for the justice had told them solemnly to "close the shanty and go out and be good boys." The gang had continued to go jointly on its own way.

There being no organization to meet the boys' need, the children's agent had to create one. Community interest was aroused. Business men were persuaded to provide funds and a committee to supervise activities; rooms with heat and light have been secured; boxing gloves and games provided, and many kinds of good times are now being planned.

Who Will Give This Girl a Home and Education?

Margaret is 14 years old. She is bright, but not very far advanced in grades as her school has been very irregular. She looks very much like a child, and is somewhat underrated. Margaret is competent in practical ways and does well whatever work she is given. She has a pleasant personality, and is a good-natured capable little girl. Being a very willing child and a good worker, she might easily be taken advantage of and overworked. The Child Placing Agency of the Association is looking for a family who will wish to take Margaret into their home, and how her to spend most of her time on school work, who will allow her plenty of play time and give her only such household responsibilities as an older daughter would have.
MENTAL HYGIENE LECTURES IN BOARD OF EDUCATION COURSE

"Shellshock," "Why Be Feebleminded?" and "Mental Health Fortifications," the Subjects
Is the Kaiser Insane?

George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Mental Hygiene of the State Charities Aid Association, gave the first of a series of lectures on Mental Hygiene in the New York City Board of Education course at Public School 101 on November 20. His subject was "Shell Shock Over There and Over Here."

Miss Ethel A. Prine, Secretary of the State Commission on the Feebleminded, lectured December 4 on "Why Be Feebleminded?"

Everett S. Elwood, Secretary of the State Hospital Commission, lectured December 18 on "Mental Health Fortifications."

In his lecture Mr. Hastings said that it would be interesting if experts could definitely establish whether, as is generally believed, the Kaiser of Germany was insane, and that if this was found to be true he would stand the ages. Extracts from the lecture follow:

IS THE KAISER INSANE?

"After a fitting punishment has been determined and applied for the arch-criminal of the ages, William Huber-Kollers, it would be illuminating to have a commission of competent mental experts test his sanity and definitely establish whether, as many believe, the former ruler of Germany was and is insane. There are many reasons for believing that 'the Kaiser' may be an exact description of the ex-evil and not a mere epithet. There are abundant symptoms in his personality and acts to raise a strong presumption of a disordered mind. It would be interesting to the whole world, including the millions of his subjects who have followed his blind leadership, if specialists could study his family history, his personality and his public acts and utterances and definitely determine whether it really was a madman who undertook to plunge civilisation in the mire.

"Surely his surpassing egotism, his paranoid belief that all the world was conspiring for the economic wreck of Germany, his conceit of grandeur as to his present and coming power, his 'Me und Gott' beliefs, his assumption of a direct commission from the Almighty—these all are characteristic of the diseased mental states so well known to specialists not to arouse suspicions which have long since crystallized into a general public belief that the Kaiser was insane.

"If the cringing object who has slunk away into the depression of exile is afflicted with any one of a half dozen well-known and easily ascertainable forms of mental disease—if the whole world was actually plunged into war by an insane man—the definite establishment of the fact would furnish the greatest mental hygiene lesson of all history. It would stand throughout the ages as a terrible example of the danger to the whole community which lurks in a psychopathic mental disease. No more striking illustration could ever be made of the need of a world-wide extension of the mental hygiene program among such headway in this country, and which has for its object a better understanding of the essential facts about mental diseases and public insistence upon the more general establishment of facilities for prompt discovery and early treatment of mental disorders."

DR. CARLISLE IN THE ARMY

Dr. Chester L. Carlisle, Superintendent of the Division of Mental Defect and Delinquency of the State Board of Charities and Director of its Bureau of Analysis and Investigation, has been commissioned a captain in the medical corps of the United States Army. Before going to the State Board Dr. Carlisle was a member of the staff of the Kings Park Hospital for many years.

MADISON COUNTY PROVIDES $2,000 FOR A VISITING NURSE

Such Nurses "Doing More Than Anyone Else to Make Future Generations Strong and Healthy"

The Madison County Board of Supervisors, at its meeting on November 21, appropriated $2,000 for the salary and traveling expenses of a county tuberculosis visiting nurse.

After a year during which the Madison County Tuberculosis Committee engaged a visiting nurse. During the year just passed 174 cases were discovered, in addition to many suspects and others showing a predisposition to disease. The County Committee, deeply impressed with the conditions disclosed, urged upon the Board of Supervisors the importance of having the work continue. This is assured by the recent action of the board. The County Committee has agreed to meet any expenses in excess of the $2,000 that may be necessary during the coming year, satisfactorily to carry on the work, for, as the chairman of the County Committee writes, his group is impressed with the fact that nurses doing this kind of work "are doing more to make future generations strong and healthy through right living than anyone else."

MISS CORNELL, COLUMBIA COUNTY NURSE, VICTIM OF EPIDEMIC

Tuberculosis workers throughout the State have learned with deep regret of the death of Miss Mary B. Cornell, R. N., tuberculosis visiting nurse in Columbia County. Miss Cornell died on October 29, from pneumonia, following influenza.

She was a woman of excellent training and wide and varied experience in tuberculosis visiting nurse work in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, as well as in New York. She was a graduate of the Henry Phipps Institute for Tuberculosis in Philadelphia, and had held positions as assistant superintendent of nurses at the New York Training Institute for Tuberculosis and chief nurse, Wyoming Valley Tuberculosis Association, Wilkesbarre, Pa.; as chief nurse, Pennsylvania State Tuberculosis Dispensary, Norristown, Pa.; as tuberculosis nurse and executive secretary, Cohoes, N. Y., Tuberculosis Committee; as head nurse and matron, Municipal Tuberculosis and Isolation Hospitals, Trenton, N.J.; and as tuberculosis nurse of Columbia County, N. Y.

In her position Miss Cornell had shown remarkable strength and insight into human nature, and such a fund of sympathetic understanding that she invariably won the confidence and respect of her patients, of physicians, public officials, and private citizens. The Association's Tuberculosis Committee and its Columbia County branch feel that the tuberculosis movement has lost a most valuable and devoted worker.
STATE HOSPITALS SUBSCRIBE OVER A MILLION TO LIBERTY LOANS

This showing reflects great credit upon the hospitals. In addition to aiding in the loans, all of the hospitals have done their bit in war work of various other kinds, including buying of War Savings and Thrift stamps, and aiding in Red Cross work.

Death Claims Major Straight In Important War Work Abroad

Major Willard D. Straight, aged 38, prominent New York financier and diplomat, died of pneumonia in Paris on November 30.

Major Straight went to France in December, 1917, to direct the administration of the U. S. War Risk Insurance Act with the American Expeditionary Force. When he completed that task he entered the General Staff College. He had since been serving with the combat troops until the suspension of hostilities when, at the request of Col. Edward M. House, he was attached to the house mission in Paris.

Major Straight's death cuts short a career of unusual brilliance and usefulness. He is survived by his widow, Dorothy Whitney Straight, and by three children. Mrs. Straight is a member of the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association.

Joint letters explaining the possibilities of cooperation between the American Red Cross and local tuberculosis organizations have been sent to the chairmen both of the local Red Cross Christmas Roll Call committees and of local tuberculosis organizations. Field workers of the State Tuberculosis Committee are visiting the local tuberculosis committees stimulating their interest in the Christmas Roll Call and securing their vital cooperation with the Red Cross.

RABBI WISE GOES TO EUROPE

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Rabbi of the Free Synagogue, accompanied by Mrs. Wise, has gone to Europe to remain until January.

"No matter how mean or hideous a man's life is, the first thing is to understand him; to make out just how it is that our common human nature has come to work out in this way. This method calls for patience, insight, and discernment, and in the end will be more effective than any other. Then there is the necessity of rendering help without stint, whether in money or in other ways. All these things we must do, and do them well."—Charles Horton Cooley.

STAFF OF BUREAU VENEREAL DISEASES

Permanent appointments to the staff of the Bureau of Venerable Diseases of the New York State Department of Health have recently been made, as follows: Joseph S. Lawrence, M. D., chief; Edward H. Marsh, M. D., consultant; Walter S. Goodale, M. D., hospital and dispensary inspector and organizer; F. S. Honinger, M. D., lecturer on social diseases; Maud Garvey, supervising nurse and social worker.

"What charitable visitors need more than money in their purse is faith in their poor, humility of spirit, jolly comradeship, sheer psychic power to carry conviction for a right and sensible action against every argument sprouting from discouragement or bitterness or suspicion, from ignorance or stubbornness or weakness."—Edward T. GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH in his inaugural message to the Legislature stressed several of the human and humane activities of government in this State.

He devoted considerable attention to such subjects as public health, health and maternity insurance, care of the insane and feebleminded, child labor, prison reform, and conditions under which wage-earners live and labor.

Reconstruction, too, came in for detailed consideration; and the Governor announced that he would appoint a Reconstruction Commission to deal with after-the-war problems.

Need More Room In the Hospitals For The Insane

The Governor directed the attention of the Legislature to the extremely serious overcrowding in the State hospitals for the insane and asked for "earnest and careful consideration" of the problem of providing more adequately for the mentally ill. On this point he said:

"The State hospitals for the insane have suffered severely during the war. The great demand for physicians and nurses in the military service has taken away one-third of the men from the medical staffs and hundreds of nurses and ward attendants. The war stopped all deprivations of the alien insane with the result that approximately a thousand alien patients are being cared for by the State of New York.

"Shell shock and other forms of nervous and mental disease have already brought several hundred New York State soldiers to the State hospitals for treatment, and will bring hundreds more.

"The rapidly rising cost of building materials and labor has made new construction increasingly difficult during the last two or three years, consequently very little progress has been made in reducing the serious overcrowding which on Sept. 1, 1918, amounted to 22.8 per cent., or 6,546 patients in excess of the total certified capacity of the thirteen State hospitals for the insane. The increase in patients averages approximately 900 per year. The heaviest overcrowding and the greatest need for additional accommodations are in the metropolitan district. These facts and figures were supplied to me by the State Hospital Commission. I give them to you for your earnest and careful consideration."

"Care of Feebleminded Is of Immense Importance"

The gravity of the problem of feeblemindedness was emphasized, and the Legislature was informed that the State Commission on the Feebleminded is making a program to deal with it. The Governor said in this connection:

"There was created by Chapter 197 of the Laws of 1918 a State Commission on Feeblemindedness. Section 485 detailed the general powers and duties of the commission. Among other things, it provides that they shall prepare and recommend to the Legislature on or before February 1, 1919, a general commission law for feebleminded persons in the State of New York. The whole question of the care and treatment of the feebleminded is of immense importance to the State of New York.

"I would ask a careful study by your body of the act creating the commission as well as its report when received, and I will communicate with you in greater detail after February 1."

Protection For Workers, Women and Children

The Executive said that "of particular importance to the State is the necessity of adequate protection for workers, especially the women and children.  * I recommend the passage of legislation to lift labor out of the category of commodities or articles of commerce."

"The labor law should be extended to protect women who have entered new industries because of the war.  * When and wherever children are permitted to work they should be surrounded with adequate protection as to hours and tasks which they may be permitted to undertake. No children should be allowed in any occupation injurious to health, and the provision requiring physical examination of children should be extended to all employment in which they are engaged. ** *

"I recommend the establishment of a minimum wage commission of three members.  * Acting through wage boards appointed for a given industry the commission should have the power to fix the living wage to be paid to women and minors. ** *

"Nothing is so devastating in the life of the worker's family as sickness. The incapacity of the wage earner because of illness is one of the underlying causes of poverty. Now the worker and his family bear this burden alone. The enactment of a health insurance law, which I strongly urge, will remedy this unfair condition. Moreover, it will result in greater precautions being taken to prevent illness and disease, and to eliminate the consequent waste to the State therefrom. It will lead to the adoption of wider measures of public health and hygiene, and it will operate to conserve human life. The large percentage of physical disability disclosed by the draft shows how deeply concerned the State is in this matter.

"Proper provision also should be made for maternity insurance in the interest of prosperity and of the race. Other countries are far ahead of us. Our experience has demonstrated the practical value and economic soundness of these principles."

On the subject of prison reform the Governor said:

"Recent years have marked the dawn of a brighter day for the administration of our prisons and the proper treatment of convicts. The man power of our jails and prisons, however, is still kept under an iron discipline which degrades and tends to destroy the very manhood it is our intention to restore. I will have a thorough investigation made of the correctional administration of the State, and that which needs remedial legislation I will communicate at a later date."

Commission To Study Reconstruction Problems

The Governor said the State would be confronted by two classes of reconstruction problems. The first, of a temporary nature, calling for immediate measures of relief, such as the heroic injured, the impoverished family and the orphan child. Also the question of unemployment. The second class of problems, permanent in nature, will include, he said, equalization of taxation, provision for production and distribution of necessities of life so that prices will be lower, "more universal laws for the protection of the health, comfort, welfare and efficiency of our people," and questions of finance, banking, employment, women in industry, etc.

Santa Claus and "The Ginger-Bread Man"

On Christmas afternoon the Child-Placing Department of the State Charities Aid Association entertained at a Christmas party for 125 orphan children who are awaiting placement in foster homes, and a few older girls who still regard the Association as their best friend though they have now reached the age where they have joined the ranks of wage earners. The sense of gratitude and helpfulness of some of the latter group was expressed in the remarks of one girl, now a nurse's aid, who said, "You do so much work for children that I'm going to bring in some gingerbread I bought last summer and let you use it for some one who needs it."

A moving picture man had kindly consented to act as Santa Claus and as he pranced in, calling a few of the children by name, distributing gifts from around a big gleaming Christmas tree, he would have been difficult to picture a more ecstatic group of children.

As one visitor remarked, "I thought I should see some forlorn little waifs, and they aren't that at all—they look just like a healthy, happy crowd of village children."

A Mother Goose entertainment, "The Gingerbread Man," was given by a professional entertainer whose tact called forth from the children participation in the songs and verses so that it became their own entertainment instead of one for them.

Ice cream and cake were served afterwards by the visitors and some of the older girls, and the expressions on the faces of children, boarding-mothers and visitors alike bespoke the complete success of the afternoon.

MISS COUTU NEW NURSE FOR COLUMBIA COUNTY

Miss Laura H. Coutu, R. N., of Cohoes, N. Y., has been appointed by the Columbia County Board of Supervisors as county tuberculosis visiting nurse to succeed Miss Mary B. Cornell, deceased.

Miss Coutu, who is working under the joint supervision of the Board of Supervisors and of the Tuberculosis Committee of the Columbia County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association, took up her duties the first week in January.

RESOLUTION ON MAJOR STRAIGHT'S DEATH

The Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association has adopted the following resolution on the recent death of Major William Straight in Paris:

"Resolved, That the Managers of the State Charities Aid Association express to Mrs. Straight their warmest sympathy in her bereavement. The fine abilities of Major Straight, his unusual knowledge of world-wide conditions, and tireless efforts to improve them, make his death a great loss to the whole country. They cannot but hope that the remembrance of all the good he was able to accomplish in his short life will be some consolation to Mrs. Straight."

STATE HOSPITALS CROWDED 6,400 BEYOND CAPACITY

WAR OVER, BUILDING PROGRAM SHOULD BE PUSHED

The overcrowding in the State hospitals for mental diseases is disclosed as extremely serious in the annual report of the State Charities Aid Association to the State Hospital Commission, recently published.

The report shows that the 13 civil hospitals have a normal capacity of 28,997 patients, but at the end of the fiscal year they were actually housing 35,462 persons. This is an overcrowding of 6,465 patients, or 22.3 per cent.

The overcrowding has been around the 6,000 mark for a number of years. The excess was actually realized by only 443 beds during the past fiscal year, the overcrowding on the same date a year previous having been 6,908.

At the present time the hospitals have about 100 cases of insane soldiers from the enlisted forces of this State.

War Made Situation Worse

Activities of the Hospital Development Commission which is studying and planning systematically for more accommodations affords hope for relief from the deplorable congestion. In fact, on the Commission's recommendation, the last legislation appropriated and Governor Whitman approved appropriations of $1,224,300 for hospital construction, but the shortage of labor and the high cost and scarcity of materials due to the war made it impossible to do much building. The Association urges that with the end of the war the State's building program be pushed vigorously. The appropriations now available should be supplemented by additional sums at the earliest possible moment.

The State is now committed to the following new building projects: The erection of a new State hospital at Redwood, on the outskirts of Brooklyn; the erection of a State hospital at Marcy, near Utica; the establishment of a psychopathic hospital in New York City; and the establishment of another new State hospital in the metropolitan district to take the place of the abandoned Mohican institution. The need in the metropolitan district is especially serious, amounting to about half of the overcrowding in the entire State.

On the whole, the State does a very good job of caring for its insane. Its State hospitals are well administered and the standards of care and treatment are high. The weak spot is that the institutions are so lamentably overcrowded, and have been, for a number of years. This has come about largely because of a policy of false economy on the part of the State, and the State is now reaping the fruits of such a policy in the accumulated volume and seriousness of the problem. As a matter of fact, not a single new State hospital has been built since 1898, in spite of the fact that the increase in the State's insane population is about 900 each year.

The Hospital Development Commission has recommended that the State relieve the situation by starting on a ten-year building program, sticking to it by making substantial appropriations each year. If followed, this plan holds promise eventually of clearing up a situation which has become so serious as to threaten the standards of care and the welfare of the patients in the hospitals, as well as to reflect upon the good name of the State.

$14,000 FOR S. C. A. A.
Needy Cases From N. Y. Times Appeal

The New York Times did a valuable public service again this year by publishing holiday appeals for the "100 Neediest Cases" of New York philanthropic and charitable organizations.

In spite of the innumerable wartime demands upon the charity of the public during the past year, the response to this holiday appeal for home charities has again been generous.

Of the "100 Neediest Cases," 26 were those of the State Charities Aid Association. The contributions received to date for these 26 cases amount to $1,132—approximately $400 more than last year.

The State Charities Aid Association's appeals were made on behalf of homeless children and mothers with babies. Individual, concrete descriptions were given in each case telling the reader clearly the needs of the case described and how the needs might be met. The amount received was more than enough to provide for the particular 26 cases listed and is applied to other needy cases with the consent of the donors.

Through the generosity of these holiday givers, little children and sisters have been kept together, homeless and deserted mothers are being helped with the care of their children, and special boarding care has been secured for delicate and handicapped children. Many children have been supplied with outfits of clothing, and innumerable kindly, human services made possible.

Gifts in Checks and Pennies

Contributions came in large checks and in pennies—from individuals, clubs, classes in schools and business houses. They came from all over the United States. "I give this as a thank offering for having saved my wife from a wonderful surgeon," wrote one of the givers.

"This money is given in memory of a nephew killed in France," another explained.

May this bit help to spread a little cheer on Christmas day.

Another contributor wrote: "You are helping the 'cases' and you are also helping the public in this splendid work."

An interesting sidelight on how some out-of-town people regard New York City was furnished by one woman who said she had always shopped in New York and came here to attend theater and entertainment. But until she saw the appeal for the '100 Neediest Cases' it had never occurred to her that there was anything but a gay side to New York. She was acquainted only with Fifth Avenue and Broadway. On reading some of the appeals she contributed liberally to The Times Fund, as she felt, to pay New York for some of the pleasures it had given her by helping some of its needy people.

The State Charities Aid Association is deeply grateful to The New York Times for the publicity given to its cases. At the last meeting of its Board of Managers, a resolution was passed expressing the Association's "high appreciation for the publication of the 'Hundred Neediest Cases.'" The public is always quickly responsive when it can realize a real need. Under ordinary circumstances it is difficult to acquaint the public with the misfortunes of an individual, but when descriptions are presented collectively, as is done by The Times, attention is attracted, and the response is immediate and generous.

VISITING NURSES FOR BINGHAMTON, LITTLE FALLS AND SARATOGA SPRINGS

The city of Binghamton and the local tuberculosis committee of Little Falls and of Saratoga Springs have appointed Miss Margaret Davis, Mrs. Ada Mauer and Miss Elsie Paro, respectively, as local tuberculosis visiting nurses. Each of these nurses will visit and instruct tuberculosis cases in their homes, assist suitable cases to secure hospital and sanatorium treatment, and assist at the clinics held at their local dispensaries. Mrs. Mauer of Little Falls, will, in addition, devote half-time to general visiting nursing.
OFIER NEW PROGRAM TO DEAL WITH FEEBLEMINDEDNESS

DEFINITE RECOMMENDATIONS FROM CHAIRMAN OF STATE COMMISSION

THERE is widespread public interest in the program which the State Commission on the Feebleminded is formulating to deal with the problem of the feebleminded in this State.

This Commission came into existence only last July but has already planned a line of action for the immediate future which holds forth promise of relief from the haphazard and inadequate methods of the past.

Some details of the plan are disclosed in an address prepared for the State Conference of Charities and Correction in Rochester, by Dr. Walter H. James, Chairman of the Commission. Dr. James was not able to attend the Conference and the address was read by the president, Charles H. Johnson. The main points in the program are as follows:

DEFINITE RECOMMENDATIONS MADE

1. Increasing institutional accommodations for the feebleminded by hastening the completion of Letchworth Village and by expanding the Newark State Custodial Asylum for Feebleminded Women.

2. The establishment of a State-wide system of mental hygiene clinics in cooperation with the State hospitals, schools, courts, prisons, charitable institutions, and health departments.

3. The mental classification of all backward and defective children in the public schools, and appropriate training and treatment for them in special classes or in State institutions.

4. Changing the name of the State custodial to State Training Schools, and making them such in fact.

5. Dividing the State into three districts to facilitate commitment and increased institutional provision.

6. The establishment of training schools for mental attendants at institutions for defectives.

7. Enactment of a comprehensive Mental Deficiency Act and a uniform commitment law.

8. Continued research and study in the hope of finding better and less expensive methods.

The Seriousness of the Problem

"It is natural," wrote Dr. James, "that Feeblemindedness should be discussed at this Conference of Charities and Correction, for it lies at the very heart of the various problems that confront this meeting. We are coming more and more to realize that among the sources of dependency and delinquency no other is more important than mental defectiveness.

"The seriousness of the situation is fully appreciated by the courts and other penal agencies, by the schools, by those concerned in the care of the insane, and especially perhaps by those charged with the conduct of the State's charities. The creation of the State Hospital Development Commission and the passage of the bill creating a special Commission for the Feebleminded, mark a serious desire on the part of the State authorities to meet this problem as far as present human knowledge will allow."

Mental Health Neglected

"Public Health means, and has always meant body health, and Departments of Health the world over, bury themselves only with this. No public machinery concerns itself with the mental health of the people, not only with lack of knowledge, not only with lack of science, but observation and common sense tell us that mental irregularities constitute one of the most serious public problems, and modern science promises us that they will in large measure yield if only we will apply modern methods of study to them.

"The birth of mental hygiene is one of the most stirring as well as promising social events of the century. The achievements of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene and of the allied activities of the State Charities Aid Association and other organizations, cannot be too highly commended."

A Definite Program Proposed

"As a diagnosis without treatment is always a disheartening situation, I should like, if you will allow me, to outline to you very briefly our tentative program which the new Commission for the Feebleminded offers, aiming towards the increase of care for the feebleminded and of dependency and delinquency therefrom.

"We feel that many years ago it was officially decided by the State that the mental training of its citizens was of such importance that it could not be neglected, and that accordingly it was paid for by general taxation but for the benefit of those who were not able to provide for their children—when this epoch making step was taken—one of the greatest social experiments in history as well as the most striking experiment in mental hygiene, was tried and made a success.

"The Lockwood Law with its special consideration for backward and unfortunate children, as well as for the steps that have been taken from time to time toward the intervention on the part of the State in the mental and bodily care of the children in the public schools, are all logical and perfectly inevitable steps in the working out of the plan for securing the education of all the children.

"As every school, of necessity, takes cognizance of the behavior of its pupils and takes steps to better or perfect this, so training in behavior becomes necessary one of the functions of every public school department.

Feeblemindedness a Problem of Behavior

"When we first come into close contact with the real problem of the feebleminded, when we take note of the toll of misery and wretchedness it causes in families throughout the land, and when we study the population of the large institutions for feebleminded, the reformatories and penal institutions containing so many defective delinquents, we are struck with the fact that the problem of feeblemindedness is in reality a problem of behavior.

"I leave it to you to form the group of idiots and low grade imbeciles, who are practically entirely helpless and who being without mental control over themselves, must be cared for during their whole lives, lives which are usually short ones, either in their homes or institutions; and whom the term mental defectives, I mean the higher grade or morons, who constitute the real social puzzle. These are a menace to society and are a source of expense to the State, solely by reason of defects in their behavior and not essentially, through defects in their minds. A well behaved moron, and there are many, is a useful person and can and often does fill an important place in his own circle. A great deal of the work of the world does not require a high grade of intelligence or imagination, and under competent guidance these individuals are holding their places in industry as well as in the family."

"There seems to be no doubt that in the great majority of the high-grade feebleminded, the character of the early associations and training may determine the difference between good behavior and bad behavior, morality and immorality and in general those characteristics which make a person either welcome or unwelcome in society.

"The passage of the Lockwood Law marks the first step towards the recognition and adequate treatment of all backward children in the public schools.

Importance of Special Classes in Schools

The State Commission for the Feebleminded believes that this is one of the most important avenues of attack that has ever been opened up, and urges the adoption of certain principles by which it stands ready to give its earnest aid.

"The ungraded classes in the public schools promise to give the best of teaching to those required to be graded. Such pupils are found to be mentally defective, that the home surroundings be looked into, and where these are found to be such as naturally lead towards an undesirable mental trend, that is, towards bad behavior or immorality, that these children, wherever possible, be removed and put in an environment the best that can be secured for them, and for this purpose the State School for the Feebleminded at Syracuse is well adapted."

State Should be Districted

"Second, we call attention to the need of districting the State with reference to the feebleminded. At present the individual institutions serve no definite regions of the State. In other words, there is no districting system in operation. This is a decided disadvantage and we therefore urge that the State be divided in three districts, excluding the metropolitan area, a western district with Newark as its administrative center, a northern containing the Rome Asylum, and a southern with Letchworth Village. This system would act as in the case of the State hospitals for the insane. Each district would operate as a unit throughout which its institutions function as a center to minister to its needs as far as mental defectiveness is concerned.

"The present plan of establishing colonies, or of sending patients to various institutions of the State many miles from the parent institution, is undesirable, rendering adequate supervision and control impossible.

“WIN THE CHILD,” IS KEYNOTE OF PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS AT THE STATE CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES

“Win the child” was the keynote of a notable address by Charles H. Johnson, President of the State Conference of Charities and Secretary of the State Board of Charities, at the recent annual conference in Rochester—the “Victory Conference.”

The conference was aroused to enthusiasm by the patriotic fervor of the address, its vision of the social needs of the hour, and the program proposed for future.

The supreme social need of the hour, he declared, is to purify the child through a program which has for its objective a fair chance for every child.

“A community program which will carry into the future the social lessons learned from the war must to a large extent be a children’s program and thus incidentally affect the whole social structure,” he said. Germany was changed in about two generations from a peaceful people to a warrior people by the Prussianization of the children. It took about forty years for the community to change the type of a nation. Is not the same plan advisable in creating a clean and wholesome people? There are sufficient reasons for urging a children’s program at this time and every experienced worker here will sustain the contention that it is only by the proper training of the child and the adjustment of its environment to-day that the social burdens of to-morrow are to be minimized.

“This is the Victory Conference and this is the Children’s Year. Shall we combine the two and from the lessons learned in the accomplishment of the great victory win a children’s program that shall make possible within a generation or two a nation of strong, happy, well-adjusted patriotic citizens because from their childhood they had been taught to know nothing else? Such a program might contain the following details:

The Child Needs a Healthy Childhood

“(1) The community should seek to make possible a healthy childhood. Without being irrevocable one may say to-day that malnutrition and sickness can no longer be considered wholly as divine blessings or punishment. The slogan of the New York State Department of Health is that ‘health is purchasable’ and this would seem to be borne out by the relation on the infant mortality curve to health precautions, and by the fact that the children of the poor are those who have had the most slender hold on life. Dr. Josephine Baker has stated that war has always called attention to the need of care for children. A war crisis certainly reveals how effective or ineffective has been our physical care of the children. Previous to the present war out of every hundred boys between the ages of thirteen and twenty, applied for enlistment in the army 78 per cent were rejected. When the standards were somewhat lowered in the spring of this year, it was necessary to have immediate need it was still necessary to exclude between forty and fifty per cent of the men who came before the draft boards or in the cantonments. This great army of rejected, competent to do 80% of any service, are victims of disability due to disease, deformity and bad habits, largely the result of ignorance and neglect.

Safar to be a Soldier than a Baby

“Three hundred thousand children under school age die annually in the United States. It has been estimated that less than two men of every hundred were killed in warfare, but in the United States twelve babies of every hundred under one year of age die every year. It is six times safer to be a soldier in the trenches of Europe than it is to be a baby in the cradle of the modern industrial civilization.”

“These figures indicate a terrific waste of human life and also a lack of care and development in those who survive.

For a Happy Childhood

“(2) The program should also plan for a happy childhood. It is not necessary in this present to emphasize the justice of the child’s demand for opportunity to play. It is the right of every child of the community to provide ample opportunities for such exercise. This community function should be left to the states, left to some private organization to provide. It is distinctly a community matter and the provision of play space and play direction is a legitimate part of the public or municipal activity.

An Educational Childhood

“(3) An educational childhood. No lesson of the war has come to us with greater effect than that which has shown the weakness of our educational system. While there was a great need for competent mechanics, scientific and technical workers in the suddenly huge and growing industries, it was found that even by raising the price of labor, the workers could not be had. Most of the schools had not attempted to train its pupils in the manual arts. As late as 1914 it was proved to most of the schools in any large city pupils could graduate without having had any instruction or development of manual skill. In illiteracy it was found that 7.7 per cent of the people of the United States ten years of age and over were illiterate; that is, they were unable to write their own language. The army was compelled to abandon its practice of rejection of all illiterate candidates for admission. Thousands of men were enlisted who could not understand the English language and it was necessary to remove them from the fighting units and place them in some labor and non-fighting military and organize schools for teaching conversational English. So long was the delay caused by such an arrangement that it was predicted that many of these aliens under officers who could speak their own language.

Every school program in the United States should provide for the acquisition by every pupil of some kind and some degree of manual skill. Times of peace require this personal equipment as well as times of war. It is not fair that the reserve of stock should be compelled to learn the English language. Educational programs should be built to fit the needs of all the children of all the people and not for the comparatively few to whom they have ministered in the past. The social and industrial organizations which have built up this country are familiar with the fact that a child must be in and for democracy, for, as Superintendent Claxton has said, ‘America is not part of the great world that has become interested in the future generation. The grammar school, the high school, the evening school, the continuation school, the school for backward or defective children must each seek to gauge its curriculum so that the future youth of America shall have opportunity to study individual and community health, command of fundamental processes, worthwhile membership, vocational guidance, citizenship in a democratic and worthy use of leisure, all to the limit of their individual ability.

A Protected Childhood

“(4) There is need also a protected childhood. The lesson has been brought to us very forcibly from our allied countries that as soon as the legal and industrial restrictions which have been built up about the children are removed or even lowered, there is an immediate spoliation of childhood. Laws protecting children have been built up only after years of effort and experience. Child labor has been abundantly proven to be detrimental to the child and the child’s future. Educational laws requiring certain educational standards and requirements cannot be tampered with and yet be safe to the community.

There are immorals who believe that the child’s life and every protection should be thrown on this future citizen that it may enter into life with a clean mind as well as a clean body. The men who came to the rescue the last few months were young men, but it was a distracting fact that a large number of them were found to be already physically tainted by reason of immorality. The fear that the army was going to bring in Europe a dangerous and critical exposure was dissipated when it was discovered that 96% of those who were suffering from syphilis were found in their own community. The community had been more dangerous to them than their camp life could be.

The Patriot Child

“(5) A patriotic childhood. It has been a shock to our national pride to find that in a period of great stress so many who were supposedly loyal were found to be disloyal in word and act. It has been well said ‘Our un-Americanized aliens are the greatest weakness in our chain and this weakness has been emphasized in Europe and need against us.’ There has not been in some quarters the response to the war call that might be expected. We have been too generous and lenient with foreign-speaking peoples and have sought the shelter of this country. Children have grown up more familiar with the language, customs and ideals of old countries than with the land of their birth or future. People have lived in this country of their adoption for a generation or more and neglected to even learn the name of an address in the language of their adopted coun

"State Training Schools"

The present institutional situation in the State is unsatisfactory. The four asylums are operated under different names, with different locations, and with varying staffs and management. Each one has its own unique characteristics, which make it difficult to draw a comprehensive mental deficiency law to cover all the cases. Such a law should be comprehensive enough to cover all the institutions in the State, and it should be enacted before the present one expires. The new law should be based on the principles of the State's Insanity Law, one of the wisest laws of the kind in existence and the result of about 30 years' practical experience, and it should be complete and comprehensive. The law should cover all the institutions with certain exceptions in regard to Syracuse, adapting it to the special purpose above described.

"Such a law and such a commitment section are in preparation by the Commission and will be ready for presentation to the Legislature at the approaching session."
Feebleminded Youth Kills Boy With A Butcher Knife

Up-State Tragedy Shows Need of Separate Institution For Defective Delinquents

The brutal murder at Onondaga Hill, N. Y., of a five-year-old boy by an escaped inmate of the Syracuse State Institution for Feebleminded Children again emphasizes the need of an institution where the criminal feebleminded can be confined apart from other defectives.

On December 16, Norman Kehfus, five years old, was found murdered and buried under a pile of leaves in some woods on his father's farm. Later, Chester Simpson, 19 years old, an escaped inmate of the Syracuse institution, was taken into custody and confessed to stabbing the boy with a butcher knife. It developed that he had escaped from the institution several times, the last time being on November 4. The usual efforts were made to apprehend him, but without avail. The next the institution heard of him was in connection with the murder.

The institution has since reported to the State Commission on the Feebleminded that it has twelve other boys who are defective delinquents—potential criminals for whom institutional care of a different sort is necessary but which cannot be supplied at present because the State has no proper institutions for them. The Syracuse Institution is a school for the training of feebleminded children. It never was intended to be a custodial asylum or prison. And the other State institutions for the feebleminded are not in a position to care for the more dangerous types of defectives.

Though most of the feebleminded are child-like and simple in their motives, yet a few have a criminal bias.

Unquestionably, one of the most imperative needs for those feebleminded who are criminally inclined is a separate institution where defective delinquents can be committed. They constitute a dangerous group, always potentially criminal even though they may not have actually committed a crime thus far.

The need of such an institution has repeatedly been urged upon the State authorities, and the Prisons*Department and the Hospital Development Commission at the present time working on a scheme to reclassify the inmates of various State institutions and to provide for some of the State's defective delinquents in separate institutions to be set aside for them. A wise plan to provide for all dangerous defectives cannot be carried out too soon. The need of it is imperative. It is regrettable that it could not have been done long ago and thus minimize the danger of such shocking tragedies as this one up-State.

6 COUNTIES INCREASE APPROPRIATIONS FOR WORK OF CHILDREN'S AGENCIES

Systematic Care of Dependent Children In Saving Taxpayers' Money

State Charities Aid Association County Agencies for Dependent Children are coming into increasing favor with public officials and taxpayers. The acid test of experience is showing that these agencies not only provide better and wiser care for children dependent upon the county and the various towns, but also do it at less cost. The saving to the counties has been proved to be very substantial.

So satisfactory has been the work during the past year that six counties have increased their appropriation for the support of agencies during the coming year. These counties are as follows:

Chemung Supervisors Praise Work

The Chemung County Board of Supervisors voted its increase after a special committee had carefully examined into the methods and results. The committee reported, among other things:

"that they have carefully investigated the work that has been done since this Agency has been established in this County, and find that during the past six years a very great saving has been made to the taxpayers each year, and the work being done is very important and essential."

Notable Conference On Tuberculosis Work

Measures and Methods for Post-Bellum Campaign Considered at Pittsburgh

The fifth North Atlantic Conference on Tuberculosis, held at Pittsburgh, Pa., December 5-7, was one of the most interesting thus far held. Its prime purpose was to give the tuberculosis work in the states of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia an opportunity to discuss tuberculosis problems, measures and methods relating to the war and the reconstruction period after the war.

PROBATION SYSTEM INCREASING SUCCESS IN N.Y. STATE

2124 PROBATIONERS ENTERED MILITARY SERVICE DURING THE WAR

"The eleventh annual Conference of Probation Officers, held this week in New York State, which convened in Rochester December 9 and 10, was the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of the kind as yet held," according to Carie L. Chute, Secretary of the State Probation Commission.

The annual address delivered by the President of the State Probation Commission, Frank E. Wadg, disclosed a remarkable growth in the use of the probation system. Mr. Wade stated that 14,566 persons are on probation in this State, which is 430 more than the total number of persons in all of the State's probation institutions in the State—14,136! This is the first time in the history of the State that the number of probationers has exceeded the number of prisoners.

Another interesting announcement made by President Wadg was that 2,124 of the persons who were on probation are known to have entered military service during the war.

Bright Future for Probation

Mr. Chute writes, "was progress and confidence in the future of this work." In the war and reconstruction were discussed jointly by representatives of the Home Service Section of the Red Cross and the state Probation Officers. It was agreed that the war had increased the problems of the probation officers. The number of adults on probation in spite of decreased court arrangements was generally reported to have been in no wise decreased by the war, while many cities reported an increase in juvenile delinquency. The discussion, however, brought out that in spite of increased problems for the courts and probation officers caused by the war, there has been more than doubled by the splendid assistance and cooperation given by many individuals and organizations, particularly the Home Service Sections of the Red Cross. Under the war impetus efficient volunteer forces have been trained and organized. Through our effort to aid Unemployed and homeless, the war crisis not only "Age in soldiers' families was awakened, but interest and a desire to help all the poor and unfortunate and to improve social conditions everywhere. This awakened interest in practical social work accorded to one group of social workers, the probation officers, has by no means ceased with the war. The paid and volunteer workers employed by the Red Cross and other societies are with us to-day and are anxious to continue their service.

Co-operation Is Vital Need

"On the other hand, the probation officers and other regular workers have learned through the wartime experience how, where and when to cooperate. Consequently all the work is now and promises in the future to be more productive, for, as pointed out by Benjamin Alm of Buffalo and many of the probation officers, successful probation work depends upon cooperation.

Another source of encouragement and confidence for all of us was the manifest growth and increased strength of the probation staff of the State and the better standards of work which are being attained. Two of the county probation officers, J. L. Dearlove of Steuben County, and Mrs. Carrie R. Cornell of Madison County, illustrated concrete descriptions of their work how the other workers of the probation service may be extended to the rural districts and how good, effective probation work can be carried on in small towns and villages.

More People on Probation Than In Prison Now

There are more people on probation in New York State than there are persons in prison.

The number of probationers is 14,566.

The number of prisoners is 14,136.

A total of 2,124 probationers entered military service during the war.

The significant facts about the growth of the system in this State were brought out at the annual conference of probation officers in Rochester December 10.

Furthermore it was shown that probation pays in dollars and cents as well as in good citizenship. The entire cost of the probation system last year was $206,976. The average number of persons on probation throughout the year was 9,434 and the average per capita cost of a year's probation was thus $21.94. This is about one-tenth of the cost of a year's imprisonment.

"This is a comparatively new feature in the development of probation work in this State. In fact, there is comparatively little of it done in the entire country, great as is the need for it. These workers showed how it could be developed by correspondence, by visits to the local justices, by investigating and reporting on conditions and utilizing the help of all the workers who could be obtained in the rural districts. A report was received from the Commissioner of Probation that all the probation officers have been employed to do rural probation work exclusively. Excellent results may be expected in this much neglected field.

Mental Clinics Are Urged

"Psychopathic clinics for the courts were almost unanimously voted a necessity for successful probation work. It was felt by the probation officers that they should not be general clinics, divorced from the work of the courts, but should be closely connected with them, and should command the services of not only medical and psychological experts, but men trained in sociology and acquainted with the peculiar problems of defective delinquents."

WESTCHESTER COUNTY CHILDREN'S ASSOCIATION

The Sub-committee on Children of the Westchester County Children's Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, which has been of such invaluable assistance to the Department of Charities and Corrections, has now become the Westchester County Children's Association.

The committee has had such a rapid growth and has had so many new pieces of work pressed upon it in the local child welfare field that it found its machinery of organization inadequate. With the consent of the parent organization, therefore, the committee adopted a new constitution on December 6 which provides standing committees on Health and Recreation, Child Labor and School Attendance, Education, Family and Community Problems, and special Care and Relief.

The Association hopes that by providing a standing committee organization it can to study and take up actively any child welfare problem, any part of the county so desiring, may have assistance in solving its local child welfare problems. Officers of the new Association have been elected as follows: Mrs. George B. Barron of Rye, President; Mrs. V. Everett MacKean of Scarborough, First Vice-President; Mrs. Herbert L. Baker of Mount Vernon, Second Vice-President; Mrs. Herbert McClory of Peekskill, Secretary, and Mr. James Speyer of Scarborough, Treasurer.

SITE IS APPROVED FOR WARREN COUNTY HOSPITAL

The site for the Warren County Tuberculosis Hospital, known as the Codner-Titus property in Queensbury, has been approved by the State Commission of Health and the town health officer. A special committee has been appointed by the Board of Supervisors to take steps to acquire the property. It consists of Fred Rogers, Chairman, North River; Fred R. Smith, Bolton Landing; Fred P. Hawley, Lake George; Timothy W. Healey and Stewart MacFarland, Glen Falls.

NEW SUPT. OF WELFARE BOARD

Miss Josephine Webster, Superintendent of the Dutchess County Board of Child Welfare, has resigned, her resignation to take effect January 1. She is succeeded by Miss Cornelia Oughlett, who has had experience in County Agency work in Ulster, Livingston and Montgomery counties. Miss Oughlett's successor in Montgomery County is Miss Maud Hopkins whose social work experience has been at Sleighton Farm, Pa., and in community organizations on Long Island.

MAJOR PARSONS, MEDICAL INSPECTOR

Major Frederick W. Parsons, formerly First Assistant Physician in the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie, but for some time past with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, has been appointed Medical Inspector of the State Hospital Commission and will assume that post on his return from abroad.
$2,500,000 FIGHT AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS IN U.S.

NEW METHODS DEVISED TO MAKE EVERY CENT COUNT

TO PUSH CAMPAIGN IN COUNTRY DISTRICTS IN THIS STATE

The tuberculosis movement in common with a host of other activities and enterprises is going through a process of reconstruction. Methods and procedures are being revised and the necessary organization and adjustments made to carry them into effect.

Just at this juncture, the National Tuberculosis Association has bound the various state tuberculosis associations by very definite covenants to promote the wisest and most effective use of the funds which it is apportioning to the various state organizations from the grant of $2,500,000 made by the War Council of the American Red Cross in support of the nation-wide tuberculosis campaign. In doing this the National Association is responding to obligations laid upon it by the American Red Cross in making the grant. The state tuberculosis associations in turn are required by the National Association to meet certain standards. Consequently certain readjustments and reorganization are not only advisable and opportune but also immediately necessary.

CAMPAIGN ELEVEN YEARS OLD HERE

The State Charities Aid Association's Tuberculosis Committee, which is the State Association in this State, has been at work for eleven years. During that period, it has formed local tuberculosis organizations, chiefly in the cities, whose major activities have been directed toward measures for the discovery, care, and treatment of the sick. Substantially every city in the State now has one or more visiting nurses to discover, advise, and assist the cases and to help the local health officer enforce the tuberculosis law. Many cities have dispensaries, and some have open-air schools for building up the vitality of children exposed to the disease at home.

Nearly every county has, or shortly will have, an institution as the nucleus of a program of hospital care for the tuberculous. These various measures have been provided by the local public and private tuberculosis agencies, working to some extent in cooperation with one another, but in very few localities operating under a unified program of work.

As stated before, the local tuberculosis organizations have been formed chiefly on a city basis. In the nature of the case, it had to be done in that way. There was more tuberculosis in the cities; their peoples could be more easily reached and aroused to its dangers; and they were more ready to meet the needs of the situation.

COUNTRY DISTRICTS NEED ATTENTION

The result is that in many counties the outlying country sections have not shared fully in the benefits of the tuberculosis campaign. The beneficent services of the tuberculosis visiting nurse and dispensary and the better enforcement of tuberculosis laws have not reached into the rural districts where the need for them and for education in personal hygiene among both the native and foreign born rural population is as great as in the crowded city districts. This has been strikingly demonstrated through the work which the Association's Tuberculosis Committee has had to do for soldiers living in the rural districts who have been discharged from (Continued on page 2)

Military service on account of tuberculosis.

More than that, most of the measures thus far developed are limited in their preventive possibilities. They aim mainly to prevent the infection of the well by the sick. That is important, of course. But the time has come when the other phases of preventive work—those which are directed also against the economic and social factors which render persons susceptible to tuberculosis such as bad housing, impure milk, child labor, unsanitary working conditions, and the like—should receive more attention. Local tuberculosis committees should actively assist and cooperate with existing local agencies in such lines of work or take the initiative in promoting the formation of such agencies where they do not now exist.

THREE CHIEF NEEDS IN THIS STATE

The three outstanding needs of the tuberculosis work in this State as disclosed by this survey of the situation are:

(1) The coordination of the various services performed in a given community by local public and private tuberculosis agencies.

Social Workers No Longer Impractical "Highbrows"

In the course of the presidential address at the recent State Conference of Charities and Correction, Charles H. Johnson said:

"This is the first American war since social work and social workers have become a definite task and a definite group, and the trained and technical skill which this group has brought to the assistance of the governments of this and the allied countries have demonstrated the value to the community and to the nation of this particular type of training and service. The terms, 'social work' and 'social workers,' can no longer be scoffed at by the so-called 'practical man' and considered as academic, theoretic, impractical, or 'highbrowish.' Our fellow workers who have given to the government the benefit of their social training and knowledge have made a contribution which must be given great weight when all the factors that made for winning the war are to be given their due consideration."

THE YEAR'S WORK IN MENTAL HYGIENE.

The annual report of the Mental Hygiene Committee, the report of the State Charities Aid Association to the State Hospital Commission, and the report of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness have been published in one volume, entitled "The Year's Work in Mental Hygiene."
MRS. POWERS APPOINTED TO SUCCEED MISS TAFT
Graduate of Smith College Course Heads Social Service Department of Mental Hygiene Committee

Mrs. Margaret J. Powers of New York has been appointed Director of the Social Service Department of the Mental Hygiene Committee, to succeed Miss Jessie Taft, who resigned on October 1 to accept a position with the Philadelphia Children's Bureau.

Mrs. Powers is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and has had considerable experience in social work. She has conducted classes in an industrial school in St. Paul, Minn., and at the Henry Street Settlement in New York City. She was a member of the staff of the Placing-Out Department of the State Charities Aid Association for some months, and later served as Secretary of the Educational Section of the Women's City Club of New York. Last summer she took the course of training for psychiatric social workers, given under the auspices of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene and the Boston Psychopathic Hospital at Smith College. She has since been doing the practical work required by the course in the Mental Hygiene Committee here, completing it on January 1.

The Social Service Department does an important work in connection with the Cornell Clinic of Psychopathology, and in assisting New York City social agencies and the New York State hospitals in furthering social activities with preventive and after-care cases where mental factors are involved.

Miss Isabel D. Hoes, an experienced case worker, is Assistant Director of the Department. Miss Alice E. Humphrey, also of the Smith College course, has been on the staff until recently, getting the practical experience required by the course. She has now been assigned to a position as social worker in the U. S. Government Psychiatric Hospital at Pittsburgh.

GOVERNOR'S COMMISSION ON RECONSTRUCTION COMMENCES WORK

The special Reconstruction Commission appointed by Governor Smith to deal with after-the-war problems in this State, met for organization in New York City on January 24 and chose the following officers: Abraham L. Elkus, chairman; Gerrit Y. Lansing of Albany, Sarah A. Conboy and Judge W. M. K. Oloott, vice-chairmen; Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, secretary, and Charles H. Sabin, treasurer. Mr. Elkus named eleven sub-committees. With their chairmen they are as follows:

Taxation and Retrenchments—George Foster Peabody of Saratoga.
Housing—John Allen Hamilton of Buffalo.
Unemployment—John C. Remmick.
Education, including Military Training and Americanization—Prof. Felix Adler.
Food production and redistribution and resettlement of the land—Thomas V. Patterson.
Inquiry into war emergency measures with a view to repealing those no longer necessary—Judge W. M. K. Oloott.
Public Health—Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin.
Business Readjustment—Alfred J. Johnson.
Labor problems, industry strikes and incidental legislation—V. Everett Macy.
Bill drafting, Richard N. Newcombe.
Mobilization of soldiers and sailors—Mrs. William S. Good.
WAR ACCELERATES CAMPAIGN TO COMBAT TUBERCULOSIS

Big Responsibilities and Opportunities In Campaign Against Tuberculosis in 1919

War Has Revealed More Definite Information About Prevalence of Disease and Spurred Workers in Fight to Control It

Workers in the campaign against tuberculosis have entered the year 1919 with a distinct sense of anticipation of great opportunities and serious responsibilities.

The war, with its immense machinery for the physical examination of the nation as to fitness for military service, revealed in striking fashion the magnitude of the tuberculosis problem.

Hospital beds were rejected by the local draft boards in the country at large because of tuberculosis cannot be stated as yet, but, judging from records that are being examined at the Surgeon General's office in Washington, the number will probably run close to 100,000. In addition to this group, more than 20,000 men who are rejected as fit for service by the medical officers at recruiting stations or draft boards, were subsequently found to be tuberculous by boards of specialists stationed at the various military camps and training stations.

To meet this problem which is of equal magnitude among the civilian population, the Association's Tuberculosis Committee has formulated a program of work to which it will address itself vigorously with the help of an enlarged staff and with an enlarged budget. The main features of this program of work are as follows:

1. Help provide expert service and assistance for discharged and rejected tuberculous soldiers through employment of supervising nurses.
2. Urge establishment of tuberculosis hospitals in 11 counties and the enlargement of such hospitals in 6 counties.
3. Encourage the employment of county visiting nurses where they are not already required by law.
4. Assist in the establishment of free tuberculosis dispensaries in 18 cities not now served.
5. Provide friendly assistance to those who are on the road.
6. Increase the usefulness of the social work of the tuberculosis associations.
7. Urge local Boards of Education to establish and standardize fresh air classes for children exposed to tuberculosis at home.
9. Continue to stimulate and encourage prompt reporting of all cases of tuberculosis.
10. Extend tuberculosis activities into rural sections of 12 counties by organization of tuberculosis associations on a country-wide basis.
11. Assist and promote agencies doing prevention work along the lines of housing, impure milk, child labor, insanitary working conditions and the like.

A fuller statement of the work now underway in a number of counties to change the basis of local tuberculosis association work from a city and village basis to a county basis is given in another article of this issue.

LARGER STAFF FOR S. C. A. A. COMMITTEE ON TUBERCULOSIS

Two Special Agents, a Publicity Man and a Fresh-air Class Worker Added for Extra Work

Several additions have been made to the executive staff of the Association's Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis since the first of the year as a result of the increased program of work planned for 1919. In carrying out the plans in regard to the organization of tuberculosis work in ten or twelve counties of this State it has been necessary to employ two special agents, Mrs. Arabelle Mc K. Hadley and Miss Ida May Robbins.

Mrs. Hadley has had a wide experience in organizing work, having been a member of the staff of the Ohio State Consumers' League with headquarters at Cleveland. She has also had considerable experience in industrial sanitation with the Health Department of that city. She has been employed as women's editor of The Cleveland Plain Dealer. Mrs. Hadley has been spending several days in Utica and Oneida County preparing for the reorganization work which is to take place there.

Miss Robbins has also had considerable experience in the way of organizing and advisory supervision. She is a registered nurse and was employed by the New York City Health Department in various organizing capacities for several years. During the past year she has served as supervisor of the women's division of the E. L. du Pont de Nemours & Co., of Parlin, N. J., one of the largest munition plants in the East. Miss Robbins' activities in this work make her especially well fitted for organizing campaigns in various upstate counties.

Andrew G. Johnson, just back from active Y. M. C. A. work in France, has been appointed to specialize in establishing fresh-air classes for children who are exposed to tuberculosis in their homes. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Teachers' College of Columbia University and has had tuberculosis experience in Massachusetts. His duties will also be to stimulate improvement in the standards of administration in the existing fresh-air classes.

Morris Babcock, a former newspaper man of northern New York, has been appointed to the position of publicity secretary of the Committee. Mr. Babcock, whose home was in Gouverneur, N. Y., is a graduate of St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y., and had several years' experience in newspaper editorial work with the York Press Corporation in Gouverneur previous to his enlistment in the U. S. Army. He has just been discharged from an artillery officers' training camp, Fort Monroe, Virginia. Mr. Babcock's newspaper training includes reporterial work and editing and writing of special articles. He also had some experience in bank advertising, having prepared special copy and written advertising material for the American Bankers' Service, Inc.

DR. WANG RETURNS FROM ARMY TO S. C. A. A. TUBERCULOSIS WORK

Dr. Stanley L. Wang, sanatorium advisor of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee, has returned to his duties, having recently been discharged from military service. Dr. Wang left his work with the Tuberculosis Committee last July to accept a commission as First Lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the U. S. Army. Because of his exceptional training and experience in the diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis and in sanatorium administration he was assigned to the Government Tuberculosis Sanatorium Service, being stationed successively at the large sanatoria at New Haven, Conn., at Azalea, N. C., and Denver, Col. Later Dr. Wang was selected to specialize in the care of children and received splendid experience in this specialty at the U. S. General Hospital No. 1 in New York City, where he was associated with Dr. Louis Gregory Cole, one of the foremost specialists in X-ray work in this country.

SYRACUSE ELKS LEND AID IN FIGHT AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

An extensive program of assistance is being planned for the Onondaga County Tuberculosis Sanatorium by the Syracuse Lodge of Elks according to an all-the-year-round schedule announced by the Governor Chairman of the Elks' Committee on the Welfare and Comfort of the Patients at the institution. This program includes the solicitation of money, clothing, especially of a kind fitted for outdoor living and sleeping, books, magazines, newspapers and entertainments. Assistance is also being solicited by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Elks. The Syracuse Lodge will urge the enlargement of the sanatorium and the addition of a children's pavilion.
A HELPING HAND FOR TUBERCULOUS MEN DISCHARGED FROM U. S. ARMY

S. C. A. A. Committee Aiding Soldiers to Get Advice, Assistance and Treatment

Men discharged from military service on account of tuberculosis who reside in this State, outside of New York City, are being visited for the second time by the staff of four public health nurses employed by the Association's Tuberculosis Committee.

The names and addresses of the men were furnished to the Committee by the Surgeon General's office at Washington, D. C., through the National Tuberculosis Association. It has been the practice of the Committee to report the cases to the local tuberculosis organizations with the request that they furnish such additional service in the way of advice, instruction, assistance, care and treatment as may be necessary to safeguard what the local health authorities are providing, such authorities having been previously notified of the cases by the State Department of Health.

550 CASES ARE KNOWN

Altogether 511 cases have been reported to the Tuberculosis Committee by the Surgeon General's office, 50 have been reported from different sources. Considerable difficulty has been experienced, however, in locating the men. Some of them did not come back to their homes but went instead to munitions plants, ship yards; still others have responded to the lure of the large cities; and a few others have drifted out to the health resorts of the western and southwestern states. Through the most patient, painstaking efforts on the part of nurses, both local and State, and through repeated follow-up correspondence on the part of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee, with local authorities, draft boards, relatives, home service sections of the American Red Cross and the like, 400 men have been located. 30 cases have been referred to local nurses too recently for the receipt of reports thereof. Fifty-seven, unlike the well-known number of varieties, were not to be found anywhere. For the men who have been located a great deal of real help has been provided. Some have had arrangements made for their prompt admittance into the State Sanatorium at Raybrook or into local tuberculosis institutions; others have been brought under the care of dispensaries and matrons; and many of the men have been assisted in making applications for compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act.

This work for the tuberculous soldiers has afforded an excellent opportunity for the local nurses to consult with the State nurses employed by the Association's Tuberculosis Committee, each of which has had the experience in her field. The local nurses seem to appreciate the chance to compare notes, exchange experiences, to find out what nurses in other localities are doing; and to receive the stimulus that comes from consultation with one who comes in from the outside and therefore refers the monotony of the daily routine and the isolation which many of the nurses complain of who are stationed in remote districts.

MODERN HEALTH CRUSADERS TO HAVE STATE TOURNAMENT

Tuberculosis Movement Selects Novel Method to Help Children Acquire Health Habits

Aiming to supply the child with a motive for patient work in acquiring health habits, the Tuberculosis Committee of this Association has organized a State Tournament of Modern Health Crusaders among school children of every section of up-state New York.

The method of instruction differs from those heretofore attempted in that it appeals successfully to the child's play instinct, whereas the abstract advantages of health and hygiene as usually taught in the physiology class do not generally call the child to action.

The movement is being carried on throughout the United States by the National Tuberculosis Association, and the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association has been designated to take charge of the work in New York State. The Junior Red Cross is cooperating in carrying out the unique competition which began on February 9 and is to extend over a period of fifteen weeks. Trophies are to be awarded to the winning teams and individuals.

Local committees in various sections of New York State have organized local tournaments to compete for prizes in their districts, and at the same time the State Committee will conduct a State Tournament, the rules, conditions and time of which will be the same as those of the National Tournament and pennants will be awarded by the State Committee.

Rochester on the Job Early

Even before the campaign opened interest was developing in every section of the State. The proposal of Rochester to take up the movement and place it on a county-wide basis so that it is to be effective in every elementary school in Monroe County. Communications from rural schools and various sections are enthusiastic over the plans and cooperation from that source seems assured. In addition to this the local chapters of the American Red Cross and tuberculosis committees throughout the State are pledging their support.

How the Child Is Reached

According to the method of instruction the child keeps a daily record of health habits which include: Washing the hands before each meal, washing the face and neck and cleaning the finger nails each day; keeping fingers, pencils and everything that might be unclean out of the mouth and nose; drinking a glass of milk before each meal and before going to bed and drinking no tea or coffee or any other injurious drinks; brushing teeth thoroughly in the morning and evening; taking or more slow, deep breaths of fresh air each day, playing outdoors or with the windows open more than thirty minutes each day; sleeping ten or more hours each night with the windows open; sitting and standing straight, eating slowly and attending the toilet and each need of the body at its regular time; keeping neat and cheerful constantly and being helpful to others; taking a bath at least twice a week.

MISS EMILY SMITH WED

Miss Emily Wybrants Smith, a member of the staff of the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association for the past five years, was married on January 15 to William T. Orr, of Brooklyn, who is the Far Eastern representative of a large importing firm in Manhattan. The marriage took place at the bride's home, 482 Jefferson Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss Smith came to the Tuberculosis Committee first as secretary to the head of the department and won promotion to the position of field secretary and later to that of assistant secretary of the Committee. She was particularly successful as an organizer and became well-known all over the State in this work.

After the marriage, the couple left for the Pacific coast and from there sailed for the Orient. Their first destination is Kobe, Japan. They expect later to go to China and the Philippines and return to this country via Honolulu. They will reside in Brooklyn.

DR. PILGRIM HEADS CONFERENCE

SECTION ON MENTAL HYGIENE

Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim was recently elected Chairman of the section on mental hygiene and mental defect of the State Conference of Charities and Corrections for next year, succeeding Senator Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Hospital Development Commission.

DR. FINLEY TO PALESTINE AGAIN

The Board of Regents has voted another leave of absence of three months to Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, to permit him to return to Palestine to complete his Red Cross work there. Dr. Finley was at one time Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association.

ANNUAL MEETING OF S. C. A. A.

The annual meeting of the State Charities Aid Association will be held in the office at 106 State St., 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, February 19, following the monthly meeting of the Board of Managers held at 3:30.
MENTAL HYGIENE
LECTURES INTEREST
Y. M. C. A. MEN

Average Audience of 200 at 23d
Street Association Hears Practical Problems Discussed

Unusual interest has been shown this season and last in the series of lectures on mental hygiene delivered at the 23rd Street Y. M. C. A., in New York City, by LeRoy E. Bowman, formerly assistant secretary of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness and now with the War Camp Community Service. The subject of these lectures has been: "What is Sound Mental Health?" "How the Brain Sometimes Goes Wrong," "Mental Disease—How Avoided," "What Causes Mental Defect," "Do Alcohol and Syphilis Cause Insanity and Feeblemindedness?" "What Determines our Thoughts?" "How to Become Personally More Efficient." "How to Exert Leadership."

Through these lectures a new approach to the average citizen has been established. It has been found that the ordinary man can be heartily interested in the subject of mental hygiene not only from the standpoint of public policy and state expenditure but from a more personal and vital interest. The subjects have covered the whole field of mental health as well as mental abnormality, and have been given with the view to helping each individual in his practical problems. The response of the audience has been excellent. Last year the lectures started with an attendance of 40 and ended with an attendance of 125. This year the lectures began with 100 and ended with an average attendance of over 200, all men.

Help on Practical Problems

The most vital part of the course has been the questions that were asked and, as far as possible answered. They were practical queries regarding matters of personal health, both physical and mental, and expressions of desire for counsel regarding matters of family and business readjustment. One man decided, after listening to a lecture about adjustment to circumstances, that he was in the wrong business, that he would be better off physically, mentally and morally if he changed his environment. After a consultation with the lecturer he bought a ticket to a farming community in Michigan where he is now established and is probably leading a healthier and mentally more normal existence. Another man was reunited with his wife and certain minor questions of maladjustment are apparently settled. There were many questions as to the methods that should be pursued in applying oneself more advantageously to a job or to studies.

These discussions led very logically to a thorough consideration of the state of the community and the State for mental health of its citizens and to a real desire on the part of the listeners for further information and help in regard to getting for the community the benefits of State provision in clinics and institutions. The lecturer is urging the establishment of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association the advisability of having other courses of this nature given.

N. Y. PSYCHIATRIC SOCIETY HAS A SYMPOSIUM ON FEEBLEMINDEDNESS

The New York Psychiatric Society devoted its meeting on January 8 to a symposium on feeblemindedness. The speakers were Dr. Walter E. Clark, director of the Massachusetts School for the Feebleminded; Dr. Walter B. James, chairman of the New York State Commission on Feeblemindedness; Thomas E. Finegan, acting superintendent of Education in New York State; Dr. L. Pierce Clark of the Advisory Committee of Randall's Island; Charles H. Johnson, superintendent of the State Board of Charities and member of the State Hospital Commission, and Dr. Grady of the New York City schools. The President of the Society, Major George H. Kirby, presided.

All the speakers took a hopeful view of the present situation and the outlook for a better handling of the problem of feeblemindedness in this State. One of the most hopeful features of the situation, in addition to the widespread public interest in the question, is the spirit of cooperation between all the state departments and private agencies interested in the matter.

Psychiatric Social Work For the War and After

By Margaret J. Powers

RECOGNITION of the need for trained psychiatric social workers, which led to the establishment of the Training School for Psychiatric Social Work at Smith College last summer in cooperation with the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, is growing and finding expression in schools and courses in several other cities.

Among these is the second training course to be held at Northampton this summer. The 1918 school was primarily a war emergency to train students as soon as possible for work in military hospitals for those cases suffering from war neuroses. The 1919 course, while designed to meet the needs of the reconvestment, was projected in that it will prepare students not only to deal with the immediate psychiatric problems of the aftermath of war, but also with the ubiquitous neurotic or psychopath of everyday life.

The 1919 training school in reconstruction is organized on the same principles as the 1918 school; but with the addition of at least two units: namely, medical social service, community work, and possibly a third branch in child welfare. It includes base courses in psychology and sociology required of all the students and special courses in social psychiatry, social medicine and community work, and a social service course which will be given according to the individual interests of the students. The course comprises two months' training in theory and practice at Smith College, with an intervening period of nine months' field work, followed by two months in advanced theory during July and August of 1919. The School for Social Workers in Boston has added to its curriculum a course of ten lectures by Miss Mary C. Jarrett, chief of the social service at the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, supplemented by clinics at that hospital.

In response to a request from social workers in New York City, the New York School of Philanthropy has announced the establishment of a course on mental hygiene. Dr. Bernard Glueck, formerly director of the Psychiatric Clinic at Sing Sing Prison, now a member of the staff of the School, will conduct a course of lectures in the fundamentals of mental hygiene, accompanied by clinical observation and conferences for the discussion of the mental aspect of social case work problems met with in the experience of the worker. Admission to the course is limited to those actually engaged in social case work. The course began on February 5.

Another interesting and important course is that of the School for Social Service in Philadelphia. Beginning February 3, the School will give six months' training course in social psychiatery and medical social service as a graduate course for those who have had an adequate foundation in college or professional work. The unity of this work will be insured by the fact that the case work instruction will be in the hands of well-known social workers of Philadelphia who approach their problems with the greatest appreciation of the fact that psychiatry has to make to all social case work problems. Miss Jessie Taft and Miss Katherine Tucker, both of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, are among those on the special faculty of the School.

These courses are very demonstrative of the trend of modern methods of approach to social problems away from that of ameliorating social maladjustments to the more vital approach of understanding their causation, and changing them or preventing their recurrence.

ENLARGEMENT OF STATE HOSPITALS MUST GO ON

Controller Says New Financial Problems Confront the State—but Relief For Insane Imperative

The tabulation of appropriations desired by the various branches of the State government for the current year, compiled by State Controller Travis, indicates that the reduction in the State's revenues from various causes and the resumption of work interrupted by the war present many perplexing financial questions.

In a public statement, the Controller points out that some saving will be made as a result of the curtailment of the State's war-time activities, but adds that these are likely to be largely offset by the resumption of the State's building program which was suspended during the war because of the lack of men and the shortage and high prices of material. It is stated that the release of men from the army and the termination of war contracts will relieve to some extent the conditions that have prevented the early supervision of the war work during the last two years, particularly the enlargement of public institutions. The State hospitals for the insane are once more referred to a dangerous extent. With a normal capacity of 28,997 they are now housing 35,460, which is 6,460 over the legal capacity. The State has courageously worked out plan of enlargement, but construction has been delayed by war conditions. The resumption of this work is not only one of the much needed improvement but also will help solve the problem of employment pending the return of normal conditions.
Public Health Nurse for Westchester County

Miss Arthur, Experienced Worker, Will Carry Out Important Constructive Program

The Westchester County Board of Supervisors has appropriated $1,800 for the calendar year 1918, for the salary of a county public health nurse for the entire county. Miss Marie B. Arthur, who headed the civil service list of eligibles for the position, has been appointed. Her duties will include:

First, visiting soldiers rejected from military service because of tuberculous, for the purpose of persuading them to accept treatment in sanatoria if they can pay therefor, or in the East View Tuberculosis Hospital, if they have no funds and do not object to going there; to assist them in getting aid under the tuberculosis insurance to which they contribute, in the use of facilities of the Federal Government under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act, to instruct and assist the families in the principles of sanitation and hygiene, if the patients, for one reason or another, do not go to tuberculosis instantaaneously.

Second, organizing and developing a system of local visiting nursing in commumunities of the country, where such does not now exist.

Third, assisting in securing nurses for such newly developed work and helping find funds for vacances occurring in places where visiting nursing has been on an established basis for some time.

Fourth, assisting in the visiting work of the visiting nurses employed by local organizations, particularly those who come into service without training and experience.

Fifth, helping the Red Cross and State Department of Health organize emergency nursing service in case of a disaster or epidemic.

Miss Arthur, who for the past two years has been the advisory nurse on the staff of the State Charities Aid Association's Tuberculosis Committee, has had an extensive experience in public health nursing, both in the pioneer field and in organized territory. She is a graduate of the Bellevue Hospital Training School for Nurses and of the School of Public Health at the University of Michigan. From her position as social worker at the Bellevue Hospital she took up the duties of tuberculosis clinic and visiting nurse at that institution, doing some club work also at the Bellevue Settlement House. For a year and a half she acted as visiting nurse for the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

In 1912 Miss Arthur went to Glens Falls, N. Y., and organized the only public health nursing service including the establishment of a tuberculosis dispensary and child welfare station, and at the same time served as an assistant in public health nursing in the Glens Falls Hospital Training School for Nurses.

During 1913 she was on the staff of the State Tuberculosis Committee by whom she was loaned to the Medina (N. Y.) Public Health Association to organize the public health work in that village. Having placed that activity upon an established basis she made a survey of the nursing needs and needs in Westchester County. From this she went to Allegheny County to organize the county tuberculosis nursing work, and later to Medina County for the same purpose. Miss Arthur has served on the staff of the State Association for the past two years as field secretary and advisory nurse to the nurses employed in the work by local organizations, and it is with a sense of regret that the State Committee relinquishes her for the work, and an accorded sense of congratulation to her and to Westchester County, on this new opportunity for constructive work in a highly organized territory.

"The Night Before Christmas"

With S. C. A. A. County Agencies

"It was the night before Christmas—a tale to begin with a capital 'A.'"

Santa Claus is a great favorite all over the country, and children love his story. One of the most effective ways of telling the story is by giving a dramatization. This year a group of Misses from the State Charities Aid Association of New York and the local agencies is preparing to give a Christmas pantomime in their office building.

It was an hour of storytelling by a friend among which the children were seated upon the floor about their pictures of Santa Claus. Yet the room darkened making a charming picture. The Paulus Society of the Catholic Church also gave a Christmas party for the members of their own church who are inmates of the Home.

MISS QUINN APPOINTED EXECUTIVE SECRETARY OF CHILDREN'S ASSOCIATION

The reorganization of the Westchester County Children's Association, which was reported in the last issue of The News, has made further progress during the month of March, when the appointment, on March 16, of Miss Lillian A. Quinn, formerly Assistant Director of the Westchester County Department of Child Welfare, as Executive Secretary of the Children's Association, was announced.

During the four years of its existence as the Children's Committee, the Committee has had no paid officers but has had a volunteer executive secretary, the trained head of another organization. With the establishment of the new association on broader lines, the need for a trained, full-time executive has been strongly felt, and the choice of Miss Quinn for this position promises well for the growth of the organization.

MISS CURRY AT BALTIMORE

Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the County Agencies department of the State Charities Aid Association, attended the National Country Life Conference held in Baltimore in January. The Voluntary Committee on Country Life of which Prof. Kenyon L. Butterfield, President of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, is Chairman, had called together for the Baltimore meeting the leaders in country life work of various national and state organizations. They met to consider the possibility of working up a round-program for meeting the social problems of country life.

Miss Curry is an experienced worker in county life and is familiar with the work of the Committee on charities, correction and family welfare. She presented a paper on "Better Organization for Rural Social Service," formulating a number of principles governing sound rural organization of social forces.
MUCH MORE INSANITY IN N. Y. STATE DURING WAR

Nearly 4,000 More Cases Admitted to Hospitals in 44 Months After War Began Than Before

There was a marked increase in insanity in New York State during the war. In fact, there were nearly 4,000 more admissions to the State hospitals for mental diseases during 44 months elapsed since the war began than in the 44 months preceding it. Statistics of the hospitals show that during the 44 months preceding the war there were 29,216 admissions, while in the next 44 months there were 33,311, or 3,995 more during the war.

"This was a marked increase," said Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission, in a recent article in The New York State Hospital Quarterly, "and, as a majority of the new cases were of the dementia praecox and manic-depressive variety, it was only fair to assume that the stress and excitement of war times was the cause. Another interesting fact is that the admissions showed a marked increase in recurrent cases. It was also noticed that many cases occurred among old people who hadidelusions of a depressive character, such as that the end of the world was approaching, that everything was going wrong, etc., such as would be caused by the present troublous times. Another reason for the increased admissions might be that many people have gone into new employment where the work has been more strenuous and where they have made a great deal more money and have lived very different lives."

This war-time increase of insanity further increased the serious overcrowding in State hospitals and emphasizes the need of more buildings at once.

MENTAL HYGIENE LECTURES

A number of mental health lectures are being given this winter under the auspices of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association.

A course of six lectures has been scheduled in the courses of the New York City Board of Education. Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, Professor of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System at the Post Graduate Hospital, will lecture at Cooper Union, March 5, on "The Brain the Body's Keeper." Dr. Isham G. Harris, Superintendent of the Brooklyn State Hospital, gave an illustrated lecture, February 3, at Public School No. 97, Woodhaven, Queens, on "How the Insane Live." Dr. Marcus B. Heyman, Superintendent of the Manhattan State Hospital, gave a lecture on the same subject at the Bowery Y. M. C. A. on January 29; and LeRoy E. Bowman, former Assistant Secretary of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness, spoke at the same Y. M.

C. A., January 15, on "Why Be Feebleminded?" George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Mental Hygiene, lectured January 20 at Public School No. 59, Manhattan, on "Why Should So Many Go Insane?" and January 22 at the Bowery Y. M. C. A. on the same subject. He will deliver this lecture at four other public schools. He spoke at the Bedford Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn, February 10, on "Shell Shock Over There and Over Here."

HERE AND THERE

The American Red Cross distributed 200,000 "fl" masks among the American troops in France.

Col. William Cary Sanger has been made manager of the Potomac Division of the American Red Cross, succeeding Henry White, who is in France as a member of the American Peace Delegation. Col. Sanger was formerly a member of the New York State Hospital Commission.

Lt. Col. Ernest F. Bicknell, formerly Red Cross Commissioner to Belgium, has been appointed head of the Red Cross Department of Civilian Relief in France. He succeeds Lt. Col. Homer Folks (Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association), who is now making a tour of European countries and Palestine, surveying after-war conditions for the Red Cross.

NOMINATED AS MANAGERS OF STATE INSTITUTIONS

Governor Smith has sent a number of nominations to the Senate for membership on the boards of managers of various State institutions. All of them are re-nominations. They are:

Henry A. Stephens, of Binghamton, as a member of the Board of Managers of the Binghamton State Hospital.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Millet, of Batavia, the State School for the Blind at Batavia.

Dr. Frederick Peterson, of New York, Craig Colony for Epileptics at Sonyea.

Rev. John Grimes, of Syracuse, Syracuse State Institution for Feebleminded Children.

Miss Mary Hinkle, of Poughkeepsie, the State Training School for Girls at Hudson.

E. Lyman Brown, of Poughkeepsie, the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie.

Joseph B. Morrill, of Centreport, Kings Park State Hospital, Kings Park, L. I.

Mrs. Lillian Goraline, of Rochester, Rochester State Hospital.

Rev. Dr. Edward H. Coley, of Utica, Utica State Hospital.

M. Annie Laurie Stewart, of Ithaca, Willard State Hospital.

The Governor has also nominated Mrs. Bertha Bardi, of Gowanda, to succeed Mrs. Laura K. Larmouth as a member of the Board of Managers of the Gowanda State Homeopathic Hospital.

CAPT. TOPPING DIES IN FRANCE

Former S. C. A. A. Man Was Decorated By Queen of Roumania For War Work

Word has been received of the death in Blois, France, on January 7, of Capt. Harper D. Topping, 34 years old, formerly connected with the State Charities Aid Association and the Rockefeller Foundation.

Early in 1917 Capt. Topping went abroad with the Red Cross Commission for Relief in Russia. He was assigned to an area containing 50,000 destitute men, women and children, for which he supervised the distribution of supplies. He was decorated by Queen Marie of Roumania.

Capt. Topping became ill some months ago from tuberculosis and went to France. The effects of exposure and undernourishment undergirded in Roumania, and particularly in his exodus from the country, resulted in greatly weakening his physique and bringing on the disease.

His wife who was engaged in Red Cross work abroad was with him during his illness and at his death. Besides his wife, he is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan B. Topping, of North Plainfield, N. J. He was a native of Allegheny, Pa. The body was taken to Paris by a military escort and buried in Pere Lachaise Cemetery.

Capt. Topping was formerly an exhibit demonstrator for the Committee on Tuberculosis of the State Charities Aid Association. He was employed here during parts of 1909 and 1910 and went from here to the Boston Dispensary under Michael Davis.

STATE STUDYING ITS DUTY TOWARD RETARDED CHILDREN

One session of the annual convention of the University of the State of New York, held in Albany, was devoted to the general subject, "The Relation of the State to the Mentally Deficient and Retarded Child." H. S. West, Ph. D., Superintendent of Schools in Rochester, delivered an address on "The Importance and Necessity of a State Program." Dr. Walter J. James, Chairman of the State Commission for the Feebleminded, spoke on "The Relation of the State Commission for the Feebleminded to the Department of Education." Dr. L. Pierce Clark, Chairman of the Medical Advisory Board to the Ungraded Classes, New York City, delivered an address on "Suggestions Upon the Ungraded Class System." In the course of which he urged the establishment of courses in the Normal Schools of the State for the training of teachers for special classes. John Kennedy, of Batavia, spoke on "Individual Instruction." The addresses and papers were pointedly discussed by Miss Elizabeth E. Farrell, Inspector of Ungraded Classes, New York City.

Progress is being made in establishing these special classes in public schools throughout the State under the Lockwood law.
ALBANY PLANS NEW DEAL FOR FEEBLEMINDED

Five outstanding developments looking toward better standards and more adequate facilities for the care of the feebleminded have come out of Albany during the past month:

1. The State Commission on the Feebleminded submitted a report to the Governor based on its study of the situation begun last July, with recommendations to remedy conditions.

2. Governor Smith transmitted this report to the Legislature with a request for careful consideration and emphasis on the need of making the care of the feebleminded wholly a State duty and responsibility; in his inaugural message to the Legislature, the Governor referred to the care of the feebleminded as of "immense importance."

3. A comprehensive mental deficiency law codifying the various statutes relating to the feebleminded and adding new sections has been introduced in the Legislature, to carry out some of the recommendations of the Commission.

4. Dr. Walter B. James having reluctantly been obliged to resign the chairmanship of the Commission for the Feebleminded on account of failing eyesight, the Governor has appointed a capable and worthy successor to him in the person of Col. Pearce Bailey.

5. A special committee of the State Prison Commission, which has been investigating the question of mental disorders among the inmates of prisons and reformatories for several months, has submitted a report with recommendations for clearing houses, clinics and separate institutions for defective delinquents.

GOVERNOR ASKS STATE TO DO DUTY BY FEEBLEMINDED

Special Message Says Care of Defectives Should Be Wholly a State Job

With the inauguration of the new Governor on January 1, there was keen interest in his plans and those of the Legislature with regard to both the insane and the feebleminded. The new administration is giving cordial support to the State Commission for the Feebleminded, the State Hospital Commission and the Hospital Development Commission in carrying out their important work and plans.

The Governor's inaugural message devoted considerable attention both to the needs of the insane and feebleminded. It directed the attention of the Legislature to the serious overcrowding in the State hospitals for the insane and asked for "earnest and careful consideration" of the problem of providing more adequately for the mentally ill.

In the course of his special message on the feebleminded, submitted February 3, transmitting the report of the Commission on the Feebleminded, the Governor intimated that he had been considering the possibility of putting the feebleminded institutions under the State Hospital Commission. This, however, would require an amendment to the State constitution, so the Governor concluded not to press the matter at this time. As to making care of the

STATE COMMISSION ON FEEBLEMINDED SUBMITS REPORT

Offers Many Constructive Suggestions to Improve State's System

The State Commission for the Feebleminded which came into existence officially on July 1st last has completed a preliminary study of the State's machinery for dealing with the feebleminded and incorporated its findings and recommendations in a report to the Governor and Legislature.

The Commission reports that "the care of mental defectives in New York is in a chaotic state and efforts in their behalf and the four institutions for them have never been co-ordinated into a satisfactory and unified system."

The report bears the signature of the three commissioners—Dr. Walter B. James of New York, Chairman; Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, and Frank R. Utter, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities. Recently Dr. James has been succeeded

COL. BAILEY HEAD OF COMMISSION ON FEEBLEMinded

Dr. Walter B. James, resigned. Col. Bailey has recently been discharged from military service and has already assumed the duties of Chairman of the Commission.
It was with great regret that everybody interested in better provision for the feebleminded learned that on account of failing health he had been compelled to resign the chairmanship of the Commission. He has been indefatigable both as Chairman of this Commission and as a member of the Hospital Development Commission, in studying the needs of the feebleminded and in formulating a corrective program. His zeal and wisdom won for him the admiration of his colleagues and he has promoted an unusual degree of cooperation among the agencies concerned in the problem. The work of Dr. James and his colleagues on the Commission, Charles H. Joy and B. J. Clapp, has made for a better understanding of the problem and created public and legislative confidence in the plans for putting the care of the feebleminded on a better basis.

In naming Colonel Bailey to succeed Dr. James, the Governor has picked a man of outstanding administrative ability. Col. Bailey is a well-known specialist in mental and nervous diseases in New York City and professor of that branch in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University. He has been active in connection with the organization and work of the Neurological Institute in New York, and is known throughout the country as a man of distinction in his specialty.

About two years ago he entered the military service at the request of Surgeon General Gorgas to organize the Division of Neurology and Psychiatry in the Surgeon General’s office.

The success of this division in promoting examination and treatment of mental and nervous cases in the U. S. military forces here and overseas, is a matter of common knowledge and it has been due in no small part to Col. Bailey’s ability and energy.

His appointment as Chairman of the Commission is a welcome one, urged by numerous medical, civic and charitable organizations. He has the confidence alike of the profession and the lay organization. The State is fortunate to have him to take the helm at this critical stage in the State’s planning for the feebleminded and to help get the new program enacted into law and translated into results.

Dr. James is now sojourning at Jekyll Island, Georgia, for rest and treatment. There is a universal hope that he will soon be fully restored to health. The State is greatly his debtor for his distinguished and unselfish service in the cause of better provision for the feebleminded. While his physician has ordered him to lay down the onerous duties of administrative head of the Commission for the Feebleminded, we are glad to announce that Dr. James expects to continue as a member of the Hospital Development Commission.

feebleminded wholly a State function and duty as is done with the insane, he said:

“...A large percentage of the feebleminded eventually come under the care of the State, whether it be through almshouses or through prisons. The various localities have their burdens of caring for the feebleminded in local correctional institutions. I believe the State might well take care of them in the first instance.

In the report of the commission accompanies this message and with it a memorandum showing the capacity of the institutions of the State already devoted to this purpose, as well as a draft of the proposed mental deficiency law. I would ask your honorable body to give them your earnest and careful consideration.”

PROPOSE A NEW MENTAL DEFICIENCY LAW FOR NY STATE

Act Codifying and Improving Statutes About Feebleminded Is Based on Insanity Law

Senator Henry M. Sage and Assemblyman H. Edmund Machold, both members of the Hospital Development Commission, have introduced to the Legislature a bill proposed as a new mental deficiency law for the State.

It is patterned somewhat after the insanity law and is an attempt at codification of the existing laws in relation to defences and with new provisions to correlate, harmonize and improve them. An important feature of it is the provision for a uniform procedure of commitment throughout the State.

The laws of the State relating to the custody, care and treatment of the insane have been borne or less confused, conflicting and unsatisfactory for a number of years. The proposal of the law is to replace these various statutes with one clear, comprehensive law providing better procedure for commitment, treatment and administration. The bill is an outgrowth of a study made by the Hospital Development Commission and the State Commission for the Feebleminded.

MORE VISITING NURSES

Miss Helena Heinrichs, R. N., a social service nurse with several years’ training and experience, has been secured by the Association’s Tuberculosis Committee to act as visiting nurse for Madison County.

Several other visiting tuberculosis nurses will be sent into the field within a short time to undertake the enlarged programs of preventive work being inaugurated in Fulton, Genesee, Albany, Montgomery and Onondaga Counties where the county tuberculosis committees are. There are also visiting nursing vacancies in connection with the tuberculosis sanatoria of Onondaga, Schuyler, Seneca, Oswego, Cayuga, Tompkins, Chenango and Greene Counties. The Greene County Tuberculosis Committee is about to be reorganized and will employ a county visiting tuberculosis nurse.

ceeded as Chairman of the Commission by Colonel Pearce Bailey.

What the Commission Recommends

Salient points of the program recommended by this Commission are as follows:

1. Increasing institutional accommodations by hastening the completion of Letchworth Village and by extending the Newark State Custodial Asylum for Feebleminded Women.

2. Enactment of a comprehensive mental deficiency act including a uniform commitment statute; also enactment of a law to make possible separate proceedings for delinquent defectives.

3. The mental classification of all backward and defective children in the public schools and the establishment of appropriate training and treatment for them in special classes or in State institutions.

4. Changing the name of the State custodial institution to State training schools and making them such in fact.

5. Dividing the State into three districts to facilitate its management and increased institutional provision.

6. The eventual consolidation of the State departments dealing with the insane and feebleminded into a single agency.

7. The establishment of a state-wide system of mental hygiene clinics in cooperation with the State hospitals, schools, courts, charitable institutions, prisons and health departments.

8. Continued effort toward a census of mental defectives in the State.

9. A certification of the capacity of each of the State institutions based upon physical measurements of floor space with a view to remedying overcrowding.

10. The transfer of the New York City hospital and school for defective children on Randall's Island to the State.

11. The development of home care of certain types of mental defectives.

12. The repeal of the State sterilization law which has been declared unconstitutional.

13. Continued research and study in the hope of finding better and less expensive methods of dealing with defectives.

Census Being Taken

The Commission organized and established its office in New York last July. The commissioners visited all of the State institutions to survey conditions first-hand. Their report reviews their activities and gives the reasons which lead to the recommendations made. After describing the plans already set in motion, the report says, in part:

After describing the plans already set in motion, the report says, in part:

"The Commission finds that the care of the mentally defective in New York is in a chaotic state and that the efforts in their behalf and the four institutions for them have never been coordinated into a satisfactory and unified system.

"The laws concerning mental defectives are also chaotic. The Commission therefore has prepared a general and comprehensive Mental Deficiency law, which is intended to cover the relations of the State, of the Commission and of the Institutions and their Boards of Managers to the mental defectives. This law is based upon the State's Insanity Law, which is generally admitted to be one of the best in existence and which is the result of more than thirty years' practical experience.

"A Commission of three, consisting of the Hon. State Comptroller, the Hon. State Commissioner of Charities and the Hon. Attorney General, shall have the power to supervise the administration of this law.

"A Commission of three, consisting of the Hon. State Comptroller, the Hon. State Commissioner of Charities and the Hon. Attorney General, shall have the power to supervise the administration of this law.

"The Commission has devised a plan for and is putting into operation, clinics which shall serve the needs of the various parts of the State.

"The Commission is convinced that a cooperative effort of the various State and local charitable institutions is needed in order to provide proper facilities for the care of the mental defectives in the State.

State-Wide System of Free Clinics

"The Commission has devised a plan for and is putting into operation, clinics which shall serve the needs of the various parts of the State. The Commission is convinced that the same type of examination of persons whose mental soundness is suspected is required by at least six important State agencies, the Insanity Commission, the State Commission for the Feebleminded, the Department of Education, the Courts and Penal Institutions, and the charitable institutions throughout the State which are under the supervision of the State Board of Charities, especially those which have to do with youth and with youth. The State Department of Health should also be able to use such clinics. The Commission thereupon is attempting to bring about the cooperation of these six agencies through their principal officers, to the end that such a system shall be created as shall result in the establishment of one clinic in each neighborhood, and which shall answer the full needs of all individuals and all institutions in that area.

State Should Be Districted

"The Commission is convinced that satisfactory care of the mental defectives in this State will never be achieved until the State itself is divided into districts, which shall bear the same relation to the individual institutions as do the State Hospital districts to the State Hospitals for the Insane.

"The Commission recommends that the State be divided into three such districts, a western with Newark as its center, a northern with Binghamton as its center and a southern with Letchworth Village.

"The State School for Mental Defectives at Syracuse should be continued and maintained as a school, and be used more strictly therefor and should be limited with as few exceptions as possible, to children of school age.

"The Commission recommends that the names of the Institutions for Mental Defectives be changed and be made uniform, and that each be called a state training school, as for instance, 'The Rome State Training School.' In view of its different type, the Syracuse School should be called 'The Syracuse State Training School for Backward Children.'

"The Commission recommends that in the official records of the State and in general usage, the terms 'feeblemindedness,' and 'feebleminded' be abandoned and that there be substituted the terms 'mental deficiency' and 'mental defectives.' We believe that such a change would lessen the odium that now adheres to the institutions for mental defectives and that the unpleasantness of the whole subject to the minds of the public would be diminished.

Institutions All Overcrowded

"The Commission has caused a certificate of the capacity of each of the State Institutions for Mental Defectives to be made based upon actual physical measurement of all floor spaces. As shown in the certificate, the present institutions are overcrowded. Moreover, the constant and persistent pressure from almost every type of public institution for charitable institution in the State to secure the admission of mental defectives into the State institutions, efforts which are at present as a rule unavailing, all point to the fact that the present accommodations for this type of dependent are inadequate.

Finish Letchworth, Expand Newark

"In order to relieve this situation as rapidly and as economically as possible, the Commission recommends, first, that Letchworth Village be rapidly brought to completion.

"The completion of Letchworth Village would provide for at least 2,500 more beds at the State's disposal.

"Second, the Commission advises that a suitable site be obtained west of Newark in an agricultural district where a colony similar to the Templeton Colony of the Waterley School for the Feebleminded in Massachusetts, could be established. Such a colony should contain between 500 and 1,000 acres and might be rough, cheap land. Before such a colony is actually started, a plan should be laid down for a complete institution at that spot to contain about 3,000 patients and the first colony buildings should be made a part of this plan.

"It has become evident to our Commission that the problem of the mental defectives is one that comes in close relation to the work of at least five important State Departments besides our own, namely, the State Hospital Commission, the Department of Education, the Department of Health, the Judiciary with the probation system and the penal institutions and the State Board of Charities. We have endeavored to bring about cooperation between these various departments in an attempt to meet the State's problem and we believe that the accomplishment of such cooperation is at hand with its solution at an earlier date and at less cost.

Provisions for Defective Delinquents

"As mental defectives are a serious problem in our judicial and penal systems constituting, as they do, the majority of the offenders who clog our courts and prisons and reformatories, the Commission believes that it is within its power to aid the Commission in attempting a solution of this difficulty. We have therefore held numerous conferences with the State Commission of Prisons on the subject of defective delinquents, and have consulted with it regarding the report to be immediately issued by it on this subject, and

Ship Carrying Col. Folks and Red Cross Mission Nearly Founders in Aegean Sea

An Associated Press despatch from the Island of Sciaiathos in the Aegean Sea gives the details of a perilous voyage of the American Red Cross Mission in Europe on a coastwise steamer from Piraeus to Saloniki.

This is the mission of which Lieut. Col. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, is head. The other members of the mission who were on the voyage were Captain Edwin G. Merrill of New York, Captain Lawrence Pumpelly of Ithaca, N. Y., Capt. A. Mills and Lieut. Louis W. Hine of New York.

In the course of the storm, Col. Folks was thrown from a coach in the smoking room and shaken up. The small steamer was so helpless in the high seas that for a while the ship's officers feared disaster, and when the ship did reach a port it was impossible to land the passengers for four days on account of an epidemic of influenza there. For four days the passengers subsisted on bread and cabbage.

The ship finally found refuge at the Island of Sciaiathos, a mountain-sheltered harbor in the upper reaches of the Aegean Sea. The Associated Press describes the journey follows:

"The old coastwise steamer Peloponnesus on which they were travelling encountered a gale in which the vessel labored so severely that it was feared at one time she would never reach port. Having stopped at the port of Volo, 200 Greek refugees were put on board the steamer despite the protests of the captain. Through the voyage from Volo to Saloniki the weather was cold and rainy and a northeast wind chased the sea into waves that tossed the old steamer about like a cork and made her groan from stem to stern."

Storm Terrified Passengers

"Great volumes of water dashed over her decks, drenching the unfortunate refugees in the lower cabins and partly flooding the engine room. Two of the stokers scrambled to the upper deck and refused to return.

"Most of the passengers were Greek peasant women and children from the interior who never before had made a sea journey. They succumbed to seasickness and fell on their knees in prayer, holding up their crucifixes and ikons and pledging all their money and belongings to the church if they were saved.

"Only the reassurances of the members of the American Red Cross and of the ship's officers prevented a panic. Colonel Homer Folks, of New York, head of the Red Cross Mission, was thrown from a coach in the smoking room and shaken up.

"Everything that was not nailed down was thrown helter-skelter over the cabins and decks. Baggage, household effects of every description, kitchen pots and pans, cages of live chickens, a family bird in cages, baskets of food, containers of wine, boxes of household pets, such as cats, dogs and rabbits were hurled about in confusion."

STATE COMMISSION ON FEEBLE-MINDED SUBmits REPORT

(Continued from page 3) we are in agreement with the conclusions, namely, that the plan that has been already adopted for a general clearing house for males at Sing Sing should be carried out, and one for women promptly be set up at Bedford, also that the reclassification of existing institutions should be made so as to provide separate care for defective mental deficiency.

"This Commission has also held conferences with the State Hospital Commission for the insane, finding that there are many problems that these two agencies have to meet in common. * * * Indeed so similar are the problems presented to these two Commissions and so closely related are the methods of dealing with their inmates, that we are convinced that eventually it will be found best to have the insane and the mental deficient cared for by a single agency.

"We believe that the Hospital and School for Defective Children on Randall's Island, now conducted by New York City under its Charities Department, should be transferred to this Commission, on the ground that no training school should be a part of a Charities Department, its function being educational, and because New York City has not succeeded in conducting this school in a satisfactory manner.

Home Care of Defectives

"Finally it should always be remembered that unlike the insane, practically all of whom require confinement, only a part of the mental defectives need institutional care, a very large number, probably a majority of them being able to go on in the outside world doing simple tasks and living in their homes. A constant effort should be made to enlarge this latter group at the expense of the former, and this is the interest both of the State and of these unfortunate themselves.

"It should, therefore, be the duty of this Commission to carry out and encourage studies upon this subject in order to enlarge our knowledge of mental defectiveness, this constituting modern research. * * * It seems likely that most headway will be made through cooperation with the Department of Education in an effort to recognize mental defectiveness in school children at an early age when regulated training adjusted to the peculiar needs of each, may be expected to better than for life in the community and render it unnecessary for them to live in institutions. * * *"

"As the sterilization law now on the statute books has not been proved in operation, and it has been declared unconstitutional, and as there is widespread doubt of the wisdom of such legislation, we advise that this law be repealed."
MENTAL HYGIENE COMMITTEE TO ASSIST RED CROSS IN AFTER-CARE OF SOLDIERS

The Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association has been requested by the Home Service Section of the New York County Chapter of the Red Cross to assist it in measures for discharged soldiers and sailors where mental and nervous defects are involved in their readjustment to civil life and occupation.

The Committee will accede to the request and enlarge its social service department to provide the necessary clinical and social service facilities. The Red Cross will provide the funds for the work.

Favorable action was taken by the Committee after a report on a study made by a sub-committee consisting of Major George H. Kirby, Dr. Charles L. Dana, Dr. L. Pierce Clark, Mrs. William B. Rice, Miss Florence M. Rhett, and Mr. Henry C. Wright.

The task of dealing with these cases is one of magnitude and importance and the Committee is glad to be called upon to give the Red Cross the benefit of its experience in dealing with similar cases in civil life. The plan determined upon may, perhaps, serve as a demonstration which will pave the way for wide application of mental hygiene principles to the handling of such cases.

PRESENTS AUTOS TO SANATORIUM

Mr. Stein of Rochester Shows Practical Appreciation of T. B. Work

Simon N. Stein, a prominent resident of Rochester, has presented the Monroe County Tuberculosis Sanatorium with two automobiles for the use of the sanatorium. This action was taken by Mr. Stein as an expression of his pleasure over the work done during the past year. The Board of Managers of the sanatorium decided that a Ford coupe runabout was the type of machine best adapted to the needs of the institution and purchased two of them at a total cost of $1,750.

The automobiles will be placed at the disposal of Miss Nancy Stahl, superintendent of the dispensary conducted at the Baden Street Social Settlement, and Miss Margaret Lee, visiting nurse of the sanatorium.

Mr. Stein has taken a personal interest in the work of the Monroe County Tuberculosis Sanatorium for a long time. As the disease was first found in the vicinity of the institution and in other ways contributed freely to meet the needs. In connection with Mr. Stein's gift is one from Ezra Boller, also of Rochester, who has offered to insure both cars without charge for liability and indemnity.

MENTAL HYGIENE MOVEMENT TO BE INTERNATIONAL

Success of U. S. and Canadian Societies in Mental Health Work Leads to World Committee

The mental hygiene movement which expanded rapidly from a State to a national basis following the formation of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene is now destined to become international in its scope.

At the annual meeting of the National Committee in New York February 5, Clifford W. Beers, founder and secretary of the Committee, announced that an international committee for mental hygiene will be organized in the near future through the initiative of the (U. S.) National Committee of the Canadian National Committee. It is planned to extend the work to England, France, Italy and other countries. Mr. Beers announced a gift of $6,000 from Mrs. Elizabeth Milbank Anderson of New York for use in initiating the work of the international organization.

The annual reports at the meeting of the National Committee showed that the past year had been a banner year for mental hygiene, in both military and civil fields.

Mr. Walter E. Fernald was elected President of the National Committee to succeed Dr. Lewellys F. Barker of Baltimore who wished to lay down the duties after eight years' service. The Committee adopted a budget of $60,000 for its general work this year, and reported special gifts for special purposes amounting to about $100,000.

It was announced that Dr. V. V. Anderson, formerly medical director of the Boston Municipal Court, had joined the staff of the Committee as director of the mental deficiency work, which activity is growing rapidly. His services have been loaned for a few months to the Committee on Feebleminded Children, which is formulating a new policy for care of defectives in that state.

A notable feature of the recommendations to the Committee was one from Dr. Walter E. Fernald urging greater emphasis upon mental hygiene measures among children.

Committee Home Folks and Miss Florence M. Rhett of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association were re-elected as members of the National Committee.

A resolution of thanks to the State Committee for loaning the services of its Executive Secretary, George A. Hastings, to assist in war work for several months last Spring, was passed.

ONONDAGA GRAND JURY URGES SPECIAL INSTITUTION FOR CRIMINAL DEFECTIVES

As the result of the brutal murder of 5-year-old Norman Keefus at Onondaga Hill, N. Y., recently by Chester Simpson, an escaped inmate of the Syracuse State Institution for Feebleminded Children, the Onondaga County Grand Jury has appealed to Governor Smith to urge legislation for the establishment of custodial institutions where defectives with vicious and criminal traits can be kept safely.

Similar recommendations for special institutions for defective delinquents have repeatedly been made to the State authorities, from many quarters. The latest recommendation of this sort is contained in a report by a special committee of the State Prison Commission, referred to elsewhere in this issue.

The resolution adopted by the Onondaga Grand Jury and sent to the Governor is as follows:

"Whereas it has been brought to the attention of the January grand jury of the county of Onondaga that the State Institution for Feebleminded Children at Syracuse has no facilities or authority for the confinement, of those inmates of vicious, immoral and criminal tendencies, who are a danger to the public when at large and that the State of New York has no institution adequate for such confinement.

"Now, therefore, we, the January grand jury of Onondaga County hereby most respectfully recommend to Alfred E. Smith, Governor of the State of New York, that he take under consideration the establishment of a custodial institution in the county of the like nature of the institutions of this State for the care and custody of the mentally deficient with particular reference to those of immoral and criminal tendencies, to the end that legislation be recommended for the creation and maintenance of a suitable custodial institution where inmates of feeble-mindedness and criminal tendencies may be confined without danger of escape and consequent menace to society at large."

S. C. A. A. MEN ADDRESS NATIONAL T. B. INSTITUTE

George J. Nelbach, Executive Secretary, and Harvey Dee Brown, Assistant Secretary of the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, addressed the Institute for the Training of Tuberculosis Executives conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association January 27 to February 11. Mr. Nelbach's subject was "A Program for State Work." He discussed the subject under four different heads as follows: "What Is To Be Done?" "Who Is To Do It?" "How Are They to Do It?" and "Who Is To See That It Is Done?"

Mr. Brown discussed "Cooperation with City and State Officials."

S. C. A. A. ELECTS MANAGERS

The annual meeting of the State Charities Aid Association was held in the office of the Association at 105 East 22nd Street, New York, on February 19. The following were re-elected as members of the National Committee to serve for three years: Theodore L. Frothingham, Eugene A. Philbin, Miss Florence M. Rhett, Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, Dr. Simon Flexner, Mrs. Willard Straight, Oren Root, and Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard.
Prison Committee Urges Separate Institutions For Defective Delinquents

Clearing Houses For Study and Classification of Abnormal Offenders Also Recommended After Careful Inquiry

MENTAL TROUBLE CRUX OF CHRONIC CRIMINALISM

The perennial question, "What should be done with defective delinquents?" seems to be coming a bit nearer to solution.

Special committees of the State Prison Commission and the Hospital Development Commission have been working since last summer on the problem of reclassifying the mentally defective inmates of the various penal, charitable and correctional institutions of the State with a view to redistributing them into institutions to be set aside for the purpose.

The special committee of the Prison Commission has completed its study of the inmates of the penal and correctional group and submitted its report, with recommendations. The report is signed by Frank E. Wade, John S. Kennedy, Samuel L. Deaver, Judge D. and Allan I. Holloway and the Commissioners. In making its study, the committee had the assistance of Dr. V. V. Anderson, formerly Medical Director of the Municipal Court in Boston.

The study of the special committee of the Hospital Development Commission has also been completed and its report is now being prepared.

The importance of sifting out the mentally abnormal from the other inmates of these institutions has long been recognized and earnestly advocated.

The committee of the Prison Commission found that recidivism is the crux of the whole criminal problem—67 per cent of the 2,279 felons received into the State prisons in 1917 were repeaters—and "that the most important single factor found associated with chronic criminalism is the abnormal mental condition of the criminal himself."

Half of Prisoners are Abnormal.

"Well authenticated facts are at hand to indicate that at least 50 per cent of the inmates of prisons and reformatories in New York State exhibit mental abnormalities, and are in need of much more specialized treatment than afforded by the ordinary routine methods employed in the average penal institutions; that from 27 to 30 per cent of such inmates are feebleminded and only possess the intelligence of the average American child of twelve years or under."

"In the light of such facts it is futile to simply go on blindly administering the law, instead of endeavoring to solve the problem these individuals present.

Need Clearing Houses and Clinics

"Those who have given much thought to the subject feel that the establishment of clearing houses with medical clinics, through which pass those sentenced to the various penal and correctional institutions of the State, after prolonged study and effort at reconstruction, to then be distributed to the various penal institutions in the light of the needs of each case, is the best way of handling the problem.

"Such clearing houses, in enabling the prisons to establish an actual physical segregation of certain types, will in a great measure solve the disciplinary problems of the prisons. By establishing a proper classification these clinics will also enable the prison management to better utilize for the reconstruction of the prisoner those agencies already existing in prisons; and will secure a more intelligent treatment of each individual prisoner, making it possible for the administration to return him to society better fitted to take his place as a useful member than he was the day he entered prison. Furthermore, such clinics should be of very great value to the parole authorities in intelligent after-care work with criminals."

Prevention Better Than Cure

"As an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, it is much more profitable for society to undertake measures to prevent criminality, prostitution, insanity and the like, than it is to endeavor to cure it after it has already developed, or to provide ultimate custodial care for those in whom cure is impossible."

"The establishment of medical clinics in courts will do much towards solving the serious problems mentioned, before they have developed to such a degree as are found in prisons, and when their condition may in a great measure be preventable."

"But even more important in the prevention of delinquency than anything else that has been said is the establishment of clinics in the community that will discover the abnormal child who has the potentialities for a criminal career even before he has developed delinquent tendencies."

The Committee's Recommendations

The Committee summarized its recommendations as follows:

First: That all males convicted of felony and not released under suspension of imposition or execution of sentence pass through the proposed clearing house at Sing Sing Prison, and thence be distributed to each of the State prisons and the New York State Reformatory at Elmira in the light of the needs of each case.

Second: That all sentenced female felons and those convicted of offenses of a lesser degree than felony selected by the court, pass through a clearing house to be established by the State at the New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford Hills, and from this clearing house, after a period of study and reconstruction, be distributed to other State institutions for women in the light of the needs of each case.

Third: The prompt establishment of the proposed clearing house on Blackwell's Island to function in the same way as the Sing Sing and Bedford Hills clearing houses function for the State institutions, converting the transplanting into a clearing house for men and the workhouse into a clearing house for women.

Fourth: The establishment of a State institution for the care and treatment of male defective delinquents, providing for their commitment, release and transfer. The Eastern New York Reformatory at Napanoch is suggested.

Fifth: The establishment of a State institution for the care and treatment of female defective delinquents, providing for their commitment, release and transfer. The New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford Hills is suggested.

Sixth: The establishment of an institution in connection with the Department of Correction of the city of New York for the care and treatment of male defective delinquents.

Seventh: The establishment of an institution in connection with the Department of Correction of the city of New York for the care and treatment of female defective delinquents.

Eighth: That all children brought before the court, charged with delinquency or improper guardianship, be examined mentally, the examinations to be made either in a clinic attached to the court, or in a central clinic to be provided, and those found feebleminded to be committed to proper institutions if in need of institutional care.

Ninth: That all adults convicted of offenses less than felony and all adults convicted of felony and released under suspension of imposition or execution of sentence, be examined mentally in the discretion of the judge at a clinic attached to the court or at a central clinic.

Tenth: The establishment of mental clinics throughout the State as planned by the State Commission for the Feebleminded, and the establishment of a psychiatric hospital in New York City as proposed by the State Hospital Development Commission.

Eleventh: The creation of a State board to supervise and direct the activities of these mental clinics, thereby securing proper standardization in the way of methods used and results obtained.

Twelfth: That the Legislature be required to enact legislation authorizing the carrying out of these recommendations into effect.

These recommendations are substantially in accord with the ideas of the New York Committee on Feeblemindedness.

NEW AGENT IN NIAGARA COUNTY

Miss Julia C. Ford, Children's Agent of the State Charities Aid Association in Niagara County, recently resigned her position and has been married. Miss Kathleen Smith, who has been Assistant Probation Officer of the county for two years, has been appointed to succeed Miss Ford and began work in January. Miss Smith is thoroughly familiar with work for dependent children and is acquainted with the Niagara County field.
STATE HOSPITALS FOR INSANE HARD HIT BY WAR

Overcrowding and Cost of Maintenance Increase, and Institutions Short of Doctors and Nurses

The past year was "the most trying one in the history of the State hospital system," according to the annual report of the State Hospital Commission recently submitted to the Legislature. This was due to conditions growing out of the war.

In some cases the force of ward employees was reduced more than one-third. "The officers and ward employees remaining in the service have recognized the seriousness of the situation," the report adds, "and with commendable patriotism have cheerfully accepted these additional responsibilities. The continued demand of the Army for physicians trained in mental diseases was partly met by the hospitals by giving leaves of absence to the younger members of the hospital staffs. At the close of the fiscal year, 52 of the hospital physicians were on active military duty, comprising about one-fourth of the full medical staffs of the hospitals. In like manner many of the hospital nurses answered the call and entered the Army nursing service.

The patients and employees remaining in the hospitals contributed to the successful prosecution of the war by making garments for soldiers and hospital supplies. Large quantities of well-made articles were turned over to the Red Cross. The hospitals have taken a conspicuous part in the various drives for funds which have been conducted. Subscriptions in the hospitals for the Liberty Loan and Red Cross totaled $1,134,300 to the four Liberty Loans. The high prices of all commodities and the conservation of wheat, meat and sugar necessitated a revision of the hospital dietaries. The hospitals have taken great pains to comply with all of the suggestions of the Federal Food Administration.

Prevention of Mental Diseases

"In last year's report it was pointed out that progress was being made in the elimination of the causes of the alcoholic insanity and general paralysis. This forward movement has continued during the year just past. Although in this connection the likelihood has not been suppressed, the number of drinking places has been greatly reduced and the amount of liquor consumed has become considerably less. The effect of the decrease in the use of alcoholic liquors is seen in the reduction of admissions from alcoholic insanity. During the past fiscal year the first admissions with alcoholic insanity number 354, as compared with 594 the previous year.

"In order to protect the health of the army, both Federal and State authorities have taken active measures against venereal disease. More has been accomplished in this respect during the past year than in any time during the previous century. Cases of syphilis have been reported and appropriate means taken to prevent the infected person from infecting others.

"Other hopeful signs are seen in the proposed mental examination of school children and the better care of psychopathic children that will naturally follow.

"Each of the State hospitals maintains one or more free clinics to which patients suffering from incipient nervous or mental disease may come for advice and examination. The attendance at the clinics held during the year totaled 5,403 visits. Of these, 5,098 were made by male patients, 585 by discharged patients and 2,779 by persons who had had no connection with the hospitals. It is believed that these clinics and the social service work associated with them are effective agencies for preventing some forms of mental disease and in avoiding a recurrence of a lack in former patients.

The report shows that the State spent more than $10,000,000 last year caring for its insane and in new construction for their accommodation.

The higher prices of supplies increased the average per capita cost of maintenance of patients to $262.32, or $43.16 more than the previous year. Yet the hospitals were administered so efficiently and economically that the average cost per patient including food, clothing, medical and nursing attention, was only 77 cents a day.

Over 48,000 Cases Treated

During the past fiscal year a total of 45,136 patients were under treatment in the civil hospitals, an increase of 4,573 in the hospitals for the criminal insane and 1,338 in the private institutions, a total of 45,573. The increased patient activities and have subscribed $1,134,300 to the four Liberty Loans. 290 in the institutions for criminal insane, and 920 in the private institutions, a total of 39,701.

Impressive Facts About the Insane In N. Y. State

The State spent $10,494,000 last year for its insane but the per capita cost per day was only 77 cents.

The number of patients in the thirteen civil hospitals is 37,293, an increase of 955 during the year. A total of 45,136 patients were treated last year, of whom 5,942 discharged as improved by treatment, 1,687 of these as recovered.

The hospitals are overcrowded 6,465 beyond their certified capacity. The erection of a new State hospital at Marcy near Utica and the expansion of the Brooklyn and Creedmoor branches of the Brooklyn State Hospital are recommended; also a new psychopathic hospital for New York City.

8,403 visits were paid to the free clinics for mental diseases in connection with State hospitals, 2,737 of them by preventive cases.

There has been a decrease in the insanity due to alcohol. Progress is being made in controlling syphilis, the cause of incurable general paralysis.

One-quarter of the medical staffs of the hospitals, a total of 92 physicians, were on active or duty duty, also many of the hospital nurses and employees. The hospitals subscribed $1,134,000 to the Liberty Loan. Patients and employees made many garments and hospital supplies for the Red Cross.

The total yield of the hospital farms was $14,000,000 on record, the value at wholesale prices being $553,867.

State Commission Recommends More Beds in Metropolitan District—Insane Cost State $10,000,000

Of the 3,542 patients discharged from the civil hospitals during the year as benefited by treatment, 1,687 were considered as recovered, 827 as much improved, 917 as improved, and 113 as not insane.

More Buildings Sorely Needed.

The difficulty in obtaining building materials and labor during the last year has greatly delayed construction operations. In spite of this handicap, however, the Commission reports the completion of two new buildings at the Brooklyn State Hospital providing additional accommodations for 550 patients. Cottages at the Creedmoor branch of that institution, formerly used as barracks for the National Guard, have been repaired and now constitute attractive homes for 100 patients. Thirty-six beds in the recent report of the Fed. the Rochester State Hospital. Other important construction work is progressing at the Kings Park and Middletown State Hospitals.

Early in the year the Commission established a new certification of capacity—28,997—based upon the latest revised data. Yet the actual population at the present time is 6,465 patients in excess of that number.

"The State Hospital Commission joins with the Hospital Development Commission," says the report, "in recommending the building of a new State hospital on the site now owned by the State at Marcy near Utica, also for the expansion of both the Brooklyn and Creedmoor branches of the Brooklyn State Hospital. A new psychopathic hospital for the metropolitan district is recommended; such an institution would serve as a hospital for temporary care and as a research and teaching institute.

The Commission is composed of Dr. Charles W. Filigen, Chairman, Andrew D. Morgan and Frederick A. Higgins. Everett S. Elwood is Secretary.

SOCIAL TOPICS DISCUSSED AT CORNELL FARMERS' WEEK

Mise H. Ids Curry, the Association's Superintendent of Children's Agencies, gave an address on "How to Prevent Juvenile Delinquency in Rural New York," during Farmers' Week at the Agricultural College at Cornell University recently. The Agricultural College has just established a Department of Rural Sociology, with Professor Dwight Sanderson in charge. This was the first time, social topics were discussed during Farmers' Week. These sessions were well attended, and aroused much interest.

The recent report of the Federal Children's Bureau on "Juvenile Delinquency in Rural New York" was discussed by J. C. Cook of South Byron, N. Y., a prominent member of the New York Grange.

Dean A. R. Mann of the Agricultural College gave an interesting address on "New Social Responsibilities of the Rural Community," in which he opened the way for a new consideration of the State Board of Charities spoke on "What does the Rural Community Owe to its Children?" One of the sessions of the conference was also devoted to problems of Americanization of immigrants, and one to rural nursing.
Oppose Bill To Appoint Laymen as Superintendents of Tuberculosis Sanatoriums

Proposed Law to Put Medical Task in Hands of Lay Executives Would Be Lamentable and Backward Step

Vigorous opposition to the Thompson-Mooneyney Bill (Senate, Printed Nos. 71, 107; Assembly, Printed Nos. 136, 327), now pending in the Legislature and proposing to make possible the employment of laymen as superintendents of the Niagara and Nassau County tuberculosis sanatoriums, is being made by a number of public health, social welfare and civic organizations.

The Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association has stated cogent reasons why, in the opinion of the Association, the bill should not become law. The Committee asserts that there is no well managed and efficient public tuberculosis hospital or sanatorium in the United States in which the final authority over policies and practice is vested in a lay superintendent. The experiment has been tried out and has been found to be a failure. The tendency is entirely in the other direction. Tuberculosis experts of the country are against it, not because it is impossible to find a lay superintendent with broad enough experience and sufficiently specialized knowledge to give satisfactory results, but because in the long run the chances of securing the right man are much greater, if the selection of a superintendent is confined to the ranks of the medical profession.

Four Reasons Why Bill Is Bad

Four reasons are advanced for the Association's opposition to the passage of the bill:

1. The business of a tuberculosis sanatorium is to treat tuberculosis with a view to improving the condition, prolonging the life and restoring the working capacity of the patient.

While the public has a right to demand that the institution be managed economically, the first function of the sanatorium is medical—and a highly specialized branch of medicine, at that. It is very easy to conceive that an institution might be managed economically, with efficient business methods, at a low per capita cost, and yet fail absolutely to achieve the purpose for which it is created. In that case the taxpayer's money may be wasted, and the institution may better never have been created at all.

2. As an illustration of this, several important questions which come up for decision almost daily in the management of a tuberculosis hospital or sanatorium are cited as follows:

(a) Successful treatment of tuberculosis requires skill in methods of diagnosis, high standards of medical and nursing care, expert judgment in matters of diet, rest and exercise.

(b) Successful treatment also requires ability to determine the significance of sputum and blood examinations, urinalysis, tuberculin reactions, the ability to determine when X-ray or gas treatment should be given, ability to interpret photofluoroscopic examinations, and to decide upon the relative value of all of these as a part of the course of treatment of the individual case.

Must Be Discriminating

(c) As there is no specific cure for tuberculosis, new cases are constantly being proposed. The superintendent must be able to judge between remedies which may have sufficient merit to warrant a trial and those which are out and out failures.

(d) An undervaluation of the importance of laboratory and research work and failure to provide facilities for the same might work serious detriment to the efficiency of the institution. It must appear obvious that in a great majority of cases a lay superintendent would be unable to determine a correct course of procedure in all these matters. The point that he could always secure medical advice is not of great weight because the lack of knowledge might frequently prevent knowing when the advice given is of any value.

3. The only condition under which it might be feasible to place the institution under a lay superintendent would be where the superintendent himself is responsible to a small Board of Directors or Managers who are themselves trained in the treatment of the disease; or, at least, enough of whom are experts to have a controlling voice in the policies of the institution.

4. The argument is sometimes made that a layman, and not a physician should be in charge of a public hospital because physicians are not usually good business men, and much of the success of such institutions is due to the success or failure of its business manager. It may be conceded that, generally speaking, a physician is less likely to be a good administrator on the business side than a layman, but if a tuberculosis hospital fails on the medical side, it is worse than a total failure, it is a waste and a fraud on the public if it is partly fails on the business side but succeeds on the medical side it nevertheless accomplishes its chief function.

The main thing that is considered is that the final decision as to the policies and practice of the institutions should be in the hands of physicians and not laymen. Without such final control in the hands of recognized tuberculosis experts, the Association's Tuberculosis Committee believes that institutions such as the Niagara County Sanatorium or the Nassau County Sanatorium under a lay superintendent would be fraught with grave dangers, and would open the way to similar exceptions in other institutions, thereby ultimately lowering the standards of the county tuberculosis hospitals in New York State.

FIVE UP-STATE COUNTIES ORGANIZE FOR INTENSIVE WORK AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

Substantial progress has been made during the last month in placing the tuberculosis association work on a county-wide basis in five counties in which heretofore it has been carried on on a city or village basis. Officers have been elected, definite programs of activities adopted and work started in Rensselaer, Albany, Oneida, Fulton and Broome Counties.

In Albany County the preliminary organization of a county tuberculosis committee has been effected with the election of the following officers: President, Charles Gibson, Albany; Vice-Presidents, Charles F. Ford, Cohoes, and Mrs. E. F. Roy, Watervliet; Secretary, Mrs. O. R. Eichel, Albany; Treasurer, Frederick Stevens, Albany.

Miss Ida May Robins, until recently the supervisor of the housing, sanitation, recreation and working conditions of women employees in a large plant of the DuPont Powder Company, has been employed as full-time executive secretary and assumed her duties February 15.

Fulton County has organized on a county-wide basis, electing Fred L. Carroll of Johnstown, President. The other officers are Vice-President, J. Edward Grant, Northville; Secretary, Mrs. Edward Wells, Johnstown; and Treasurer, Edwin C. Naylor of Gloversville. A definite program of work for the year has been outlined. A paid worker is to be employed in the joint capacity of visiting nurse and executive secretary.

At the organization meeting of the Oneida County Tuberculosis Committee the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. J. Ullian, Utica; Vice-President, F. F. Kissinger, Rome; Dr. Florence I. Staunton, Utica; and Miss Lucy Carille Watson, Utica; Secretary, Robert D. Fraser, Utica; Treasurer, David G. Jones, Utica. A full-time executive secretary will be selected by the Oneida County Committee to take charge of the activities outlined for the county during the coming year.

Walter P. Warren, Jr., has been chosen to head the new Rensselaer County Tuberculosis Committee for this year. The other officers are: President, Charles M. Ricketts, Troy; Dwight Marvin, Troy; William A. Dunne, Troy; and W. Y. Lansing, Rensselaer. Secretary, Dr. R. H. Irvin, Troy; Treasurer, W. Leland Thompson, Troy. Joseph Herzstein, graduate of the City College of New York and of the public health course of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been selected as the full-time executive secretary of the new committee. Mr. Herzstein has had several years experience in health work, having been for five years secretary of the New York State Ventilating Commission which has made some notable contributions to the scientific knowledge of ventilation. Mr. Herzstein has just completed the institute course for the training of tuberculosis executives given by the National Tuberculosis Association.

In Broome County a sub-committee of the Broome County Tuberculosis Committee has been organized with E. A. Farnham, the Rev. C. A. Ritchie and Amos Johnson to carry on the county-wide educational and publicity campaign. The Committee has employed as executive secretary Miss Marie L. Hawley of St. Louis, Mo., for three years a member of the staff of the St. Louis Tuberculosis Association. She has been taken into the course of training at the Tuberculosis Institute conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association.
$2,456,000 IS APPROPRIATED FOR HOUSING OF DEFECTIVES AND INSANE

GOVERNOR AND LEGISLATURE START TO END CONGESTION

SOME hope of relieving the congestion in institutions for the insane and of getting more accommodations for the feebleminded is afforded by the annual Appropriation Bill which has just been passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor.

The bill was introduced in both houses on March 11. This early introduction date gave ample opportunity for a close scrutiny and study of the items.

The bill carried a total of $59,300,000, a substantial increase over last year’s bill. Governor Smith reduced it to $57,310,948.

The entire State budget for this year will total about $90,000,000. The amounts other than those in the general appropriation bill, are provided in special acts for specific purposes.

The increase in the general appropriation bill this year is attributed by Senator Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, to the new construction program, the extra support given to the common schools, the difference in pay for State employees in military service, and an increase in compensation for State employees. The overhead expenses of government in the State this year are virtually the same as last year, he states.

For Institutional Development

The Appropriation Bill, which reflects the program of the Hospital Development Commission, carries total appropriations of $2,456,000 for the enlargement of institutions for the insane, feebleminded and epileptic, and additional authorizations of $1,320,000—a total of $3,776,000 of authorization and appropriation.

Of these amounts, $1,551,300 is provided for new construction or permanent betterments at State hospitals for the insane, with additional authorizations of $962,500, making a total of $2,513,700 of appropriation and authorization.

Better Wages Necessary For State Hospital Employees

1,000 Places Vacant in the Service and Pay Is So Small They Cannot Be Filled—Hospital Standards Suffer

It is earnestly hoped that the Legislature will pass and the Governor will sign the Cotillo-Sammis bill to increase the pay of the employees of the State hospitals for mental diseases.

It is generally conceded that they have been seriously underpaid for a long time and this has made it extremely difficult, and at times almost impossible, to get enough employees to man the institutions. This condition inevitably lowers the standards of care and treatment prevailing in the hospitals.

In all, over 6,000 employees are required to man the thirteen civil State hospitals. Over 1,000 places are vacant now because of inability to get nurses, attendants, engineers, domestic workers, bakers, laundromen and other workers, on account of the scant wages.

The proposed increase will total about $850,000, three-fourths of which will go to the ward employees.

A public hearing on the bill was held before the Senate Finance Committee and the Assembly Ways and Means Committee on March 20. A petition urging the increase on behalf of the employees, members of the Boards of Managers and superintendents of the State hospitals, and the State Hospital Commission was presented. No opposition to the bill was offered.

Senator Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who presided, expressed the interest of the Committee and the Legislature in raising the compensation of employees as much as compatible with the financial interests of the State. He called attention to the fact that the State must find $25,000,000 additional revenue for the expenses of government this year, but declared that the State hospital employees were entitled to better compensation because of the nature of their work and their devotion to this difficult and often distasteful labor.

The speakers in favor of the bill included Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission; Judge Robert S. Waterman, Secretary of the Board of Managers of the St. Lawrence State Hospital at Ogdensburg; Mrs. Agnes D. Dрукhan of the Board of Managers of the Brooklyn State Hospital; Dr. Charles G. Wagner, Superintendent of the Binghamton State Hospital; Dr. Isamah G. Harris, Superintendent of the Brooklyn State Hospital; Senator George L. Thompson of Nassau; George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Mental Hygiene of the State Charities Aid Association; Dr. L. C. Mead of Orange; John C. Imhoff, Vice-president of the New York State Federation of Labor; George H. Hamilton of Rochester State Hospital, and Miss Katherine Henry of the Manhattan State Hospital.

The gist of the arguments was that the employees were grossly underpaid. Judge Waterman said there had been no general increase in twenty years. Male employees taking care of insane patients receive only a dollar a day and their board and the women twenty-five cents a day and their board. The increases asked are about 25 per cent.

Mr. Hastings, on behalf of the Mental Hygiene Committee, said: "As a whole the employees in the State hospitals have the most trying work, the longest hours, and the poorest way of any employees in the State service, and in addition are subject to considerable hazards in caring for difficult or dangerous patients."

He urged the increase in justice to the employees, in order to maintain the high standards which have characterized the State hospitals for mental diseases, in order to provide equal pay for equal work in the supervisory grades where the work for men and women is actually the same, and because the hospitals require more funds not only to get good grade of employees, but to get any employees at all in competition with positions in civil lines.

He urged that the entire increase asked for be granted on the ground that it is deserved by all the employees and especially because three-fourths of the increase will go to the ward workers who have been the most seriously underpaid and whose work is the most difficult.

Dr. Harris stated that in trying to hire employees at Brooklyn he had been told that they could make more money in a few dollars in hotels and restaurants than the State offered in wages. The wages are so low that the employees have no money left to buy and save for the necessities of the future. The Binghamton State Hospital, employing 500 persons, had 530 new employees during the year, or over 100 per cent changes. The Brooklyn State Hospital had 220 per cent of changes. Thirty-seven letters sent out for stenographers resulted in only one applicant, and 45 letters for a pharmacist resulted in no applicants. Dr. Harris called attention to the fact that the wages of the State hospital employees are much lower than the compensation of similar employees in the New York City institutions.

Mr. Imhoff showed how unfairly the wages in the hospitals compare with wages of artisans and laborers outside.

Senator Cotillo said that if the State can afford to spend $6,000,000 for a vehicular tunnel from New York to New Jersey, it surely can afford a sum that is under a million dollars to pay the State hospital employees more adequately and insure a better and more permanent service.
GOVERNOR SMITH VETOES SOLDIERS' HOME MEASURE

Sees Wiser Way of Providing for World War Veterans Than in Custodial Institutions

"I am confident that some more satisfactory and intelligent plan will be developed for the care of our returning soldiers who have been disabled than the placing of them in a custodial institution."

Wisely holding to this view, Governor Smith has vetoed the Carson-Quackenbush bill which was intended to provide for the admission to the New York State Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Bath, of disabled and dependent New York men who had served in the World War.

The veto in connection with this bill means much, because by it the Governor is upholding a newer conception of the State's duty and obligation to its defenders, namely, that it must reestablish them into social and commercial relations, and not relegate them to a custodial institution. The Governor is entitled to commendation for his action.

Many Objections to Bill

The bill was open to serious objection because when the World War started definite plans were made to care for the injured and wounded soldiers in a more intelligent and humane way than the soldiers of the Civil War were cared for. After the Civil War soldiers' homes were erected and any soldiers who could not adjust themselves to commercial conditions were permitted to enter such homes to be cared for by the State or Nation. It was found that life in a soldiers' home was very demoralizing. The institution—no matter how good and well run—not only removes the man from a productive life but from participation in social, civic and governmental affairs in fact, from almost everything that makes a real man.

So, providing by the Civil War experience the government planned a wiser system of dealing with the soldiers of the World War. By means of insurance, compensation and vocational re habilitation it is endeavoring to restore wounded men back into life, so that they can be made productive and a factor in society as they were heretofore. It was felt that if the Soldiers' Homes at Bath were opened to New York veterans of the present war, sooner or later it would be filled up and the same old process would be renewed and perpetuated which has been in operation since the Civil War.

The passage of the bill by both houses of the Legislature undoubtedly was an expression of a desire on the part of the legislators to render a good turn to the soldiers, but unquestionably what they intended to be a good turn would have resulted in a distinct injury and would have helped to perpetuate the old institutional idea.

The Governor's Veto Message

Apparently all these facts were taken into consideration by Governor Smith. In a mes-

DR. FARRAND EXECUTIVE HEAD OF THE RED CROSS

Dr. Livingston Farrand, President of the University of Colorado, who was recently appointed Chairman of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross to succeed William H. Taft, has been spending a few weeks in Europe to get in touch with the work there. Dr. Farrand became the executive head of the American Red Cross organization upon the retirement of the War Council.

Since the entrance of the United States into the war, Dr. Farrand has been director of the tuberculosis work of the International Health Board of the Rockefeller Foundation in France. He went abroad at the same time that Homer Weeks went to France as a representative of the Red Cross and remained there until a few months ago. Dr. Farrand was recently made an officer of the Legion of Honor in France.

In Paris Dr. Farrand has been conferring with American and foreign experts regarding the formation of an international Red Cross organization and about plans for public health work.

INFLUENZA CAUSED 590 DEATHS IN STATE HOSPITALS

A review of the recent epidemic of influenza in the New York State hospitals appears in the current number of The State Hospital Bulletin. It was prepared by Dr. Walter G. Ryon, Superintendent of the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie. From the latter part of September to January 15, 5,148 cases of influenza occurred in the thirteen civil state hospitals. Of these, 590 cases died from the influenza, or pneumonia, and other complications. The deaths included a number of officers and employees, as well as patients.

OPPOSE BILL TO ABOLISH PUBLIC HEALTH COUNCIL

Removal of the Expert Advisers to the Health Department Would Undermine Its Efficiency

The efficiency of the State Department of Health is jeopardized by a bill now pending in the Legislature to abolish the Public Health Council. This Council is composed of six members appointed by the Governor, with the addition of the Commissioner of Health ex-officio. The Legislature delegates to this Council the power to pass health legislation in the form of a Health Code. The Health Code includes the health rules and regulations which the State Department of Health enforces. These must be amended from time to time. Naturally, these regulations irritate, at times, some local indifferent and lazy official. Such irritation not infrequently leads to resentment and attack.

If the Health Commissioner were solely responsible for the disturbing rule, the attack might increase and ultimately cause his discharge or resignation. A Health Council, however, cannot be thus successfully attacked; it is a buffer for the Commissioner, and a protection to the stability of the Department. If the Legislature by design wished to gradually undermine and eventually abolish the State Health Department, it could adopt no more subtle yet sure method than to remove the Health Council.

The bill is Senate No. 422, Print 438, Gibbs, and should be opposed by all who recognize the importance of the State Department of Health.
PREVENT POVERTY, URGES STATE CHARITIES BOARD

REDUCE MILLIONS FOR MAINTENANCE BY GETTING AT CAUSES

GREATEST attention to the welfare of children and the adoption of definite programs to protect childhood from moral and physical dangers and to provide for a healthy childhood, are recommended in the fifty-second annual report of the State Board of Charities recently submitted to the Legislature.

The report advocates the establishment of playgrounds and other forms of community recreation and urges that educational requirements and child-labor laws which have been formulated for the purpose of protecting children should not be weakened.

Special attention is called to the amount of money which is being expended by various sections of the State for charitable purposes.

The organizations which report to the Board aggregate a total of more than $38,000,000 annually for maintenance alone. This is by no means the total cost of charity to the State as there are a great many organizations that are not obliged to report to the State Board of Charities.

The Board calls attention to the fact that in the handling of this immense sum of money annually there has been practically no scandal or any evidence of dishonesty.

Should Get at Causes of Poverty

Special emphasis is laid on the necessity of preventive measures by the State and by the local communities. The financial cost of charitable institutions is becoming one of the most important and largest items in the State and local budgets. The Board therefore urges the communities to seriously consider the matter of reducing these expenditures by getting at the causes of poverty, crime and sickness.

One preventive measure recommended is that the State should give attention to the problem of the feebleminded and arrange for the elimination of these persons from the community or the education of such of them as are capable of being educated.

The report also recommends health insurance, claiming that more than seventy-eight per cent of poverty is due to illness. More than five hundred millions of dollars in wages are lost annually because of sickness of wage earners, it states. It also recommends that efforts be made to rehabilitate those handicapped in industry just as the government is now attempting to do this service for men who have been injured in the war. Industrial education is another recommendation, and the experience of the government is referred to in that it could not find the trained and skilled men that it needed at the outbreak of the war. The possibilities of a life of crime and pauperism are many times greater in the case of an individual who has no industrial education, it is pointed out.

10,000 Institution Boys in War Service

The report also refers to the splendid contributions made by the charitable institutions of the State to war service. About 10,000 boys previously cared for in charitable institutions of the State have been in the service and many of them have distinguished themselves by their bravery under fire.

27,000 Cases of Influenza

Referring to the influenza epidemic, the report states that there have been in 280 institutions, 27,296 cases of the disease among public charges and of this number there were 4,105 deaths. The far-reaching effects of the epidemic are pointed out and that while about 1,400 children had been or were about to be committed to children's institutions by reason of the loss of parents, probably for many years to come the financial burden on the cities and counties would be felt because of the breaking down of people who have been weakened by the disease.

The report urges that there should be a union of all citizens, irrespective of creed or political belief, to advocate and carry through in their community a program having for its object the prevention of social evils and making the city or town cleaner, healthier and safer for the children and all others who reside in it.

During the year 1,545 persons have been returned to their homes in other States or counties. These persons otherwise would have become a charge either upon the State or the counties and by their removal the State has saved an annual expenditure of thousands of dollars. Since the act of 1880, making this a duty of the State Board of Charities, 52,000 persons have been removed from the State either to other countries or other States of the union. Most of these would undoubtedly have been permanent dependents upon public charity.

The amount expended for the relief of Indian poor was $8,348.00 and eighty-five Indians are provided for in almshouses or asylums. The report calls attention to the fact that there are about 7,000 Indians in the State, the majority of whom are in poor circumstances, liable to debilitating diseases and contagious epidemics.

Smallpox has appeared upon several reservations during the year and has been difficult to control. The insanitary condition of many Indian homes tends to recurring outbreaks of what are known as "filth diseases."

Attention is also called to the fact that there are still survivors of the Civil War in need of the State's care; 1,886 veterans have been cared for in the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home and their average age is over 75 years. There are 500 in the hospital and about sixty members of the Home died during the year.

MAJOR HUTCHINGS NEW Supt. of Utica State Hospital

Major Richard H. Hutchings, who has been Superintendent of the St. Lawrence State Hospital at Ogdensburg since 1903, has been transferred to the superintendency of the Utica State Hospital and assumed his new duties on April 1. He succeeds Dr. Harold L. Palmer, who has resigned after long and valuable service and will conduct a private sanitarium for mental cases at Clinton, N. Y.

Dr. Hutchings is an exceedingly capable and progressive superintendent and his appointment to fill the vacancy met with widespread approval. He becomes the head of the Utica institution just on the eve of the important project of building up a branch at Marcy, nearby, to accommodate 5,000 patients. Dr. Hutchings will also devote considerable effort to increasing the out-patient work in the Utica district.

Major Hutchings is one of the best known State hospital men in the country. He has been serving in the Medical Corps of the United States Army since August, 1917, receiving his discharge only recently. He was located for six months at Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., six months in the office of the Surgeon General in Washington, and more recently was in charge of important neuropsychiatric work in the base hospital at Plattsburgh.
VACCINATE 19,000 PATIENTS IN THE STATE HOSPITALS

Precaution Against Pneumonia—Expert in Charge Praises Management of Institutions

The United States Public Health Service, with the cooperation of the State Hospital Commission and the State Department of Health, has been administering the recently perfected vaccine for pneumonia to the patients of the State hospitals for the insane.

The work has been in charge of Captain H. E. Hasseltine of the Health Service. Captain Hasseltine, in his report to the State Hospital Commission, says:

"Having finished the work of administering the pneumococcus vaccine to infants of the State hospitals of New York, I desire to thank you for the courtesies and cooperation you have extended to me and my assistants and for having administered the vaccine to approximately one-half of the infants of the thirteen civil State hospitals, which gives a vaccinated group of approximately 19,000 persons. This, we trust, will give an excellent demonstration of the value of the vaccine under the conditions in which it was used. I had an opportunity to see the methods of management in your hospitals and cannot speak too highly of the general efficiency and spirit of cooperation which I found in these institutions. I think that the State hospital system of New York can be properly taken as a model for all other States."

Developments will be watched with interest by the hospital physicians, as well as by the medical profession generally, as pneumonia is always a very serious problem in large institutions. This system has been used very extensively in the military forces with gratifying results, and the primary purpose of this work is to ascertain if the method is as likely to prove effective here as in those forces. In fact, the whole action is extremely simple with little or no reaction. The entire expense of the work is borne by the federal government.

NEW ACTIVITY IN MENTAL CLINICS SINCE THE WAR

With the return of physicians from army service, the out-patient department work of the State hospitals is resuming something like its pre-war activity.

The State hospitals are active centers for the prevention of nervous and mental diseases and will doubtless become more and more so as the knowledge about such disorders disclosed by the war is made use of in the future.

At a recent session of a clinic held by the Middletown State Hospital at Newburgh, 35 persons called for advice, information or treatment under various conditions. In all, 181 cases, one paroled case, and the others were persons who called to inquire about friends or relatives.

At a clinic held by the same State hospital at Kingston, eleven persons called, among them being five new cases. It is interesting to see such an occurrence of this in small clinics. It indicates how the clinic has become to be valued as a stabilizing force in the mental balance of the community.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF COUNTY AGENTS

The ninth annual conference of the State Charities Aid Association's Agents for Dependent Children was held in New York City on March 18 and 19. Thirty-five agents from the different counties of the State were in attendance. These agents act as assistants to Poor Law officials in looking after the welfare of the children in their respective territories.

The following cases were presented for discussion: An influenza case, presented by Miss Hutchings of Seneca County; a delinquent girl case by Miss Deuel of Chemung County; a case of illegitimacy by Miss Kerr of Yates County; delinquent girl case by Miss Hopkins of Montgomery County; improper guardianship case by Miss Mitchell of Columbia County; court commitment of a feebleminded person, by Miss Arms of Tioga County. Discussions were led by Miss Mertz of Chautauqua County, Miss Mendum of Rensselaer County, Miss Ewer of Westchester County and Miss Tippet of Chautauqua County.

The discussion on boarding homes was led by Miss Ruth Taylor, Director of the Child Welfare Department of Westchester County, the conference on Placing Out being led by Miss Sophie von S. Theis, Superintendent of the Placing Out Department of the Association.

Miss Berry, Superintendent of County Agencies Department, led the general discussion on "What Constitutes Necessity for Placement of Homeless Children," and "Does the Physical, Moral and Intellectual Well-being of a Child Demand of Any Home—Its Own Home or Its Foster Home?" Mrs. Learn, Assistant Superintendent of County Agencies, led the discussion on the Relation of county agents to local committees and to officials, and Mrs. Cross, Assistant Superintendent of the department, led the discussion on The agents' relations to institutions and to other agencies.

In course of the conference the various branches of work done by the Association were explained by department heads from the central office.

An informal tea was given the agents at the Manhattan Trade School, and the following day the agents attended the monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Association.

MENTAL HYGIENE COMMITTEE ADDS 3 WORKERS TO STAFF

The Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association is enlarging the staff of its Social Service Department to keep pace with the growth of its general work and to aid the New York County Chapter of the American Red Cross in dealing with cases of discharged soldiers and sailors where mental factors are involved.

Miss Marie von H. Byers has been added to the staff for general work with civilian cases. Miss Eleanor Barrows of California and Miss Alice K. Humphrey of New York have been engaged to work for the Red Cross in cooperation with the Mental Hygiene Committee. All three are graduates of the Smith College Training School. Miss Humphrey has recently been at U. S. Base Hospital 30 at Plattsburg.

Colonel Folks is back in Paris; sails for U. S. May 10.

Lieutenant Colonel Homer Folks, who returned to Paris early in February after making a three months' survey of after-the-war conditions in various European countries for the Red Cross, is expected to return to this country about the middle of May. Just as we go to press a cable message is received stating that Col. Folks and family will sail for the United States on the Carmania on May 10.

Colonel Folks has been formulating reports and a number of Red Cross societies of various nations who are planning an international Red Cross organization, with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.
BILL FOR COUNTY CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION SHOULD BE DEFEATED

Measure Would Lower the Standards of Health and Children’s Work in Counties

A bill now in the Legislature opposed by the State Charities Aid Association is designed to create county civil service commissions.

Its opposition is prompted by the effect such a bill, if it were enacted into law, might have upon the health and children’s work of the counties.

A large proportion of the counties have each a tuberculosis hospital, also one or more visiting nurses. The superintendents of these hospitals are physicians with training in the diagnosis of tuberculosis and in the administration of that class of hospitals; the nurses are likewise specially trained in health work. These superintendents and nurses are taken from a civil service list created by the State Civil Service Commission, a list composed of those having successfully passed an examination, and residents in any part of the State.

A county civil service commission might confine such examinations to applicants from the county, or it might readily exempt the positions so that they could be filled by political appointments. To confine applications to the county might not lower the service in populous counties, but in counties having no large cities, no suitable applicants might be found. The result of exempting the positions would inevitably lower standards.

All who desire to see the standards of their county health maintained should oppose this bill. It is Senate Rec. No. 46, Print 765. Write to your Senator and Assemblyman.

NAMED AS MANAGERS OF STATE INSTITUTIONS

The following additional nominations as members of the Boards of Managers of various State institutions have been sent to the Senate by Governor Smith.

George T. Roche, of Rochester, renominated as a member of the Board of Managers of the State Agricultural and Industrial School; Louis Shulman, of Rochester, nominated to this Board, to succeed Eugene Raines.

Herbert F. Gunnison, of Brooklyn, to succeed George E. Brower, Brooklyn State Hospital.

Philip G. Schaef er, of Buf falo, to succeed William A. Douglas, Buffalo State Hospital.

James MacGregor Smith, of New York City, renominated; Fanny M. Pollak, of New York City, to succeed Alice M. Flagler, deceased; and Elizabeth M. Long, of New York City, to succeed Harry C. Hart, all for Central Islip State Hospital.

Dr. George A. Leitner, of Poughkeepsie, renominated, the State Training School for Girls at Hudson.

Thomas J. Colton, of New York City, re-nominated, Letchworth Village, Thie la.

Dr. Robert Abrahams, of New York City, renominated, Manhattan State Hospital, Warren Island.

Philip H. Minshall, of Middletown, to succeed William H. Rogers, Middletown State Homoeopathic Hospital.

Rev. Thomas B. Kelly, of Mt. Kisco, to succeed Caroline Choate, the State Reformatory for Women at Bedford Hills.

James E. Kelly, of Ogdensburg, to succeed Matt C. Ransom, St. Lawrence State Hospital.

Pearl Spigel Elias, renominated, Western House of Refuge at Albion.

Governor Smith is being widely commended on the fitness of the candidates whom he has nominated for the various Boards of Managers.

TO PROVIDE FOR 840 MORE PATIENTS AT LETCHWORTH VILLAGE THIS YEAR

In spite of the handicap of war conditions, splendid progress has been made on the construction of new buildings at Letchworth Village during the past year.

It is expected that accommodations for 840 more patients will be opened this year, bringing the population up to about 1,200. Present indications are that 280 beds will be ready in June and 560 in December. Work on the buildings now under construction will be rushed to the utmost this summer.

The current Appropriation Bill just signed by Governor Smith, carries funds to erect another group of buildings for girls consisting of eight cottages, a service building, an industrial building and an officers’ cottage. Funds are also provided to complete the industrial building in the boys’ group now under construction. The total appropriation is $822,600.

This year’s appropriations for new construction at institutions for the feebleminded are being largely concentrated at Letchworth Village in order to complete the institution. This institution doubtless is destined to become one of the greatest, if not the greatest, institution for defectives in the United States. Present plans contemplate a capacity of about 3,300 patients, and it is not unlikely that eventually it will be enlarged to accommodate 5,000. It will serve the great metropolitan district.

Visitors to the institution are increasingly impressed with its splendid possibilities in the way of providing accommodations for a large number of patients and for its administration on an economical basis. The property is so large, the site so well adapted to the purpose and the institution is so designed that a large institution can be maintained without congestion and other drawbacks often inherent in large institutions.

SURVEY OF PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING IN WESTCHESTER

The Westchester County Conference on Public Health Nursing, which meets one day a year to discuss local nursing problems, is taking the first step toward a better organization of the nursing agencies of the county by having a survey made. Westchester was one of the first counties in which district nursing associations were organized, and for many years its territory has been almost entirely covered by a series of entirely independent private organizations. Under the presidency of Mrs. V. Everit Macy, the County Conference has asked the National Organization for Public Health Nursing to study the field and to recommend to the conference a plan for a federation of nursing associations.

Miss Sue LaForge, R. N., who has had wide experience in such work, is at present making a detailed study of all agencies in the county, public or private, employing visiting nurses. Her report will probably be presented to the Nursing Conference this month.

The infantile paralysis epidemic in 1916 and the recent influenza epidemic have lent much emphasis to the demand for a better organization of the nursing resources of the county, and it is earnestly hoped that as a result of Miss LaForge’s work a strong county federation may be established.
The Great Lesson of the War

By GEORGE F. CANFIELD
President of the State Charities Aid Association

At the recent annual meeting of the State Charities Aid Association, George F. Canfield was re-elected President of the Association for the ensuing year. In the course of his address to the Association at the meeting he said, among other things:

The year which has elapsed since our last annual meeting has been a period of wonderful events. A year ago, fortunately we were at war with the Central Powers. We had made our belated entry into the conflict. But, unfortunately, although we were at war, we were not really in the fight. We were engaged in our preparations, and the air was filled with criticism, complaint and dissatisfaction with our efforts, and there was widespread apprehension that we had discovered too late that we were really concerned in the cause and consequences of the European conflict and that the terrible verdict of history upon our efforts and intervention might be "too late."

But, in spite of mistakes and blunders, most of which were doubtless unavoidable, and in spite of the great blunder, for which the whole country with its taint of pacifism was responsible, that we made no preparations for nearly three years, while the storm was raging across the waters—in spite of all this, we played a noble part in the struggle for freedom, as King George graciously acknowledged in his telegram of congratulations to President Wilson, and we emerged from the conflict a nation of which we all may be proud.

The S. C. A. A. and the War

At the outbreak of the war, the State Charities Aid Association tendered its services to the Federal Government and to the State Government, and the Association, its officers and employees, were at the service of our country, realizing that satisfaction could only be found in doing our utmost to help to win the war. For myself, I felt that the Association could render no better service than to stick to its job and to carry on as effectively and thoroughly as possible its regular work. Through our work on behalf of dependent children, through our work for the promotion of the public health, our tuberculosis work and our mental hygiene work, and through our supervision of the administration of public charity and co-operation with officials in that administration, we could contribute to the conservation of human resources, and that was a very direct way of doing our bit to help to win the war.

During the past year, our Association has successfully carried on its regular work, and we are grateful to the office staff not only for the good work which they have done as representatives of the Association, but for the extra work which they did, especially in connection with the administration of the Draft Act and with the epidemic of influenza.

A Democracy Safe for the World

Since the signing of the armistice, there has been much consideration of the lessons to be derived from the world's experience during the past four years and from the history of the Allies over the Central Powers. We have been fighting, it is said, to "make the world safe for democracy," and we like to think that this fight has not been won. All that we can now say, however, is that the world has been made safe against the autocracy of imperialism. Whether it has also been made safe for democracy, as we understand it, that is, a democracy based upon the institution of property and individualism, and whether the democracy which we are hereafter to live under is to be a democracy safe for the world, are questions yet to be determined.

With despotic Bolshevism menacing Europe, with the sporadic outbreaks of the I. W. W. in this country, externalized, palliated or condoned by some sociologists, and ambitious statesmen, with the great army of railway employees demanding ownership of our railway companies upon the basis of sharing the profits and letting the government pay all the losses—the principle of "brads 1 win, and tails you lose"—with frenzied women burning in effigy President Wilson, because somebody, whom he could not control, or, if he could, ought not to control, did not give them what they want, and with absolute prohibition sweeping through the land, even one who is not a pessimist cannot escape a sense of the gravity of the problems which confront us.

But we can derive hope and encouragement from the thought that the world's experience during the last four years has demonstrated—and it would seem demonstrated beyond any possibility of question—that democracy as we have understood it in this country, based upon property and individualism, is the most potent agency for the advancement of civilization and for the development of the highest qualities of mankind. With their hastily assembled resources, the free nations of the world were able to present an impregnable barrier against the sudden and desperate assault of the Central Powers, and to triumph over all the obstacles, for the extra and considervations of the odious autocracies.

The Chief Lessons of the War

How was this miracle performed? Because the individual units of the Allies, on account of their greater self-reliance, resourcefulness and alertness, engendered by the spirit of national life, improved themselves to be superior to the individual units of the Central Powers, who had lost their sinews of war and crushed out of them and had become mere cogs in a vast despotic machine. This is to me the great lesson of the war. It is so clear that he who runs may read, and it is most amazing that just at this time of the supreme triumph of individualism over autocracy, the results are so clearly revealed with so much enthusiasm and defiance.

I am thinking of these things and talking about them because I have a feeling that upon our work and are relevant to a consideration of the value and importance of it. Our Association, by its care of children, its public health work, and its work in connection with the administration of public charity, is helping to improve the individual, to make him self-reliant and capable of enjoying the blessings of a true democracy. This we are doing with private funds and as a matter of individual enterprise. In the last analysis, therefore, the effect of our work and our methods should be to strengthen the foundations of individualism and, to the extent that we succeed in doing this, we are helping to strengthen and preserve our institutions.

Important Work Ahead

In looking forward to our immediate future, we have today two special reasons for hope and encouragement. Within a few weeks Mr. Polks, or I should say Lieutenant Colonel Polks, is coming back to us after two years of service in France, and he will come back enriched by his experiences and with a broader vision of hope and purpose. And let us always remember that the Rusell Sage Foundation for funds which have enabled us to do some of our most important work, and this latest munificent gift increases our sense of obligation and grateful appreciation for the assistance which we have received.

But let no friend of this Association and no contributor to its funds assume for a moment that this large gift relieves him from continuing his support. We have need and use for all the funds that we can obtain, and, indeed, had it not been for this unexpected legacy, we should probably have been obliged to curtail some of our most useful work, to the serious detriment of our Association and the public welfare.

Tuberculosis Nurse in Dutchess County

The Dutchess County Health Association has engaged Miss Irene Coltart, R. N., to do tuberculosis work throughout Dutchess County.
GUARD AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS
AS AFTERMATH OF INFLUENZA

The menace of tuberculosis as an after effect of influenza is being called to the attention of local tuberculosis organizations throughout New York State by the Association's Tuberculosis Committee in a bulletin recently issued for State-wide publication.

The bulletin states that the duty of the local organizations is to notify the people that this danger exists and to provide expert medical examination for those who, without local help, cannot have it. The bulletin says: "Leading medical authorities are watching with concern the harm and that attack of influenza may do to previously existing tуберкулез, which may be totally or partially inactive, as well as its development in persons previously believed to be free from it."

"Every person who has been ill with influenza and who has failed to make a reasonably prompt and complete recovery is urged to procure a thoracic x-ray examination and the cooperation of symptoms which are so closely related to those of tuberculosis and which often require repeated examinations by expert physicians in lung diseases to make the distinction between the two. Prolonged influenza, coughs and other symptoms may not necessarily be due to influenza, but may be due to tuberculosis which has been developed or 'lighted up' by an attack of influenza."

The State Tuberculosis Committee requests that local organizations inform the people of the community of the danger which exists and of the necessity of early, skillful medical examinations. Local organizations are urged to procure, through the State Committee, a supply of the leaflet entitled, 'Beware of Tuberculosis After Influenza,' for free distribution to those believed to be free from influenza. The importance of skillful medical examination is set forth and, where no tuberculosis dispensary has been established, it is urged that occasional clinics be held. Such a clinic would make available the services of a tuberculosis expert for all who need examinations and can not obtain them. Such occasional clinics are being carried on successfully in a number of places in several counties in New York State and at a relatively small expense to the local organizations and no expense to the patients."

Clinic Work in St. Lawrence.
St. Lawrence County's first tuberculosis clinic, recently opened by the tuberculosis nurse employed by the County Tuberculosis Committee, has charge of the arrangements. Dr. Stanley L. Wang of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee staff was the examiner in charge, and he was assisted by physicians from Government, Canton, Potsdam and Edwards. Twenty-three patients were examined, and the findings were: Incipient pulmonary tuberculosis, two; moderately advanced, four; far advanced, three; suspected tuberculosis, five; and non-tuberculous, six. Arrangements were made for a similar clinic at Massena.

Tuberculosis Nurse for Clinton County
The Clinton County Board of Supervisors has authorized an expenditure of $1,500 a year and expenses for the employment of a county nurse to look out for and supervise the residents of the county afflicted with tuberculosis. The committee named to select the nurse consisted of Supervisors Sample of Mooers, Cahalen of Peru, Healy of Dannemora, LaBounty of Sandy Hill and Arnold of Ausable.
COLONEL FOLKS AND FAMILY RETURN FROM FRANCE

WARM WELCOME FOR SECRETARY OF STATE CHARITIES AID

LT. COL. HOMER FOLKS, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who has been in Europe with the American Red Cross for nearly two years, is returning to this country with his wife and two daughters, the Misses Gertrude and Evelyn Folks, on the Carmania of the Cunard Line, which sailed from Liverpool on May 21 and was due here on May 31.

A hearty welcome awaits Col. Folks and family from the Association and hosts of friends.

Shortly before returning home, Col. Folks completed a three months' survey of after-the-war conditions in various European countries for the Red Cross. He has been formulating reports and advising with representatives of the Red Cross societies of various nations who were planning an international Red Cross organization with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

Headed Vast Civilian Relief

Col. Folks has been abroad since July, 1917. He went to France originally as a representative of the Red Cross for the American Tuberculosis Commission but shortly after his arrival on the continent, was made Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the Red Cross in France. In that capacity he directed for many months a vast work of relief and reconstruction among the civilian population. He built up a staff of 1,100 persons, and the enormous demands of the varied activities of his department absorbed as high as $1,780,000 in a month.

Among the various tasks to which the Department devoted itself were: supplying food, clothing, shelter and medical care to thousands of destitute men, women and children; reeducating war cripples; providing hospitals for sick children; establishing sanitoria for the tuberculous, and conducting practical demonstrations and campaigns of public health education. In recognition of his services for the Serbian refugees in France while he was Director of the Department of Civil Affairs, Col. Folks was decorated by the Serbian Gov.

NO LAY SUPERINTENDENTS FOR TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

Legislature Did Not Pass Bill to Put Medical Task in Hands of Laymen

The people of the State who are interested in the tuberculosis cause and particularly in the tuberculosis of the State's infants and children, will be interested in the recent events up to the present time. The Thompson-McWhiney Bill making it possible for Nassau and Niagara Counties to have laymen instead of physicians as superintendents of the institutions, failed of passage at the recent session of the Legislature. The Association's Tuberculosis Committee assisted the local public health and tuberculosis organizations, social welfare societies and civic associations of the two counties in opposing the enactment of the measure. It was made clear to the leaders in the Legislature that the business of a tuberculosis sanatorium is to treat tuberculosis with a view to improving the condition, prolonging the life and restoring the working capacity of the patient; that the medical care of the patient is so intricately interwoven with the executive administration that the two cannot be successfully divorced; and that there is no well managed and efficient public tuberculosis sanatorium in the United States in which the final authority over policies and practice is vested in a lay superintendent.

In many National Movements

Mr. Folks has long been prominent in the field of American charity and public health, and has been called upon to assume the leadership in many organizations, state and national. He was the First Vice-President of the White House Conference on Dependent Children, of which Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, was presiding officer. He was the leader of a committee of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. He was President of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections in 1911, and President of the American Association for the Study and Prevention of Infant Mortality in 1913. He has served on the National Tuberculosis and Child Labor Committee and is a member of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

Associated With Mr. Choate

As secretary and chief executive officer of the State Charities Aid Association, of which the late Joseph H. Choate was President for many years, Mr. Folks has been much toward the improvement of public and charitable institutions and the promotion of public health in the state and New York. Whiles he was Commissioner of Charities in New York city he organized the first municipal hospital for consumptives in the United States. During the legislative session of 1905 he was instrumental in securing the passage of a bill creating a special State Probation Commission. Later he was appointed by Governor Hughes as Chairman of the Commission and continued as such until he left for France in 1917. He was secretary of a special Public Health Commission which secured the enactment by the New York Legislature of an entirely new public health law for the State which has since been copied in substance by a number of important States, including Massachusetts. One of the provisions of the law provided for the establishment of a State Public Health Council, with power to enact sanitary regulations having the force of law throughout the State. Mr. Folks has been a life member of this Council since its inception.

The degree of LL. D. was conferred upon Mr. Folks by Albion (Michigan) College, and the degree of Doctor of Science was conferred upon Mr. Folks by the University of South Carolina. Mr. Folks is a graduate of Albion and of Harvard University.

He is author of the book, "The Care of Dependent, Neglected, and Delinquent Children."
RURAL PROBLEMS CALLING LOUDLY FOR SOLUTION

MSS CURRY ADDRESSES INTERNATIONAL CHILD WELFARE CONFERENCE

A MONG the speakers at the International Conference on Child Welfare Standards called by Secretary of Labor Wilson in Washington, May 5 to 8, was Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the Department of County Children’s Agencies of the State Charities Aid Association. Miss Curry spoke on “Child-caring Work in Rural Communities.”

This conference brought together a notable gathering of child welfare experts from many nations. It came as a climax of the Children’s Year campaign of the United States Federal Children’s Bureau. The conference gave a decided impetus to child caring work in this and other countries.

Miss Curry emphasized the importance of better child welfare work in rural communities. She said that while, generally speaking, the cities were well organized and had machinery fairly adequate for dealing with their social problems, the rural districts of the country have failed both to realize the extent and gravity of their problems and to provide machinery to deal with them. She made an effective plea for better rural social organization and outlined the plan and scope of rural child welfare.

Miss Curry’s Wide Experience

Miss Curry is recognized as one of the leading students of rural social welfare in this country. She began her career of social work in southwest Washington as District Secretary of the Associated Charities, and later was with the District of Columbia Board of Charities. While in Washington she was also prominent as a member of the Board of Managers of the Children’s Division of the National Conference of Social Work and is also Chairman of the Committee on Correction of the National Country Life Association.

City vs. Country Needs

“City vs. Country Needs

“The need of social work in cities has long been recognized, and recently there has been an increasing recognition of an equal need in rural communities,” said Miss Curry. “In any large city will be found a long list of social agencies, each dealing with a particular social problem—charity organization societies and associations for improving the condition of the poor, that deal with family problems in the home; hospitals, dispensaries, visiting nurses and milk stations, endeavoring to cure and to prevent sickness; institutions, child-caring societies, child-custody societies, home-guard societies, child labor associations, day nursery, kindergartens, special industrial schools, and fresh air movements for children; probation and prison associations dealing with delinquents; lodging houses and temporary shelters dealing with the homeless man and wandering woman; social settlements, organized recreation facilities, saving and loan societies, committees on housing and sanitation, and scores of other agencies that seek to better living conditions in the city. The name of each of these organizations presents to our mind a recognized city condition demanding organized social service.

A Typical Rural Problem

“Let us now look at one family living in the country, one mile from a small town. The house is a two-room shack on the hillside. In one room live an old woman, her son, and from time to time anywhere from one to four or five relatives. This room is almost devoid of furniture, but is always clean. In the other room lives the old woman’s unmarried daughter with two children and the man who is the father of a coming baby. This room contains a bed, a broken stove and a chair, and is dirty beyond description. At noon on a warm day of early summer the woman and children were found on the filthy bed of rags. The one window two feet by three was tightly shut, as was the door. The air within was suffocatingly hot and heavy with unwholesome odors. The water supply for this dwelling is a nearby brook, and the only toilet facilities are those provided by nature on the hillside.

“The group abiding in this place pick up a living by doing odd jobs in winter, the old woman acting as a midwife and frequently using her one room as a maternity hospital. In summer the men, women and children pick fruit on a nearby farm. School attendance is irregular at all times, and during fruit season it ceases. And, let me add, these people are all of old, if degenerate, American stock.

“The situation described can be duplicated over and over in the rural parts of the country, and it presents problems of over-crowding, unsanitary conditions, irregular employment, lack of nursing care—especially maternity care—child labor, poor-school attendance and general neglect of the children, and many other anti-social situations.

Governor Smith Signs Bill to Raise Wages of State Hospital Employees

Better wages for employees in the State hospitals for mental diseases are provided through Governor Smith's approval of the Cotillo-Sammis bill which was passed at the recent session of the Legislature.

This increase was sorely needed because the State hospital employees, in spite of their arduous and often disagreeable work, have been seriously underpaid for a long time. As a result it has been impossible to get sufficient help. In all, there are about 6,000 employees in the system and recently there have been 1,000 places vacant. The lack of employees and the frequent changes, of course, affect the hospital standards.

The increase provided by the Cotillo-Sammis bill—an average increase of about 13 per cent—was extremely urgent, and the Governor is to be commended for his approval of the measure.

In a memorandum accompanying his approval he said:

Raise Absolutely Necessary

"This bill raises to the average amount of about thirteen per cent, the salaries of the employees in the State hospitals. I am advised by the superintendents of these very important State institutions that there are at present over a thousand vacancies in the service on account of the inadequacy of the compensation. This is resulting in the demoralization of the management and inability to properly care for these helpless wards of the State. I feel that it is absolutely necessary, therefore, that this bill should receive my approval. It carries an appropriation of $500,000. In this connection, it should be borne in mind that the passage of this bill will save to some extent the ten per cent increase of the salaries of all State employees provided for by Chapter 602 of the Laws of 1919. It will result in the increase of $312,000 and will undoubtedly result in preventing the demoralization of this most essential State service."

It is now hoped that it will be possible to fill the vacancies in the State hospital service.

PRIVATE FUNDS BILL VETOED BY GOVERNOR

Governor Smith has wisely vetoed the Sage-Machold bill which would have amended the State Finance Law by prohibiting the acceptance or expenditure by the State or any of its departments of money from private sources for any purpose whatsoever.

Opposition to this bill on the part of the State Charities Aid Association was based on the fact that most advances in social and health work have first been carried on as experiments through private funds and when such experiments have subsequently shown a need, these have been recognized by the city or State.

In New York State such experiments have led to the segregation of the insane in separate institutions; the establishment of out-patient departments and clinics in connection with insane hospitals; the creation of the Department of Health; the establishment of children's work in cities and counties, etc.

This method of progress is inevitable and advisable. The State should not expect money purely on an experimental basis, and if it should not and will not, no advance or progress would be made in the handling of many of the State's most important problems, particularly dealing with the care of the sick and dependent and in the prevention of mental and physical diseases, with such a restriction as was proposed. The State should expect private enterprises to experiment, to test and to suggest. His measure would have tended to hinder progress, to stagnate, as to perpetuate obsolete methods and practices.

GOVERNOR SIGNS BILL TO ABOLISH USELESS BOARD

Commission on Sites, Grounds and Buildings Was Fifth Wheel on Wagon

The multiplicity of commissions, boards, bureaus and departments of State government was struck one blow during the session of the Legislature recently closed. The Legislature passed and Governor Smith has signed the Sage bill abolishing the Commission on Sites, Grounds and Buildings.

This commission has always been regarded as a fifth wheel on the wagon. Its duties conflicted with other State departments and officials, and from 1913, when it came into existence, down to the present time it accomplished almost nothing in the way of results. Meetings were held infrequently, usually with only one or two members present. Its purpose was to fix upon and secure sites for new State charitable institutions, but it failed to function properly and was a dead letter. This is one of the useless commissions whose abolition was recommended by Commissioner Charles H. Strong after his investigation of the State's system of charities.

5-YEAR FIGHT FOR COUNTY HOSPITAL NEARS THE END

Warren County at Last Acquiring Land For Tuberculosis Institution

The Warren County Board of Supervisors has purchased two parcels of land, approved as the site for the county tuberculosis hospital by the State and local health officers, and is prepared to condemn the third if the owner who is opposed to the hospital will not sell it at a reasonable figure.

This is another interesting chapter in the five years' struggle of Warren County to secure a site for this admirable sanatorium. Some owners of nearby properties who are needlessly apprehensive as to the effect the hospital will have on their property have been successful twice in the courts in their fight against the location of the hospital, winning in each instance on technical points.
DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL TO COL. SALMON

Eminent Psychiatrist Decorated for Work With "Shell-Shock" Cases in France

The Distinguished Service Medal has been awarded Colonel W. W. Salmon, M. D., Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, for his service as senior consultant in neuro-psychiatry to the American Expeditionary Forces in France. The citation said by General Pershing is as follows:

Colonel Thomas W. Salmon—For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services. He has, by his constant, tireless, and conscientious work, as well as by his unusual judgment, done much to conserve and restore active fighting lines. He was the first to demonstrate that war neurosis could be treated in advanced sanitary units with greater success than in base hospitals. Col. Salmon went to Europe first as a representative of the Rockefeller Foundation to investigate and train consulting and residential psychiatrists in the Surgeon General's office and a strong hospital organization in France, with skilled personnel of medical men, nurses, and attendants. Dr. Salmon afte entering the military service was assigned for a short time to the Surgeon General's office and then went abroad to carry out the government's policy in dealing with these cases. The success of the treatment of the so-called "shell shock" cases was one of the subjects of the report of the U.S. Army Medical Corps. In the course of his foreign service Dr. Salmon won promotion to the rank of colonel. He has recently returned to this country and taken up his work again at the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

CONGRESSMAN CULLEN ON DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION

Governor Smith has approved the bill authorizing the appointment of an additional member of the Hospital Development Commission—Congressman Thomas Cullen of Brooklyn, who previously served on the Commission as the representative of the minority membership of the Legislature.

MISS ADELAIDE DWIGHT TO INVESTIGATE PLIGHT OF ORPHANS IN ORIENT

Miss Adelaide Dwight, a Supervisor in the Child Placing Agency of the State Charities Aid Association, has been named by the Board of Directors to make a survey of the conditions of the orphans in Palestine and Turkey for the American Committee for Relief in the Near East. The work is expected to occupy about four months.

Miss Dwight is particularly well fitted to undertake this investigation on account of her ability to handle and interpret foreign languages, her familiarity with the countries to be covered, and her wide acquaintance there. She was born in Constantinople and received her preparatory education there after which she came to the United States and entered Smith College from which she was graduated in 1900. Returning to the Orient, she taught in Constantinople until 1905 when she came back to the United States on a furlough but was unable to get back to Asia Minor owing to war conditions. Since that time she has been connected with the State Charities Aid Association.

Her survey, which is in the nature of a statistical investigation of the condition of orphans in the Near East, will take her to Constantinople, through Asia Minor, the Caucasus, along the coast to Smyrna, Aleppo, to Beyrut and Jerusalem. Constructively, she intends to initiate in each place a system of record keeping as formulated at the State Charities Aid Association, and shall facilitate organization in the field so that upon her return to this country she can act as a point contact and means of cooperation between the agencies there and the Committee here.

FREE MEDICAL SERVICE ON TUBERCULOSIS IN PLATTSBURGH

Excellent arrangements have recently been made in Plattsburgh by the cooperative action of public and private tuberculosis agencies to provide free expert medical examination of persons having or suspected of having tuberculosis. The Board of Health has provided quarters for holding physical examinations and the tuberculosis committee of the Women's Civic League has provided funds with which to pay for the medical service.

Dr. H. A. Bray, acting superintendent of the New York State Sanitarium for Inebriate Tuberculosis at Ray Brook, N. Y., and Dr. M. F. Lent, medical superintendent of the Stony Wold Sanatorium at Lake Kusqua, N. Y., have been engaged as the diagnosticians, and each physician will hold a clinic once in two weeks.

This admirable arrangement is the direct result of the series of clinics held in Clinton County by the State Health Department last October and November. Another result of this series of clinics was the employment of a county tuberculosis nurse by the Board of Supervisors.

DR. R. H. IRISH CHOSEN TO HEAD TROY CLINICS

Medical Service Placed On A Salaried Basis

The medical service of the tuberculosis dispensary maintained in Troy by the Rensselaer County Tuberculosis Association has been placed on a salaried basis. This change has been thought desirable to meet the expected increase in the volume of clinical work because of the recent epidemic of influenza. Dr. R. H. Irish of Troy has been engaged to take charge as medical supervisor of the clinics and to speak French and German. Dr. Irish has been connected with the dispensary for the past ten years and has rendered expert and devoted service gratuitously.

BILL TO ABOLISH HEALTH COUNCIL DIED IN COMMITTEE

The Gibbs-Zimmerman bill to abolish the Public Health Council, which was introduced early in the session of the Legislature, failed of passage. It did not emerge from the Public Health Committee of either house. Those interested in public health matters throughout the State are gratified that this measure, which would have greatly weakened the Health Department, was not enacted into law. To have abolished the Health Council, which is a body of experts devoting a great deal of time and applying technical knowledge to the development of the Health Code and to advising the State Department of Health on a great variety of public health work, would have been a decided backward step in the health program of the State.

DR. LITTLE RETURNS FROM FRANCE

Captain Charles S. Little, M. D., Superintendent of Letchworth Village, has returned from France, where he served for several months in the Neuro-psychiatric Division of the Medical Corps, and upon his discharge from military service will resume his position at Letchworth Village.

DR. RESTI AT HEAD NEW ROCKLAND COUNTY HOSPITAL

Dr. E. H. Restin, who for the past few years has been a member of the medical staff of the Loomis Sanatorium at Liberty, Sullivan County, has been appointed medical superintendent of the Rockland County Tuberculosis Hospital to be opened early this summer. This hospital has a capacity of fifty beds and costs approximately $90,000.

Dr. Restin is a graduate of the New York University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and previous to his work at the Loomis Sanatorium, was engaged in private practice at Mount Vernon.

WATERTOWN MENTAL CLINIC RESUMES

The Ogdensburg State Hospital has resumed the sessions of its free mental clinic in Watertown, suspended during the war. Twenty-five persons were present at the opening session held recently by Dr. Arthur G. Lane, First Assistant Physician. The Malone clinic will also resume in June.

BILL TO ABOLISH HEALTH COUNCIL DIED IN COMMITTEE
GOVERNOR SMITH VETOES COUNTY CIVIL SERVICE BILL

Measure Would Have Been Set-Back to Tuberculosis and Children's Work and Thrown It Into Petty Politics—Veto Is Commended

One of the more objectionable measures introduced at the session of the Legislature recently closed was the Pearson bill to amend the State Civil Service Law by providing for the establishment of county civil service commissions. The bill finally passed both houses of the Legislature but has just been vetoed by Governor Smith.

In the memorandum accompanying his veto Governor Smith says:

"This bill takes from the State Civil Service Commission jurisdiction over County positions throughout the State and provides instead that supervisors in Counties outside of Greater New York could by resolution adopted create county civil service commissions.

"I cannot see in this anything except a desire on the part of certain political interests to get control of the patronage of the county offices because they feel that with local commissions they can manipulate the civil service rules with greater facility than those of the State Commission, whose members are appointed for six years with overlapping terms."

WOULD HAVE HURT HEALTH WORK

This bill was opposed by the State Charities Aid Association and others on the ground that it would have been a decided set-back to the work of county tuberculosis sanatoria, county nurses, and county agencies for dependent children. Governor Smith's veto of this measure merits widespread approval.

The bill would have authorized the boards of supervisors to establish county civil service commissions. With the creation of such commissions the State civil service list, as applied to every county affected, would have ceased to exist. It is obvious what the situation might have been had there been merely better equipped, especially the smaller ones, as regards tuberculosis hospital superintendents, county visiting nurses, and county children's agents, if county civil service commissions had been authorized to establish lists confined to county residents, or to exempt positions from competitive examination, so that they might be filled by individuals favored for personal or political considerations not in harmony with the public interest.

There is no real need for county civil service commissions. The civil service has long been recognized as a State function. The Constitution of the State of New York and the Civil Service Law contemplate a system general and uniform in its application to the State and its civil subdivisions. At the head of this system, is the State Civil Service Commission. It has steadily built up an examination division, which in spite of some failures and short comings, is surely better equipped to meet the problems of civil service administration than 57 different county commissions.

Child Welfare Legislation In 1919

During the Legislative session recently closed, several bills were introduced to amend the general municipal law in relation to child welfare boards. The law as originally passed provided that allowances could be granted to a dependent widow deemed by the local board a proper person mentally, morally and physically to care for and bring up children under the age of 16, but that an allowance could be granted only if she had lived in the county in which application was made for the two years preceding her application, and if her husband was a citizen of the United States and a resident of the State at the time of his death.

Numerous bills to amend the provisions governing the granting of allowances were introduced; one to extend the privilege of allowances to stepchildren; one to extend it to widows over 65 in the City of New York; one to extend it to the widow and children of a man who at the time of his death had declared his intention of becoming a citizen. None of these, however, was passed in the State Legislature.

However, two bills were passed by the Legislature. One provides that upon the death of a widow who was receiving an allowance, the allowance, in the discretion of the Board may be continued and granted to any relative of such widow who shall care for and bring up the children. Governor Smith vetoed this bill.

The other bill passed by the Legislature extended the right to mother's allowances to any widow whose husband was "a resident of the State for a period of two years immediately preceding his decease, and whose child or children were born in the United States and who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States within a period of two years immediately preceding his decease." By the approval of the Governor this amendment became law.

Nearly all of the counties of the State now make appropriations out of their own funds for the widows' pension law, and the administration of the relief to mothers is constantly improving. It seems a wise provision of the amendment of this act should be extended to children born in this country when the father had signed his intention to become a citizen.

The care of the poor is administered under a special law passed in 1916 which created the office of Commissioner of Charities and Corrections in the County of Westchester. Under this act, the Commissioner of Charities was given power to make such arrangement for the care of needy chilren as might be authorized by the Board of Supervisors. Under this general provision, the Commissioner of Charities had the power to make arrangements for the care of any child in all parts of the county, although the cost of the maintenance of said children was eventually charged back to the county.

A recent case in the Chautauqua County juvenile court involves a fine point of law, that the judge first having obtained the approval of the Supervisor of the Town or of the Commissioner of Charities in the whole case may be. The Governor approved this amendment.

Funds Now in Hand For Herkimer County Hospital

Herkimer County has sold $250,000 in bonds authorized by an act passed by the Governor for the construction of a county tuberculosis hospital. The issue was purchased by Sherwood & Merrifield of New York for a cash price of $7,900. The bond bears 5 per cent interest and are in denominations of $1,000 each. It is expected that bids will be opened on July 1st and the construction begun early in the summer. The hospital is to be erected three miles east of Salisbury Center and six miles from Dolgeville.
NELBACH URGES WESTCHESTER COUNTY TO BUILD TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

Deaths Average One a Day in County—Project for New Institution Has Been Long Delayed

The erection of the long delayed Westchester County Tuberculosis Sanatorium both as a means of providing buffet employment for discharged soldiers, sailors and industrial workers and to combat the spread of tuberculosis county wide was urged by George J. Nellbach, assistant secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, in a recent address before the Westchester County Woman's Club in Mount Vernon. Mr. Nellbach stated that similar action has already been taken by the Board of Supervisors of Herkimer County and construction work on the building will be started soon.

The speaker pointed out that leading medical authorities are watching with concern the heavy death and morbidity due to tuberculosis as well as its development in persons previously believed to be free from it. They expect an increased number of cases of tuberculosis resulting from the recent epidemic throughout the country.

100,000 Rejected By Army

"The war with its elaborate machinery for the physical examination of the youth of the nation as to fitness for military service, revealed in striking fashion the magnitude of the tuberculosis problem which confronts us at the present time," said Mr. Nellbach. "About 100,000 men were rejected by local draft boards because of tuberculosis. In addition to this number, 24,000 men who were passed as fit for service by the medical officers at recruiting stations or draft boards were subsequently found to be tuberculous by boards of specialists stationed at the various military camps and training stations. All these figures revealed more clearly than ever the crying need for a modern tuberculosis hospital for Westchester County.

3 COUNTIES REORGANIZE TUBERCULOSIS WORK AND ENGAGE PAID EXECUTIVES

During the past month the tuberculosis associations of Suffolk, Fulton and Otsego Counties have been reorganized and placed on a county-wide basis and full-time executives have been placed in charge of the work.

At its organization meeting, Richmond County Tuberculosis Committee elected the following officers: Chairman, Mrs. William G. Willcox of West New Brighton; vice chairman, Miss Mary Holode of West New Brighton, Mrs. Charles E. Simonson of West New Brighton, and Mrs. Benjamin Williams of Tottenville; secretary, Mrs. S. W. White of Green Ridge; treasurer, A. J. Wadhams of Tompkinsville. The committee has selected Miss Mary Evelyn Higgins, R.N., who has been interested in nursing and social work for the past seven years, as executive secretary. Miss Higgins was the acting night supervisor at the Manhattan Maternity Hospital, New York City, in 1912, and the following four years she had charge of an Infant's Milk Station under the Child Hygiene Division of the New York City Department of Health. She organized the public health work in Sharon, Conn., in 1917 and has just returned from a year's service in France where she was night supervisor of a 2,000-bed hospital.

Also elected to serve are the Fulton County Tuberculosis Committee which held its organization meeting recently: President, Fred Lewis Carroll of Johnstown; vice president, Dr. J. Edward Grant of Northville; secretary, Mrs. Edward Wells of Johnstown; treasurer, Miss Ethel Alley of Gloversville. The committee has engaged Miss Mary Carter Nelson for the combination position of county nurse and executive secretary. Miss Nelson is a graduate of the Johns Hopkins Training School for Nurses and has had experience in practically every branch of nursing. For three years she was employed as visiting nurse by the New York City Health Department and for two and one-half years was the state supervising nurse of the Michigan Anti-Tuberculosis Association. Miss Nelson returned recently after fifteen months' service overseas where she was employed by the American Red Cross Commission on Tuberculosis in France.

Hon. A. L. Kellogg, of Oneonta, was selected as president of the Otsego County Tuberculosis Committee at its recent reorganization meeting. The other officers are: Vice presidents, Harris L. Cook of Cooperstown; Dr. G. E. Schoolcraft of Hartwick; O. A. Weatherly of Milford; and John D. Cary of Richfield Springs; secretary, Mrs. Edith Smith Loomis of Oneonta; treasurer, Hon. Charles Smith of Oneonta. Miss Olive G. Turner, the executive secretary whom the new committee adopted for several years a teacher and supervisor of normal training schools in Michigan. She is a graduate of the University of Michigan and has been assistant secretary of the Michigan Anti-Tuberculosis Association.
GOVERNOR SMITH SIGNS SAGE-MACHOLD BILL — HIS ACTION WIDELY APPROVED

GOVERNOR SMITH has given further evidence of his determination to provide for a better handling of the problem of feeblemindedness in this State by approving the Sage-Machold bill which continues the State Commission for the Feebleminded created a year ago, carries out its main recommendations, provides revised commitment procedure, free clinics, colonies, districting of the State, change of the names of the institutions, and other reforms.

In approving the bill the Governor filed the following memorandum:

"In my first annual message to the Legislature, I called attention to the necessity of action looking to the care and treatment of the feebleminded.

"By Chapter 197 of the Laws of 1918, a commission was appointed to make a study of this question. By the provisions of the bill now under consideration, that Commission is continued and its recommendations are enacted into law. I had the good fortune to secure the services of Colonel Pearce Bailey, a specialist in nervous and mental diseases and a Professor in those subjects in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. For two years he was the head of the Division of Mental and Nervous Diseases in the Surgeon General's office in the War Department at Washington, where his efficient and constructive work brought him in contact with problems connected with mental and nervous diseases all over the country. The Commission is organized and ready to proceed. I regard this bill as a forward step and it is with a great deal of satisfaction that I approve it.

"The bill is therefore approved."

There is very widespread approval of Governor Smith's action in signing this bill. He has consistently recognized the seriousness of the problem of dealing with the feebleminded in this State which has grown so serious through neglect in the past, and has given a great deal of personal effort to improving the efficiency of the State institutions and to initiating forward-looking policies which will provide for a better handling of the question of mental defect generally in this State. His courage and vision give promise of really getting somewhere on the problem.

No State Policy About Defectives

While the State has been doing a good job for many years in caring for its insane, it has not succeeded so well with the feebleminded. The Hospital Development Commission found that the separate institutions for the feebleminded are well run, but they have never been coordinated into a system and there never has been any definite State policy toward feeblemindedness.

The creation of a new commission to administer the law in relation to defectives was recommended by the Development Commission and resulted in the creation last year of a Commission consisting of a medical chairman, the Secretary of the State Board of Charities and the Fiscal Supervisor. This Commission made important recommendations which were submitted to Governor Smith and the Legislature in January.

The Sage-Machold bill now approved continues this Commission and contains the more important recommendations which it had made.

In addition to the lack of a State policy or a central administrative control for the institutions for the feebleminded, another obstacle to progress and the provision of adequate accommodations has been the confusion and overlapping in the laws about the commitment and care of the feebleminded. The new Mental Deficiency Law replaces the confused and conflicting provisions scattered through various statutes with one comprehensive law providing better procedure for commitment, treatment and administration. The bill is patterned after the Insanity Law which has worked well for many years. It provides for a procedure of commitment State wide in its application and uniform for all the institutions. It assures competent examiners of cases and safeguards the welfare and rights of both the patient and the community.

Duties of the Commission

The specific duties and responsibilities with which the statute charges the Commission are:

1. Administer the law in relation to the care, custody and treatment of the feebleminded, and make rules for the reception, care, training, parole and discharge of inmates of institutions for the feebleminded.

2. Prepare and keep a record of the feebleminded in the State and provide accommodations for those requiring institutional custody and training.

3. Establish free clinics for the examination and observation of the feebleminded.

4. Determine the capacity and population of the State institutions for mental defectives and report annually to the Legislature.

5. Recommend to the Legislature when necessary the establishment of new institutions and the type thereof.

The bill also provides for the division of the State into districts; provides for a procedure of court commitment; and authorizes the establishment of colonies in connection with institutions for defectives. The names of the State institutions are also changed in the interest of uniformity. They will henceforth be known as State Schools for Mental Defectives, dropping the old "Custodial" label.

The bill also gives a clearer definition of the powers and responsibilities of the State Commission for the Feebleminded which will enable it to initiate a progressive program. It is fully organized under the chairmanship of Dr. Pearce Bailey and is actively at work on its problems. The other members of the Commission are Charles H. Johnson, the Secretary of the State Board of Charities, and Frank R. Utter, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities.

Here and There

Herbert P. Bisell, formerly a member of the State Commission in Lacay, now the State Hospital Commission, died recently in Lockport, N. Y.

Captain Elbert M. Somers, M. D., recently returned from duty with the American Red Cross in France where he served as Hospital Superintendent, has now resumed his practice in psychiatry in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Mary M. Glynn, wife of former Governor Martin H. Glynn, has been appointed by Governor Smith as a member of the State Board of Charities for the third judicial district, to succeed Benjamin W. Arnold.

George A. Hastings, Assistant Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, delivered an address on "The Nurse in War and Peace" at the graduating exercises of the Nurses' Training School of the Ithaca General Hospital on May 6.

Major Frankwood E. Williams, M. D., who is attached to the Division of Neurology and Psychiatry in the Surgeon General's office in Washington, has been discharged from military service and has returned to his duties as Associate Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

SIX NEW MEMBERS FOR MENTAL HYGIENE COMMITTEE

At the May meeting of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association six new members were elected, as follows: Mr. Oren Root of New York; Major Richard H. Hutchings, M. D., Superintendent of the Utica State Hospital; Dr. Marcus B. Reyman, Superintendent of the Thirty-third State Hospital; Dr. William C. Garvin, Superintendent of the Kings Park State Hospital; Major Mortimer W. Bayvor, M. D., Director of Clinical Psychiatry, Manhattan State Hospital; and Captain Elbert M. Somers, M. D., of Brooklyn. Designations were received from Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York and Miss Marguerine Tucker of Philadelphia and were accepted with regret.
COLONEL FOLKS WELCOMED BACK

Reason Given by S. C. A. A. Managers and Staff on Return from Europe

U. S. HELP PLEASED FRANCE

T. COL. HOMER FOLKS, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, was enthusiastically welcomed back to New York at a reception given by the Board of Managers and the staff in the Association rooms on June 10.

After nearly two years of service in the Red Cross in Europe, first as Director of the Department of Civil Affairs in France and more recently as chairman of a special mission to survey the needs of various allied countries after the war, Colonel Folks returns to this country in the best of health and enthusiastic over the opportunities in social work here.

Mrs. Folks and the Misses Evelyn and Gertrude Folks, all of whom were in war work in France, were also guests at the reception. Miss Gertrude Folks has completely recovered from her serious illness of a few months ago.

The Association rooms were attractively decorated with flowers and flags. Photographs taken by Capt. Lewis W. Hine, the official photographer of the mission, in Serbia, Greece, Italy, France and Belgium, were displayed. The pictures are a remarkable collection and bear impressive testimony of the plight of refugees in the Balkans and of the devastation wrought in the Belgian and French war zones.

WELCOME BY MR. CANFIELD

George F. Canfield, President of the Association, welcomed Mr. Folks on behalf of the Board of Managers in an eloquent and felicitous address. He said in part:

Why Let Valatie Institution Lie Idle When More Room Is Needed For Feebleminded?

The State Farm for Women established by legislative enactment in 1908 is discontinued under a bill passed by the last Legislature and signed by the Governor.

This institution was established for chronic female offenders over thirty years of age. Last December it was taken over by the State Health Department as a hospital for venereal disease cases. Legal obstacles to the commitment of patients intervened, however, and not enough voluntary patients applied to make its operation feasible. Since that time several schemes and plans have been discussed to convert the institution to various other uses, but none of them materialized at this session of the Legislature.

The bill discontinuing the institutions leaves the buildings, the farm, stock, supplies, etc., as part of the property of one of the State prisons, and $6,000 is appropriated to run the farm and keep the buildings in repair.

It seems most unfortunate to have this institution closed and the bed capacity of about fifty thrown out of use when there is such need in the State for additional accommodations for the feebleminded, especially of the delinquent type.

If the buildings could be used as a colony for girls of the defective type from the Hudson Training School, or for defectives of the delinquent type from the various State institutions for the feebleminded, they would serve a very useful purpose and meet an urgent need. And such a plan could be carried out at slight cost to the State.

Governor Smith Coming to Letchworth Village July 9

Col. Folks Made a Chevalier of French Legion of Honor

Since his return to America, Lt. Col. Homer Folks has been notified by the French Government that he has been made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his services to the French people while serving as Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France. Eleven other Red Cross officers have also been made members of the Legion.

This is the second foreign decoration received by Col. Folks. Some time ago he was made a Commander of the Order of the White Eagle by the Serbian Government for his services to Serbian refugees.

Governor Alfred E. Smith and Mrs. Smith are coming to Letchworth Village on July 9.

Governor Smith will inspect the Village, will open four new dormitories, dedicate the Assembly Hall which has been named "Stewart Hall" after William Rhinelander Stewart, President of the State Board of Charities, and will lay the cornerstone for the new cottages for girls.

Governor Smith is very much interested in better State provision for the feebleminded and especially in the prompt completion of Letchworth Village. This will be his first official visit to the institution.
Making Westchester County Safe For Childhood

The care of children in Westchester County is one of the big civic reconstruction problems being undertaken this summer. A complete program for the welfare of children, for their health, education and recreation has just been prepared by the Westchester County Children's Association, which is an organization Smith College, with the cooperation of the welfare of children in the county and to improve conditions affecting child life.

The care of children in Westchester County is an outgrowth of the Children's Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, Westchester branch, which worked for the last two years to establish a Child Welfare Department of Child Welfare, caring for dependent children.

Westchester has a splendid Department of Child Welfare and is here to help Everit Macy, county Commissioner of Charities and Corrections. The county department has advanced by employing eight agents to safeguard and place destitute children. At the present time there are 1,300 dependent children in Westchester, 800 in institutions and board and 500 homes, there being 300 with their mothers. The mothers who care for them in their own homes receive an allowance.

Last year the county employed eight agents to safeguard and place destitute children. To broaden the scope of the work, public spirited women raised money for the support of three more workers in order that more children might be cared for.

The children now in private boarding homes receive their clothing from the Association. So well have plans been laid, the department of child welfare does not need to limit its plans for individual children to just the public money allowed. More children can be helped. Each child can receive the special care it needs, because the Association provides supplementary money where needed.

The new plans and plans for the children lay especial emphasis on health and recreation. The women will see to it that sufficient medical inspection is given school children in all parts of the county, and that all follow-up work is thoroughly and carefully done. Moving pictures will be watched throughout the county and conditions under which they are shown inspected at regular intervals.

Under the direction of Mrs. Caspar Whitney of Bronxville, the Department of Legislation of the Charity Association is thoroughly organized. Wherever the law touches the children the Association will help Everit Macy interpret their needs and to see that their welfare is safeguarded.

The women of Westchester are making a special study of ways of cooperating with all Americanization movements in the county. A children's court is one of the big future items of the new program. Children will be helped by the Association to stay in school as long as possible. Special scholarships are provided.

The city of Westchester County needs personal support and interest. A campaign for members was held the first week in June. This was the first time that the public had been given a direct chance to support the county in this special work. The directors of the Association include: Mrs. George D. Barron of Rye, president; Mrs. V. Everit Macy of Scarsborough, first vice-president; Mrs. Herbert L. Baker of Mt. Vernon, second vice-president; Mrs. Herbert McCoy of Peekskill, secretary, and James Speyer of Scarborough, treasurer.

SMITH COLLEGE EXTENDS SCOPE OF SUMMER SCHOOL FOR SOCIAL WORK

At the request of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, the Association's Tuberculosis Committee is helping to bring the service provided by the Federal Board to the attention of soldiers residing in New York State, who have been discharged from the army on account of tuberculosis. A variety of courses of vocational training are open to tuberculous soldiers in receipt of compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act and whose disease is in an arrested stage.

The Association's Tuberculosis Committee has furnished to the Federal Board a list of specialists in the field of compensation and a list of those whose claims for compensation are pending.

Stimulated by the success of the last year's Training School for Psychiatric Social Work, the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, now offers a more comprehensive Training School of Social Work. It will provide graduate professional instruction in psychiatric social service, medical social service, community service, and child welfare in courses which include a summer session of theoretical instruction combined with clinical observation, a nine months' period of supervised field work in existing social agencies in various cities, and a concluding summer session of eight weeks of advanced work at Northampton. The school opens in July.

This new school differs from other schools for social work not only in its separation of the clinical and social periods, but also in its instruction by the discussion method rather than the usual lecture system, by its emphasis upon the psychological approach to all social problems, its stress upon the application of the scientific method in sciences related to social work — biology, sociology, psychology and psychiatry — and particularly in the high degree of concentration afforded by the group life of the students in constant association with their instructors.

The rapid extension of the public health movement, with its influence upon the social aspects of both hygiene and disease has made the coexisting supply of medical social workers wholly incommensurate with the demand, for including mental disease, tuberculosis, and contagious diseases. In the case of the Red Cross and the Red Cross in France or in this country have realized in the past two years that social work is an indispensable ally to good medical work; secondly, that increased attention given to industrial disease and industrial work during the war is sure to be magnified still more by the fact that labor and all its interests will be more and more prominent in the public consciousness in the post-war years, and, finally, that problems raised by the wounded or mutilated from the United States and service will call for the best team work of doctor and social worker.
HUNGER, EXPOSURE AND DISEASE NOT YET DEMOBILIZED

ON the evening of the signing of the armistice, Lieutenant Colonel Homer Folks started with a corps of experts on a trip through Italy, Greece, Serbia and Belgium. The trip was made by direction of the War Council to get a unified survey of the needs of the allied invaded countries at the end of the war. His party were the first Americans to go overland through Serbia after the war. Just before leaving Paris to return to the United States, Col. Folks made a final trip through what was the war zone of France and Belgium. On reaching New York on May 21, he summarized his impressions of the European situation as follows:

Still Need American Help

"The need for American help is still as serious in some regions as it was at any time during the war. In some respects the situation went from very bad to much worse after the armistice. Old governments were overthrown and new ones not functioning. Everybody is suffering. Our aid could not have been needed more. The sufferings caused by the war went on after the fighting stopped, just as the expenses did. Transportation systems that had just held out through the war went to pieces. Food and fuel shortage became still more acute. Millions of refugees began to give up such jobs and shelter as they had and to go back, often walking hundreds of miles, to what had been their homes. Prolonged food shortages and bad sanitary conditions which could be resisted for a time, began to bear their full fruits in the form of epidemics and increased sickness and mortality in many forms."

These things make getting back to America from Europe seem like getting out from under a black overhanging cloud that never lifts. I am not thinking of the danger from Prussia, but of the sense of tremendous and irreparable loss and of vague impending danger which weighs constantly upon every thinking mind in Europe. It is almost impossible for us to realize the situation in France, for instance, the loss of about one-fifth of all the men of 18 to 50 years of age. To gain some idea of France’s sacrifice for civilization we may try to imagine our condition if we had lost in proportion and were mourning, not fifty thousand, but five million of our men. No great country has ever faced the future with such a loss in its man-power.

Serbia Terribly Sore

"But it is the allied countries further east, Poland, Roumania, Serbia, and others that need our help just now most urgently. The war has brought different evils upon different countries, but Serbia has had to meet them all. There is no war terror which is not familiar to her. Invasion, devastation, epidemics, cold, starvation, enemy occupation, exile, atrocities — no horror has been omitted, none except civil disorder. Serbia has stood as united in the East as France has in the West. But the new condition is one of suffering. The loss of about 20 per cent of her entire population, plus the sacrifice of all the normal increase. Again let us try to apply their figures to ourselves. If we had lost in proportion we would have lost twenty-two million people. Try to picture our condition if we faced reconstruction with a deficit of twenty-two million people, and then say, that is what Serbia is really like. It is a country with a devastated population and no remedial agencies. It is a country almost without doctors, with no medicines, and no hospitals, except such as the Red Cross, the Scottish women, and other allied friends provide. I speak of Serbia especially because I saw it fully, but even more distressing conditions exist in Poland and other Eastern countries, never forgetting Armenia."

Europe Is Discouraged

"Add to these things another factor, psychological, but important. While the war was going on people held up to a high pitch of emotion. Now everybody is disappointed and disillusioned. Everybody sees enormous losses which cannot be repaid but must be written off as dead loss. No reparation now nor later, can undo suffering undergone, nor bring the dead to life. Profound discouragement holds Europe in its grasp, and Asia also. It paralyzes effort.

"But here the sun still shines. Our economic life has been upset but we still have our men to set it right again. We still have our homes, our families; we still live in comfort; we are the richest nation in the world and one of the most populous. We had only just gotten into our stride in the war and we still have plenty of energy and the will to do. The flying machine has passed over, but the suffering, like the expenses, still goes on. We cannot fail to carry on in the ways that are still needed. We must continue for the sufficient reason that our help is urgently needed but we must also continue in order to prove our disinterestedness, which some now question — to prove that we were really moved by disinterested sympathy. We cannot forget that the war losses of all the Allies, while not incurred for our benefit, were nevertheless incurred for a cause which became ours, and from which we could not escape. We are our brother’s keeper, especially when he was hurt in a fight which became also an attack on us. American relief has done great things in which we may all take satisfaction in all the years to come. But we cannot fail in the job through and it is far from being done.

"Our Allies still need food, clothing, doctors, nurses, medicines, shelter, and perhaps above all need to continue to feel sure that rich America, the land of the free, still cares for them and will continue to bind up the wounds caused by the war. Hunger and disease are not yet demobilized.

"It is not a question of reconstruction, in the sense of rebuilding cities and villages. Nobody has had time to think about that yet. It is entirely a question of food, clothing, care of the sick, sanitary precaution, and of getting some kind of temporary shelter which will keep out the rain."

Harvard-Cambridge Exchange Scholarship

As Choate Memorial

A scholarship fund of $40,000 as a memorial to the late Joseph H. Choate, American Ambassador to Great Britain, is being raised among the alumni of Harvard University for the exchange of students between Harvard and Cambridge University in England. It will be known as the Joseph H. Choate Memorial Scholarship. Mr. Choate took his first degree at Harvard in 1852. He was President of the State Charities Aid Association for many years.

200,000 Children in Health Crusade

Pledging themselves to the cultivation of good health, more than 200,000 school children in New York State, exclusive of New York City, have been enrolled by the Association's Tut-yeulous Committee, assisted by the Junior Red Cross, in the Modern Health Crusade, a personal hygiene movement which is being developed in the public schools.

There are now crusaders in almost every county of the state, and the health creed of the crusade has become a part of the school program in hundreds of schools both rural and urban. The child who lives up to 75 per cent of the crusader’s health rules for two, five, and fifteen weeks becomes the recipient of a page, squire, knight and knight banneret in health chivalry.

The health ‘chorus,’ the performing of which each child is put on a special card to record on a special card over his own signature, are as follows:

"I washed my hands before each meal today."
"I washed not only my face but my ears and neck and I cleaned my fingernails today."
"I tried today to keep fingers, pencils and everything that might be unclean out of my mouth and nose."
"I drank a glass of water before each meal and before going to bed, and drank no tea, coffee or other injurious drinks today."
"I brushed my teeth thoroughly in the morning and in the evening today."
"I took ten or more, slow deep breaths of fresh air today."
"I played outdoors, or with windows open, more than thirty minutes today."
"I was in bed ten hours or more last night and kept my windows open."
"I tried today to sit up and stand straight, to eat slowly, and to attend to toilet and each need of my body at its regular time."
"I tried today to keep neat and cheerfully constantly and to be helpful to others."
"I took a full bath on each day of the week that is checked."
Col. Folks Welcomed

"Homer Folks, Ex-Director of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France; Lieutenant Colonel in the noble American armed forces; Chivalrous and valiant defender of the White Eagle, Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor:

On behalf of the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association I greet you and give you a cordial welcome and confer upon you a title, equal in dignity to all the other—honorary—of the State Charities Aid Association!

I recall another occasion when we met to greet each other with recognition and respect: I mean ‘Mr.’ Folks, as he was in those days and to take note of an important event in the life of our Association. I refer to the occasion when we met to bid you good-bye and to wish you Godspeed as you were about to enter upon your duties as Commissioner of Charities for the City of New York and to take charge of the wards and dependents of our city. Today, happily, we are meeting, not for the purpose of saying good-bye, but for the purpose of welcoming you after two notable years in France devoted to the direction of the care of the much larger group of wards and dependents—the victims of the great World War.

You come back from regions of unutterable woe, from scene of destruction, suffering and sorrow, and you return to a land bathed in the sunshine of a widely distributed prosperity, though dark and clouded at times by alien and American acts of violence and anarchy.

The smiles upon the faces of your friends who greet you today express a variety of emotions. I rejoice that you and your family have returned safe and sound from the many perils that have beset you. We rejoice more that you have returned with an abiding devotion to great and beneficent work of the American Red Cross in France. We know how important that work was, how essential it was to sustain the morale of raged, war-weary France while laggard America was making her belated military preparations to take a part, relatively a small part, measured in time and suffering and sacrifice of human life, but a very brilliant and effective part, in the defence of the liberties of the world.

It is a Chinese conception that the achievements of the sons ennoble their ancestors. In like manner, we are sure that the Red Cross and the honors that have come to you have shed their lustre upon us, for we consider that in what you have done you have represented a very real and a very tangible sense of a representative of this Association, its spirit, ideals and purposes.

A wise man, Ralph Waldo Emerson, said something to the effect that the knowledge that there is in the city a man who has done some good work raises the credit of all its citizens. The fact that you who are one of us, whose notable and useful career has been for so many years bound up with us, have done a good piece of work, raises the credit of us all. And we like to think that, although we have been far removed from the scenes of your labors, we were, through you, contributing toward the winning of the war. We were with you, and having kept our doors open and your position vacant against your return, having granted you practically an indefinite leave of absence, and having followed all your doings with the keenest and most sympathetic interest, we hope we have bound you to us with love and esteem.

We need you and we don’t hesitate to confess it, but we hope also that you will feel that.

We still mourn the loss of our honored President, Mr. Choate. We shall never have his like again, but we have the proud satisfaction of knowing that he always maintained the high standards of our Association and can hand it over to you with its prestige and its influence unimpaired.

And so, we welcome you. Your Association were never brighter. When we contemplate what confronts our nation, we are thrilled to think how substantial a part of all that remains to be done may be done through the medium of the Office of Public Health. With its rich traditions of service, with its sound policies, its capacity for expansion and adapting itself to the ever-changing needs of the times, this Association, I am sure, furnishes the best possible instrument for making effective use of your experience and the great wealth of knowledge you have gained, in the field of preventive philanthropy and social service.

The World War with all its horrors and brutality, and its physical effects upon the community that humanity may plunge. It has also revealed the heights to which mankind should always aspire and with which it sometimes attains. If we could, through your influence and our combined efforts, make it possible that if we could always have a vivid conception of our duty to the State and our fellowmen, and experience that same selflessness of purpose and devotion to the public welfare, which has accomplished such marvellous results on the field of battle for a just and righteous cause.

"It will be your opportunity, Mr. Secretary, and your privilege to impart to us in years to come the spirit which you must have gained through your experiences in the past, your two years and to give us a renewed impulsion towards efforts for promoting the general welfare."

MR. WRIGHT SPEAKS FOR STAFF

On behalf of the staff, Henry C. Wright, who has served as Secretary pro tem, welcomed Mr. Folks back to the office, saying in part:

"It is with the greatest pleasure that I have this opportunity of speaking for the staff. Our President has spoken on behalf of the Board. The Board sees you once in thirty days, but the staff sees you every day. The welcome that the staff extend is, therefore, thirty times greater than that extended by the Board.

As you come back you find us somewhat exemplifying the general attitude of mind in the country; it is of a state of shock, I presume you have already noticed this. I think a tabulation would show that nearly 50 per cent of the staff now here are strange faces to you. We want to say that those who have left in a great many cases have left because of the call of the war. A great many of the staff have gone to supplement their mental work. Very few have been tempted away because of higher salaries. Some have accepted a higher salary because they seriously needed it. You have no doubt discovered that war salaries are laggards when compared with war prices or wages.

But regardless of the fact that there are a great many new faces and new people in the staff, I think you will find the same State Charities Aid Association spirit, as before you went away. You will find the same spirit of loyalty, enthusiasm and devotion to work and ideals as when you left the staff, regardless of the fact that 50 per cent are new. Somehow there is a historic and self-perpetuating spirit here in this Association which goes on year by year."

COL. FINLEY’S TRIBUTE

Lt. Col. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, who was Mr. Folks’ predecessor as Secretary of the Association and who has also been in Red Cross work abroad (in Palestine), made a very happy address. Among other things, he said:

"I suppose that most of you think that the State Charities Aid Association is a good cause and that you would like to help it. But Mr. Folks, or at any rate, that he discovered it. But I am here to tell you that it antedates the coming of Mr. Folks. I discovered the State Charities Aid Association. I belong to the paleolithic period."

I am glad to come back to this place which I feel has forgotten me. My service in life has long been to take a modest position and then disappear. The Association has become inviting to someone of large capacity.

There is a notable illustration of it here. When I joined the State Charities Aid Association, we had two rooms in University Place. I was the secretary at the munificent salary of $1,500 a year. I had a good salary and also shared the outer office with the secretary of the Society for First Aid to the Injured. I magnified the position in three years so that people in the neighborhood became interested in the Folks who had even then the promise of greatness in him. I wish to say that I envied him and that I wish I could be him. I am glad to be here on the Board of Managers when I came into this office who were finer and greater than any fourteen in New York City.

I am very glad to be here to greet this man who has gone out to do work in the world, to organize, to speak for our charities aid association. What a noble work he has done you know quite as well as I, though I had some opportunity to see him as I was in transit. I was very disappointed that we were not able to get into my part of the work and report on the work there. I am glad to be back here today. I am rather sorry that I wish there might be a State educational aid association and that Col. Folks might also be put at the head of that."

COL. FOLKS’ ADDRESS

With unfeigned pleasure at being back in the Association with which he has been connected for over twenty-five years, "Mr." Folks, as his associates in the staff prefer to call him, gave a very happy and stimulating address, expressing his high appreciation of the welcome extended to him, of the kindness of the Association in giving him the opportunity of absence to do the important work abroad, and describing some of the important features of the Red Cross program there. He said in part:

"I get back to the question of this afternoon in New York brought to my mind as I came in, the story of Booth Tarkington in which a boy of seventeen who ordinarily was a good and quiet boy and attended to his own affairs, for some reason set out one day on a career of crime. That story, having his way homeward, one ear somewhat torn, one eye black, his clothing torn, and showing other evidence of having been in swimming, he related how he needed money: 'I know I shall get a terrible l icing when I get there but,—it has been worth it!' I am somewhat, perhaps, in the same category as the boy, but instead of the l icing I get this!"

I must begin with a word of gratitude to the State Charities Aid Association and to its managers and staff. What Mr. Canfield said is perfectly true—that I could only go to Europe by your kind permission, and I remained there through your voluntary action; and far more than that, during my work there I at all times did actually feel myself in a sense the representavative of the State of New York and of its kindred organizations. I felt that in a sense we were on trial, that perhaps for the first time a very big piece of relief and health activity, in a very critical time, which had to be done very, very speedily if at all, was entrusted to one whose career had been that of an executive agent in this work of kindness."

It would take a very long time to comply with the request to tell you all the interesting stories. We have received this afternoon to tell something about what was done in France. I am sure that I should utterly fail if I should try to convey to you the story of the difficulties of the first six weeks or two months. I never ran up against so many minor and impracticable difficulties and I have made slight and which were really very difficult.

Lieu. Col. Finley, I am sure, appreciates all of this and knows what it means to settle down in a tiny little room, which was not wide enough for one man to stand in, for the people, with typewriters which wouldn’t write, with some stenographers who couldn’t ‘stenop,’ telephones you couldn’t get through, nobody could understand, goods that could not be bought, and a government that you did not understand. At every move there were signs, a thousand reasons why this and that thing could not be done.

There were some advantages, too, about it. As Col. Finley knows, it was a pleasure not to be hedged about by civil service rules. And then there was one other advantage that I very greatly appreciated—having to worry about where the money was coming from.

As you know, I was assigned to an entirely different piece of work than I had any intention of doing when I went over. When I arrived a man whom I had seen only once before, Lt. Col. Grayson P. Murphy, then Major Murphy, insisted that I should do something else.

I remember still our first interview when he persuaded me to take that job because there wasn’t anybody aware who could try it. He said something like this: ‘Now, folks, I don’t know anything about this at all. There must be some place here where there are some people called refugees, I think, and there is a lot to be done, but I haven’t the slightest idea what that is, how much it will cost, or how to do it. Now, you just take hold of that department and do good to the people with what you have, no matter what it costs.’ So we proceeded on that basis.

I think my next expression of gratitude should be to the organized social agencies of America who responded so splendidly to our calls for help which were very numerous and, I admit, quite insistent. We received in all abundance and variety for civilian work from one source or another.

Then I want to say a word for the people who came. I do not think that a body of people could be gotten together who would work with a greater degree of devotion, with a greater degree of dedication, and with a greater amount of money, than these people.

It was a very difficult thing to interpret ourselves to our hosts, for we were guests in a foreign land by whose history we were not familiar with, a country which does things very differently from the way we do them at home. It was during the war, strained and weary, suffering losses that we shall never be able to understand, fully ourselves, harassed, anxious as to the future, and grieved and sad over their losses up to that time. It was so easy to go wrong and so difficult to go right and so hard to convince them that we simply wanted to be useful to them, to help share their losses. I think perhaps the most gratifying thing about our work in France was that after a few weeks we were accepted so absolutely by the French people as their helpers that no questions and difficulties of any sort were raised.

A New Chapter in Relief Work

The work that we found to do was, in its volume, its complexity and its urgency, something new in the history of relief activities. When we here are going to provide housing accommodations, and so forth, this big group didn’t like to have some little time to do it. If we are going to build a home for the aged, or other institution, we like to have a year to get a start before taking the people in. We didn’t have any year at all. Refugees were streaming in from various sources at most irregular times. For instance, 1,000 came in a day through Switzerland from the back of the

4,000 Bills at 1919 Legislative Session

The 1919 Legislature broke all records for number of bills introduced. There were 1,522 introduced in the Senate and 1,507 in the Assembly. Of these, 981 were amended and reprinted, making the total for the Senate 3,470 and for the Legislature’s consideration. There were 3,470 presented in 1918, 3,381 in 1917, and 3,073 in 1916.

During the thirty-day period Governor Smith determined the fate of 614 legislative propositions. He approved 385 and vetoed 229. Prior to adjournment on April 19 the Governor had approved 260 bills, making a total of 465 laws enacted for the year.

German lines. None of the people could provide for themselves, otherwise they would not have been sent. They kept doing things for a thousand more people. In the course of a few months we had set up an organization to help to house and feed them, made all the medical examinations of the children, taken care of all the sick in the hospitals, put the people on trains, met them when they arrived at their final destination, gave them a bed, a place to sleep, some blankets and some clothes and various minor necessities, so that, at least, things were well

It was no unusual thing for us to get notice that on day after tomorrow we would have to evacuate the city of so-and-so—20,000 people, with nowhere for them to go.

Half a Million Succeeded

It will be a very lasting and pleasant thing to remember that the big German drive came on in March of 1918. We had our machinery sufficiently organized so that half a million people who were driven out of their homes without anyone expecting it and forced away into all other parts of France, were, almost within twenty-four hours, found and helped. The American Red Cross and other organizations then put on trains, were met at the end of the line, and whatever was possible was done to help them find a place to stay and live.

That was one of our pieces of work, and perhaps that will have endeared us to the people of France more than anything else. It doesn’t make any difference what President Wilson does or doesn’t do, or what Premier Clemenceau does or doesn’t do, but to the people, very few people, that was the only thing that was done, and we were very glad to get help and they liked us all. They liked us through and through, and were awfully sorry to have us go away.

It concerned me about things about tuberculosis and some things about children, and some other things. The tuberculosis work, which is the thing in which I was primarily concerned, was very interesting. The situation was a little different from what we had supposed it would be, but it was found serious and demanding attention. We tried all the things we had done here about tuberculosis, and they all went ‘— and went’ perfectly well. The first need was to arouse interest in educational work.

This effort was an unqualified success. The tuberculosis exhibit and the child welfare exhibit appealed to the people enormously. If we gave away 70,000 pieces of literature in a day, you wouldn’t find five of those thrown away on the floor of the building or on the adjoining public places. They locked their doors and read them and they got informed.

The same is true about the children’s work, and if the results are as permanent as the tuberculosis work, it will only be because we have not a continuing body as we have in the Rockefeller Commission to see it through.

Survey Trip Through Europe

On the evening of the armistice I set out from France to form some opinion on the relative needs of the people of the various countries. That was a very absorbing experience—a very difficult experience in many respects—but still we like the whole, I think, a useful one. We couldn’t convey to you in a few minutes anything adequate of the things that we saw, but I would perhaps say this: That you as a group would understand the real losses of the war far better than most people because you are accustomed to dealing with questions of health and relief, and you know very well that any country is not to have its birth rate cut in half, or one-third off, or practically gone altogether for a period of years, and that such conditions mean to a country the tuberculosis work suspended and to lose in three years all the population that we made for the future.—so serious that it is difficult to see how ever they can be made good,—are the losses to human life, the increase in sickness and in the death rate, apart from the losses on the field of battle.

Shortage of food is a very serious thing. The government of France has forced the death rate so quickly responds as diminishment of the amount of food to which we have been accustomed. Nothing else explains the increase in tuberculosis in Serbia but the reduction of the amount of food available.

It would be unfruitful to tell you the details of things of that nature, except that they must command the sympathy and they make the utmost possible demands upon the statesmen of the world. The resources of the countries which have been wasted during the war and whose loss is perhaps the greatest, is that they have been the result of the final result of the war upon civilization.

It is very good to get back and it is very fine to see our own people in such a fine atmosphere and so fine an atmosphere and so many things being done to make people, on the whole, more comfortable and cheerful and better off. That wasn’t true in any of the countries which I visited except England. England is recovering from the war and is caring for the health of her people in a perfectly extraordinary way.

A very high authority has said that the war was fought to make the world safe for democracy. Peace must be made, I think, in this country to make democracy safe for the world, and democracy will only be safe for the world when it is constructive. It is very disappointing to find that democracy in some countries especially on the continent, perhaps does not mean what we had supposed it meant. That is to say, democracy emerging everywhere is still a government of protest and of protection of individual rights. Democracy on the continent of Europe means the word I am so good as to say you, and you shall not get any of my things away.' It doesn’t mean that ‘you and I will work’ together, but it means that you are part of the community.” But it does mean that in England, and if we are to live up to our opportunities, it must mean that in America. It strikes me that it really is the idea that the Christian Aid Association has always meant—that its present and future program will help make democracy mean contributing to the welfare of all of its citizens.”
49 Feebleminded Children in Schools of One City From Five Defective Ancestors

City of Ithaca Paying $2,250 a Year in Trying to Educate Them—Neglect of the Feebleminded Makes the Problem More and More Serious

An exceedingly practical piece of work showing the community and its educational authorities what a burden mental defectives are and how much they cost society is being done by Mr. F. D. Boyston, Superintendent of Schools in Ithaca, N. Y., and Miss Ruth Dimmick, Psychologist.

In a recent report to the Board of Education, they presented highly important and significant facts deduced from their study of defectives in the local schools.

Their report showed that five persons of defective mentality have produced, through a few generations, 49 mentally defective children now in the local school system. These children cost the city about $2,250 a year for what little education it is possible to give them.

Their report follows:

A SIGNIFICANT REPORT

"One of the interesting developments in the study of the atypical child in the Ithaca Public Schools is the comparatively common center from which this type of child comes. This common center has been determined by following back from the child to the parent and grandparent and the relation of one group with another which at first seems to be quite independent and unrelated.

"One man four generations ago is the ancestor of thirteen (13) mentally defective children now in our schools. He is also the ancestor of seventeen (17) alcoholics, two (2) of whom have court records.

"Another man, five generations ago, is the ancestor of nine (9) mentally defective children in our schools, of four (4) mentally defective citizens not in the schools, of thirteen (13) confirmed alcoholics, of six (6) persons having criminal records two of whom have served state prison terms, and of twelve (12) persons who have led immoral lives.

"A third man, five generations back, is the ancestor of eleven (11) mentally retarded pupils in our schools. He is also the ancestor of fourteen (14) alcoholics, and three (3) persons with criminal records.

"Two sisters (sisters) three generations ago, are the ancestors of sixteen (16) mentally defective children in our schools. One sister has had eighteen (18) children of whom seven (7) girls are now living and all seven are mental defectives. One son is also mentally defective. Six (6) of these daughters have lived for years with different families and a daughter married her cousin (the son of the mother’s sister) so that all the grandchildren are illegitimate. There are six (6) grandchildren born of these cousins.

"The other sister had five (5) children. She has seven (7) feebleminded grandchildren. Nine (9) other grandchildren are infants. None of her children have been married.

"The descendants of these five people have intermarried until now we have forty-nine (49) mentally defective children in our schools from these five sources. These children cost Ithaca last year approximately $2,250.00 through the public schools in an attempt to develop the little mentality that is there. Within the next three to five years there will be added from these same sources some thirty more children providing the children now born live and the families remain in town."

RAISING FUNDS FOR CARE OF CHILDREN IN TIoga COUNTY

The Tioga County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association began a drive on June 8 to raise money to increase the work of the county agency for dependent children.

A quota has been assigned to each town. Large display posters have been placed in store windows in the various towns. These posters read as follows:

JOIN The Tioga County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association.

- Protect your County from the Scourge of Feeble-Minded men and women by sending them to proper institutions.
- Save Children from neglect and abuse at the hands of immoral and intemperate parents.
- Save taxes for this year and generations to come. Make your County a better place to live in.
- The Children of To-day are the Citizens of To-morrow. Shall we neglect them?
- The reformatories, hospitals, prisons and almshouses are caring for thousands of the neglected children of yesterday. Your taxes are supporting them. Think! Do your bit toward saving this generation of children.

TUBERCULOSIS COMMITTEE HELPING
3,000 MEN REJECTED BY U. S. ARMY

More than three thousand men who were rejected from the military service by local draft boards on account of tuberculosis have been reported to the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association which will assist them in securing sanatorium care, medical advice, and instruction in preventive hygiene, according to a bulletin just released to newspapers.

The list which contains the names of rejected men, living in New York State, was compiled in the office of the Surgeon General at Washington, D.C., by the National Tuberculosis Association. Similar lists have been furnished to each of the state tuberculosis associations.

The Committee's activities have transmitted the list to the State Department of Health and both organizations will cooperate in locating the men through city and village health officers, visiting nurses and local tuberculosis associations. When the names do not include the addresses of the men and difficulties are being experienced in locating them. Therefore, the assistance of local draft boards, postmasters, lodges, labor unions, letter carriers, etc., is being enlisted.

"From the standpoint of practical patriotism", writes Commissioner of Health Dr. C. W. C. Martin, "this is the duty of citizens who know the whereabouts of such men to furnish this information in order that they may be brought under treatment in tuberculosis hospitals or sanatoria or under medical and nursing care in their homes. Local health officers, visiting nurses or local tuberculosis committees should be notified in order that such assistance may be given. All men disengaged from the military service on account of tuberculosis and are not receiving care, are urged to consult their family physician or one of these agencies at once."

POSTHUMOUS AWARD TO MAJOR WILLARD STRAIGHT

The Distinguished Service Medal has been awarded to Major Willard D. Straight, deceased, for his services in the organization and administration of the War Risk Bureau in the American Expeditionary Forces in France. The citation is as follows:

Major Willard D. Straight, (Deceased)

For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services. In the service of the organization, development and administration of the War Risk Bureau his efforts resulted in marked efficiency in the handling of large volumes of insurance, as well as the numerous applications for allotments and allowances, which covered almost the entire existence of the American Expeditionary Forces. As an assistant in the First Section of the General Staff of the First Army he rendered particularly valuable services to the Government by his great energy and high ability."

Major Straight died of pneumonia in Paris on November 30, 1918. Mrs. Straight has served as a member of the Board of Managers of the State Charities Aid Association for some years.

NEW LAW MAY DELAY
RELIEF OF NEEDY CHILDREN IN WESTCHESTER COUNTY

The work of the Westchester County Department of Child Welfare is considerably affected by an amendment to Chapter 242 of the Laws of 1916 which went into effect on November 29 is to the so-called Westchester County Commission bill. According to the terms of the bill before it was amended, the County Commission had the power "to make such arrangements for the care of needy children as may be authorized by law". In this section the Department of Child Welfare, a branch of the work of the County Commissioner, had for two years made provision for children needing commitment under the poor law, sending notification of action taken in every case to the local city commissioner or town supervisor.

The amendment changes this section of the law by adding the words, "but no child shall be chargeable to any town or city in the county of Westchester shall be committed to any institution or placed in any home nor shall any expense be chargeable to any town or city in the county of Westchester unless said child without first having obtained the approval of the supervisor of the town, or of the commission of charities of the city, charged therewith, as the case may be."

This amendment now prevents the Department of Child Welfare from taking any action to provide for desert children until the consent of the local official is obtained. Whether this provision will bring about delay in the handling of emergency cases and will thereby cause difficulty in the child welfare work of the county remains to be seen. The amendment would seem to be a step backward in the work of the Welfare Department. The Westchester County as its influence is against centralization and toward increased power on the part of local officials.

S. C. A. A. Well Represented at the National Conference

The State Charities Aid Association was well represented at the National Conference of Social Work in Atlantic City, June 1-8. In addition to its Secretary, Homer Folks, the executive committee, composed of Henry C. Wright, Secretary pro tem., George J. Nelbach and George A. Hastings, assistant secretaries. Mr. Folks and Mr. Nelbach represented especially the Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis, and Mr. Hastings the Committee on Mental Hygiene. The Committee on Children were Miss Sophie Van S. Theis, Superintendent of the Agency for Placing Out Children, and Mrs. Constance Goodrich and Miss A. C. Haskins, Assistant Superintendents; Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the County Commission of Placing Out Children, and Miss Mary S. Labarre and Mrs. Jane S. Lewis, Assistant Superintendents; and Miss Mary R. Mason, Superintendent of the Agency for Assisting Women with Infants. The Social Service Department of the Mental Hygiene Committee attended in full. Mrs. Margaret J. Powers, Social Service Director, remained for the entire conference, Miss Isabel D. Hoes, Assistant Social Service Director, attended the first half of the session and Mrs. Marie von H. Byers, Social Service Assistant, the latter half.

Several addresses were given by present and former members of the Association. In the Division of Public Agencies and Institutions, Mr. Wright spoke on "The Basic Quantity Ratio and What It Means in Institution Effectiveness." At a meeting of the Committee on Protection of Children, Miss Gladys Mendum, Agent for Rockland County, gave an address on "Child Welfare Work in a Rural Community, Actual Happenings and Why." At another section of the same division Miss Ruth Taylor, Director of the Department of Child Welfare in Westchester County, spoke on "Child Welfare in Westchester County."

Col. Folks Talks on League

In the course of the week a special meeting was held under the auspices of the League of Free Nations Association. Mr. Folks gave an address on "The League of Nations." He emphasized the need for a permanent League of Nations to prevent future war. He pointed out that the League of Nations is based upon the principle of self-determination. Colonel Folks' address, which included examples cited from his own experiences abroad while representing the American Red Cross, followed presentation of the legal and political aspects of the Peace Treaty by Paul K. Engel, Editor of The Survey; and Allen T. Burns, director of the Study of Americanization of the Carnegie Corporation.

Next year's convention will be held in New Orleans.

GRAY SAMARITANS HEAR MISS HOES

Miss Isabel D. Hoes, Assistant Social Service Director of the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities Aid Association, gave a talk on social hygienic problems to a group of Polish students at the International Institute for Young Women, under the auspices of a branch of the New York chapter of the American Red Cross. The students, known as the Polish Gray Samaritans, are being trained for social service in devastated Poland where they will return when the conditions permit. Miss Hoes read several actual cases typifying mental problems in individuals and families, illustrating the problem, most of which were drawn from the work of Westchester County, with the object of emphasizing the psychiatric thread running through all cases work and concluding with a little talk on the general principles of mental hygiene.
COMBAT TUBERCULOSIS AS AFTERMATH OF INFLUENZA

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT STATEWIDE SYSTEM OF CLINICS

To help local communities deal with an increase of tuberculosis expected to result from the recent influenza epidemic, the Association’s Tuberculosis Committee, in conjunction with the State Department of Health, has begun a campaign for the institution of tuberculosis clinics at which free expert medical examination and advice will be provided for persons who have or think they have tuberculosis.

The plans contemplate work in thirty-four counties of the state arranged in groups according to the needs and the local facilities available. In one group there are no special facilities available at present for the expert medical examinations for tuberculosis; in another, such necessary facilities are available, but neither no clinics are now in operation or the county is not thoroughly covered. Finally, there are counties in which occasional clinics have been held but not in sufficient number.

Efforts will be made to help all of these counties provide an adequate number of clinics, held at satisfactory intervals and as an established part of their public health machinery.

The superintendents and other members of the medical staff of tuberculosis sanatoria and specialists from health resorts such as those in the Adirondack Mountains and Sullivan County are participating in the work.

S. C. A. A. Assigns Large Staff

The Association’s Tuberculosis Committee has assigned the following members of its staff to this work: Drs. Elliott Washburn and Stanley L. Wang, as medical examiners (these physicians have had wide training and experience in the diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis in its varied manifestations); Dr. Charles S. Prest and Frank Kierman, as organizers and publicity agents; and Misses Elizabeth Hanson, Frances H. Myers, Elsa Brehaut, and Ada Whyte, as supervising nurses. The State Health Department has assigned Dr. M. Edgar Rose, director, Division of Tuberculosis, as medical examiner; and Dr. Halsey J. Ball, as organizer and publicity agent; Miss Mathilde Kuhlman, as supervising nurse; and its district sanitary supervisors. In addition, local health officers, physicians, public health nurses, tuberculosis committees, and kindred organizations are cooperating.

The campaign was started early in May in Allegany, Livingston, and Otsego counties, and has been exceedingly successful from the very outset. The attendance at individual clinics has ranged from 28 to 92, and in several instances, the clinic sessions have had to be extended into the evening and following day. The units have been in different counties and the organizers and field nurses are the first ones to go into the field. After a thorough study of the conditions in such counties including the number of tuberculosis patients and needs for clinics, the centers of population, etc., the places at which the clinics are to be held are determined. A conference is then called between the local physicians, health authorities and local tuberculosis organizations at which their arrangements for the clinic are made. The nurses cooperating with the local authorities and agencies then spend a week or two in the county visiting the clinics, and the field nurse, if one is employed, and explaining the advantages of expert medical examination for persons who have tuberculosis, that they may have it or those who had influenza during the recent epidemic and have failed to make a complete recovery.

The nurses working in cooperation thus visit a majority of the active cases of tuberculosis and through a campaign of newspaper publicity, talks before various clubs and organizations, suspicious cases and those who have failed to recover completely from influenza are persuaded to come to the clinic and receive a free medical examination. Invitations are also issued to the local physicians to attend the clinic and they are especially invited to bring in any of their doubtful patients for consultation.

92 Patients at One Clinic

On the day of the clinic the two field nurses and the organizer as well as the interested local workers attend the clinic and assist patients and examiner. Several of the clinics held thus far have been planned for one day only but over that the number of patients has been from sixty to ninety-two. It has been necessary to hold an extra session on the following day.

After the clinic has been held, the entire unit remains in the town for a day or two, going over the records and making reports. The members of the staff then communicate with the local visiting nurse, if one is employed, and the local health officers and physicians in an effort to inaugurate a follow-up campaign for the patients and to explain to the local workers the necessity of these clinics and to assist them in holding such clinics at regular intervals.

At the first seven clinics a total of 379 persons were examined for an average of 54 persons per session. Forty-three persons were diagnosed as having active, pulmonary tuberculosis, and of this number, 34 had not been previously reported to the local health authorities. Fifty-nine cases were diagnosed as suspicious cases, and 48 children were recommended as need of special feeding and fresh air treatment.

The 34 counties in which this special clinic campaign was to be instituted are Wayne, Genese, Seneca, Yates, Cayuga, Delaware, Broome, Columbia, Chemung, Greene, Allegany, Livingston, Otsego, Cayuga, Chemung, Erie, Monroe, Niagara, Rensselaer, Saratoga, Schenectady, Onondaga, Washington, Chautauqua, Dutchess, Fulton, Jefferson, Montgomery, Nassau, Orange, Tioga, Orange, Rockland, Suffolk, and St. Lawrence.

NELBACH APPOINTED ON THE FRAMINGHAM APPRAISAL COMMITTEE

Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the United States Health Service, has appointed George J. Nelbach, assistant secretary of the Association and executive secretary of its Tuberculosis Committee, to serve on a committee of specialists appointed to appraise the Framingham (Mass.) Community Health and Demonstration Project. The committee, composed of thirteen members, will serve under the chairmanship of Dr. Allan J. McLaughlin, formerly State Commissioner of Health of Massachusetts, but now with the United States Public Health Service.

The personnel of the committee, besides Dr. McLaughlin, chairman, are: Secretary, Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, Professor of Public Health, Yale University; Dr. Wickliffe Rose, director, International Health Commission, Rockefeller Foundation; Dr. Louis Hamman, Johns Hopkins University; Dr. Charles V. Chapin, health officer, Providence, R. I.; Drs. Edgar C. Sydenstricker, United States Public Health Service; Miss Helena Stewart, Vice President, National Organization for Public Health Nursing; Dr. Anson J. Hayhurst, director, Bureau of Industrial Hygiene, Ohio State Board of Health; Dr. Thomas A. Stroey, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Lawson Brown, Saranac Lake, N. Y.; Dr. Samuel McClintock Hamill, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Dr. H. R. M. Landis, Phipps Institute, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Framingham Demonstration Program was originally designed as a three-year activity, and the three years will be completed on December 31, 1931. While the program was designed with tuberculosis, the program has touched other health activities, and has developed the wide range of interests represented on the Appraisal Committee. It is believed by the Framingham Committee of the National Tuberculosis Association that this ap- praisal will be an invaluable aid in reaching a decision regarding the termination or possible extension of the Framingham program.

MISS WHYTE JOINS STAFF

Miss Ada Whyte, R. N., has joined the staff of the Association’s Tuberculosis Committee, as supervising nurse, and specifically to assist in the statewide movement for the holding of periodic clinics in the smaller cities and rural districts, described in another article in this issue.

Miss Whyte is a graduate of the State Normal School in Oneonta, N. Y. and of the Nurses’ Training School connected with Burdick Hospital, Fitchburg, Mass. She took a course in public health nursing given at Teacher’s College, Columbia University, under the direction of Professor Adelaide Nutting. Other Whyte was for two years superintendent of the Visiting Nurses Association of Philadelphia, Pa., and was connected for one year with the Budd-Rohrer Foundation in Philadelphia in the “Seven Baby” campaign; she carried on field investigations. Miss Whyte has just returned from service with the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the American Red Cross, Department of Civil Affairs, in France.

"FINISH LETCHWORTH VILLAGE!" GOVERNOR URGES

DEDICATES A NEW BUILDING AND LAYS A CORNERSTONE

"Care of Defectives of Immense Importance," Says Gov. Smith

"Study Causes of Mental Defect," Dr. Bailey Urges

"Divorcing Politics From Charitable Work Bears Rich Fruit."
—Mr. Vanderlip

LETCHWORTH Village reached another milestone in its development on July 9 when Governor Alfred E. Smith opened and dedicated Stewart Hall, the school and recreation building, and laid the cornerstone for a new group of buildings for women.

Squaring his performance with the promises made in his campaign addresses and his messages to the Legislature, the Governor is insisting on better care for the feebleminded and is taking active steps to provide more institutional accommodations.

33,000 Defectives in State

In his address at the dedication of the new building the Governor said that there are at least 33,000 defectives in the State and only about 5,000 are properly provided for. Both the Governor and Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the Board of Managers of Letchworth Village, urged the speedy completion of this model institution which will eventually house 5,000 patients and be the largest of its kind in America.

"The care of the feebleminded is of immense importance," said the Governor. He declared that the program now being developed by the State Commission for Mental Defectives "will have an important bearing on the future well-being of the entire population of the State."

A Laboratory Imperative Need

Dr. Pearce Bailey, Chairman of the State Commission for Mental Defectives, in his address at the cornerstone laying, made a strong plea for more research into the causes of mental defect and especially urged the establishment of a pathological laboratory at Letchworth Village to serve all the State institutions for defectives.

"Our government spends millions in investigating diseases of men, animals and plants, but it spends nothing in research of the human brain which is, after all, the seat of all the activities of mankind," said Dr. Bailey. "We know much more about what kills apple trees and what oysters die, than we do of the causes of insanity; and the causation of feeblemindedness, bound up as it is with all the questions of development, with nutrition, early influences and surroundings, is still a closed book."

Fr. McGeen Asks Blessing on Project

The Reverend Vincent DePaul McGeen of New York, who accompanied the Governor to the Village, invoked the divine blessing upon the early completion of the institution, upon the study into the hidden causes of mental defect, and upon the good work which this important institution is doing.

"PRIVATE ORGANIZATIONS AND THE TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN"

Mr. Nelbach quoted the following statement from the monthly bulletin of the Ohio State Board of Health and written by Miss Isabel W. Lowman, Associate Editor, Public Health Nurse Quarterly:

"I believe that this voluntary agency composed of intelligent, reasonable, fair-minded citizens, is in a certain sense the prototype of what all individual citizens will be some day if justice prevails, and that it stands for the people in their claim upon the municipality for protection. Theoretically, we Americans hold that the will of the people is expressed in the institutions and laws which are designed to serve them, yet in matters touching public health, at least, and in many other matters also we know that the people are without will and without desire because they are without knowledge. Therefore, it is right that, until such time as a large share of all citizens are anxious to secure their own welfare through the enactment and observance of wise laws, disinterested voluntary societies should stand as their sponsors and their representatives touching these benefits. The group desire which such a private society expresses, and which emanates from the composite consciousness of men and women who are laying down for the time being the work of individual ends in order to obtain benefits for others as well as for themselves, represents one of the highest forms of citizenship now known to us and it is a virtue peculiar to the times that have called it forth."

SUPERINTENDENTS OF POOR HOLD ANNUAL CONVENTION

Miss Mary S. Labaree, Assistant Superintendent of the County Agencies Department, is taking the summer course on Rural Sociology at the New York State Agricultural College, Cornell University, under Professor Dwight Sanderson.

Miss Labaree is also giving a course of lectures to a class of 20 home service workers of the American Red Cross, who are attending a special institute at the University during the same period. The American Red Cross expects to continue and extend home service work in the rural sections of New York State, and the State Charities Aid Association, in giving the services of Miss Labaree as one of the instructors to the training class, is contributing what it can toward making the movement a success.

The 49th annual convention of the Association of County Superintendents of the Poor and Poor Law Officers of the State was held at Prospect House, Shelter Island Heights, June 24-27. The Association is the oldest organization of charity workers, either public or private in the United States.

William Hunt, Commissioner of Charities of Buffalo, was elected President for the coming year. Fred W. Hollis, Superintendent of the Poor in Ontario County, was reelected Treasurer, and Louis T. Strong, Superintendent of the Poor in Lewis County, was reelected Secretary. Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, was named as chairman of the Committee on Topics for the next year's convention, which will be held at Bemus Point, Chautauqua County, next June.

The conference was well attended, and much interest was shown in the program, which included papers on "The Child in the Reconstruction Period," by Charles H. Johnson; "Widows' Pensions," by Mrs. Sherman Clark of Rochester; "Mothers and Babies in Need of Special Care," by Miss Mary R. Mason of New York; "A Child's Temporary Detention Homes—the Reason for Its Need and Its Value to the Public," by Rev. S. E. Stebbins of Rochester; "War a Character Builder," by Hon. Truman Lewis Stone of Craig Colony; "Along Lines of Progress," by Robert W. Hebbard of New York City and "The Deeply Rooted, Vigorous Vine," by Dr. Robert W. Hill, Albany. A paper on "Relief in Cities," by Hor. Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities of New York City, was read by James E. Crouch of Rochester, as Mr. Coler was unable to be present.

Mr. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities and member of the State Commission on Mental Defectives, explained the new Mental Deficiency Law, and answered many questions concerning the handling of the mental defective under its provisions.

An informal dance was held in the hotel parlors on Tuesday evening, and the annual banquet occurred Thursday evening. On Wednesday a delightful boat ride and shore dinner was given to the visiting delegates by the Board of Supervisors of Suffolk County. Three comfortable boats carried the guests on a sail around Shelter and Plum Islands, landing them at Paradise Point where a shore dinner was served.
“FINISH LETCHWORTH”

Already progress toward better provision for the feebleminded has been made during Governor Smith’s administration, and the Governor means to push measures to provide enough institutional accommodations for the defectives who ought not to remain at large in the community and to put New York State again in the lead in caring for them. It is planned to provide for 840 more patients at Letchworth Village this year. Four new dormitories with a capacity of 280 will be opened in a few days.

State to Regain Leadership

“I believe during my term as Governor more beds for the feebleminded will be made available than during any other similar period in the history of the State,” said Governor Smith. “New York many years ago was the pioneer in the care and treatment of mental defectives. Even though the State may have lagged behind other commonwealths in more recent years, the steps taken during the last six months go a long way to restore New York to her former enviable position. The most conservative estimates indicate that there are not less than 33,000 defectives in this State, of whom only about 5,000 are in proper institutions. All the institutions are full and have waiting lists. Every community has its quota of feebleminded who are not receiving proper care.”

Governor Smith was accompanied to the Village by his wife, his son, Alfred E. Smith, Jr., his daughter, Miss Emily Smith, and his military secretary, Major Glyn; Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the Board of Managers; and Mrs. Vanderlip; Franklin B. Kirkbride, Secretary of the Board; and Judge Mortimer B. Patterson and Thomas J. Colton of the Board.

A luncheon was tendered to Governor and Mrs. Smith and the Board of Managers at the residence of the superintendent of the institution, Dr. Charles S. Little.

400 People Present

The exercises at the institution attracted a large attendance of State officials, Rockland County residents, and many from New York who are interested in the care of the feebleminded. In all nearly 400 people were present. A buffet lunch was served to all of them in one of the service buildings. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Boys’ Band of the institution. There was an exhibition of school work by the pupils in the educational building in the afternoon. The police arrangements were in charge of the State Police in command of Major George F. Chandler.

In the course of the day the Governor inspected various buildings at the institution and expressed himself well pleased with the site, with the construction, and with the progress which has been made toward its completion recently. It was his first official visit to the institution since becoming Governor. On his way back to New York he also visited the State Hospital for Crippled Children at West Harverstraw.

Previous to the exercises at the institution, the Governor unveiled a monument to Corporal Harold Ferguson of Thiells, a member of Company E, 107th U. S. Infantry (old 7th), who was killed at Le Cateau, September 29, 1918. A detachment from the regiment was present.

Governor Approved $860,000 Grant

Governor Smith this year approved an appropriation of $860,000 passed by the Legislature for new construction at the institution, and on his visit to the Village laid the cornerstone of the service building for the new group of eight cottages for girls. He dedicated the completed assembly hall in the boys’ group, which has been named “Stewart Hall” after William Rhinelander Stewart, President of the State Board of Charities and Chairman of the Commission which selected the site of the institution.

Governor Smith was introduced by Frank A. Vanderlip who paid a high tribute to the Governor’s interest in seeing the feebleminded properly provided for and who said that “the wisdom of divorcing politics from the charitable work of the State has borne rich fruit.”

THE GOVERNOR’S ADDRESS

After commenting on the excellent site chosen for Letchworth Village some ten years ago, the Governor urged the prompt completion of the institution so that the accommodations for defectives in the metropolitan district will be speedily increased.

“This institution,” said he, “is beginning at last to show to the eye what the completed institution is to be. I have always insisted during my long term of service in the Legislature and more recently as Governor that adequate provision should be made for the insane and defective. I want to repeat a sentence from my inaugural message: ‘The whole question of the care and treatment of the feebleminded is one of immense importance to the State of New York.’ I had the satisfaction curiously in the session to transmit to the Legislature the first report of the State Commission for the feebleminded. It is a great satisfaction that the Legislature received the proposals which had been made after exhaustive study in a spirit of cooperation which has resulted in a most important advance in the State care of defectives. Not only was the new Mental Defective Act placed on the statute books, but the largest appropriation and authorization for new construction was made during the session.

While I was forced with regret to accept the resignation of Dr. Walter B. James as Chairman of the Commission on Feebleminded, I had the satisfaction to secure for this important post Colonel Pearce Bailey of New York City, whose work for the Federal Government during the war needs no comment.

“I believe during my term as Governor more beds for the feebleminded will be made available than during any other similar period in the history of the State. New York many years ago, was the pioneer in the care and treatment of mental defectives. Even though the State may have lagged behind other commonwealths in more recent years, the steps taken during the last six months go a long way to restore New York to her former enviable position. The most conservative estimates indicate that there are not less than 33,000 defectives in this State, of whom only about 5,000 are in proper institutions. All the institutions are full and have waiting lists. Every community has its quota of feebleminded who are not receiving proper care.

We are here today to inaugurate the new construction of another year, which will make available 500 more beds, and we shall shortly inspect four new dormitories with their 250 beds, which will be occupied during the next few days. All the preliminary work has been done here, and from now on the money spent will be largely in providing additional accommodations, until a total population of possibly 5,000 patients is ultimately provided for. It is possible here to provide beds more quickly and at a more moderate cost, than through the creation of additional institutions. I hope the day is coming when not only will the institution itself be completed, but when a considerable number of small farm colonies inexpensively built will dot the countryside and make possible the graduation from the parent institution, after training, of those capable of the freedom of farm life under proper supervision.

"The new Commission for the Feebleminded, in close cooperation with the State Board of Charities and State Charities, has been charged with different phases of the main problem for which the new Commission has been constituted, to determine to what extent with a constructive program which is bound to have an important bearing on the future well-being of the State's feebleminded. The census which is to be taken will tell us just how many individuals need the help of the State. The responsibility of institutional care is now given to a steadily increasing number of those who should not be at large. The Department of Education in its special classes will care for an increasing number of those who fall behind the normal child but can safely be left at home with adequate training.

Would Extend Colony Care

"Colonies of the right kind, properly coordinated with the parent institution, seem to offer such a framework of practical results that the whole question of colony care should be studied by the greatest diligence by the State Commission, which I believe will ultimately formulate plans for a wise extension of what has heretofore been largely experimental. Dr. M. W. Parkinson, who has developed his colony at Templeton, Massachusetts, has done magnificent pioneer work. We can well afford to go slowly when going beyond the principle which he has proved workable and sound.

"The defective delinquent presents a more difficult problem, which I believe must be considered by the experts before a program can be undertaken. It is obvious that this type of patient cannot mingle with those who can be permitted the freedom of an institution like Letchworth Village.

Good Progress in Building

"In spite of the handicap of war conditions, the progress which has been made here has been surprisingly good. I hope the Board of Managers will do everything in their power to hasten the completion of the work now under construction. Letchworth Village is undoubtedly destined to become one of the greatest, if not the greatest, institution for defectives in the United States. It is another Waverley, and as it has been described by Dr. John Smith, its worthy President, at the beginning, can I not add, only bigger and better? Visitors to Letchworth Village are more and more impressed with its splendid site and its possibilities.

"Stewart Hall, in which we are assembled, is to be dedicated to the social life and recreation of the institution. It is a satisfaction to me to be able to name this building Stewart Hall in recognition of the many years of loyal and unselfish labor of William Rhinelander Stewart, Chairman of the Commission which selected the site, President of the State Board of Charities, and a public benefactor of whom we can all well be proud."

Mr. VANDERLIP'S ADDRESS

In introducing Governor Smith, Mr. Vanderlip said that his interest and that of other members of the Board of Managers was so strong that "that Letchworth Village is made a credit to the State, that there shall be no waste of the tax payer's money and that every effort shall be made to push through to completion one of the most needed of the State's activities. There has been no politics in the development of Letchworth Village. Differing opinions, races and creeds are forgotten here, and the main object in view is always supported, no matter what political party is in power. The wisdom of divorcing politics from the charitable work of the State is to the good of this, I am satisfied with you as Governor Alfred E. Smith, Governor of the State of New York, that this is an American reformer in the city and State and has the pride in his commonwealth which every true citizen should expect. We are fortunate in having a Governor, who, after long years in the Assembly, has taken the Governor's chair with a first-hand knowledge of the needs of the State, with a purpose to add to the commonwealth and administration devoted to the interests of all the people, irrespective of class, race or condition."

Mr. Vanderlip called especial attention to the care with which the institution has been planned and constructed. "From the start," he said, "there has been but a single object in view, to build the best institution possible, to get the best possible type of men and women to manage it, and to give the best care and treatment to the children who are sent here, often for the term of their natural lives.

Many Officials at Letchworth Exercises

Among those present at the exercises at Letchworth village on July 9 were:

- Governor Alfred E. Smith
- Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, Jr.
- Mabel Glanm
- Miss Emily Smith
- Miss Belle Glanm
- Rev. Vincent DePaul McGowan
- Dr. C. A. Buddeber
- Dr. Walter B. James
- Mrs. C. A. Buddeber
- Frank E. Utter
- Mrs. William Hartman
- Frank A. Davenport
- Franklin B. Kirkbride
- Judge Mortimer B. Patterson
- Mrs. Mabel T. Flor
- Thomas J. Colton
- Dewey L. Johnson
- C. A. Buddeber
- Assemblers: Mary M. Lilly
- Assemblers: Harry E. Peak
- Albert C. Linder
- Walter G. Hamilton
- Dr. John Simonsen
- Dr. George A. Leitner
- George A. Hastings

Best Expert Assistance

"I believe I can safely say there has not been a single compromise made since the Board of Managers was originally appointed. Expert advice and assistance has been sought when ever expression of opinion arose, and the fullest opportunity for discussion and investigation of mooted problems has always been encouraged. One of the most excellent results has been the careful and thoughtful interest which has been taken in the welfare of the institution. The result, I think, is that we can all be proud of the work that we have done for the benefit of the feebleminded and for the good of the State.

Public Awakening to Problem

"This laying of a new cornerstone at Letchworth Village is significant evidence of the awakening of the public consciousness to its obligations in relation to the most numerous of the State's dependents—to those dependents for whom up to now no provisions have been made, and yet who, more than any others will repay well directed efforts in their behalf. This repayment will become evident by an increase in public order and safety, in the maintenance of its economy and productivity, and in the happiness of the feebleminded themselves.

"It is not necessary that what we are here to dedicate is the first step. Such is by no means the case. The first steps were taken many years ago, now and have been continued ever since, by talented men and women, who have quietly, conscientiously and persistently been at work both in our own institutions and outside of them. They have made this day possible. We medical men are sometimes prone to consider the question as solely medical, but we should not forget that the movement, especially in its relation to education, has been materially advanced by those who have approached it from its human and societal, quite as much as from its medical side.

"One cannot view this imposing and soon to be beautiful municipality, this model spotless town, without stopping to inquire what it all means; without being seized by the desire to know what the problem of the feebleminded is, where it is leading us, what the future holds for a necessity which already has resulted in so many buildings and streets.

40,000 Defectives in State

"The statistics in reference to mental defect gathered by the medical department of the army justify the belief that there are at least 40,000 feebleminded persons in this State. Realizing, as everyone in this audience does, that a feebleminded person is not to himself easily becomes a menace to public welfare, and certainly cannot make the best of himself, we are forced in the face of the facts to look upward and look elsewhere, and may, if we must go on multiplying institutions until every defective is under institutional control, and we have contracted for ten Letchworth Villages."

"That would surely be a discouraging program. But fortunately it is one which we do not have to contemplate at the present time. We are urgently in need of more beds, several thousand of them, but do not need to contemplate a mammoth program of construction just yet for the reason that the final method of providing for the feebleminded has not yet been determined. The problem in infancy, still is one which requires extended study and experiment before the final answer will be plain. The hope, the well-founded hope, is that with better observation, earlier observations and perfected measures of control the stay of inmates in institutions will be for brief periods, after which they can be returned to the community under some supervision; and the brightest hope of all is that perhaps a wonderful creation will now be made in a way by means of which the production of mental defect may be checked at the source so that with the years the percentage of mental defect in the population, orphan asylums, and mental hospitals are well founded, and I believe that they are, the estimate that today would have to be made, as to the number of beds required for mental defectives would appear wildly extravagant 25 years from now.

More Research Necessary

The note of victory that this day seems to sound, is that the lavish provision, the architectural triumph of Letchworth Village remains a new public interest in the problem of the feebleminded and that those who authorized this wonderful creation will not now be found until our knowledge concerning the problem is better founded.

In the public is now so far involved and faces such an extension of its program that it will insist upon knowing, and must be informed, not only as to the best methods of caring for the feebleminded, but also that feeblemindedness is, how it arises and what are the means available to a civilized and democratic community of bringing about its decrease.

"We, who are entrusted for the present with the care of these matters, can give the answers to the questions the public will become more and more insistent upon having, only if we immediately provide means of research. We must establish a medical center in the trail of custodial care, but we cannot stop there. We must this day also make a beginning along the way of fundamentally confronting the problem, which is the way of research."

Research must follow three principal lines—sociological, psychological, and pathological. Sociological and psychological research do hand in hand and consist in the study of individuals and the adaptation of individuals by groups to appropriate surroundings, training, education and ultimate vocations. It involves the highest cooperation between many different agencies. Psychiatric and psychologists must work together in harmony, so that the result of an individual study and pathological laboratories with pathological laboratories and supplying them with competent workers in science. It is to this organization, no to study for mental defectives, that we must look for the really fundamental solutions for the future. Each one must furnish the answers to questions which from now on will be asked us by taxpayers.

"So what we are really celebrating here today is that we have reached the top of one hill. There is a climb ahead. The path still leads up to a point beyond anything we can discern, but that point can be reached. To reach it we will have to overcome many of the same difficulties that our predecessors and we ourselves are familiar with, but we have an advantage our predecessors lacked, which is public support. We also have methods to assist us which they went without; and in research we have a new staff which, if we use it properly will bring us, perhaps with unexpected rapidity to the end of our journey."

MR. STEWART'S LETTER

Stewart Hall, the school and recreation building, is named for William Rhinelander Stewart, President of the State Board of Charities, who was chairman of the commission which selected the site for Letchworth Village. Mr. Stewart was not present at the exercises on July 9. He sent a letter addressed to Mr. Vanderbilt, President of the Board of Managers, which was read at the exercises by Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities and a member of the State Commission for Mental Defectives. Mr. Stewart's letter was as follows:

"It is a pleasure to learn by a letter addressed to me on May 15th by Mr. Franklin B. Kirkbride, Secretary of the Board of Managers of Letchworth Village, that the Board had, by a resolution adopted the day before, given the Assembly Hall of the Boys' Group my name, and that it will be opened and dedicated in the presence of the Governor of the State on Wednesday, July 9th, on which occasion an invitation is extended to me to attend and take part in the exercises.

"I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred by the Board, and of the generous terms in which the resolution was framed. Strange though it may appear, in one who has now for more than a generation taken some part, though usually a quiet one, in the public life of this State, a constitutional reluctance, which is now controlling, disinclines me from attending and participating in public occasions such as this. In support of this feeling, let me quote Joseph Addison, that master of sentiment and style, who opens one of the numbers of his Spectator" with this observation: ‘It is very difficult to praise a man without putting him out of countenance.’ So in lieu of my presence in St. John’s, I will, on seeing Mr. John Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, to those assembled there.

This suggestion was communicated to Mr. Letchworth, by Dr. William B. Kirkbride, of the State Board of Charities, who, I believe, in the following, and the whole of his paper, is the best example of the careful and accurate survey made of the site, so that in the location of buildings and their relations to each other, efficient management might be secured. The problem of providing water supply, sewage disposal, heating, transportation and industrial organization were studied before construction began. The project to secure the future provision of the requisite institutions not further than an hour’s ride by rail from the factory. But these days have passed, never to return, and the increasing representation and influence before construction began. The project to secure the future provision of the requisite institutions not further than an hour’s ride by rail from the factory. But these days have passed, never to return, and the increasing representation and influence of the factory have fulfilled its promise. It is gratifying to know that Governor Smith will be present on July 9th, and see what has already been accomplished. When a Member of the Legislature he befriendened the Village and he has lately shown his sympathy with the plans of the Managers by approving large appropriations for new buildings made by the Legislature during its last session. Progress seems to me satisfactory, for the project now more fully realizes its advantages. Before the passage of another decade, Letchworth Village should shelter and care for, in well-classified groups of buildings, all the feeble-minded persons of the State, as the leading institution of its type in the world.

In conclusion, permit me to repeat that the honor conferred by the Board in giving this Hall my name, is highly prized. I am proud to be associated with the memory of so good and useful a man as my old friend and colleague, William Pryor Letchworth.’

GETTING PLANS FOR THE WARREN COUNTY HOSPITAL

Prospects for starting work on the proposed County Tuberculosis Hospital in Warren County are brighter as a result of recent action of the Board of Supervisors. The Cameron and Titus properties will be used as the site and the Moore place of three acres which has been acquired by James Hill, one of the opponents to the location of the hospital on the Gurney Lane site, will be eliminated.

A committee has been appointed to select plans and specifications for the proposed hospital and submit them to the State Commissioner of Health and the Board of Supervisors for approval.

NESTLER—BYRNE

Miss Harriet G. Byrne of White Plains was married on June 5 to John F. Nestler of New Rochelle. Mrs. Nestler is an agent of the Children’s Department under the Westchester County Commission of Charities, and her husband is a delegate of the New York State Delegates of the American Red Cross in France. Dr. and Mrs. Nestler will reside in New Rochelle.

MAJOR PARSONS GOES TO BUFFALO

Major Frederick W. CAN'T USE ARMY CANTONMENTS

Temporary Quarters Sought for the Feebleminded—Plans Completed for 200-Bed Psychopathic Hospital in New York City—State Seeks Site From City

The Hospital Development Commission is making steady and substantial progress toward increasing the State's accommodations for the insane and feebleminded.

The keen interest taken by the entire Commission in the big problem, the amount of time expended by its members without salary, and the cooperative spirit in which they are working to better conditions, is being generally commented upon as one of the most refreshing and encouraging phenomena of State government.

Few unpaid commissions have had members of such large capacity and experience devoting themselves to whole-heartedly and disinterestedly to the solution of a difficult and complex public problem. The Commission consists of: Henry M. Sage, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, as Chairman; H. Edmund Medoch, chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, Vice-Chairman; State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher, Secretary; Dr. Charles W. Pilgrim, Chairman of the State Hospital Commission; Frank M. Williams, State Engineer; Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of State Hospitals; Frank H. Utter, Deputy Supervisor of State Charities; Senator John J. Boylan, representing the minority members of the Legislature; Congressman Thomas H. Cullen; Dr. Walter B. James, and Benjamin W. Arnold.

A meeting of the Commission was held at the Academy of Medicine in New York on June 23 with the chairman, Senator Sage, presiding. Announcement was made of the designation of Senator John J. Boylan as a new member of the Commission to represent the minority in the Legislature.

Cantonments Not Suitable

The Commission's metropolitan district committee, of which Congressman Thomas H. Cullen is chairman, reported that the Committee had gone thoroughly into the question of the possible acquiring of some of the army cantonments in the metropolitan district for State hospital purposes. Several of the cantonments were visited but none of them was found suitable for permanent hospital purposes.

Pending the establishment of a new State hospital in the district, whose relief from the overcrowding in the institutions in New York and vicinity is expected from additions to the Brooklyn and Manhattan State Hospitals. Plans have been approved for a new infirmary building on Ward's Island. Good progress has been made on enlarging the Brooklyn State Hospital, proper, and preliminary work is proceeding on the development of the Creedmoor division of the Brooklyn State Hospital. It is hoped that a substantial appropriation next year will make it possible to proceed with building at Creedmoor because difficulties as to sewage disposal have arisen and the Commission is hoping to clear them away before the next session of the Legislature.

To Push Marcy Development

State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher, who is Secretary of the Commission, announced that bids will be received this month for a considerable amount of construction at the new Marcy division of the Utica State Hospital. It is the plan of the Commission to rush the Marcy development. This will not only relieve the up-State situation but will somewhat help the metropolitan congestion by transfers.

State Architect Pilcher reported the completion of preliminary plans for a State psychopathic hospital in New York City and the plans were referred to the medical committee for intensive study. It was stated that a desirable site for such a hospital is owned by New York City in the Borough of the Bronx. It is hoped that the city will provide the State with the site for this much needed institution.

The plans call for a 200-bed hospital.

Dr. Bailey Urges Quarters For Defectives

Colonel Peare Bailey, Chairman of the State Commission for Mental Defectives, called attention to the very serious and immediate need of the State's institutions for mental defectives. He said that the examination of men for military service had strikingly confirmed previous estimates of the prevalence of mental defect in the community and that there are undoubtedly between 40,000 and 50,000 mental defectives in New York, 2,000 of whom only about 6,000 are in institutions. He discussed the extension of colony care for the feebleminded and also suggested the State's leasing or buying available buildings of the various communities for the temporary housing of feebleminded while the State proceeds with its program to enlarge existing institutions on a permanent basis. Dr. Bailey was asked to submit formal and detailed recommendations on behalf of the Commission for Mental Defectives.

THE SURVEY ENTERTAINS RETURNING WAR WORKERS

The editors of The Survey gave a luncheon at the Cosmopolitan Club on June 27 in honor of Homer Folks, Miss Lillian D. Wald, Mrs. Florence Kelley and Judge Julian W. Mack, all of whom have recently returned from Europe.

Mr. Folks, who is Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, was Director for a year and a half of the Department of Civil Affairs of the American Red Cross in France and more recently had made a survey of various countries in Southern Europe since the war. Miss Wald, who is headworker at the Henry Street Settlement, represented the Federal Children's Bureau of the United States at the International Red Cross Conference at Cannes, where the new League of Red Cross Societies was organized. Mrs. Kelley, who is secretary of the National Consumers' League, attended the meeting of the Women's League for Peace and Freedom, at Zurich. Judge Mack of the United States Circuit Court is President of the American Jewish Congress and President of the Zionist Organization of America, served as Chairman of the Committee of Jewish Delegations at the Peace Conference.

There were about 100 guests present to hear the interesting addresses.

PAID SECRETARIES IN 2 MORE COUNTIES FOR TUBERCULOSIS WORK

The Westchester County Tuberculosis Committee has engaged Miss Sue Baker as full-time executive secretary. She will assume her duties on September 1.

Mrs. Baker is a graduate of Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., and in 1922 was a volunteer worker under the Y. W. C. A. in Jacksonville, Fl., with clubs for girls in industry and also did follow-up work for cases discharged from the old hospital. During the war she was in the employ of the United States Public Health Service at Montgomery, Ala., carrying on publicity and organization work for the suppression of venereal diseases, malaria and for the promotion of infant welfare. Mrs. Baker has recently completed the training course for tuberculosis executives conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association and the New York School of Social Work.

The newly-organized Poughkeepsie Tuberculosis Committee has engaged Miss Elizabeth Porter of Boston, Mass., as full-time executive secretary. Miss Porter, who entered the Poughkeepsie on July 1, is a graduate of Northwestern University and has just received the degree of Master of Arts from Simmons College. She recently took the institute course for the training of tuberculosis executives given by the National Tuberculosis Association in cooperation with the New York School of Social Work. Miss Porter has held the following positions: Research secretary, Women's Educational and Industrial Union, Boston; supervisor of the state and secretary of Y. W. C. A. work in the State Normal School of North Dakota; instructor in additional accommodation work in the Michigan; instructor and head of the department of mathematics and preceptor of the dormitory at the State Normal School in Duluth, Minn.

The Poughkeepsie Committee was recently organized with the following officers: Chairman, Robert A. Kimball, Secretary, Mrs. A. L. Peckham, and treasurer, Thomas W. Pettit; executive committee: Dr. Grace Kimball, Mrs. A. L. Peckham, Thomas W. Barrett and Miss Laura J. Wylie.
700 Examined in 20 Tuberculosis Clinics

More than 700 persons have attended and been examined at the twenty clinics held in connection with the State-wide campaign now being carried out by the Association's Tuberculosis Committee and the State Department of Health.

The campaign has been completed in Livingston, Allegany, Otego and Delaware Counties and this month the two clinic units are working in Remus and the Broome Counties, with clinics scheduled to be held at Troy, Schaghticoke, Remus, Honeck Falls, Grafton, Nassau, and Binghamton, Whitesneys Point, Harpursville and Endicott.

In Remus and the Broome Counties new county tuberculosis sanatoria will be opened during the summer of 1920, and the first group is expected that new cases will be brought to light as a result of the clinic campaign. Special attention will be paid to securing prompt admission of such patients to the hospitals.

GENESEE AND MADISON ENGAGE COUNTY NURSES

Miss Rosetti Barbour, who has had considerable experience in social work, has been employed as visiting nurse of the Genesee County Committee. She will assume her duties August 6. Miss Barbour attended the Elmira School of Applied Design, and also studied social economy under Dr. Edward T. Devine, Columbia University, is a registered nurse in Wisconsin and has recently completed the institute course for the training of tuberculosis executives given by the National Tuberculosis Association and the New York School of Social Work. For two and one half years she was head nurse of the Neighborhood House at Pittsburgh and she was also industrial nurse for the Kohler Company, Kohler, Mich., instructing women and their families with respect to personal hygiene, industrial sanitation, home nursing, household economics and the care of children. Miss Barbour returned two months ago from overseas service with the Army Nursing Corps. She is temporarily in the employ of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee assisting the statewide campaign for occasional clinics now being carried on.

Miss Helen L. Cotter, R. N., of Utica has accepted a position as visiting nurse of the Madison County Tuberculosis Committee. She has entered upon her duties and has established headquarters at the City Hall, Oueda. Miss Cotter is a graduate of the Nurses Training School, Germantown Hospital, Philadelphia. She has had a postgraduate course at Bellevue Hospital, New York City, and in 1918 was first assistant director of the Social Service Department of that institution. Early in 1919 she did some research work in the tuberculosis dispensary field for the Academy of Medicine of New York City and followed this up with taking the course for the training of tuberculosis executives conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association in cooperation with the New York School of Social Work.

FOR A CHILDREN'S PAVILION

An appropriation of $500 for the employment of an architect to prepare plans and specifications for the children's pavilion in connection with the county tuberculosis sanatorium has been voted by the Oneida County Board of Supervisors.

J. F. THOMAS HEADS NEW SOCIAL SCIENCE SCHOOL IN THE WEST

Former S. C. A. A. ManMade Director of a Graduate Department at the University of Oregon

Capt. H. Sherburne House, formerly of the Placing-Out Department of the State Charities Aid Association, who has been in American Red Cross work overseas since the autumn of 1917, has returned to this country.

George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary of the Association's Committee on Mental Hygiene, delivered the address to the graduating class of the Nurses' Training School at the Kings Park State Hospital on July 17.

Miss Julia Franklin Wells has returned from France after about two years' service with the American Red Cross. Miss Wells was on the staff of the Social Service Department of the Association's Mental Hygiene Committee before going to France.

United States Senator William M. Calder has placed in the Federal Appropriation Bill an item of $500,000 to cover the expense of deporting about 1,000 alien insane patients now in the New York State hospitals whose deportation was impossible during the war.

Miss Marion Taber, Secretary of the New York City Visiting Committee, has left New York for the summer. Miss Mary L. Putnam, Assistant Secretary, has charge of the Visiting Committee Office in Miss Taber's absence.

MONTGOMERY BRANCH OF S. C. A. A. INTERESTED IN EMPLOYEES' WELFARE

The Montgomery County Committee of the State Charities Aid Association held its annual meeting in Amsterdam on July 7. Walter H. Lipe was re-elected President for the coming year and was also re-elected Secretary, and Miss Ethel J. Carpenter as Treasurer. Mrs. John Sanford, Mrs. Fred. R. Greene and Mrs. W. B. Dunlap were elected Vice Presidents.

Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of County Agencies, was present at the meeting and gave an informal talk on the progress of child welfare in Montgomery County and New York State. The Montgomery committee recently adopted a new constitution. The organization is deeply interested in the question of employees' welfare. In a recent address Mr. Lipe spoke of the necessity of closer cooperation of the manufacturers with the employees and the community, citing examples of welfare work practiced by the Beech-Nut Packing Company, particularly in regard to its system of benefits and certificates for sickness, old age, and natural death. He also outlined the plan for cooperation of manufacturers in retaining the services of a special nurse, thus releasing the county nurse for the rural districts. A nurse for preventive work is employed at the Beech-Nut factory. The function of such a nurse includes not only the immediate first aid assistance, but enters the sphere of preventive and educative hygiene and even approximately to that of a special worker, in family and industrial adjustments.
PAID EXECUTIVE SECRETARIES CARRYING ON TUBERCULOSIS ACTIVITIES IN 18 COUNTIES

TUBERCULOSIS COMMITTEES REORGANIZE WORK ON COUNTY-WIDE BASIS

Readers of the S. C. A. A. News will be interested to learn of the progress made by the Association’s Tuberculosis Committees in the reconstruction of the local tuberculosis organizations.

Shortly after the signing of the armistice, the Association’s Committee made a study of the status of the organization and work of its local tuberculosis committees. This study disclosed three needs:

1. The extension throughout the rural districts of the tuberculosis services available in the cities, particularly free expert medical diagnosis, visiting nursing, and instruction of the public as to the essential facts about tuberculosis.
2. Leadership in the cities in bringing about coordinated programs of local tuberculosis work in which the various public and private tuberculosis agencies are assigned the functions that they should and can effectively perform.
3. Participation in the organized efforts to raise the standards of housing, living, and labor, as a means of preventing the development of active tuberculosis disease in adult life from the practically universal tuberculosis infection acquired in childhood.

Full-Time, Paid Workers

To enable the tuberculosis organizations to meet these three outstanding needs referred to above, it became necessary to change the field of local committee work from a city and village basis to a county basis and to induce the new county organizations to employ full-time paid workers trained in the technique of the organization and publicity aspects of tuberculosis work, with ability for leadership. Back in 1917 The National Tuberculosis Association had adopted a resolution at its annual meeting in Cincinnati recommending that paid, full-time, trained executive secretaries be employed by anti-tuberculosis organizations in localities having upwards of 30,000 population. After consultation with the local committees, the organizations in seventeen counties were put upon a county-wide basis.

One of the pleasing features of this committee reorganization work is the addition to the local committees’ personnel of a number of men and women who have demonstrated their capacity for service in the tuberculosis field through their activities in various war service organizations.

Executive secretaries are now employed by eighteen tuberculosis committees, and efforts are being made to secure qualified workers for four other organizations.

A list of the counties in which this reorganization work has been effected, together with a statement about the executive secretaries and their qualifications, is set forth below:

Erie County—The Buffalo Tuberculosis Association.

Has extended its work into the whole of Erie County. Expert clinical service is provided periodically for the villages and their outlying sections. Two full-time visiting nurses are employed to work in the county outside of Buffalo, and a series of lectures and motion picture demonstrations is being carried on in the villages. Executive Secretary: Hugo A. Brown of Buffalo, formerly President, Trade Union Section, Buffalo Tuberculosis Association.

Monroe County—The Rochester Tuberculosis Association.

Has extended its work into the whole of Monroe County. Executive Secretary: Mrs. Ethel McCormick Hendriksen. Experience: newspaper work and executive secretaryship for five years, Grand Rapids (Michigan) Tuberculosis Association.

Westchester County Tuberculosis Committee.

Has assumed direction of the tuberculosis work in the county in place of the unrelated efforts of a large number of local village organizations. Executive Secretary: Mrs. Sue Baker of New York. Education: Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., training course for tuberculosis executives conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association, June, 1919. Experience: Volunteer worker under the Y. W. C. A. in Jacksonville, Fla., with clubs for girls in industry and follow-up work for cases discharged from the city hospital; United States Public Health Service at Montgomery, Alabama, carrying on publicity and organization work for the suppression of venereal diseases, malaria and for the promotion of infant welfare.

Onondaga County Tuberculosis Association. Has taken over the work of the Tuberculosis Committee of the Syracuse Associated Churches and Charities, and the Fayetteville Tuberculosis Committee. Executive Secretary: Mrs. Minnie E. Freeman of Syracuse, member Institute for Training of Tuberculosis Workers conducted by the National Tuberculosis Association, June, 1918. For several years social service worker of the Tuberculosis Committee of the Syracuse Associated Churches and Charities.

Albany County Tuberculosis Committee. Has taken over the work of Albany (city), Watervliet, and Cohoes Tuberculosis Committees. Executive Secretary: Miss Ida May Robins, R. N., of Brooklyn. Formerly supervising nurse of New York City Health Department. From 1912-1918. (Continued on page 3)
George Reilly, Who Longs For Jail

(Editorsial from The New York Sun)

In one of the City Magistrate's courts this week a professional criminal known as George Reilly was arraigned before a judge, having been arrested in the burglar's tools and a revolver in his possession. The offense is a serious one; the man was held in bail for trial in General Sessions. To the Magistrate he said, "I'm tired Judge, I want to go away for a while."

This incident would have been depressing enough under any circumstances, but the fact that George Reilly is only 21, and that nine of those twenty-one years have been spent in penal institutions, makes of George Reilly a public character to stir the sympathy and arouse the fears of even the least emotional. George Reilly has never been anything but a criminal, it seems. At the age when other young men are just beginning to enjoy the full rights of citizenship he is a confined law breaker. At the age when he should have tired of "to go away for a while," which is the underworld's euphemism for going to jail. He cannot get rest outside of a prison; for him freedom means a constant unsuccessful struggle to keep hidden, to win a hard living by thievery, to dodge the police, to sink away from honest men, and not to be able to sneak up behind them to rob them.

What can be done with George Reilly? The State has done its best for him already, and that beat has made him what he is. We take it that the State first put him in a reformatory, and reformed out of him whatever good a harsh life may have left of his nature, and then turned him loose, and let him go his own way to the devil until that way crossed the law somewhat ostentatiously. When this occurred, the State locked him up again, only to turn him loose again, to lock him up again, until it now has him behind the bars once more.

Meanwhile George Reilly was costing the State and its people money. The taxpayers had to put up for his keep, his lodging, his cloths, when he was at large; George Reilly's nature, and the good life of the prison, nor out of it did he live on the fat of the land. Yet we dare say that if all he has cost were lumped together, it would make a sum greater than Perhaps George Reilly was mentally deficient when the State began its processes of development on him. Perhaps he was physically wrong then. Perhaps a hospital, not a penal institution, was the place for George Reilly when first the State laid its corporate and benevolent hand on him. Who can say that a course in a sanitarium, an operation by a skilled surgeon, treatment by a trained alienist, might not have been better for George Reilly than a course in jail and the ministrations of keepers, whose trade is to maintain order, not to seek out causes?

It may be that to-day, instead of being in the Tombs, George Reilly, so treated in early youth, would be in khaki, or in navy blue, decorated, a veteran of the war; it may be that George Reilly, instead of being in an essential industry, with a well cared for trade somewhere near. Indeed, with proper treatment, he might justly be a quiet ordinary fellow, whom nobody would fear, and who would pay his taxes like any other respectable man.

Certainly if George Reilly were to-day a useful citizen, the State would be better off than it is, for he is a type, and once the State learned to treat him it could apply the methods to others, and save a great deal of effort and energy now wasted, or worse than wasted, energy in the efforts to put him to all pur-

JUDGE C. E. TEALE DEAD

Public Spirited Brooklyn Man Had Been President of Kings Park Hospital Board Since 1911

Judge Charles E. Teale of Brooklyn, President of the Board of Managers of the Kings Park State Hospital since 1911, died on July 21. His interest and affection for the hospital made him an invaluable official. The Judge was at one time City Magistrate in Brooklyn, Deputy Commissioner of Public Charities of New York City in charge of the Brooklyn office, and a member of various charitable boards in Brooklyn. His death is a great loss to the hospital and to the community.

FULTON ORGANIZES TO COMBAT TUBERCULOSIS

A meeting for the purpose of reorganizing the Fulton County Tuberculosis Committee was held in the Fulton Public Library on July 18. The following officers were elected: President, William Burnett; secretary, Dr. E. M. Anderson; treasurer, Lewis W. Emeric; executive committee, the officers and Mrs. G. G. Whitaker and Mrs. H. W. D. Mullikin.

The program of work which the committee outlined includes the establishment and maintenance, in cooperation with the Board of Education, of a fresh-air class for pre-tubercular children on the west side of the city; public health educational work and clinical service.

DR. ALBERTSON FOR OWSEGO PUBLIC HEALTH CENTER

Dr. Harvey S. Albertson of Oswego has been engaged by the City Board of Health to take charge of the city's public health center at an annual salary of $1,200. He will supervise clinic for tuberculosis, child welfare, infantile paralysis and venereal diseases, and act as examiner at several of these clinics.

Around the Clock With a County Children’s Agent

“What Does She Do?” To Follow Her Activities For One Day Makes One Think: “What Doesn’t She Do!”

What does a County Agent for Dependent Children do?

The question is frequently asked. Let one of the agents answer it. In her annual report, Miss Harriet Ter Heun, of the Newburgh Agency, gives the details of one typical day. Apparently, there isn’t much an agent doesn’t do! This is how she spent the time:

Monday began with a call at the home where a child had been placed several months previously. She had grown considerably in those months and the reason given for the request to have her removed was the advance in the price of clothing and food-stuffs. Had this been the real reason it would have been possible to have arranged for the child to remain in the home, but facts, true and lamentable, made themselves known, and that the child must be removed and at once, was obvious. At thirteen to be deprived of the only home she had ever known, and through no fault of her own!

“Next call was on an unmarried mother, deserted by all who were once interested in her, huddled with her babe in the attic of an under-rented tenement, and to rid herself of baby, not because of lack of love, but because disgraced, penniless, homeless and discouraged, nothing else seemed possible. A visit to relatives offered little promise. The girl, always a drudge for her father’s ever increasing family, has decided that work with renunciation and a little suffering might improve her position. This would be more desirable, so left home wholly unprepared to meet the world and its angles. Too great temptation, partial ignorance, and no supervision were the factors to which her downfall was due. Home folks showed no charity other than that for a short period, room and food would be furnished while plans were made for the disposal of the babe, after which she could return to her home and again take up her duties as a servant in her father’s family. A satisfactory adjustment has been made at no city expense.

Father Hurt in Explosion

“On returning to the office agent was met by the father of three of the children under supervision. He had crawled to the office to say that he had been in an explosion, had been poisoned by gas, had for many hours been unconscious and unfound, after which he was taken to a hospital where he was delirious for several days. After regaining consciousness he had been unable to send a message explaining why the children’s board had not been paid and was worried fearing that he would be suspected of deserting the children, had therefore made his escape from the hospital and had hurried to Newburgh.

“Next came a telephone message from one of the board-mothers that a babe under her care was ill. The doctor was summoned and an immediate call was promised. This done we turn from the telephone to welcome a woman and her son. My boy has adenosid and enlarged tonsils; we have had a great deal of illness in our family and I cannot afford to have this boy operated upon, he cannot return to school until he has received attention.” Again the woman who cheerfully replies, ‘Send him to me, I will look him over and will attend to his needs at once if necessary.’ Invariably this ready response from woman folk for foster care appends to.

“The eighth call is over the telephone when a prospective foster-mother expresses pleasure in the child sent to her with the hope that she may invite the child to ‘remain and be one of us.”

Deserted with Four Children

“Now comes a woman to the office to state that the nephew for whom she has cared for many months must be returned to his mother. This mother, deserted by the husband, has four other children to care for and she is in miserable physical condition. The visitation of relatives must now be planned and executed as soon as possible. This client is dismissed as a letter must be written before the next collection. Before the letter is completed a woman comes to report that her sister-in-law has in some way disposed of her young, illegitimate child; she asks for an investigation and states, ‘the right type of family would never take a babe without proper procedure.”

“Number thirteen is from a newspaper man who has heard of the need for immediate relief in the East. He has some subscriptions to which he has added the fact that the need is only temporary and that the children are not in need of special care. This requires co-operation with the Associated Charities and a call on that body gives the assurance that they will assume the care of the family.

“The next visitor is the Director of another outstanding society who has come to talk over a constructive plan for three of the children in the care of that society.

“In the early afternoon comes a visit from the foster-mother with her little foster-daughter to show the improvement made by plenty of fresh eggs and milk, a life of the out-of-doors and live animal food. She brought with her a new hat, coat, and embroidered dress all made by mother, curls tied with large pink bows, in addition to a few receipts which the object of much love, of course made a marked improvement.

“An unmarried mother who comes to ask if support for the child cannot be provided by the father. To get confidences and real facts in such cases requires much time, sympathy, kindly persuasion and personal interest. This gained, shows the case is not local and that the hearing must be held in one of the towns. Arrangements are made at once over the telephone for the hearing two days later at 6 p.m. Agent to accompany the client.

Agent a Probation Officer Too

“Three-thirty and two girls who are on probation for truancy come to report, both have applied for home work or break; neither of whom are understood by their parents or have happy home surroundings. This is a trip to the local institutions with a homeless girl.

“Six p.m. By arrangement a father comes to pay his children’s board and while he is in the office another man comes to state he cannot longer provide for his nice-in-law who has grown obdurate and saucy and insolent; “Arrangements must be made at once for her removal.”

“And now at 7 p.m. a telephone message is delivered to notify us that an operation, on the following morning, will be performed on the boy who called earlier in the day. This necessitates a message to the principal of the school.

“Only three of the children involved in this day’s work were dependent and while not the rule, neither is it the exception for the child worker to spend a day such as this was, and yet we can say with Angela Storger:

“WORK

Thank God for the might of it,
The ardor, the urge, the delight of it— Work that springs from the heart’s desire, Because the brain is free to think of it. Oh! what is so good as the best of it, And what is so glad as the best of it, And what is so kind as the stern command, Challenging brain and heart and hand!”

OUR BIGGER FAMILY

BY TENNIE JONES

You know the Old Woman who lived in a shoe,
Overcrowded with youngsters—and what she did do?
Well, Westchester County has a call to a doctor who
They are looking to us—we must all do our share.
She simply whipped them, and sent them to bed.
We wish to teach them, to have them well fed.
To keep them, to keep them well and fit.
To clothe them, to see each done just its bit.

We care for the cripples; we nurse them when ill;
All our duties are for her.
So give us your names, and whatever each owns.
That is spared by the taxes and Liberty Loan.

We’re humble and modest, so do not be rash;
We’re willing to leave you a little spare cash.
We really don’t see any need for a billion
And we’ve never seen a drop even of a million.

When the famous Fied Piper led small tots away
To his fairytale fair, where they always could play,
One poor limping cripple was left out—for luck.
We must see that no helpless one meet with his fate.

COUNTY CHILDREN’S AGENCIES ATTRACT WIDE ATTENTION

The annual meeting of the Herkimer County branch of the State Charities Aid Association was held in Herkimer on June 13. The county agent, Miss Harriet Engberg, told of the need of the county children’s agency in the county. She said that many children are living in misery and squarol in some of the sections of the county.

Miss H. Ida Curry, Superintendent of the County Agencies Department of the State Charities Aid Association, told of the play-fellow of the various agencies in the counties constitutes a pioneer movement for bettering social conditions in rural areas. The play has attracted the attention throughout the country. At a recent international conference called by Secretary of Labor Wilson the work of these county agencies was selected as the most significant child-caring effort in the United States.
ASSOCIATION HAS NEW CHILD WELFARE EXHIBIT

The County Agencies Department of the State Charities Aid Association has purchased from the National Child Welfare Association a Child Welfare exhibit in order to fulfill the increasing requests from County Agents for Dependent Children for publicity material suited to their needs. This exhibit, consisting of panels, will be loaned as a whole or in part according to requirements of particular agencies. The panels which are 28 by 18 inches in size, mounted in light wood screens of five sections, and attractively illustrated in color, deal with the following subjects:

- "Prenatal Care for Saving Mothers' and Babies Lives,"
- "Physical Care of Babies,"
- "Physical Care of Children,"
- "Prevention of Tuberculosis in Childhood," "Alcoholism in Childhood,"
- "The Child and the Rural Community,"
- "Effective Thinking,"
- "Money Value of Technical Training,"
- "Posture,"
- "The Cigarette," etc.

WILLING TO SAVE SUGAR AND FUEL; HOW ABOUT SAVING BOYS AND GIRLS?

County Agent Who Is Conserving Them Remembers That "Boys Will Be Boys"

"CAN you go back in your imagination to the time when you were a boy of ten or eleven, hating to go to school, aching for it to close...at you might get out with the gang and have a good time; hating to wash your ears? Can you see the old swimming-pool; the dog tagging along at your heels, the jam-pot in the closet and the strap behind the door? Oh, we all were boys and girls once. Someone had to have patience with us, and look after us or we wouldn't be where we are today."

This is the spirit in which the work of conserving boys and girls is done by the State Charities Aid Association's County Agency for Dependent Children. The quotation is from the annual report of the County Agent, Miss Florence E. Hutchings.

"Let's give Jack and Mary a fighting chance at least," she continues, "and how can they have it if the environment where they eat and sleep is filthy; if the parents drink and steal; if the children themselves are starving and half-clothed?"

"The agency is trying to give them this chance. During the year, 1,297 interviews were held; 292 letters written, eight committee meetings held; five addresses given.

WHY ARE PEOPLE POOR?

There Are Many Causes, and Some of Them are Preventable, County Agents Find

Why are people poor?

The question probably never will be fully answered, but some light on the causes of dependency is being shed by the work of the State Charities Aid Association's County Agents for Dependent Children in various counties.

For instance, the County Agency in Orange County, according to the annual report of the Agent, Miss Caroline M. Cuddeback, has become acquainted with 834 families, of whom 306 required attention last year. In her report, Miss Cuddeback says:

"Various causes brought these families to a state of need. In 37 instances death had taken away either the father or the mother; in 17 instances illness incapacitated the breadwinner (of the 17, tuberculosis had laid a heavy hand on 10). In 65 other families either one or both of the parents were feebleminded and unable to support and manage a proper home. In 18 cases some physical defect in the children made special care necessary. All four of these were natural causes outside the control of the individuals themselves."

"The following groups belong to a different class, and show not so much inherent weakness, but willful disregard of the laws of God and man. In 24 there was excessive alcoholism, in 72 immorality of either the father or the mother, in 6 insanity brought on by excess, in 6 delinquency of the children themselves, in 31 alcoholism and immorality combined, and in 19 families a thorough investigation showed the family self-sustaining and in no need of outside assistance."

"How many counties are doing all they can to eradicate the preventable causes of poverty?"
42 FRESH-AIR CLASSES IN STATE
Special Work for Physically Subnormal Children Fortifies Them Against Tuberculosis

FRESH-AIR classes for the treatment of physically sub-normal children in the schools of sixteen cities of the State have been visited within the past six months and recommendations for improvements made by Andrew G. Johnson, fresh-air class organizer of the Association's Tuberculosis Committee. The fresh-air classes are closed in many of the schools during the summer months, but Mr. Johnson is visiting various localities that are about to build new school houses, with the object of inducing the education authorities to make provision in the plans for fresh-air classes.

The first fresh-air class in the State outside New York City was started in Rochester in October, 1909, and at the present time there are 42 such classes. Thirty of these are in the public schools, nine in private schools, and three are maintained by tuberculosis hospitals for tuberculous children. In the other fresh-air classes the pupils are not actively tuberculous but are selected because they are or have been exposed to tuberculosis at home and are likely to develop the disease if not given special care, or because they are otherwise physically sub-normal.

In most of the cities, corner rooms in the school buildings have been selected for these classes, so located that the sun shines into the rooms most of the day. Facilities for heat are usually provided so that the temperature can be raised from 45° to 60° F.

The equipment for such a class is comparatively inexpensive and usually includes felt boots and mittens, movable docks, cot, blankets and a specially made bag which provides proper protection and warmth for the body during cold weather. The various localities which have fresh-air classes also provide food for the children. Some schools furnish a light morning lunch, a hearty noon meal and an afternoon lunch.

Careful Medical Supervision

The school medical inspector gives each child a physical examination at the beginning of the school year, calling the attention of the nurse and teacher to the physical defects of the child. During the year the doctor visits the fresh-air class room usually once a week and examines any children whose physical condition may be called to his attention by the nurse or teacher. The school nurse inspects the children on her visits, weighs them, takes them to local clinics if necessary for special examination and treatment, visits the home when they are recommended better living conditions and gets data which will aid in understanding the causes of the child's condition. Whenever the nurse feels that a child's health has improved sufficiently to pass on to a regular class room that child is sent to the school doctor for a physical examination and if his physical condition is up to standard he is allowed to return to the regular class room.

A great deal of care has been taken in the selection of a fresh-air class teacher. The successful teachers understand the value of fresh air, are thoroughly familiar with the problems of ungraded schools, sympathetic, of even disposition and able to study the individual child and work for his improvement.

The programs for such fresh-air classes are more elastic than those of regular classes. Their first aim is health. The best fresh-air classes include drawing, music, manual training and garden work with special provision made for feeding and for rest periods.

The results obtained in fresh-air classes based on scientific records prove that children gain in weight, are less nervous and sleep better. They take a greater interest in school work, are more careful of personal hygiene, are able to withstand the shocks of the regular class room more easily and have more wholesome attitude toward life.

State Spending $3,302,750 For New Buildings

Contracts totaling $3,302,750 for new construction at State institutions for the insane and feebleminded are being let by the State of New York this summer.
